In the crazed doctor's outfit and with a scary hammer in hand, Chen Ge stood at the first junction. This time, he entered the Haunted House not to save the visitors but to use the Haunted House's unique environment to capture the two potential ghost stories society members. Now where have they run off to?

Standing quietly in the junction, Chen Ge strained his ears. Not long after that, he heard something from the corridor that led to the deep well. A human head was rolling toward him like it was pushed along by some unknown force.

"You're out to play again?" Chen Ge walked toward the mannequin head. He assumed that the head could not find its body, so it had rolled out to seek help. However, before he got close, the head rolled in another direction. It was neither fast nor slow, just fast enough for Chen Ge to keep up.

"You're going to be my guide?"

Chen Ge did not hesitate to follow. The draft fluttered his bloodied doctor's coat. Chen Ge wore the skin mask and held the red large hammer in his grasp as he followed the rolling human head deeper into the Haunted House.

When Yang Chen saw Wei Wu and Kong Xiangming, his heart jumped with joy. From his perspective, whether they were real visitors or Haunted House employees, it was only beneficial to him.

"You guys just came out from that place?" Wei Wu looked at the three students. His tone was cold. Since he felt the threat, he did not plan to keep up the pretext anymore.

"Yes." Yang Chen wanted to ask Wei Wu for help, but he found Wei Wu's attitude grating. It made him uncomfortable. It did not feel like an attitude an employee in the service business should have.

"What did you find in there? Why are all of you in this state?" Kong Xiangming also walked over. The two's questions confused the three students. They had assumed that Wei Wu and Kong Xiangming were the employees at the Haunted House, so their questions confused them.

Are these two really clueless about the layout of the Haunted House, or are they toying with us?

Before the students could reach a conclusion, Wei Wu and Kong Xiangming did something weird. They both suddenly turned their heads to look at the glass door that led into Western Jiujiang's Private Academy. Their actions were weirdly unified.

"What are you two looking at?" Yang Chen was unsettled. He retreated to his friends. Things appeared more complicated than he had initially thought. After two seconds, the glass door opened on its own, and a faded stench drifted out.

"Other than those mannequins, there are other souls trapped inside this Haunted House. This is quite surprising." Wei Wu kept his voice low. If not necessary, they would not reveal their identity to outsiders.

"The one on me has already awakened, and it's hungry." Kong Xiangming stood where he was as a pair of arms appeared around his shoulders, and then a shrunken head climbed up from his back.

"Have you lost your mind? There are other people here!" Wei Wu wanted to stop Kong Xiangming, but it was already too late. The three medical students had seen everything.

"I have no power to stop it when it's hungry." Kong Xiangming's voice was calm like this was not the first time he had experienced this. "It's fine if they see it. We'll just take care of them as well. Too bad this identity is going to waste though."

Wei Wu did not expect that the normally reticent Kong Xiangming would be so direct when he made his move.

"Fine, after all, the one on me is also hungry already." There were blood vessels moving on the back of Wei Wu's head. He turned to look at the three students, and to his surprise, they did not show fear but gave a look that said, See, I thought so.

“They’re not afraid of us?” Wei Wu did not know what the three students had experienced. In comparison to the things they had been through, the monsters on the members looked rather cute.

“I’ll leave the three to you.” Kong Xiangming walked into Western Jiujiang’s Private Academy alone. In the dark, something else seemed to crawl out from his back. Seeing Kong Xiangming walked into the scenario alone, the three students had different expressions.

“Stop worrying about him, these two have to be employees.”

Normally, when one saw a ghost inside the Haunted House, one’s first reaction would be to think they were workers. Wang Dan climbed up using the wall as support. He was scared, but his tone still had not changed too much.

He sighed and stumbled toward Wei Wu. “We give up, please bring us out.”

The face was almost forming on the back of Wei Wu’s head, but when he heard what Wang Dan had to say, the process stopped. “You want me to lead you out?”

“Yes, the three of us have given up already.”

What is going on? To complete the ghost society’s mission, Wei Wu had created quite a number of ghost stories himself. Whenever his victims saw his real identity, they would be too scared for words.

“Let’s go.” Wang Dan’s legs were shaking. He held his head with one hand, and his other reached out to hold Wei Wu’s arm. “Boss, can we go now? My head is spinning, and we have class to attend this afternoon.”

Wei Wu tried to shrug Wang Dan off, but he failed. “Are you blind? Do you not see the blood face on the back of my head? How about a little respect?”

“We’ve already surrendered, what else do you want from us?” Wang Dan was annoyed; he had lost much of his confidence and pride that day.

Wei Wu thought that something was wrong with these students. In any case, he decided to end it as soon as possible. “Looks like none of you will be leaving.”

The blood vessels knitted into a scary face. The face was blurry as the vessels moved about to slowly form a face that looked suspiciously like Wang Dan.

“Brother, can you please stop with the tricks? We’re tired after leaving the hidden scenario. If you continue to be like this, I’m going to give you a negative review on the internet.” Wang Dan’s head was hurting, but holding Wei Wu’s arm, he felt weirdly secure.

“What are you talking about?” Wei Wu gathered his strength to shove Wang Dan aside. His two faces had the same dark expression. “The plan was to finish this as fast as possible, but now...”

Wind picked up in the corridor, and Wei Wu was halfway through his speech when the face behind him screamed!

Wei Wu turned around and saw a monster in a bloodied outfit and giant hammer running at him as he followed a rolling head!

Wei Wu’s head went numb as a giant sense of danger gripped his heart. “Not good!”

He turned to run instinctively to meet up with Kong Xiangming, but the ‘monster’ did not give him the chance.

“Since you’re already here, why the rush to leave?”

Chapter 267: Please Forgive Him!

The appearance of Chen Ge in Doctor Skull-cracker's outfit not only scared Wei Wu but also the three medical students. They were not sure who that sentence was directed at; after all, who would care about those details when their lives were on the line? The need to survive compelled them to start running for their lives!

Yang Chen and Lee Xue squeezed next to Wei Wu as they ran down the corridor to head into Western Jiujiang's Private Academy.

"Wait for me!" Wang Dan, who had been shoved to the ground, screamed. He was surprised to find the energy returning to his limbs as he climbed up from the floor.

"Why are you guys running as well?" Wei Wu looked at Yang Chen and Lee Xue, who had run ahead of him. He was both angered and anxious. "Get out of my way!"

The blood face on the back of his head screamed. This was the first time he had seen the monster on his back react in such a drastic manner. Blood vessels seeped out from his back and trailed down his arm to reach toward Lee Xue, who was in front of him. He felt deeply threatened and knew he had to meet up with Kong Xiangming no matter what.

Chen Ge's pupils narrowed, and his Yin Yang Vision allowed him to see clearly in the dark. He caught the changes that happened to Wei Wu's body. "It is you, ghost stories society!"

There was still a distance between him and Wei Wu, but the blood vessels were almost touching Lee Xue already. In his desperation, Chen Ge picked up the rolling head and lobbed the head, which now had a shocked expression, at the back of Wei Wu's head!

BANG!

The mannequin head knocked into Wei Wu, causing him to lose balance. He staggered unsteadily, almost collapsing to the ground, and the mannequin head rolled to the side. The blood face at the back of Wei Wu's head was smashed into a messy pulp. The large crack stunned the three students. Whacking one's head with another head? Even a stunt actor would not dare do that!

“Still want to run?”

Wei Wu's speed slowed down after he was hit by the mannequin head. Chen Ge rapidly closed in on him. The blood face had not even used its power, and it had already been injured. Seeing this, Wei Wu did not dare stay any longer, “Get out of my way!”

Lee Xue, who ran before him, did not have the chance to evade and was shoved roughly to the side. Yang Chen, who stood before the glass door, frowned with confusion.

“Wait! Isn't he an actor? Why is he running faster than we are?” Yang Chen had several answers in his mind. “Is still part of the experience? Some kind of insider drama?”

Seeing how Lee Xue was shoved to the side, he was rather angry. “If that's the case, that's so rude. How can they disrespect their visitor like this?”

Wei Wu charged ahead savagely, but Yang Chen did not let him past. Instead, he purposely moved to block the door. “If this is part of a performance, please stop. Your earlier action has...”

“Get lost!” The blood vessels seeped out from Wei Wu's skin to knit on his face. It was very dark underground, so Yang Chen did not catch the changes on Wei Wu's face. However, it did not escape Chen Ge's Yin Yang Vision.

He sprinted, and before Wei Wu attacked Yang Chen, he raised the hammer to swing at Wei Wu's left arm!

The bones snapped, creating a crisp sound. All five visitors, including Wei Wu, seemed to petrify. This was especially true for Yang Chen, who blocked Wei Wu's way. He was closest to the man, so he heard it the clearest. As a forensic science student, he could even hear the tearing of the cartilage between the humerus and scapula. Yang Chen had forgotten what he wanted to say. He was dazed. Losing the control of his arm, Wei Wu gritted his teeth until it was bloodied. Using his other arm, he pushed the glass door open and ran down the corridor.

“That’s a dead-end; I’ll see where you’re going to run this time!” Chen Ge put down the hammer and turned to look at Yang Chen. “Are you alright?”

“Y-yes.” Yang Chen shivered. If he was not leaning against the wall, he would have been sitting on the floor already.

“Great. Normally, I’m a gentle person, but that visitor is not a normal visitor—he’s different from the rest of you.” Chen Ge tried his best to explain. He had to turn to violence earlier because he was afraid Wei Wu might harm the innocent.

“I understand. That big brother was the employee at the Haunted House, right?” Yang Chen stated his thought.

“Employee?” Chen Ge did not know why Yang Chen would come to this conclusion. He thought about it and admitted ‘honestly’, “You guys knew that already? The new actors don’t know how to do their job. He acted too harshly earlier; I apologize on his behalf.”

The three students looked at Chen Ge holding the hammer. They could not believe their ears. How could this person be so insouciant after severely injuring someone?

“We don’t mind it.” Yang Chen was screaming internally, Compared to us, shouldn’t you be more worried about that actor that you assaulted?

“Okay, when you go out, go find the uncle who sells tickets. When you come again in the future, I’ll give you an eighty percent discount.” Chen Ge took out his phone to call Gu Feiyu. “Xiao Gu, you can stop blocking the door now. Come in to help me lead these visitors out.”

He had asked Gu Feiyu to block the door because he was afraid the two from ghost stories society might escape. However, now that both of them were inside the Western Jiujiang’s Private Academy, which was a dead-end, there was no need to block the door anymore.

“Block the door...” The three students wiped their cold sweat. It looked like they were not going to make use of that discount any time soon.

“The three of you, wait here. An employee will come get you. I’ll go and take revenge for you.” Chen Ge waved the hammer around. “As a service business, we should always put the visitors first!”

As if sensing the murderous aura on Chen Ge, Yang Chen quickly advised him, “No, no! We’re all really fine. Please don’t take any revenge on our behalf!”

“Yes, actually, that brother is not that bad.” Wang Dan also walked over, but he did not dare get too close to Chen Ge. He grumbled in his heart, At least he looks much friendlier than you do...

“Stop trying to make excuses for him. If he’s made a mistake, then he needs to be punished.”

Chen Ge opened the glass door. The three students felt guilty, so they stood outside the scenario and yelled.

“Boss, we’re really fine!”

“Punishment is one thing, but you broke his arm!”

“We’ve already accepted your apology, so please forgive him!”

There was a faded stench in the air. Chen Ge sighed as he heard the shouts coming from behind him. These few visitors sure are good people. Western Jiujiang Medical University produces some wonderful students. They are helping the people who harmed them earlier.

After turning on the recorder, Chen Ge walked deeper into the corridor.

Chapter 268 - Value of Your Life

Chapter 268: Value of Your Life

There were weird noises coming from the belly of the scenario, and the stench in the air seemed lighter than usual. They're of equal power? Looks like these two members from the society are quite powerful.

Chen Ge upped his pace. He did not see Wei Wu along the way; the poor sap had probably run straight for the deepest part of the scenario after being spooked by Chen Ge.

Where can you run to? This scenario is completely sealed, and there is only one exit.

The ghost stories society's members had come to create trouble at his Haunted House during his working hours. This created a great sense of danger in Chen Ge. If he did not terminate the society, they would return in the future, so Chen Ge did not hold back. After walking ten meters, Chen Ge finally saw the fighting.

Kong Xiangming had a dark expression on his face. There was a thin monster standing on his shoulders, but the monster was longer and stronger than the ones he had seen at the Third Sick Hall. Most likely, it had consumed many innocents. The monster on Kong Xiangming was almost four meters long, and the crying faces on its body made it look like a twisted centipede!

Facing the monster was a mannequin with a rope around its neck. There was obvious damage on the mannequin's body, but it kept charging at the monster.

"The more savage the soul, the greater it tastes."

Kong Xiangming looked at the mannequin, and there was a playfulness in his eyes. The monster on his shoulders did not pay the mannequin much attention but was looking in another direction with alarm.

The stench that covered the scenario had congregated to form a shadowy version of a large man. The fat man had a blurred face but extremely high strength. However, his agility left much to be desired, and he could not do anything in the cramped corridor.

The fat man and the mannequin did not know anything about combat, and with the tactics from Kong Xiangming, the battle was one-sided. Slowly, the wounds on the mannequin and the fat man increased. Their bodies turned blurry, and the stench in the scenario slowly dissipated.

Are they that weak? Chen Ge thought about it and could understand why. Most of the powerful and resistant baleful specters at Western Jiujiang's Private Academy had been consumed by Zhang Ya already, and only the two weaker ones remained.

Wei Wu was hiding behind Kong Xiangming. When the blood face saw Chen Ge approach, it screamed!

"Be careful! Our target is coming toward us!"

Even though Kong Xiangming had the upper hand, he was still facing two enemies, and if Chen Ge joined in the fight, it would not be good for him.

"Why did you lead him here?" Kong Xiangming could still maintain the calmness in his voice, but his words came out faster than before.

"I didn't want to! How about we swap places? You go and deal with him while I take care of these two?" The blood face on Wei Wu had a special power, and like Pen Spirit, it was not suitable in combat—Kong Xiangming understood that much. "Fine."

This was not the first time they had cooperated. They stood back to back as they moved. Blood vessels surged out from behind Wei Wu's head, and the expression on the face slowly morphed to mimic the mannequin. Weirdly enough, when the blood face changed to mirror the mannequin, the savage mannequin suddenly became quiet, and its eyes turned hollow.

Wei Wu had stopped the mannequin, but he could not do anything toward the fat man. He could only watch on as the fat man's body slowly recovered, and the stench in the scenario returned. Leaving the specters to his teammate, Kong Xiangming and the thin monster on his back both turned to look at Chen Ge.

Wearing Doctor Skull-cracker's outfit, the skin mask, and holding the hammer, it was hard to tell who the scarier party was. The things that Kong Xiangming told his victims when he created his ghost stories did not seem appropriate. Compared to the 'monster' before him, he felt like he was the more normal one.

"Actually, we can talk this out," Kong Xiangming said very naturally. "Neither one of us came with malicious intentions; we're here because someone ordered us to."

Chen Ge did not respond. The man had managed to survive for so long inside that crazy society, so this meant that none of the words that left his lips could be trusted. He raised the hammer. Perhaps Kong Xiangming was telling the truth, but he did not dare bet on it, nor did he want to bet on it.

"Think about it first before you make your move. I know you have gone into the world behind the door already. I can tell you a secret about the door, but you must promise me one condition." Kong Xiangming increased his talking speed because he sensed the danger. "This is a valuable opportunity. We can cooperate, and you only need to promise me one condition; this is my bottom line."

"Bottom line?" Chen Ge took one step before suddenly increasing in speed. "You dare to talk conditions with me inside my Haunted House? You really don't understand the value of your life! Xu Yin!"

Following Chen Ge's call, a melancholic young man covered in wounds appeared beside him. Both the man and the ghost rushed toward Kong Xiangming.

Kong Xiangming's lips twitched as he realized an issue. The thin monster could stop his opponent's specter, but who was going to stop the madman with the hammer?

"So painful!" His legs landed on the floor, and the wounds on his body opened to pour out blood. Xu Yin, with his face twisted from anger and resentment, charged at the thin monster. The monster's power was stronger than Chen Ge had expected. The faces on its body started to cry and wail, causing Xu Yin's speed to decrease. The thin monster's arms gripped Xu Yin's neck, and the human faces on its body chewed on Xu Yin's clothes.

The thin monster used the faces to apprehend Xu Yin temporarily, but the key problem was, after he got entangled with Xu Yin, who was going to protect Kong Xiangming?

Chen Ge, who had battled similar monsters before at the Third Sick Hall, knew its weakness. After the thin monster left its host, its power would decrease by at least thirty percent, so the thin monster was not Chen Ge's target to begin with.

"Wait a minute!"

The hammer cut through the air, and Kong Xiangming's face paled. Desperate, he forced the thin monster to ignore Xu Yin to come protect him. The monster also knew the importance of its host, so it immediately let go of Xu Yin to shield Kong Xiangming.

Without the restraint, Xu Yin landed on the ground and charged at the thin monster again. He bit ravenously on the thin monster's neck. The more he consumed, the brighter the blood stain on his shirt.

At the same time, the hammer also made contact with the thin monster. Chen Ge did not slow down to check the effect of his attack or give Kong Xiangming any chance to speak. He took the hammer and went ham on his opponent!

Kong Xiangming tried to block, but Wei Wu behind him was losing ground. The hanging man was controlled by Wei Wu, but the key problem was that he could not do anything to the fat man that was slowly recuperating.

"If we stay here, both of us are going to perish. Ol' Kong, good luck!" Wei Wu yelled and then chose to abandon the war. He turned around and ran past Kong Xiangming and Chen Ge!

Wei Wu's sudden reaction surprised not only Kong Xiangming but also Chen Ge. "From the beginning, it's your friend that has been under pressure, but why is it you who chose to run first?"

"Wei Wu!" Kong Xiangming yelled with bloodshot eyes. He was surrounded by three baleful specters and one madman. He did not expect his teammate to abandon him so easily. In the blink of an eye, Wei Wu was already several meters away. Chen Ge had the two specters take care of Kong Xiangming while he and Xu Yin ran after the deserter.

"Xiao Gu has already opened the door; I cannot let him slip away."

Chen Ge chased after Wei Wu, and after he left Western Jiujiang's Private Academy, he realized that the three students had already left. There was nothing left for him to worry about anymore. "Stop struggling, you're not going to escape!"

Hearing the call behind him, Wei Wu ran faster. The face behind his head kept screaming, urging him to run faster!

The distance between them grew. Chen Ge did not have any good idea to catch up. Running in the Haunted House with the hammer hindered his speed. To be able to follow the man so closely was mainly because of his good physique. Wei Wu ran with all his might. There was a voice in his mind saying, Faster, faster!

He remembered the exit was just several corners away and hope lit up in his heart. I mustn't fall into his hands! Yes, I can definitely make this!

He ran out of the corridor adjacent to the deep well. Wei Wu was about to charge forward when he suddenly realized the tight corridor was filled with numerous mannequins!

"Shouldn't they be inside the classroom? Why are they here?"

With intertwining arms and teetering bodies, the mannequins' faces with creepy smiles looked at Wei Wu, causing him to shiver.

“Why?”

Whenever he wanted to do something, there would be people or things trying to stop him; that had happened several times already that day. Wei Wu dashed into the group of mannequins. As he knocked the mannequins down, they gripped his clothes, pulling him down with them. If this was any other time, he could have used the blood face to slowly escape the trap, but Chen Ge was close behind him.

As Wei Wu fell down, he turned to look, and the scary-looking hammer was closer than he expected. He was reminded of the first time he created his real ghost story. Once, I chased innocent people like this before...

BANG!

His other arm was incapacitated, and the large pound sent Wei Wu sprawling across the ground. Not giving him any chance to escape, Xu Yin jumped on the man's back and poked his hands into the back of Wei Wu's head to yank the blood face out!

A blood-curdling scream reverberated through the Haunted House. After dealing with Wei Wu, Chen Ge dragged him to a corner. The blood face on Wei Wu was torn apart by Xu Yin, and the blood that splattered all over the place became nutrition for the many mannequins.

“Not bad, very clever.” Chen Ge was never stingy with his praise, and he could sense joy coming from the group of mannequins. Bringing Xu Yin along, Chen Ge returned to Western Jiujiang's Private Academy.

Kong Xiangming's thin monster had harmed many innocent people, so it was incredibly powerful. There was a long trail of human faces on its body, and it did not show any sign of being cornered even facing three baleful specters.

Unfortunately, this was just a battle between ghosts. While the thin monster had a handle on the ghost situation, Chen Ge was already chasing Kong Xiangming all over the place with the crazed hammer.

“Save me! Save me!” he yelled inside the scenario, but the thin monster was unable to do anything. After Kong Xiangming took a hammer strike to his back, the monster was forced to leave Kong Xiangming and escape on its own. With the lesson from Wei Wu, Chen Ge was prepared this time. The three specters jumped on the monster and apprehended it tightly. Several minutes later, the monster was shared among the three specters, and its host, Kong Xiangming, fainted.

“There’s no notification on the black phone. Looks like these three aren’t patients from the Third Sick Hall either.” Chen Ge looked at the baleful specters who were feasting, and he mumbled to himself, “Seven left...”

The thin monster soon disappeared down the specter’s stomach. The fat specter held its stomach like it had not had enough yet. It wiggled its large body around to look for more food when it noticed Chen Ge looking at it. It panicked and immediately dispersed to merge into the stench that covered the scenario.

Am I that scary? Chen Ge turned to look at the other specter. The hanging man was even more shameless. After it had its fill, it leaned and fell to the ground like nothing had ever happened.

The two specters probably did not eat much since Chen Ge was there. Most of the thin monster had been consumed by Xu Yin. This time, Chen Ge could see the obvious change in the man. Xu Yin’s shirt bloomed with a large blood stain, and it was still growing. “A Red Specter?”

Chen Ge knew that Red Specters were stronger than normal specters, but he did not know how they were formed.

One-third of Xu Yin’s outfit is bloodied, so normal specter can change into Red Specter? He looked at the hanging man lying on the floor and compared it to Xu Yin. He had a feeling that things were not that simple.

Perhaps only a certain type of baleful specter has the ability to turn into a Red Specter. Chen Ge thought long and hard before he came up with this speculation. He had seen many ghosts before, but other than Zhang Ya, only Xu Yin, this specter that was surrounded by hatred and resentment, showed any chance of becoming a Red Specter.

I should use other ghosts inside the Haunted House to give it a try when I have the chance next time. He imagined Xiaoxiao in a red dress slashing her claws, and he silently shook his head. Even when she’s a Red Spectre, I have a feeling she’ll still be bullied. I should use the Pen Spirit to give it a try.

Chen Ge realized that Xu Yin had reverted to his original form. He lowered his head, and his eyes were hollow like everything that was reflected in them would lose their color. Taking out the recorder, Chen Ge walked toward Xu Yin. He was about to speak when Xu Yin, who sensed his approach, disappeared. The tape stopped moving, but the blood on it seemed to have deepened.

Looks like more communication is in order. Chen Ge understood the source of Xu Yin's pain, but he had done everything he could. The rest depended on Xu Yin.

Dragging Kong Xiangming out of the Western Jiujiang's Private Academy, Chen Ge returned to the corner where he had left Wei Wu. From afar, he saw Gu Feiyu standing in the middle of the junction with a flashlight. The young man was worried about Wei Wu's safety. He wanted to help Wei Wu, but the group of mannequins made him hesitate. He paced where he was and did not dare to move forward.

"Xiao Gu, come and help me!" After removing the skin mask, Chen Ge waved at Gu Feiyu. "Have the three medical students been sent out?"

Seeing Chen Ge in the doctor's outfit, Gu Feiyu took an involuntary step back. He recovered seconds later and quickly replied, "Yes, the three students all gave the Haunted House five stars in front of me. They said that they had a great time and hope you won't make it too difficult for that Haunted House actor."

"They had a great time?" Chen Ge nodded. "Well, as long as they had fun."

"Brother Chen, what is it with those two visitors? They've both fainted; is it really alright?" Gu Feiyu added one last question after some hesitation. "Also, what did the students mean by the Haunted House employee?"

"It's nothing important, Xiao Gu. If you want to work here, then you need to be familiar with these things. By the way, I need you to learn some first-aid skills in the future." Chen Ge had Gu Feiyu carry Wei Wu and Kong Xiangming. "Now, we lock them in the dressing room first."

"First-aid skill? Lock them in the dressing room?" Gu Feiyu's head was covered in cold sweat. For some reason, he felt like he had entered a trap.

"They're not visitors." Chen Ge knew that Xiao Gu had misunderstood him, so he explained roughly, "The New Century Park is bouncing back, and that is tied to this huge promotion the Haunted House is having. Some people are not happy that we're coming back and so sent their men to come sabotage us."

"Oh, is that so?" Xiao Gu nodded seriously. "Life in the big city sure is complicated."

Xiao Gu carried Wei Wu, and Chen Ge dragged Kong Xiangming. The two stopped at the entrance to the Sealed Classroom. "There are still two more visitors in the Haunted House. They should be in the scenario on the right. Stay here and wait for me. I'll be back in a minute."

Chen Ge left Kong Xiangming behind and ran into the female dorm. Gu Feiyu stood outside the classroom, and for some reason, he felt like someone was looking at him from inside the classroom.

"Brother Chen, wait for me! I'm going with you!" They had just entered the corridor on the right when they heard the sound of argument. The visitor by the name of Na Na was still at the height of her temper. She was adamant about breaking up with the man. Her fury had completely nulled her sense of fear.

What are these two doing? Fighting inside a Haunted House?

The two visitors stood in the middle of the corridor, and there were no other scare points around them. They were locked in a deep argument and did not seem like they were going to stop anytime soon.

"Brother Chen, please slow down." Gu Feiyu half-tow and half-dragged the two members from the ghost stories society with him.

"Why did you follow me?"

"I'm worried about you, so I came to help." Gu Feiyu looked ahead and changed the topic. "The two are in a serious argument. Shall we go help?"

"Do you know them personally? How do you expect us to help?" Chen Ge swung the hammer. He felt dealing with them was easier. At least things could be solved with a swing of the hammer.

"But they're arguing so vehemently, will this be good for us? After all, we're inside the Haunted House. If people hear of this, it might influence our reputation." Gu Feiyu stood behind Chen Ge. Eavesdropping on a couple's argument inside a Haunted House still did not seem that moral to him.

"If these two really want to break up, they wouldn't have let this drag on for half an hour already." Chen Ge retrieved the skin mask, put it on, picked up the hammer, and headed for the couple.

Before he got close, he saw the girl shove the man back and snuck into the bedroom where Pen Spirit resided alone. Then she locked the door. The man slammed on the door repeatedly. The woman cried inside the room, but she did not open the door.

“Yan Na Na!” The woman locked the door and windows. The man called her name outside the window, but the woman seemed insistent on ending this relationship.

“Chen Ziming, we met each other inside a Haunted House, so we’ll end it here today, okay? Two years, six months, and one day, thank you for everything that you’ve given me.”

“I really don’t understand why you’re breaking up with me! Am I not good to you?”

“You’re very good; it’s all my fault. Are you satisfied?”

The argument kept going, and it grated on Chen Ge’s ears. He dragged the hammer across the floor and picked up his pace. The footsteps echoed down the corridor. The man outside the door saw Chen Ge. Honestly, he was a little afraid, but his anger had overwhelmed that fear completely. In fact, when he saw Chen Ge get close, he intended to turn his fury onto Chen Ge, who dared to disturb them.

With his finger pointing at Chen Ge, the man’s lips were already opening, but before he could make any sound, Chen Ge suddenly charged forward and picked up the hammer to swing at the door’s lock!

The wooden door broke into splinters, and the lock flew into the wall, creating a crisp sound.

The pair was completely stunned, especially the man, who was about to say something. When the hammer swung through the air, he could hear the air being sliced through clearly. His lips could not close. The man looked at Chen Ge’s skin mask, and his eyes twitched. His body would not listen to his brain’s commands.

The woman stopped crying and started to scream.

The man tried to enter the bedroom, but his legs were not moving. His ears hummed, and after he staggered a step back, his body leaned weakly forward.

“Ziming!” The woman ran to grab the man’s shoulders. This time, she stood before the man to shield him from Chen Ge.

Chen Ge pulled the hammer out from the hole in the door, and he was feeling rather embarrassed. He had been using the hammer so much recently that he had forgotten how to gauge his strength.

He coughed awkwardly before removing the skin mask. Looking at the two shocked visitors, before the two recovered and their fury returned, he said, "When danger appeared, your partner's first thought wasn't to run but to enter the room to look for you. This shows how much he cares about you."

Chen Ge then turned to tell the male visitor who tripped, "When you fell to the ground, your partner let go of everything to come help you and shield you. If you miss a woman as good as her, you'll regret it for the rest of your life."

His bloodied shirt fluttering in the wind, Chen Ge helped the two get up with a smile.

"You two love each other. No matter what happens, as long as you have that, it's enough." Chen Ge placed the hammer aside. "If you don't believe me, we can play a little game to test it out."

The two visitors were picked up from the floor and arranged by Chen Ge to sit on both side of the chair. They had their fingers intertwined and a ballpoint pen wrapped in cellophane tape within their grasp.

"This Haunted House has been open for years already, so some of the things have gained their own spirit. This ballpoint pen is one of them. You can ask it the question that you wish to be answered inside your heart, and it will give you the answer."

The couple had just woken up from the shock that Chen Ge delivered. They looked into each other's eyes and felt the warmth that came from the other's palm. After a long time, they finally started the Pen Spirit game. "Pen Spirit, Pen Spirit, you are my spirit from my previous life, and I am your spirit in this life. Can you tell me if they love me the most in this world?"

Looking away from the couple, Chen Ge rolled his eyes. He kept giving hints to the Pen Spirit; he needed to send this couple out as soon as possible. Several seconds later, the ballpoint pen started to move, and both visitors captured the surprise in their partner's eyes.

The pen started to move on the paper to write a word. "Yes."

After sending the Pen Spirit away, the game officially ended, but the two visitors had let their hands go.

“Ziming...” The woman apologized softly, and the man went over to pull her into a hug.

“I’ll make more time to accompany you in the future!”

“I should have been more understanding.”

“Are you two done?” Chen Ge’s hands that gripped the hammer were bursting with veins. He felt like he was going to lose control soon.

“Boss, we’re so sorry for creating all this trouble for you.” The two visitors finally parted. They apologized and thanked Chen Ge profusely.

“If not for the fact that you two met inside my Haunted House, I wouldn’t have cared.” Chen Ge put the hammer away. “Good luck in your future. Don’t leave any regrets.”

“We won’t!”

After sending the two visitors away, Xiao Gu was shocked. When he saw Chen Ge knock down the door, he had been ready with his phone to call the police. He was surprised by this ending.

“Brother Chen, you’re amazing.”

“Stop dawdling. Go upstairs and help me get the toolbox, we need to fix this door.”

After fixing the door and the lock, Chen Ge and Xiao Gu dragged the ghost stories society's members back to the first floor and locked them inside the dressing room.

"Boss, are you sure this is safe?" Xiao Gu wiggled the door lock. "I mean, do you want me to go grab some ropes to tie them up?"

Chen Ge could see the improvement in Gu Feiyu. He removed the outfit that he was wearing and handed it to Xiao Gu. "That won't be necessary. Put this back on and return to the third floor. The visitors are already waiting."

"No problem, leave it to me." This time, Xiao Gu put on Doctor Skull-cracker's uniform without hesitation. In fact, he looked quite enthusiastic, so enthusiastic that Chen Ge wondered if he had been taken over by the monsters from the ghost stories society. After all, it was as if he was a completely different person from how he had been that morning.

"Weird, when you entered the Haunted House earlier, it felt like I was asking you to walk to your execution—why the sudden change?"

"Change?" Xiao Gu scratched his head in embarrassment. Wearing Doctor Skull-cracker's outfit, doing that action, it gave Chen Ge a sense of incongruity. "Actually, I thought your Haunted House was only meant to scare people to their death. I don't quite approve of that way of making money, but after seeing you fix the relationship problem of that couple, I suddenly feel like our Haunted House is quite warm."

"Looks like you have been having these misunderstandings about our Haunted House. Fear can help people remove the disguise that they wear daily. Here, you don't need to watch your every move or calculate how to appear to others; just focus on screaming," Chen Ge said seriously. "A fast-paced life means plenty of everyday pressure. In this city, there has to be a location where people can vent their pressure without fear. You assumed we're earning people's money by scaring them, but in reality, we're merely here to add a little color to their mundane lives."

Patting Gu Feiyu on his shoulder, a smile that was as warm as the rising sun appeared on Chen Ge's face. "Try your best to scare the visitors. The couple from before is the perfect example. We often forget the things that we have, so only in the deepest despair can we be reminded of what is the most important in our lives."

"You're right!" After listening to what Chen Ge had to say, Gu Feiyu heavily nodded several times. He suddenly found his job to be quite saintly. "I will try my best to do my job!"

"Good luck." Looking at how eager Gu Feiyu was, Chen Ge felt comforted. "That is how you should do it. By the way, you better set my phone number as your number one speed-dial. If you come across anything you cannot solve inside the Haunted House, call me immediately."

"Okay." The arguing couple was nothing more than an interlude for Chen Ge, so he really did not expect it would be the incident that would help him gain Gu Feiyu's approval. Of course, it was the Haunted House that his Boss Chen had 'built' in his mind.

Opening the thick curtain, Chen Ge walked out of the Haunted House. The resting tent was filled with waiting visitors. The promotion's effect was much better than he had expected. Many visitors who could not wait any longer went to try out other attractions. For the first time in a long time, there were bustling crowds inside the park. Even though it was still far from how it had been during the height of New Century Park, it was good enough to make the park workers rejoice. They finally had things to do and get busy with; the theme park that been built for almost a decade saw life again.

After losing two members, the ghost stories society stopped coming to test Chen Ge. Perhaps they had sensed the problem. If they continued to test Chen Ge's Haunted House out like this, the society would run out of members in a few days. The crowd was still bustling outside the Haunted House when it was 6:30 pm. However, for the sake of security, Chen Ge stopped accepting visitors. The workers began to clean up the park, and the visitors started to leave the park around 7 pm.

The number of visitors had broken the record at New Century Park in the most recent six months. During lunch, Uncle Xu was called away by Director Luo. They seemed to be discussing the next phase of the promotion plan. "Thank you for your help today!"

After closing the gates, Chen Ge counted his earning. Combining the online payment and cash payment, he earned almost 15,000. The number was smaller than he expected, and the main reason was because Chen Ge limited the number of visitors that could visit his Haunted House simultaneously. This was for the sake of their safety. Minghun could only allow 4 visitors at most, and the limit for Murder by Midnight was seven. Due to the demand for Mu Yang High School, Chen Ge upped the limit to twelve. The first two scenarios took about twenty minutes per visitation, but Mu Yang High School was so large that a normal visitation even for twelve visitors would last forty minutes.

The rate of earning money was low, but the good reputation kept climbing. More and more people actively helped Chen Ge promote his Haunted House by telling their family and friends either in person or through social media.

This was a positive cycle. For a normal Haunted House, due to its limitation in setting, once the freshness was over, the number of visitors would drop. However, since Chen Ge's Haunted House was delineated according to the scare levels, as long as he could provide newer and scarier scenarios, the number of visitors would only continue to increase. For him, a good name and reputation was far more important than temporary benefits.

After a whole day of operation, only one group managed to find eighteen nametags. The group included other students from Western Jiujiang's Medical University that came with Yang Chen and other visitors who had tried the scenario once before. Chen Ge asked them whether they would give the other scenario a try, and the team, who all looked like they had been ravaged, very adamantly rejected Chen Ge's offer.

The day's operation finally ended. After Xu Wan and Xiao Gu left, Chen Ge used his phone to transfer some bonus money into their accounts. After dealing with all the miscellaneous tasks, Chen Ge opened the door to the dressing room. Wei Wu and Kong Xiangming had already woken up.

However, since the monsters that possessed them had left, their minds seemed to be heavily affected. They looked dull and dim-witted, like they could not remember anything. Chen Ge led them out of the Haunted House and personally took them to the police station to find Captain Yan.

...

Xiao Gu wandered aimlessly down the road. He kept touching his face. After wearing the weird mask for a whole day, even after taking it off, it felt like something was still sticking to his face.

Where will I sleep tonight? After the big falling out with Manager Huang, it doesn't sound like a good idea to return to the security dormitory. Brother Chen has helped me so much already—asking him for early pay is too hard to do.

He pushed his hands inside his pockets. While he was desperate for a solution, there came a message from the bank on his phone.

Brother Chen has given me a bonus? But it's only my first day.

Xiao Gu looked at the message that stated 800 had entered his account. It was enough for him to rent a comfortable room at Western Jiujiang. Comparing that the experience he had had at the security team, Xiao Gu could not help but be touched. Boss Chen is a really good man!

After pocketing his phone, Xiao Gu headed for Fang Hwa Apartments' security dormitory. He was going back to pack his stuff and would leave to find a place for himself tomorrow. He arrived at his destination at around 8 pm. When he walked in, he saw Manager Huang standing there with a lousy expression on his face.

"Where have you been?" He was in a sharp suit, and his suede shoes were sparkly clean. Manager Huang seemed to always have a bone to pick with Gu Feiyu.

"I've been looking for you. I've found a new job, so I'll be moving out of here tomorrow." Gu Feiyu had always been straight-shooter, so he told the man everything that was on his mind. Ol' Wong was also inside the bedroom. He quickly rushed out to pull on Gu Feiyu's sleeves. He lowered his head to apologize to Manager Huang. "Please don't mind him. Xiao Gu is too young to mind his words."

He then turned to glare at Gu Feiyu, "Why don't you know how to edit that temperament of yours?"

"There's no need for him to change. After all, this place is too small for a personality as big as his." Manager Huang placed the piece of paper he was holding on the table. "Even if you don't plan to quit, I won't be keeping you around. Fill out this form, and I don't want to see you here again after tomorrow."

Pushing Ol' Wong aside, Manager Huang walked to the door and stopped. "There's another thing. Ol' Wong, the kid came on your recommendation, so the money to pay for the damage that he has done and his medical fees will be taken out from your salary."

"What does this have to do with Uncle Wong? Just remove that from my salary." Xiao Gu tried to keep himself calm.

"Your salary? When you came, things were clearly written in the contract. You have to work for a full month before your salary can be counted. Now you're quitting in less than a month; do you really think the contract is just a piece of paper? Think about how much trouble you've created for me even though you've been here less than a month." Manager Huang walked away without even turning back. "You want to talk to me about salary? In your dreams!"

Gu Feiyu wanted to charge forward to punch the man into a pulp, but he was stopped by Ol' Wong. "Xiao Gu, don't act too rashly. Be patient."

"Uncle, I don't mind if he didn't give me my salary, but I cannot rest easy knowing he'll take those fees out from your salary!"

"How old are you already? Why are you still acting so rashly?" Ol' Wong asked for Gu Feiyu to sit down while he walked to close the bedroom door. "It's not easy to find a job these days. Tell me what kind of new job you've found. If the conditions are good, perhaps I'll also want to switch over to help."

Ol' Wong was worried about Gu Feiyu. He was afraid that he might have been tricked, so he used a round-about way to ask about Gu Feiyu's situation. The mention of his new job did make Gu Feiyu calm down slightly. "I'm currently employed at a Haunted House, and the job is to scare people. The boss is very nice. It's my first day of work, but he's already given me a bonus."

"Is that so?" Ol' Wong was still a bit suspicious. "You're too trusting. You'd better be on the lookout for yourself even if you're working for others. Don't create trouble for people, but you have to be careful of cheaters."

“I’ll be fine, Uncle.”

Ol’ Wong gave him plenty of advice because he worried about the young man. He changed into his security uniform when it was about 8:30 pm and prepared to leave.

“Uncle, I remember you had the morning shift today, right? Where are you going so late at night?”

“After the murderer was discovered at this place, everyone has been quite unsettled, and there has to be more than one person for the night shift.”

“How about I help take your place for one night?” Xiao Gu felt guilty. If not for him, Ol’ Wong’s wages would not have been docked.

“You take a good rest so that you can be energized for work tomorrow morning.” Ol’ Wong exited the room with his thermos cup. He walked out the door before turning back. “If you don’t like your new job, remember to give me a call. I still have some connections here.”

“Don’t worry. As tiring as the new job is, it’s still much better than working security.”

He walked slowly to the backdoor of Fang Hwa Apartments. After chatting with the guard whose shift he was taking over, he stood in the guard post alone. There were two guards on night shift—one looking after the front door, the other the back door—so they would not meet each other.

The night darkened, and the normally deserted backdoor became even more desolate. Since a murderer had just sneaked into the residential area, Ol’ Wong did not dare lower his guard. He sat beside the window and kept raising his head to inspect the backdoor. After a whole morning of work, combined with his advanced age, Ol’ Wong soon found himself collapsing on the table.

At around 11 pm, the phone on his table suddenly rang. It woke Ol’ Wong up from his sleep. He looked around the room guardedly with his forged police baton. There was no one under the dim street lights.

Phew, scared me.

Ol’ Wong opened his thermos cup to take a sip. He looked at his phone. There was a message on his WeChat.

“Are you there?”

He was far too old to use much social media, so Ol’ Wong was confused. Who sent this message?

The messenger’s profile was private, so only friends could see it. Ol’ Wong looked at the person’s name and profile picture, but he really could not remember adding this person as his friend before. Other than my family and colleagues, the only people who would know my WeChat are the tenants of this residential area.

Holding the phone in his hands, Ol’ Wong thought for a long time, but the memory did not come to him. However, for some reason, the person did seem familiar. He placed the phone on the table. He thought about replying with a voice message, but considering how late it was, that might have been impolite. So, he used his fingers to slowly type out a message. “Yes, how can I help you?”

Several seconds later, the reply came.

“I’m a tenant on the third building’s 23rd floor. I don’t know what’s going with the family across from me, but the children in the room keep crying. However, I cannot hear the voice of any adult. Quickly call someone to come take a look.”

Crying children? 23rd floor third building? Ol’ Wong looked at the message and assumed it was from a tenant. After all, something similar had happened before.

“Okay, I’ll be coming in a minute.” Out of caution, Ol’ Wong messaged the guard that was manning the post at the front door. Then he called Manager Huang, but the call was not picked up.

Why is it the third building again? So many things are happening here.

Ol’ Wong picked up his baton and ran to the third building. He had heard the rumors about the elevator at the third building, but the tenant lived on the 23rd floor, and climbing the stairs would have been too slow if there was an emergency.

I should wait for Ol’ Wei before I get into the elevator. Ol’ Wong waited in the lobby for the other guard to come, but then his phone rang again.

“Are you there?”

“Yes.”

“The children are crying even harder. Something is wrong! Where are you people?”

Reading the message on his phone, Ol’ Wong pressed the elevator button. To his surprise, the elevator was already waiting on the first floor. “Coming, don’t worry.”

As the silvery-gray elevator door slowly closed, Ol’ Wong’s heart started to race. The claustrophobic environment made his breathing become rather uneasy. The number on display soon turned to 23, and the doors opened. The darkened corridor was unusually quiet, and Ol’ Wong stepped out of the elevator carefully. He switched his flashlight on, but for some reason, the light did not give him the sense of security that he wanted. It only made him feel even more uneasy.

“I’m already on the 23rd floor. Can you give me your room number?”

Taking a deep gulp, Ol’ Wong slowly nudged forward in the dark. He used his flashlight to shine on the room number, and it felt like he had walked for a long time before he found room 3239.

There’s no crying? He stood at the door for a long time, and Room 3239 was very quiet. There was no sound of children. Is this a prank, or has something bad already happened?

Ol’ Wong was not sure. He took out his phone, ready to ask the person, but the person sent him another message.

“Are you there?”

“I’m already at Room 3239, but there’s nothing here. Are you mistaken?” Typing was too slow, so Ol’ Wong sent a voice message. Not long after that, his own recorded voice appeared behind him.

“Who’s there?”

Ol’ Wong slowly turned around. The door opposite from Room 3239 was slightly ajar, and a deathly pale figure was squatting at the door, holding the phone.

Xiao Gu planned to lie down for the night at 11:15 pm when his phone vibrated. He picked it up to read and saw it was a message from Ol' Wong. The content was simple; there were only three words.

“Are you there?”

Chapter 272 - He's Not Ol' Wong!

Chapter 272: He's Not Ol' Wong!

"Uncle Wong?" Gu Feiyu looked at his phone and replied without thinking. "I'm here, what's wrong?"

"There's a tenant that said he saw someone suspicious sneak into the third building. You know we're running low on staff, so if you're still awake, do you mind coming to help?"

"Someone suspicious? Okay, I'll be there in a minute!" Since he was the reason Ol' Wong got fined, Xiao Gu was ravaged by guilt. He had been hoping for a chance to make up for that, so he agreed readily.

Grabbing his phone, Gu Feiyu ran to Fang Hwa Apartments. The third building was just adjacent to the backdoor. Gu Feiyu glanced inside the guard post. Ol' Wong had left in such a hurry that he did not even close the door.

"Did something happen already?" He called Ol' Wong, but there was no answer. After he entered the third floor, there was another message on his WeChat. "The person who sneaked in appeared to be a thief. We have cornered him on the 23rd floor. When you come, remember to be careful."

"Okay." Xiao Gu was worried about Ol' Wong's safety, so he rushed into the elevator and pressed the button for 23rd floor. The elevator doors slowly closed, and Xiao Gu started to frown, looking at his phone.

Uncle Wong types very slowly, and he normally sends voice messages. Also why didn't he answer my call earlier? He was confused, but Xiao Gu did not think this was a trap. I just came to the city to find work. I have no looks and no money; there is no reason for people to trick me. Perhaps Uncle Wong's team is on a stake-out, so it's inconvenient to answer the call.

The number shifted, and the elevator soon arrived on the 23rd floor.

“Uncle, I’m already here. Where are you?”

Xiao Gu slid out of the elevator silently. He hid around the corner and messaged Ol’ Wong to ask for his location.

“The thief seems to have enter Room 3239. We’re hiding in the room across from it. When you come over, make sure not to make too much noise.”

Raising his head to look down the darkened corridor, Xiao Gu memorized the room number that he had been given before advancing. The only source of light in the corridor was Xiao Gu’s phone. He looked at the closed doors that lined both sides of the corridor, and he slowed down.

He moved further away from the elevator. When he was halfway there, Xiao Gu turned back to look. The number on the elevator shifted. It appeared like someone had called the elevator, or perhaps someone had entered the elevator. In any case, the elevator had returned to the first floor. If something dangerous happened then, it would be impossible to escape via the elevator. It would take at least one minute for the elevator to come back up again.

Someone is coming up from the first floor? Is it the other guard? Xiao Gu waited for a while and realized that the elevator was still at the first floor. He was suspicious, but before he could understand why, Ol’ Wong started to rush him through WeChat.

This triggered an alarm in Xiao Gu.

Uncle Wong couldn’t have typed so fast; the person sending the messages is not him!

Xiao Gu had already suspected that before, but he had believed that there was nothing worth getting from him. There were so many contacts on Ol’ Wong’s WeChat, so why was he selected?

Xiao Gu slowed down. He called Ol’ Wong again, and similarly, there was no answer. “Don’t want to pick up the phone but keep sending messages... is it because the real messenger wants to hide their voice?”

Not long ago, Xiao Gu met the madwoman in the third building. He had almost been brutally murdered. The experience had left a deep scar in his heart, but it had also taught him a valuable lesson—one cannot be too careful. He did not dare move forward anymore but slowly nudged toward the elevator.

I should leave this building and get help from the other guards. Xiao Gu regretted rushing into the elevator. Just hours ago, Ol' Wong had reminded him to not act so rashly. He stuck to the wall, and as he moved down the eerie corridor, he became more unsettled.

The elevator is still sitting on the first floor. This is weird. If someone on the first floor didn't call the elevator, why did it go down? Did someone enter the elevator on this floor when I wasn't paying attention?

In the silent corridor, Xiao Gu's phone suddenly vibrated. It gave him quite a scare. He lowered his head to look. There was another message from Ol' Wong. "Have you arrived?"

For some reason, when Xiao Gu saw this message, he panicked. He increased the speed of his retreating footsteps. He moved several meters, and there was another message on his phone. "Are you there?"

Xiao Gu stopped replying. He retreated to the elevator and pressed the button to call for it. The elevator that stopped at the first floor started to move. Xiao Gu stared at the number on display, and his heart raced. The person who sent him the message seemed to sense something because the frequency of messaging drastically increased. Xiao Gu's phone kept vibrating, and the same message repeated itself.

"Are you there?"

"Are you there?"

"Are you there?"

Now Xiao Gu was certain it was definitely not Ol' Wong on the other end of the line!

The more he thought about it, the more scared he became. Seeing the messages that filled up his inbox, a chill ran through his body. What is happening?

When the elevator reached the 11th floor, Ol' Wong suddenly stopped sending him messages. Xiao Gu sighed in relief. He swiped his sweating forehead and realized it was soaked in cold sweat. Someone should have taken Ol' Wong's phone already. I need to leave before I'm discovered.

Xiao Gu pressed on the button rapidly. When the elevator reached the 14th floor, he turned over his shoulder to look. One of the room doors at the end of the corridor creaked open, and a pale figure holding Ol' Wong's phone was poking their head out.

"My parents taught me to be a law-abiding citizen from a young age. That filled me with a sense of justice and cultivated the habit of helping others whenever I can. Therefore, when I saw people ignoring the law and harming the innocent, I had to apprehend them. I admit I might have acted a little bit emotionally, but the situation didn't allow me any other options. If I didn't act, more people would have gotten injured."

Chen Ge wiggled the handcuffs and announced openly in front of the three officers and Captain Yan that sat across from him in the interrogation room.

"That is the reason you used violence to knock them out?" The officer who sat next to Captain Yan frowned.

"But I'm the victim here. After all, there are more of them than me."

"Have you seen a victim come to make a police report with two unconscious culprits?"

"They attacked me first; I was only acting in self-defense."

Chen Ge stared at the four policemen, who stared back at him. In the end, it was Captain Yan who coughed and said, "Stop arguing. The officers who were sent out to verify the news should return shortly."

Comment (1)

I hope Old Wong will be ok and Xiao Gu also need to escape faster...or perhaps contact Chen Ge to ask for hepl.

Chapter 273: Xiao Gu, Run!

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The interrogation room door was pushed open at 11 pm. Two officers walked into the room and placed two printed files on the table.

“Wei Wu, real name Zhang Wu, male, 36, works at a pharmaceutical company. He has been spotted going out late at night for the past six months and has been using his fake identity to rent many underground storage rooms. Investigation is still ongoing for his properties.”

“Kong Xiangming, real name Kong Yin. A wanted man on the run. Xing Hai police suspect this man is related to two homicides.”

Looking at the information on the table, Chen Ge sat up straighter. Things were even more successful than he thought. Kong Xiangming was a wanted man. He did not even have to say much to prove his innocence.

“See, I’m not lying to you, am I?” Chen Ge raised both of his hands. “I’m sorry, but what is the reward for capturing a wanted man? Xing Hai is a bigger city than Jiujiang, so the reward money should be higher, right?”

“Reward money is decided by the department of public security; it has nothing to do with locality.” Captain Yan had the man beside him uncuff Chen Ge. He then personally poured a glass of water for Chen Ge. “Tell me, how did you discover these two?”

“I’ve told you. I’m the victim!” Chen Ge pouted. Listening to him, the few policemen in the room felt their scalps numb.

“We believe you, but everything needs to be based on the evidence.” Since no one had any sign of saying anything, Captain Yan stepped forward. “Don’t mind it too much, but if there’s a next time, try to take a lighter hand. If you accidentally take someone’s life, things will be very complicated.”

Captain Yan did not know why he would say that, but he had a feeling this was only the beginning.

“Okay, I’ll try.”

“I’ll personally go ask about the reward money for you tomorrow, so now can you tell us about these two?” Captain Yan was familiar with Chen Ge’s personality, so he threw out the reward money as bait.

“Told you, I’m really the victim.” Chen Ge’s voice turned serious. “You guys still remember how I accidentally came into the group of madmen detaining live hostages at the mental hospital, right?”

“Yes.” Captain Yan seemed to remember something. “The group of madmen had a picture of you entering the New Century Park, so do you mean these two people were sent by them to the Haunted House to disturb business?”

“Disturb my business?” Chen Ge shook his head and sighed. “They were sent to kill me.”

The interrogation room became quiet after he said that. Based on the investigation and their years of experience, the officers believed Chen Ge was right.

“Just because you exposed their secret at the abandoned mental hospital? That made them want to kill you?” a young looking officer at the table asked.

“They’re all mental patients; their worldview is different from us.” Chen Ge thought about it, and he prepared to tell Captain Yan the things that he could reveal to prevent the police from having unnecessary sacrifices. “After a short interaction, I realized these people’s hearts have been fully twisted. They use their own twisted views to understand the world, and the scariest thing is they believe they are right and it is this world that is wrong. You cannot apply normal logic to them; they are extremely dangerous.”

“Mental patients going around killing people with a twisted worldview?” Captain Yan tapped lightly on the table. This was something he would subconsciously do when he was in deep thought.

“What I’m saying is the truth. You have to be very careful; they’re different from normal mental patients.”

“During the day, they can act incredibly normal. Only when after midnight or when they’re alone will their side that is ill be shown.” Chen Ge was giving Captain Yan’s team a warning. This group of madmen were different from normal, and most of them were smarter than normal people.

“I understand. Most serial killers have deficiencies in terms of mental and spiritual health.” Captain Yan wanted to say something more when Chen Ge’s phone rang.

“Xiao Gu?” Chen Ge glanced at his phone and was quite surprised. “Why is he calling me?”

He was detained inside the interrogation room, so he asked Captain Yan, “Do you mind if I answer this call? It’s from my employee.”

“You can answer it here.” The few officers placed their absolute focus on Chen Ge. They perked up their ears to listen. Chen Ge picked up the call, and before he could move the phone to his ears, Gu Feiyu’s scream at the top of the lungs came through. “Brother Chen! Fang Hwa Apartments’ third building! Uncle Wong has already...”

The voice suddenly stopped. Xiao Gu’s phone sounded like it was slapped away by something and knocked into the wall. There were only running footsteps that could be heard in the call.

“Fang Hwa Apartments’ third building?” Chen Ge did not end the call. He paid full attention, hoping to get more information. The sound of footsteps soon disappeared. It was unclear whether Xiao Gu had run to another floor or tragedy had befallen him.

“It’s at the third building again.” Chen Ge’s eyes were rather scary. “The bunch of crazies have reached out to attack my employee. They’re inside Fang Hwa Apartments’ third building!”

The interrogation room was silent for a second before everyone mobilized. “Call the local station! Get them moving instantly!”

If this was before, Chen Ge would not have told the police. After all, Captain Yan would not have chosen to help him capture the members of the ghost stories society based on his few words. But things were different now. The police had confirmed that the two members that

Chen Ge had caught were involved in many crimes. Chen Ge was not lying.

“Captain Yan, can you drop me off at New Century Park first? I need to go get something important.”

“Ol’ Wu, you drive Xiao Chen.” Captain Yan seemed to morph into a different person. He walked out of the interrogation room and yelled, “Stop dawdling! Get moving!”

After getting the promise from Captain Yan, Chen Ge took Ol’ Wu’s car to return to New Century Park. He grabbed the recorder and ballpoint pen, and since the police were coming with him, he did not take the hammer.

The ghost stories society targeted Xiao Gu mainly to get to me. They want to lead me there with Xiao Gu as bait. Chen Ge did not plan to take a big risk. He sat inside the police car and thought about it carefully. Since you have set up such a big plan, there has to be a trap. Conservatively speaking, I suspect there will be at least four members at Fang Hwa Apartments.

Chen Ge looked out the window at the night sky, and his finger traced the play button of the recorder. But they won’t be expecting me to come with the police.

The interrogation room door was pushed open at 11 pm. Two officers walked into the room and placed two printed files on the table.

“Wei Wu, real name Zhang Wu, male, 36, works at a pharmaceutical company. He has been spotted going out late at night for the past six months and has been using his fake identity to rent many underground storage rooms. Investigation is still ongoing for his properties.”

“Kong Xiangming, real name Kong Yin. A wanted man on the run. Xing Hai police suspect this man is related to two homicides.”

Looking at the information on the table, Chen Ge sat up straighter. Things were even more successful than he thought. Kong Xiangming was a wanted man. He did not even have to say much to prove his innocence.

“See, I’m not lying to you, am I?” Chen Ge raised both of his hands. “I’m sorry, but what is the reward for capturing a wanted man? Xing Hai is a bigger city than Jiujiang, so the reward money should be higher, right?”

“Reward money is decided by the department of public security; it has nothing to do with locality.” Captain Yan had the man beside him uncuff Chen Ge. He then personally poured a glass of water for Chen Ge. “Tell me, how did you discover these two?”

“I’ve told you. I’m the victim!” Chen Ge pouted. Listening to him, the few policemen in the room felt their scalps numb.

“We believe you, but everything needs to be based on the evidence.” Since no one had any sign of saying anything, Captain Yan stepped forward. “Don’t mind it too much, but if there’s a next time, try to take a lighter hand. If you accidentally take someone’s life, things will be very complicated.”

Captain Yan did not know why he would say that, but he had a feeling this was only the beginning.

“Okay, I’ll try.”

“I’ll personally go ask about the reward money for you tomorrow, so now can you tell us about these two?” Captain Yan was familiar with Chen Ge’s personality, so he threw out the reward money as bait.

“Told you, I’m really the victim.” Chen Ge’s voice turned serious. “You guys still remember how I accidentally came into the group of madmen detaining live hostages at the mental hospital, right?”

“Yes.” Captain Yan seemed to remember something. “The group of madmen had a picture of you entering the New Century Park, so do you mean these two people were sent by them to the Haunted House to disturb business?”

“Disturb my business?” Chen Ge shook his head and sighed. “They were sent to kill me.”

The interrogation room became quiet after he said that. Based on the investigation and their years of experience, the officers believed Chen Ge was right.

“Just because you exposed their secret at the abandoned mental hospital? That made them want to kill you?” a young looking officer at the table asked.

“They’re all mental patients; their worldview is different from us.” Chen Ge thought about it, and he prepared to tell Captain Yan the things that he could reveal to prevent the police from having unnecessary sacrifices. “After a short interaction, I realized these people’s hearts have been fully twisted. They use their own twisted views to understand the world, and the scariest thing is they believe they are right and it is this world that is wrong. You cannot apply normal logic to them; they are extremely dangerous.”

“Mental patients going around killing people with a twisted worldview?” Captain Yan tapped lightly on the table. This was something he would subconsciously do when he was in deep thought.

“What I’m saying is the truth. You have to be very careful; they’re different from normal mental patients.”

“During the day, they can act incredibly normal. Only when after midnight or when they’re alone will their side that is ill be shown.” Chen Ge was giving Captain Yan’s team a warning. This group of madmen were different from normal, and most of them were smarter than normal people.

“I understand. Most serial killers have deficiencies in terms of mental and spiritual health.” Captain Yan wanted to say something more when Chen Ge’s phone rang.

“Xiao Gu?” Chen Ge glanced at his phone and was quite surprised. “Why is he calling me?”

He was detained inside the interrogation room, so he asked Captain Yan, “Do you mind if I answer this call? It’s from my employee.”

“You can answer it here.” The few officers placed their absolute focus on Chen Ge. They perked up their ears to listen. Chen Ge picked up the call, and before he could move the phone to his ears, Gu Feiyu’s scream at the top of the lungs came through. “Brother Chen! Fang Hwa Apartments’ third building! Uncle Wong has already...”

The voice suddenly stopped. Xiao Gu’s phone sounded like it was slapped away by something and knocked into the wall. There were only running footsteps that could be heard in the call.

“Fang Hwa Apartments’ third building?” Chen Ge did not end the call. He paid full attention, hoping to get more information. The sound of footsteps soon disappeared. It was unclear whether Xiao Gu had run to another floor or tragedy had befallen him.

“It’s at the third building again.” Chen Ge’s eyes were rather scary. “The bunch of crazies have reached out to attack my employee. They’re inside Fang Hwa Apartments’ third building!”

The interrogation room was silent for a second before everyone mobilized. “Call the local station! Get them moving instantly!”

If this was before, Chen Ge would not have told the police. After all, Captain Yan would not have chosen to help him capture the members of the ghost stories society based on his few words. But things were different now. The police had confirmed that the two members that

Chen Ge had caught were involved in many crimes. Chen Ge was not lying.

“Captain Yan, can you drop me off at New Century Park first? I need to go get something important.”

“Ol’ Wu, you drive Xiao Chen.” Captain Yan seemed to morph into a different person. He walked out of the interrogation room and yelled, “Stop dawdling! Get moving!”

After getting the promise from Captain Yan, Chen Ge took Ol’ Wu’s car to return to New Century Park. He grabbed the recorder and ballpoint pen, and since the police were coming with him, he did not take the hammer.

Chapter 274 - Fatal Message [2 in 1]

Chapter 274: Fatal Message [2 in 1]

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

At 11:34 pm, Chen Ge received a call from Captain Yan when he was still inside the police car.

“The situation is not looking good. The opponent is on high alert; they seem to have discovered us.” Captain Yan sent Chen Ge a picture on his phone. “After our investigator entered the elevator, they discovered a phone that was left inside it. There was this message that they discovered inside the phone. It was still typing.”

The picture was of Xiao Gu’s phone. There was a weird paragraph in the typing space.

“Can you find us?”

“What is the meaning of this?” Chen Ge looked at the message on Xiao Gu’s phone, and he frowned with confusion. He did not quite understand the message that it was trying to say.

“I suspect they have noticed us, and that’s why they purposely left us this message to find in the elevator.”

“Your team has entered the third building?” Chen Ge had already warned Captain Yan, telling them not to make such a huge commotion.

“The two teams of plain clothes haven’t entered Fang Hwa Apartments yet. Their vehicles are parked at the junction about 150 meters away from the building, but they are fully ready, just waiting for the command.”

“Then, how could you have been discovered? Did the scouting investigator slip up or something?”

“Impossible, the investigator that entered the third building to scout is our senior officer. He has seven years of experience and has helped us clear many impossible cases.” Captain Yan did not think the problem lay with his men. “Furthermore, the phone was the first thing he saw when the elevator opened. If they wanted to place this phone without anyone seeing, they needed at least three minutes, and three minutes before this, our teams had not even entered Fang Hwa Apartments yet.”

“I understand what you mean. In other words, the suspects had placed the phone before you arrived.” When Chen Ge understood that, his face shifted. “Where is the investigator that found the phone now?”

“He’s still inside the third building; it was he who sent me the picture.”

“Damn it! Get him out immediately!” Chen Ge understood that the reason the ghost stories society trapped Xiao Gu was to deal with him! So, the phone with the weird message was probably meant for him as well!

After dealing with many ghosts, Chen Ge had discovered some rules about them. Including the Red Specters, most ghosts needed a medium if they wanted to do something in the physical world. For example, Zhang Ya’s love letter, Xu Yin’s tape, and the Pen Spirit’s ballpoint pen. In turn, normal people needed these ‘special items’ as a trigger to allow them to interact with the other world.

The message left on Xiao Gu’s phone was probably one of these triggers. After reading the message, it meant that the person was targeted by one or several unknown ghosts.

“Understood.” Captain Yan did not ask for details. He used the internal communication device to ask for the investigator to escape the scene immediately, but to his surprise, even though only minutes had passed, the investigator had already lost contact!

“I still need 3 to 4 minutes before I arrive. Do not send any more people into the building!”

The few officers on the other end of the phone were discussing plans. After several seconds, Chen Ge heard the door being open. It sounded like someone was looking for Captain Yan. After their brief conversation, Captain Yan told the man to stay in his vehicle while he picked up his phone to inform Chen Ge, “The trainee of the investigator that I told you about just came to find me. He said that his instructor just sent him a WeChat message.”

“But weren’t you unable to reach the investigator when you tried to contact him earlier?” Chen Ge was intrigued. “What did the message say?”

“Just three words—Are you there?”

“Are you there?”

“This message is definitely not sent by the investigator.” Captain Yan’s voice turned serious. “An experienced investigator would know not to send meaningless messages to his trainee when he is in the middle of a mission. If he needed any assistance or anything happened to him, the first person he should call is the chief commander.”

Looks like something bad has already happened to that investigator. Chen Ge did not say that out loud, but he did think it.

“No matter what has happened to him, we have prepared for the worst scenario.” An investigator could be in mortal danger. This meant that Captain Yan could not just wait outside the residential area anymore. “Contact Team 1 and Team 2, we move out immediately! Go into the third building!”

“Captain Yan, don’t act rashly! The mental patients hiding in that building are very dangerous!”

“The situation has changed. We can only do this now. Give your phone to Ol’ Wu. Have him drive the car here to meet up with me.”

People’s lives were on the line; Chen Ge knew he would not be able to persuade Captain Yan, so he compromised. “Captain Yan, you have to make sure the officer who received the message from the investigator does not step close to the building; he might have been targeted already.”

After the investigator saw the message on Xiao Gu’s phone, some tragedy befell him. After that, he immediately sent a curious message to his trainee. Chen Ge had a feeling there was something problematic about this. He thought back to what Xiao Gu told him when he made the call. The first thing he said was related to Ol' Wong.

He tried to arrange the information in his mind. After Xiao Gu got his job at the Haunted House, the chances of him returning to Fang Hwa Apartments for night patrol were extremely low. So why did he return to the third building?

Xiao Gu's incident is probably related to Ol' Wong! Perhaps Ol' Wong sent him a message as well! Chen Ge wanted to tell Captain Yan something else, but Captain Yan had already ended the call to command the teams. Three minutes later, Chen Ge finally arrived at Fang Hwa Apartments.

"Have you found the missing investigator?"

"Yes, thankfully, we found him at the corner of the staircase leading up to the second floor. Physically, he's fine, but he's unconscious. According to the men that found him, his eyes were unfocused, and his face was pale." Captain Yan stood beside the fleet. Holding their internal communication device, his brows were creased deeply. "Now I'm curious; how did the culprit manage to knock out a perfectly healthy adult male with fighting experience in less than a few minutes?"

When the two were conversing, said investigator had been taken out. There was a specialized unit looking after him. Chen Ge glanced at the investigator's apparel. Without taking off his shirt, thus revealing the police undershirt, he looked just like a normal citizen. His identity would not have been discovered so easily.

"The ghost stories society probably took him as a stranger who accidentally walked into their trap. They see human lives as disposable and won't hold back even when facing an innocent, but this time, they have made a regrettable mistake."

When Chen Ge arrived at the 24th floor for the first time, Zhu Xiu had once requested the ghost stories society to help him evade the law enforcement. However, the ghost stories society had firmly rejected him. This little detail proved one important thing. The ghost stories society would not dare start an open conflict with law enforcement. They were like rats living in the shadows of the city, creating chaos and rot, but they would never face the light.

"Captain Yan, what about the phone left inside the elevator? Have your people found it?" Chen Ge asked another crucial question. The unfinished message left on Xiao Gu's phone was a trap left behind by the ghost stories society. Taking a look at it might lead to some serious bad luck.

"Team 1 has found it. It's now inside the evidence bag." Captain Yan did not realize the severity of the situation, but Chen Ge was different. Too many people's lives were on the line; he did not dare to waste any more time. "Captain Yan, the bunch of mental patients' real target is me; I cannot let other people fall victim on my behalf."

Then, he walked toward Fang Hwa Apartments.

"Wait a minute." If this was some other citizen, Captain Yan would have stopped him, but he knew Chen Ge was different. He took out a walkie-talkie from inside the vehicle and pushed it to Chen Ge. "Do you know how to use this?"

"Yes, when my Haunted House still had quite a number of employees, every one of us had one."

"Perfect." Captain Yan still worried about him. He waved at Ol' Wu, who had driven Chen Ge over. "You two go in together. At least you'll have the other person to watch your back."

Chen Ge did not reject Captain Yan's kindness, and he entered Fang Hwa Apartments with Ol' Wu. To prevent the eruption of unnecessary panic, Captain Yan did not inform the tenants who stayed there, and the third building was eerily quiet. The dim light fell on the curiously white walls. Chen Ge and Ol' Wu walked to stand beside the elevator.

"Captain Yan wants us to follow behind Team 2, so we'll head to the 5th floor immediately." Ol' Wu had just confirmed the location of the two task forces on his walkie-talkie. "Make sure you stay behind me, and don't wander off on your own."

Apprehending the culprit with the victim, that was something that was incredibly rare. However, considering the things that had happened to Chen Ge recently, Ol' Wu soon got over it. The man who was beside him used three weeks to fill up a whole row of filing cabinets at the Serious Crimes Unit. Thinking about this, Ol' Wu subconsciously nudged to the side, introducing a larger distance between him and Chen Ge.

"Ol' Wu, let's go find Team 1 first! That phone is seriously problematic, and Team 1 is in grave danger because of it!" Chen Ge said urgently. The more they dragged this out, the higher the chance Team 1 might come across danger.

“No, we can’t do that. Captain Yan has given explicit orders for us to follow Team 2.”

“Alright, fine.” Ol’ Wu hesitated for a long time before entering the elevator with Chen Ge. He pressed the button for the 8th floor. “Team 1 and Team 2 are each responsible for the stairwells on both sides of the building. Team 1’s progress is faster than Team 2’s, so the chance of them running into danger is also much higher. That is why Captain Yan wants us to stick to Team 2. He doesn’t want us to put you in unnecessary danger.”

“I understand,” Chen Ge answered absentmindedly. He looked at the number changes but his gaze kept wandering to the button that should not be there—24. The two soon arrived at the 8th floor.

By that point, Team 1 had already reached the 9th floor. They searched the floor one by one, and their speed was fast. Ol’ Wu gained contact with the leader of Team 1 on the walkie-talkie, and the two entered the safety passage to gain access to the ninth floor.

They waited in the stairwell for a while until the team leader for Team 1 and two other officers ran out from the corridor. “Why did you bring him with you?”

The leader for Team 1 was large and muscular. When Chen Ge was interrogated at the station, the man had been sitting across from him. Chen Ge remembered Captain Yan calling him Lee Zheng.

“I’m just following Captain Yan’s orders.” Ol’ Wu looked at the two men beside Lee Zheng. “Why are there only three people in your group?”

“I had Xiao Jia and Ah Cheng are waiting for us at the other end of the corridor to prevent the suspects from running away when we’re searching through the building.” Lee Zheng looked down the corridor. “This is weird. Didn’t you come across them when you came up?”

When the man said so, Chen Ge had a bad feeling forming immediately. “The phone that you guys picked up inside the elevator, is it with them?”

“Yes, what’s wrong with that?” Lee Zheng knew Chen Ge’s name already. Chen Ge’s reputation had preceded him even before the interrogation incident at the police station that day. Then something hit him. Lee Zheng frowned. He took out his walkie-talkie and yelled down the darkened, horribly-lit corridor, “Xiao Jia! Ah Cheng!”

The man’s booming voice echoed down the corridor. After a long time, the response finally came on Lee Zheng’s walkie-talkie. “Brother Zheng, I don’t know what came over Xiao Jia; he kept running upstairs! I tried to make him explain it to me, but he is not responding in any way! We’re now on the 14th floor, and I just caught up to him... Xiao Jia! What are you doing? Have you lost your mind?”

There was chaos on the walkie-talkie followed by something heavy being thrown to the floor.

“Ah Cheng?” Lee Zheng gripped the walkie-talkie. He yelled behind him and led the remaining group member up the stairs. Chen Ge and Ol’ Wu also followed. The group ran up to the 14th floor, where they found Ah Cheng lying on the floor with his hands over his face. Blood seeped through the slits between his fingers.

“Ol’ Wu! The two of you escort Ah Cheng back down immediately.”

“Brother Zheng, I’m fine. You have to go and get Xiao Jia; he looks like he was possessed!”

Lee Zheng peeled Ah Cheng’s fingers back slightly. There was a huge bite mark on his cheeks, and there was a large wound on the back of his hands.

“That phone, is it on Xiao Jia?” Of everyone there, Chen Ge could be considered the one that was the calmest and most collected. “Did either one of you take a look at the message inside the phone?”

“I didn’t, but Xiao Jia did glance at it before putting it inside the evidence bag,” Ah Cheng answered honestly.

I knew it! It is related to that message. Chen Ge thought back to the content of the message. It was very weird, and he chewed on it in his mind. Father has killed us and placed us on the stairs—the message should be hinting at the stairs, but what is the meaning of the pair of siblings placed one in front and one at the back? Also, why is the directive to find them at the end?

When Chen Ge was thinking about this, Lee Zheng had brought him men up to the 15th floor.

“Ol’ Wu, stay here and watch over Xiao Jia. I’ll go take a look.” Chen Ge did not give Ol’ Wu any chance to speak and ran up the stairs straight away. The first investigator who read the message fainted, but Xiao Jia, the second officer who read the message, went berserk. Why is there this difference?

Lee Zheng did not want to split up his group, but they were afraid to miss the floor Xiao Jia could be at, so they chased up the stairs. Chen Ge did not have this worry. He ran to the 15th floor and then walked to the elevator. After he got into the elevator, he pressed the button for the 23rd floor. He planned to head directly to the most dangerous 23rd floor. After all, this was the floor that Xiao Gu mentioned on the phone. Hopefully, Xiao Gu is still safe.

The elevator doors slowly closed, and Chen Ge kept his finger on the play button of the recorder. If he had come alone, he might really have fallen for the ghost stories society’s trap, but this time, he had come with the police, and in terms of numbers, he had the advantage.

The number on the elevator kept changing, and when the elevator reached the 21st floor, Chen Ge’s phone suddenly vibrated.

He clicked on the screen to open the message, and he was surprised to find a message from Xiao Gu’s phone.

“Are you there?”

After reading the message, Chen Ge replied to the number.

“Give me your location. I will go find you now.”

Chapter 275 - The Ghost in His Heart! [2 in 1]

Chapter 275: The Ghost in His Heart! [2 in 1]

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The person on the other end of the line did not seem to expect such a direct reply. The new message came after about ten seconds. “I’m hiding inside the dresser in Room 3239. There seem to be things around me.”

“Do you mind describing the shape and size of those things?” Chen Ge was too lazy to type, so he sent a voice message.

“I cannot take a good look—it is too dark in here—but I can sense their presence.”

“But don’t you have your phone with you? Couldn’t you turn on the flashlight feature to take a better look around you?”

“I will be discovered.”

“Then how did you manage to hide inside Room 3239? Does this mean you have the key?”

“No, the door was open, so I snuck in immediately.”

“What about Ol’ Wong?”

“Ol’ Wong?”

The conversation had been going back and forth very quickly until this point. On Chen Ge’s side, it showed that the other party was typing, but there was no new message.

Did I kill the conversation? Chen Ge waited for a long time, but there was still no reply. He took out his phone and sent ‘Xiao Gu’ a message. “Are you there?”

When the elevator arrived at 23rd floor, Chen Ge had already sent thirteen of the same message.

“Are you there?”

When he was about to send the fourteenth one, Chen Ge realized that he had been blocked. You're the one who harassed me, but you're also the one who blocked me; what's wrong with you?

He walked out of the elevator and pressed the play button on the recorder.

The bloodied tape slowly turned. Chen Ge narrowed his pupils, lowering the influence darkness had on him to its lowest. Well, fret no more because I'm here to correct you.

Chen Ge's nerves tensed as he leaned toward the wall. Then he slowly walked down the corridor.

After reading the message on the phone, Xiao Jia lost complete control of himself and even injured his partner by biting him. This means that the ghost hiding in the dark should have the power to influence a person's mind. The blood face of the ghost stories society had a similar power, but the blood face needed to be close to their target and morph into the same facial features of their target before they could initiate their power.

This is a special type of ghost. Normally, these ghosts that have special powers aren't be good at combat, like the Pen Spirit.

When Chen Ge came, he did not bring Doctor Skull-cracker's hammer or the cleaver. He pushed his hand into his pocket to grab at the ballpoint pen inside it while his other hand held onto the wall. He was afraid that the door before him would suddenly open and a ghost head would stick its head in. Counting the number on the door, Chen Ge soon arrived at Room 3239. He wiggled with doorknob, but the door did not move.

Should be this room. He knocked on the door. “Is anyone there?”

The bloodied tape created a shrill white noise; it felt as if Xu Yin was warning Chen Ge. He knocked on the door several times, and to Chen Ge's surprise, a man's voice did eventually come out from within Room 3239. “Yes, I'm here! Who is disturbing people so late at night? What do you want?”

Someone is in? Chen Ge was actually more surprised than the man inside the room. He knew this was either someone who had been taken control by the ghost stories society or the man inside the room himself was the member of the ghost stories society. He was severely anxious, and his attention was pulled taut.

Fang Hwa Apartments' room doors all came with a double layer and soon the door inside was pulled open. A man about 1.7 meters tall stood inside the room, looking at Chen Ge with a cold expression. "What do you want?"

"I'm here to assist the police in capturing a fugitive. In a minute, the rest of the police troop will arrive." Chen Ge's tone and mannerisms were a perfect mimic of Captain Yan.

"Another fugitive?" The man's face turned even harsher. His brows were creased together.

"Hubby, what's wrong?" A woman about thirty walked out of the living room.

"There's another fugitive apparently."

"Wait, didn't we just have a fugitive sneak into this place a few days ago? This place is so dangerous. How many times has this happened now?" The woman's voice turned shrill. "I've told you, we should move from this place as soon as possible, but you just refuse to listen to me!"

"Move, move, move? Where do you suggest we move to?" The man's temper was lit up. Neither of them was backing down, and an argument soon started. Chen Ge looked at them with a detached gaze. He was unable to be sure whether they were members of the ghost stories society, but his instinct told him that there was something off about this couple.

When people are in the middle of an argument, they would hold the other person's gaze. Compelled by emotions, they might even use their nonverbal actions; however, these two don't do that. Their bodies are extremely awkward. Is it because they don't want to act out because I'm here, or is this all just a show? The argument went on for a while before the woman left the man at the door and strode back into the room.

The man looked like he was harboring a great ball of fire, and his attitude toward Chen Ge was harsh and pointed. "We're tenants of this building; we have not seen any fugitives or heard any weird noise. Go along and disturb someone else."

Normally, one would not have opened the door for people to enter at the middle of the night. Chen Ge had expected that. If the man suddenly opened the door and allowed him to inspect the interior, Chen Ge would really have needed to be careful.

“I just have a few questions for you.” Chen Ge pointed at the few adjacent doors. “Do you know your neighbors well?”

“The rooms next to us are all empty, and there’s a single man living opposite from us. He just moved in one or two months ago, and he rarely leaves his room, so can’t say I know much about him.”

“When was the last time you saw him?”

“Probably Wednesday night. I came back home three hours later than usual due to overtime, and I ran into him at the elevator.”

“Wednesday night? Elevator?” Chen Ge immediately tied the man in the opposite room to the ghost stories society. “Do you know the man’s name?”

“No idea.” The man slammed the door shut after that. The sound of the door closing echoed down the corridor. Chen Ge stood in the middle of the corridor, and he turned to face the room opposite from Room 3239.

“Could a member of the ghost stories society be hiding inside this room?” There was suspicion in his eyes. The couple in Room 3239 might have looked normal, but they had ‘inadvertently’ revealed several pieces of key information to Chen Ge—Wednesday and the elevator. Only members of the ghost stories society would know such details. Did they do that on purpose? Is their aim to lure me to the opposite room?

Chen Ge did not know whether this was a coincidence or a trap. Ever since he gained the black phone, he had become more and more cautious. His right hand curled around the ballpoint pen, and his left hand grabbed the doorknob of the room opposite from Room 3239. Chen Ge turned the doorknob, and the door slowly opened.

It’s not locked? When he realized that the door was not locked, Chen Ge immediately took a step back. The real trap should be this room opposite from Room 3239. Just as he released his grasp on the doorknob, a bloody hand the size of a child reached out to grab him!

It missed, but they were just centimeters away from each other!

What was that?

In the dark corridor, the door creaked open slowly. As if climbing out of the door, there was a little boy with tiny limbs, a large head, and a face that was purple from a lack of oxygen!

What made Chen Ge's heart quiver was that the boy was wearing a red shirt!

The twisted lips slowly opened to reveal a row of uneven teeth. The boy seemed to be smiling.

"Daddy killed us and placed us inside the door.

"Big brother is hiding behind the door.

"And he told me to hide in front of the door."

Just as the boy finished, another misshapen head poked out from inside the room. Its face was bloated, and the eyes were almost popping out of their sockets.

"Daddy killed us and placed us inside the door.

"Little brother is hiding in front of the door.

"And he told me to hide behind the door."

Both boys had curious expressions. They climbed out of the door and stood before Chen Ge, one standing in front, the other at the back. Fresh blood trickled down their bodies to form blood vessels that slowly crept away. They were like millipedes crawling on the ground and walls. The corridor became very dangerous, but the ghost stories society's trick was not done yet.

A white shadow slowly crawled out from Room 3239. It was the white shadow that escaped from the woman who killed Xu Yin. There was only one third of its body left. It looked like it was trying to escape. It crawled on the carpet of blood vessels, but its body was quickly dragged back into the room, and there was soon the sound of chewing coming from behind the door.

There are other monsters inside that room? Chen Ge was unfortunate enough to be right. A hand covered with blood vessels reached out. It looked no bigger than a normal person's hand, but the thing that alarmed Chen Ge was the hand seemed to have been seriously scorched. There were no finger prints.

The air in the corridor seemed to coagulate. A thick smell of blood filled the air. The air pressed on one boy's head like a kind father tussling its beloved child's hair. "He has found us, so now it is your time to find him."

The man's voice was throaty and raw. It sounded like he had consumed highly corrosive things before. Just the voice alone made Chen Ge's skin crawl. After hearing the man's voice, the two boys with Red Shirts gave an extremely happy smile, and they replied in unison, "Yes, Father."

The broken faces rushed toward Chen Ge. Xu Yin could barely handle one Red Specter, much less two. Chen Ge was under immense pressure, to a degree that he had not felt before. Without hesitation, he yelled out the name on the cursed love letter. "Zhang Ya!"

Like water dripping into a deep well, ripples started to form in Chen Ge's shadow. The crawling blood vessels suddenly stopped moving. Even the hand that hung outside the door with no fingerprint shuddered slightly. Black hair crawled out of Chen Ge's shadow like waves. It crashed into the walls on both sides of the corridor, using this powerful and violent method to crush all the blood vessels that were heading toward Chen Ge.

The temperature on the 23rd floor continued to drop. Zhang Ya's beautiful face appeared behind Chen Ge. That bone-chilling presence was hiding a soul that was burning with passion!

"This is the ghost in your heart?" The man slowly walked out from behind the door. He was wearing a large red jacket, and even though he was wearing a mask on his face, the mask did nothing to hide the man's face that was completely ruined.

"Zhang Ya, be careful!" Chen Ge decided to take a step back from the battlefield. He would be completely useless in the battle between Red Specters anyway. Chen Ge's reminder fell on deaf ears. After all, Zhang Ya would not have listened to him anyway.

Without wasting time talking or testing, Zhang Ya's eyes filled with resentment, and her black hair rose up like waves, scratching the walls as it rushed toward the two boys!

Blood vessels entwined with black hair as they crashed forward like engulfing waves. Chen Ge hid behind Zhang Ya while contemplating something else in his mind.

The man controlling the two boys in red shirt should be Patient 10 from the Third Sick Hall. The man's face, his body, and even the finger prints on the man's hands had been burned off. This fitted the description for Patient 10 perfectly. The Haunted House recovered all the sickrooms in Third Sick Hall, and the walls of Room 10 had a thorough recording of its occupant's history. The reason for his madness was the accident that killed his two children. The immense guilt and continuous trauma caused his mental breakdown.

Everything matched perfectly. Chen Ge did not think that he would face the scariest patient from Third Sick Hall that night!

He had underestimated the ghost stories society's desire to kill him. They had probably started drafting this murder plot after they lost contract with Kong Xiangming and Wei Wu. With a strategist like Wu Fei, who was smarter than normal people, they would not make the same mistake twice. The ghost stories society might have sent out all its members tonight!

Zhang Ya's appearance did not give Chen Ge any security. After all, Patient 10 alone had two Red Specters, and other than him, the ghost stories society still had six remaining members!

BANG!

The blood vessels exploded, and Zhang Ya's black hair curled tightly around one of the boys' necks, slamming him heavily on the ground. Weirdly enough the boy did not seem to feel any pain. In fact, there was a smile on his misshapen face. "Big brother, I'm running out of breath."

The already crooked head grew bigger, and blood vessels started to surface on his face. It appeared like his head was about to be popped by the leash of black hair around his neck.

At this crucial point, however, the other Red Specter and the man who stood by the door did not seem willing to help. The man even ordered the older brother to jump over Zhang Ya to focus his attack on Chen Ge.

The black hair completely covered the younger brother. After a blood-chilling scream, the blood vessels did not get absorbed by the black hair but seeped out through the seams to slowly form a new boy standing not far away. His head was smaller, and the red on his body lighter, but other than that, he was no different from before.

“What are you two waiting for?” The man with the ruined face growled with pain in his voice. Other than that, there was a trace of anger as well.

“We just wanted to wait until things were more stable. After all, the ghost in his heart is definitely stronger than most.” The door to Room 3239 slowly opened. The pair of husband and wife walked out from it. There was a thin monster standing on the man’s shoulders while the woman walked backwards. The blood face on the back of her head was flashing a creepy smile.

The two walked out laughing. They assumed victory was already theirs. However, to their surprise, when the door was open, the black hair rushed at them and curled around their bodies like a huge python.

Facing four baleful specters at once? And two of them were Red Specters!

The man and woman looked at each other. They saw fear, terror, shock, and despair reflected in each other’s eyes.

“Didn’t you say you can halt the monster on the target’s body?” the woman screamed, but that was all she managed to get out before the black hair surged into the holes on the blood face.

The man was screaming as well. The thin monster wanted to curl back into the man’s body, but it was already too late. The black hair tightened its grasp as it slowly pulled the monster out from the man.

“One versus four?” The man with the ruined face slowly clenched his wounded hand. He had thought that this was a perfect plan, but there was still unforeseeable problem.

The black hair was like a river rushing through the blood red world. In her fluttering red dress, Zhang Ya stood silently in the middle of the corridor. She heard the man’s voice and slowly moved her gaze away from Chen Ge.

When her eyes fell on the man with the ruined face, her eyes twinkled like she had found a brand-new toy.

The man with the ruined face felt pressured from being targeted by the Red Specter. Compared to the manic gaze standing amid the pool of black hair, his cruelty and madness paled in comparison. He could feel the enmity directed his way.

“Stop her!” The two boys controlled the blood vessels, trying to stop Zhang Ya, but they were powerless before the waves of black hair. The two of them could barely protect themselves.

“Useless!” The ruined man’s face twisted. He was not powerful enough to face Zhang Ya. His main source of power was the two Red Specters that were made from the souls of his two children. Berated by their father, the two boys started to scream. Their bloated heads squeezed out more blood vessels, and they used their bodies to block Zhang Ya’s path.

Ravaged by the black hair, the two boys’ bodies were torn apart once more. The blood vessels seeped through the black hair, but the boys’ rate of recovery had slowed down conspicuously.

“It’s impossible for there to be such a powerful Red Specter! How many baleful specters has she consumed already?” The man was in throes of disbelief. After so much planning, the cooperation of so many members were unable to deal with Chen Ge!

There was regret crossing his eyes. He saw his two boys being torn apart again, and his heart was bleeding. “Just a little bit more...”

Both Room 3239 and the room opposite from it were set up with traps. As long as Chen Ge had stepped into either one of them, he would have been killed instantly. There would not have been a chance for him to summon his ghost. When the boys were squeezed until they popped for the fifth time, the scars on the man’s ruined face throbbed violently. There was a sensation that had not appeared in his heart for a long time—Fear.

The man grabbed his arms. His fingers dug into the scars, and blood dyed his fingers red. "This is such a horrible experience."

The wounds were torn open, and blood leaked out. The man seemed to be acting up. His hands kept tightening. "What should I do? What should I do? What should I do?"

The two boys were squeezed until they exploded. They recovered and rushed forward again. They tried everything they could, but they could not stop Zhang Ya.

She was getting close!

The blood trailed down her fingers and landed on the floor. The man with the ruined face felt like retreating. He glowered at Chen Ge, who stood behind Zhang Ya.

"Looks like I'll have to sacrifice that thing." The man plucked out his fingers from his open wound. His blood formed a trail in the air. He took out a wooden box from his pocket; the interior of the box was left with an inky black blood stain.

The few baleful specters showed signs of losing control—the black blood stain seemed to be highly attractive to them!

The man gave some orders silently, and then he grabbed the wooden box and ran down the corridor, abandoning the two boys. The black hair slithered on the ground like snakes. There was greed in Zhang Ya's gaze like a glutton spotting their favorite food.

After tearing the boys up for the seventh time, Zhang Ya lost her patience. All the black hair rushed toward the man. The blood vessels from the carcasses of the two boys morphed into blood globules, and they moved behind Zhang Ya with a speed that was observable to the naked eye. Their speed was very fast, and soon, the blood gathered together. A monster that looked like conjoined twins was reborn behind Zhang Ya.

"Not good!" Chen Ge ran down the staircase behind him without hesitation. The man with the ruined face had made his last bet. He was going to use himself as bait to create the chance to kill Chen Ge!

"We've... found you!" The conjoined twins crawled at Chen Ge with surprising speed. Chen Ge had greatly underestimated the power of the Red Specters. They had been limited by Zhang Ya's black hair earlier, so they did not have the chance to display their true power.

With its ability to morph into blood vessels and be reborn as well as its high mobility, if Chen Ge faced this thing alone, his chance of survival was zero.

A girl with a purplish face and a man wearing half a red shirt appeared in the corridor. They stood side by side, blocking the conjoined twins. To Chen Ge’s despair, the monster completely ignored Xu Yin and the Pen Spirit. Its fingers covered with blood vessels seemed to cut through their bodies like a knife.

His wounds opened, and Xu Yin was knocked into the wall. One of his arms was torn off. The Pen Spirit also suffered grievous wounds when she was touched by the blood vessels. Her body faded like she was about to disappear. However, they were not the conjoined twin’s target. After damaging the two baleful specters, it charged at Chen Ge without decreasing in speed!

There were no other ghosts he could summon. Chen Ge realized how few employees he had at his Haunted House. The conjoined twins’ heads were radiating with a horrible stench. Their facial features were shifting. The crooked lips hung open, and the completely unrecognizable faces were staring at Chen Ge. “We’ve found you!”

When they were about one meter away, the conjoined twins suddenly slowed down. Its bulging eyes turned to the side. The male ghost with one of his arms torn apart was using his remaining arm to hold onto the conjoined twins’ leg!

A blood red hand reached for Xu Yin’s arm. The conjoined twins picked Xu Yin up from the floor, aiming to tear him in half. His body split open down the middle. The wound that was left behind by his beloved leaked out blood. “So painful, so painful!!”

Xu Yin ignored his half-torn body and tried his best to bite at the conjoined twins. The cruelty of the battle between baleful specters could not be put into words. Chen Ge knew that the current Xu Yin was no match for the Red Specter. He was only trying to buy him time.

“I need to meet up with the police immediately!” He ran out the corridor. When he was almost at the stairwell, a bespectacled man ran up the stairs. When Chen Ge saw the man, his heart skipped a beat. It was not the police but Manager Huang.

“What’s going on? Quick, follow me!” Manager Huang gasped for air with his hands holding onto the railing. He extended his hand toward Chen Ge like he was going to bring Chen Ge to safety.

Looking at that hand, Chen Ge took a deliberate step back.

The night when he entered the ghost stories society, Manager Huang had also been inside the third building. When he reached the lobby, Manager Huang had been lecturing Xiao Gu. The other suspicious point was the additional number on the elevator. A 24th floor that did not exist, the manager of the residential area had to know about it, but he did not do anything to remove it. Removing the number from the elevator would not have taken too much time.

Furthermore, Fang Hwa Apartments was the gathering place for ghost stories society, but there was no trace of them on the surveillance. Someone might have helping them from the dark, and that someone was probably related to Fang Hwa Apartments.

Sensing Chen Ge’s suspicious gaze, Manager Huang knew that he had probably been exposed already. He removed his disguise and slowly turned around to reveal the blood face on the back of his head. “I don’t want to do this, but after joining the society, I too have become a monster...”

While Manager Huang was lamenting his face, Chen Ge took out the walkie-talkie that Captain Yan had given him, and he pressed the button and shouted, “23rd floor! All four killers are on the 23rd floor!”

Chapter 277 - Even the Shadow Is in the Shape of Love

Chapter 277: Even the Shadow Is in the Shape of Love

Seeing how Chen Ge took out the walkie-talkie from his pocket like magic, the other half of Manager Huang's words were stuck in his throat.

"You're a police officer?" His reaction was one beat slower.

When he realized the situation was getting out of hand, Chen Ge already received the reply from Team 1's leader, Lee Zheng. "Hang in there! We're coming!"

There were rushing footsteps echoing up the stairs. Team 1 was not far away!

Manager Huang's face fell. When he created his own ghost stories, there were victims who tried to call the police as well, but there would be a process of taking out their phone and calling the police. However, Chen Ge pulled a walkie-talkie out of his chest pocket without warning. Plus, Manager Huang did not get the feeling of a cop from Chen Ge!

Resentment, fear, and screams were a baleful specter's favorite food. Manager Huang was forced to do some cruel and scary things to prevent himself from being eaten by the monster possessing him. However, the man before him was cultivating three baleful specters on his own, and it included the scariest Red Specter. Based on the standard of the ghost stories society, the lives this man had claimed would not be less than ten!

However, this butcher whose hands were covered with blood also worked with the police?

Incensed, Manager Huang knew that things would not be so easily settled tonight. Even after he killed Chen Ge, the identity that he was using then would have to be abandoned. "This is all because of you!"

The things that happened in the shadows had to be dealt with using the rules that governed the shadows. However, none of them expected there would be a ‘traitor’ among them!

The blood face’s reaction was much more violent than Manager Huang’s. The face knitted from blood flew toward Chen Ge. In that process, the facial feature had started to morph into Chen Ge’s face.

This thing again. Chen Ge used the walkie-talkie to swipe at the blood face, but it was to no avail. His assault just passed through the blood face, he could not even touch his enemy.

“Killing you or temporarily taking control of your body might give me a chance to escape.” Only Chen Ge knew Manager Huang’s real identity. If the blood face took over Chen Ge and made him shut up permanently, Manager Huang still had a chance at escaping.

When the blood face was close to Chen Ge’s face, the man’s pupils suddenly transformed into narrow slits like those of a cat, and they radiated a chilly forcefield.

“Yin Yang Vision!” However, that was only enough to stop the blood face for half a second. Thankfully, that half a second was all Chen Ge needed. He thrust with his legs and sprung forward to do something crazy.

He knocked into Manager Huang, sending both of them careening down the stairs. His arms were scratched, and pain radiated through his body. However, to Chen Ge’s surprise, the pain only lasted for a moment before it disappeared.

When his vision returned to normal, after Chen Ge stood up and prepared to run down the stairs, he realized the joints of his body were wrapped in black hair.

Zhang Ya? Other than some surface bruises, Chen Ge was completely unharmed.

However, the same could not be said for Manager Huang, who was slowly being dragged up the stairs by the black hair.

The blood face was punctured, and Manager Huang was unconscious. His body was twisted in various angles after being dragged by the black hair.

Chen Ge turned around and looked up the 22nd floor stairwell. Zhang

Ya, dressed in red, stood quietly on the 23rd floor. The waterfall of black hair behind her was binding the conjoined twins, blood face, and thin monster. It formed a river that flooded the entire corridor.

The red dress was as bright as blood, and the black hair pooled around her legs. The ugly and scary monsters screamed and groaned before being torn into pieces and swallowed. To be honest, Chen Ge was quite frantic when he saw this.

Zhang Ya moved toward Chen Ge, and the bone-chilling fear and heavy smell of blood permeated Chen Ge's senses. There was another change to Zhang Ya's body. She seemed to have obtained the thing she wanted.

The lowered head tilted upward, and the black hair parted like curtains. Zhang Ya's face stopped several centimeters away from the tip of Chen Ge's nose. She looked into Chen Ge's eyes, and her pale, lifeless hands were carrying a normal-looking wooden box.

"For me?" The moment Chen Ge opened his lips, a cold draft sucked into his body. He accepted the wooden box and opened it to take a look. The black blood stain had disappeared, and in its place was a weird looking doll.

"The man with the ruined face!" The doll was one-tenth the size of the man. His mask had been taken away. Other than the eyes, the rest of his facial features had been ground flat. He had no nose or lips, just like a devil in people's nightmare.

"You've turned him into a toy?" The doll in the box was a soul that had been pulled out of his physical body. The scary face turned left and right. Chen Ge could feel the wicked presence radiating off it.

Zhang Ya had also taken out Zhu Xiu's soul to make a toy when she dealt with her killer.

Chen Ge's hair stood on end looking at the man who struggled inside the box. This was the second scariest present that he had received in his life; the first was undeniably Zhang Ya's love letter.

"Thank you, I... like this present a lot. You're the first girl who has given me a present."

Zhang Ya moved her gaze away when she heard Chen Ge say that. She lowered her head like she did not want Chen Ge to see her expression. However, Chen Ge could sense the joy in her heart.

The black hair continued to move. Chen Ge could not believe that while they were having this ‘friendly conversation’ on the 22nd floor, the black hair was still consuming the monsters on the 23rd floor.

The black hair slowly returned to Zhang Ya. Chen Ge caught sight of Xu Yin’s broken body, and his lips fell open. He immediately told Zhang Ya, “Wait a minute! The young man who is screaming pain and the girl in school uniform are my friends, please don’t hurt them!”

The good atmosphere was thus ruined. When Zhang Ya raised her head again, she had returned to her usual self. Xu Yin and the Pen Spirit were ejected from the river of black hair. The black hair curled upon itself, crushing the other monsters, bathing the corridor with fresh blood.

Zhang Ya’s body wavered like she was feeling sleepy. She raised her head to look at Chen Ge before walking past him. When Chen Ge turned around, she had already disappeared.

However, the chilliness behind his back did not dissipate. Chen Ge felt like there was a pair of resentment-filled eyes following him. After two minutes, when he heard Lee Zheng’s voice coming from downstairs, the feeling finally left.

Chen Ge’s body was frozen solid. He collapsed to the floor and summoned back the seriously injured Xu Yin and Pen Spirit before shoving the weird box into his pocket.

The presents given by Zhang Ya were scarier than the one preceding it. First it was a candy made from human soul, and now there was a ‘toy’ made from a mad murderer.

Chen Ge turned back to look with a bitter smile. With the light on his phone, he discovered with a shock... his shadow did not reflect himself!

The faded light landed on him, but the shadow was that of a long-haired woman!

Chen Ge changed his words without hesitation. “But these gifts are too precious! There was never a girl who was this nice to me! I’ll remember this feeling for as long as I live!”

Chapter 278: Another Spin at the Wheel

“We’ve found Xiao Jia. He’s unconscious, but physically, he’s fine.”
Lee Zheng paused before adding, “But that Chen Ge seems to be facing some problems.”

“Xiao Chen is injured? Where are you! I’ll be there in a minute!”
Captain Yan’s voice could be heard on the walkie-talkie.

“No, he’s fine, but he probably went through some trauma. After all, when we received his distress call, both he and the four mental patients were on the 23rd floor. He probably went through something traumatic.” Lee Zheng looked at Chen Ge, who sat frozen on the stairs, and he did not feel so good.

Initially, he had a bad impression of Chen Ge. Especially inside the interrogation room, he thought Chen Ge was being incredibly proud. However, when he heard Chen Ge cry for help earlier, he put aside all his prejudice and led his men to save Chen Ge, but he was still one step too late.

As the team leader for the investigation team at the city police station, Lee Zheng knew how rare it was for a victim of an attack to survive. The physical wound might heal over time, but the mental scars would probably remain forever.

“If only we got here sooner.” He wanted to encourage Chen Ge, but he did not know what to say.

Chen Ge sat on the stairs between the 22nd and 23rd floors. He had been staring at his shadow for about ten minutes already, and he realized something scary.

His shadow was not changing back!

When the light hit him, he could see two shadows overlapping over one another.

Something has changed within Zhang Ya. Previously she was hiding inside my shadow, but now she wants to morph into my shadow!

Chen Ge thought back to the curious reaction that Zhang Ya had shown when she saw the wooden box.

The black blood stain inside the box must be really important to her. Black-colored blood? Red Specter? Is there a relationship between them? After absorbing that black blood, has her power broken through another limit?

The more he thought about it, the more confused he became. Chen Ge looked at his own shadow, and Zhang Ya's shadow was slowly replacing his. It looked like she was planning to follow him forever, until he no longer cast a shadow.

His finger touched the wooden box that was by his chest. Honestly, this was the first time a girl had given him a present. It was wrong on so many levels, but it also felt quite nice.

This is such a weird feeling.

No matter what happened to Zhang Ya in the future, one thing was for sure—he would never say anything negative about Zhang Ya ever again.

Temporarily, there should be no worry. After Zhang Ya swallowed the hospital president last time, she was asleep for several days, and I had to call her to wake up. This time, Zhang Ya has consumed two full Red Specters, two blood faces, one thin monster, and that mysterious black blood. She will probably will down for quite a while after such a feast.

Zhang Ya was Chen Ge's main fighting force. With Zhang Ya's presence, Chen Ge had managed to beat the ghost stories society; without Zhang Ya, Chen Ge would not have been able to deal with one Red Specter.

The man with the ruined face, the couple, and Manager Huang—after removing four of them, the society only has three members left.

Chen Ge's face was calm, his thoughts unreadable.

The remaining three include the chairperson, No. 10, and Wu Fei. Currently, I still cannot confirm their identities, but one thing's for sure—these three are extremely dangerous and cunning.

The society sent out a full party, and they failed to kill me, so temporarily, they won't be making any moves.

Zhang Ya was still asleep. Even though Chen Ge could not stop the 'love' from Zhang Ya, at the same time, it was undeniable that he had entered a period of weakness. If the society sent out another two Red Specters, it would flatten his Haunted House.

It was then that Chen Ge suddenly missed Zhang Ya. Without her, Chen Ge felt so unsafe. The number of visitors has been climbing recently, and the Haunted House has collected so many screams. Perhaps it's time to spin the wheel again.

Chen Ge did not want to use the Wheel of Misfortune, but he could not think of a better way to increase his power in a short amount of time. He needed more party members.

The black blood is something mysterious. When Zhang Ya awakens again, she might have morphed into a new stage already.

Something that was scarier than a Red Specter... Chen Ge shuddered just from the thought of it. Holding the railing, Chen Ge tried to stand up. His body was covered in dust, and his arms were scratched. He looked like he might fall any time soon.

"Be careful." Lee Zheng stayed by his side, so when he saw Chen Ge try to stand up, he immediately went to help.

"I'm fine. Please help me find Xiao Gu and Ol' Wong; I can look after myself." Chen Ge did not know why Lee Zheng's attitude toward him had changed so suddenly. He had a feeling Lee Zheng had misunderstood something, but he was in no mood to explain himself.

The two returned to 23rd floor. The monsters had all been consumed by Zhang Ya, so the members of the society were heavily damaged mentally and unconscious. The man who looked the scariest was lying in the middle of the corridor like a vegetable. His eyes were open, and they were soulless.

Lee Zheng looked at this with a frown. A weird thought bubbled up in his mind. How come these people look like the real victims?

No one knew what had really happened on the 23rd floor. The only witness claimed that he had tripped on the stairs and knocked his head. He could not remember anything except that he was being chased.

Pushing open Room 3239's door, Lee Zheng smelled something like blood. He rushed into the bathroom and saw a family of three lying unconscious in a pool of their own blood. Their wrists were cut open like it was a bloodletting ritual.

"There's still breathing! Come over and help, call the ambulance!"

Team 2 had already arrived. They hauled the real victims out of the room. Chen Ge could not be of much help. He stood in the corner of the room and quietly inspected the weird drawing on the wall.

The drawing that was painted in fresh blood looked like some sort of alphabet. When Chen Ge got near, the ghosts he was carrying shuddered.

Words that can make specters feel fear? Looks like the ghost stories society does have some power.

He was thankful that he did not walk into this room. After several minutes of inspection, he took out his phone to snap a picture of the drawing.

The drawing on the wall slowly faded without the contribution of fresh blood, losing its function.

Exiting Room 3239, Chen Ge and Lee Zheng entered the opposite room.

The décor in the room was startling. There were three hanging ropes swaying in the middle of the living room. The unconscious Ol' Wong and Xiao Gu were lying under the first two ropes while the third one seemed to have been prepared for Chen Ge.

Three nooses, a family of three, and three final members. They seem to like the number three a lot.

Chapter 279 - I've Been Waiting for You

Chapter 279: I've Been Waiting for You

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Ol' Wong and Xiao Gu were sent to the hospital while Chen Ge stayed behind to help the task force finish up their work at Fang Hwa Apartments. Seeing how hardworking he was, the few officers' impression of Chen Ge improved tremendously.

Standing in the room opposite from Room 3239, Chen Ge avoided the gazes of the officers and took out his phone. When the man with the ruined face was made into a doll by Zhang Ya, the black phone had vibrated. However, the situation had been too dangerous for him to take a look.

A new message appeared on the screen. After the man with the ruined face was taken care off, the Third Sick Hall's completion rate had increased to eighty percent!

If the completion rate reaches ninety percent, there will be a reward, so I need another ten percent.

Chen Ge looked at the phone. When the completion rate went over ninety percent, he would get the reward of a Trial Mission. After completely demolishing the ghost stories society, he would gain the reward that came from the Third Sick Hall's hidden mission.

In other words, the black phone is pitting me against the ghost stories society. Why does it hate the society so?

After the multiple interactions with the society, Chen Ge had a deeper understanding of them. Each member was the vessel for a monster from behind the door. To feed these monsters, or rather, to not let themselves be eaten by the monsters on their bodies, they had to continuously create ghost stories to fulfil the monsters' needs.

From a certain perspective, they were no longer human beings but puppets controlled by the monsters. This was the biggest difference between Chen Ge and the majority of the members.

I have a feeling the society is not that simple. Their promotional flyer features a blood red door. This bunch of crazies must know more about the world behind the door than I do. Perhaps the mysterious chairperson is a ghost from behind the door himself.

Chen Ge got gripped by a sense of danger. He had a feeling the current employees at his Haunted House were not enough anymore.

“Xiao Chen!” The room door was pushed open, and Captain Yan walked in. Chen Ge immediately pocketed the black phone and slid down on the sofa to pretend to be weak.

“Captain Yan, you’re looking for me?”

“Take a look at this yourself.” Captain Yan took out Xiao Gu’s phone from the evidence bag. At around twenty-five minutes ago, there was a curious message that came into Xiao Gu’s WeChat—”Chen Ge, I will remember your name.”

“This message was sent from the phone of Wang Dajun, the security guard. We’ve searched the entire 23rd floor, but we cannot find his phone. Thus, we suspect that there are other runners, and they have Wang Dajun’s phone with them!” Captain Yan placed Xiao Gu’s phone on the coffee table. “There’s another question. Why would your name appear in the message?”

Wang Dajun was Ol’ Wong’s full name. Ol’ Wong was the reason that Xiao Gu had been at the third building.

“This person who took Ol’ Wong’s phone should be the culprit, the person who planned everything tonight.” Chen Ge understood the meaning of the sentence. The person had carefully planned, but he had underestimated Zhang Ya’s power and Chen Ge’s caution. If Zhang Ya did not come to his aid or he was pulled into either one of the two rooms, Chen Ge would have died.

Thinking about it, Chen Ge shuddered with fear.

“The message came from the culprit, proving two things. One, he is fearless, and two, you have done something to enrage him a lot.” Captain Yan placed Xiao Gu’s phone back into the evidence bag. “Neither is good for you. They might exact crazier revenge on you.”

The ghost stories society had lost four members at once. Even the man with the ruined face who controlled two Red Specters had been made into a doll. If Chen Ge were a remnant of the ghost stories society, he would have been mad as well.

“Remember my name? Is this a threat toward me?” Chen Ge looked at Captain Yan, who had turned to leave. A thought flashed across his mind, and he jumped from the sofa. “Wait a minute!”

“The phone! The time the message was sent!” Chen Ge grabbed the evidence bag from Captain Yan. He opened the phone to take a look; the message had been sent twenty-five minutes ago.

Twenty-five minutes ago, the man with the ruined face had just died, and Lee Zheng’s group had not arrived yet!

“There’s another society member hiding inside this building, and that person is most likely the real culprit!” Chen Ge narrowed his gaze. Said person had witnessed the whole process, but due to Zhang Ya, they did not show themselves.

“The culprit is hiding inside the building?” Captain Yan nodded. “We’ve controlled all the exits, and the roads leading to and from Fang Hwa Apartments have been sealed. Temporarily, there is no one suspicious. Don’t worry, if they’re still inside this building, they won’t be able to escape.

The remaining three members were the hardest to deal with. Chen Ge could not place his hope in Captain Yan and his men. He gripped his hands together, and his knuckles cracked. Chen Ge felt like he had missed something.

The man is very clever. The message was sent twenty-five minutes ago, and he might have left already, but how did he escape the detection of the police?

Looking at the message on Xiao Gu’s WeChat, Chen Ge was suddenly reminded of something. Xiao Jia had started to go berserk after reading the message on Xiao Gu’s phone. However, the investigator who saw the message first only collapsed. Their conditions were completely different.

“Captain Yan, what happened to the investigator who entered the building first? Who has been taking care of him?”

“When I last saw him, he was lying inside the police car, still unconscious. Twenty minutes ago, the ambulance arrived, so he’s probably at the hospital now.”

“Twenty minutes ago, the ambulance arrived?”

...

The nurse station was silent. The People’s Hospital at 2 am was extremely quiet. Most of the patients were already asleep when a pair of eyes that were completely white slowly peeled open.

“Chen Ge...” The words left his lips unconsciously. Then he sat up in bed like he was sleep-walking. “This new scapegoat’s body is not bad, but the sensation of splitting consciousness is too painful.”

He clenched his fists, and the man’s expression turned eerie. There was a trace of envy in his words when he said, “No matter how good the scapegoat is, it won’t be better than the Red Specter.”

The man climbed out from bed and walked toward the door like an awkward puppet. He slowly got used to his body and picked up pace.

With no one watching, he entered the hospital’s safety passageways. He avoided all the cameras in the lobby and sneaked into the dark alleyway behind the hospital.

“Three hours left, I should have enough time to return to the main persona.”

He staggered down the alley that was filled with pebbles and trash. His arms and feet were wounded from scratches, but he did not mind it one bit. Looking at the exit that was nearing, he slowly relaxed.

“It’s fine even if the plan failed. As long as I’m alive and bring the message back, nothing is certain.”

The streetlights outside the alleyway emitted a yellowish light. As the man got close to exit, a man holding a hammer walked out from the shadows to block the exit.

“I’ve been waiting for you for quite some time.”

There were no cars on the road, and the surroundings were eerily quiet. Occasionally, there would be a stray cat wandering past, but they soon left the scene as if sensing that things were not right. “Who are you?”

The investigator stood in the muddy, black alley. His shoes were missing, and his feet were stepping on piles of rubbish. Blood trailed down from his wounds.

“Have you forgotten my voice already?” The man slowly walked out of the shadow. He was holding a scary-looking hammer in his hands. The streetlights lengthened his shadow. It was a man who spoke, but his shadow was the shape of a long-haired woman. The investigator finally got a good look of the man’s face. His gritted his teeth and forced out two words. “Chen Ge!”

“I don’t know you, but you managed to call out my name. Looks like my speculation is correct.”

The man who blocked his way was none other than Chen Ge. He and Captain Yan had searched the entire third building, but they could not find the last member that was in hiding.

At the time, Chen Ge had already had his suspicions. After getting the hospital’s address from Captain Yan, Chen Ge had returned to New Century Park to grab his hammer before going to the People’s Hospital to set up an ambush.

“How did you find out?” At this juncture, the investigator became surprisingly calm. There was a weird smile on his face as he stared at Chen Ge.

“Why should I tell you?” Pressing the play button on the recorder, Chen Ge entered the alleyway holding the hammer.

“Killing me will bring you no benefit. You’re just talking to one of my scapegoats. Also, before you forget, you’re talking to a policeman.” The investigator had initially been shocked when he saw Chen Ge, but he soon calmed down. “If I die, this policeman is going to die with me.”

Chen Ge did not have time to waste on chewing words. The phone in his pocket was recording their conversation. Looking at the approaching hammer, the investigator’s lips twitched. Chen Ge’s emotionless expression seemed to be telling him, We’re not good men, so stop trying to threaten me with these despicable techniques.

“Actually, we can sit down and have a good talk. Aren’t you curious about my real identity? Don’t you want to know who I am?” The patient was trying his best to communicate with Chen Ge, but Chen Ge did not look like he was in the mood for talking

Seeing as Chen Ge inched closer to him, the patient changed his tact. “Don’t you want to know who the chairperson really is?”

“The identity of the chairperson is a multiple-choice question, and now I’m using the elimination method to find the correct answer.” Chen Ge was telling the investigator in a round-about way that he was not going to survive the night.

Chen Ge did not plan to kill an innocent man. He did this behind Captain Yan’s back because he had another plan. He had prepared to detain the investigator and bring him back to the Haunted House for interrogation. After all, he had the numerical advantage there.

“I’ll detain him before I hand him to the police.” Chen Ge said so because the phone was still recording. His real plan was to break the investigator’s legs to incapacitate him but keep him alive. The investigator’s plan to find an opening in Chen Ge failed, but his expression did not change much. It looked like he still had a trump card up his sleeves.

“Chen Ge, what I’m going to say next will definitely get your attention. If you allow me to leave, I will tell you why the door forms in the first place and how to open and close the door.” The investigator had a curious expression. He looked like he was smiling but not really. He seemed to be able to tell Chen Ge would be interested in what he had to say.

“Think about it. You should know how valuable this information is,” the investigator calmly said even though his body still moved two steps back. “The policeman you’re talking to is just a scapegoat. Only one third of my consciousness is in this body. Even if you kill him, I won’t be harmed.”

“If you won’t be harmed, why are you in such a hurry to leave?” Chen Ge slowed down. “Let me see your sincerity; that is the preface to our deal.”

The investigator sighed in relief. “Since you want to know about the information regarding the door, I believe you know the location to one of them.”

“The reason for the door’s formation is very complicated. For now, no one can really tell why. I only know they will appear in a location where Yin energy gathers and human activity is rare. However, those are just minor factors; the key factor is there has to be someone who knocks on the door.”

“Someone who knocks on the door?”

“The world behind the door is one colored by not only red but also despair and distraught. It is filled with human beings’ various negative emotions. In contrast to this world, it is filled with endless nightmares.” The investigator’s voice turned soft. “Normal people cannot see that world. Only those with a collapsed mental state or those who have lost all hope will have the chance to push open these doors.

“I once heard this from the first door-pusher. That day, he was just going about his life like normal. He didn’t do anything different. Like usual, he pushed open that door that he passed through daily, but the world behind the door changed completely. The door appeared suddenly without warning.”

“Without warning?”

“Yes, you own a door yourself, so you must have had similar experience. For example, you’re standing outside the door and suddenly you hear...”

Siren suddenly came from outside the alleyway, cutting the investigator off. A few police cars were heading their way!

“Did you call the cops?” The smile on the investigator’s face instantly disappeared.

Chen Ge shook his head. "Continue. Tell me more about the door, and I can help you escape this."

"Will you?" The investigator laughed coldly.

"You don't have any other choice." Chen Ge looked around, trying to find a spot to hide the hammer.

"I'm a resident of hell. Do you think a demon will trust the devil?" The investigator turned and ran down the alleyway. Chen Ge followed close behind.

"Don't move!" The other end of the alleyway was blocked by another police car. The investigator's path was blocked. He did not hesitate and ran back into the hospital.

Is he trying to use the complicated layout to escape, or is he trying to find a hostage?

Chen Ge chased behind him, and he soon discovered that he had greatly underestimated the investigator's decisiveness and viciousness.

After kicking the door open, the madman rushed for the roof of the hospital.

"Don't come any closer!" The investigator stepped on the railing. He was just inches away from the building's edge!

The night breeze fluttered the patient's garb that he was wearing. Under his feet was the city. He stood in the dark night, looking at everything below him.

Chen Ge stopped three meters before the investigator. He did not continue pressuring the man.

"Chen Ge, I've remembered your name. Next time we meet, I'll give you a surprise." A smile bloomed on the investigator's face. He looked at Chen Ge and slowly opened his arms.

The rooftop's safety door was pushed open, and Captain Yan and his men rushed out.

"Yao Qinyi!"

Seeing them, the smile on the investigator's face turned brighter. He leaned slowly backward like he was returning to the embrace of the dark night.

Chen Ge rushed forward when the investigator leaned back. The distance of three meters was like a gap that could not be crossed.

He did not make it.

...

The night breeze rushed through his ears, tearing his eardrums. The investigator's face twisted as his body fell through the air. Those were his last three seconds in this world. The distance between them increased. The investigator seemed to say something, but due to the distance and the howling wind, Chen Ge could not hear anything. Through the shape of the man's lips, Chen Ge roughly made out two words—Men Nan.

Chen Ge could not understand why the investigator would bring up Men Nan at the last moment of his life. Perhaps he was trying to confuse him, or he wanted to leave him a message.

The body landed with a thud. This was the first time Chen Ge had heard a life being lost.

Yao Qinyi landed on his head. Before he died, he kept his face looking at the roof. His eyes were smiling, and a wicked grin hung on his lips.

Half of Chen Ge's body was hanging off the building, and his arms grasped at nothing but air.

“Ghost stories society...” The society made up from mental patients and killers had revealed its true face before Chen Ge. They had never been concerned about human lives.

Chen Ge slowly retracted his arms and asked with a suppressed voice, "Who called you here?"

"It was the nurse who made the call. A patient saw Ol' Yao escape from his room in the middle of the night. It looked like he was sleep-walking. Considering Xiao Jia's condition, we were afraid some accident might happen to Ol' Yao, so we rushed over from Fang Hwa Apartments immediately."

"It was the nurse who called the police?" Chen Ge gripped the railing with both of his hands. He looked down at Yao Qinyi, at the smile on his face.

What he said before he died, was that the truth or a lie? Who is the real person behind these scapegoats? Wu Fei? Chairperson? No. 10?

There were three members left in the society, but if he did not remove the chairperson, the society would add more members soon. Tragedy and despair happened daily.

When pain pooled in one's heart and was slowly allowed to influence the soul, the flyer from the ghost stories society would arrive.

I'll need to destroy the ghost stories society before next Wednesday. Zhang Ya had gone into her slumber, so dealing with three members alone would be difficult. I need a new Red Specter!

The police cars had surrounded the People's Hospital. Since Lee Zheng and many other officers were there when Yao Qinyi jumped off the building, they did not make things difficult for Chen Ge. He was sent back to New Century Park at around 4 am.

Chen Ge locked himself up inside the staff breakroom and placed the black phone on the table. He still needed to work tomorrow morning, but he did not feel tired. He sat on the chair to go through the mission message on the phone.

Daily Missions can get me rewards, but only the Nightmare Mission will improve my ability. Ever since the rules of triggering Nightmare Mission have been changed, I've never stumbled across another Nightmare Mission. Normal Missions are to focus on improving the Haunted House. I can do those when I'm free.

There are two Trial Missions inside the black phone. The Hearse, a two-star scenario, and School of the Afterlife, a four-star scenario. Unlocking new scenarios and completing their hidden mission will give me rewards that might include new ghost employees. Trial Mission will improve the power of the Haunted House, but a low-star Trial Mission won't have much influence on me, and a high-star Trial Mission will be too dangerous.

Chen Ge was conflicted. After Zhang Ya went into slumber, he suddenly realized that he could be fearless before this only because of this Red Specter who seemed particularly interested in him.

The visitor's screams from the past two days of work should be enough to exchange for two spins at the wheel. The Wheel of Misfortune is a method to increase my power, but there is too much uncertainty.

Chen Ge thought back to his previous lucky draws, and he shook his head. He decided to delay the activity to tomorrow afternoon when the sun was shining.

The situation is urgent. If the ghost from the wheel isn't compliant, I'll have to feed them to Xu Yin.

Xu Yin had the ability to become a Red Specter, and only a Red Specter would be a threat for the ghost stories society.

The society has owned their door for many years already, so they must have more than two Red Specters. The only reason they haven't made a move is probably because they don't know my bottom line. If they knew Zhang Ya is currently asleep and cannot wake up to help me, they would make use of this chance to deal with me.

He turned to look at his shadow. The long-hair woman's shadow was still a shock to him then!

Zhang Ya has probably considered that already. Chen Ge took out the wooden box from his chest. He toyed with the doll and examined it closely. Why would Zhang Ya give this to me? Can this thing save me when the situation is dangerous?

Taking a doll made from a man's soul everywhere was not a good experience.

Keeping it inside the wooden box was awkward to carry to places, so Chen Ge found a black plastic bag and tossed the doll inside.

He turned off the phone, lay on the bed, and slowly drifted off to sleep.

Chen Ge was woken up by his alarm at 8:30 am. He only had caught three or four hours of sleep for the past few days, but he did not feel tired. The only difference he could tell was that his body temperature seemed to drop lower than normal, but it did not seem to affect him.

The park opened to welcome a new day at 8:55 am.

Xiao Gu was still at the hospital, but Captain Yan said that he was mostly fine and had survived the fatal period. He would probably be released from the hospital in a few days.

Ol' Wong though had the shorter end of the stick. Due to his old age and the great trauma, he fell ill, and the high fever would not recede. During his period of consciousness, he told the police that he planned to quit his security job. The police did ask him about what happened that night, but Ol' Wong could not remember anything.

The visitors rushed into the park, and the number was greater than yesterday.

Xiao Gu's absence meant that Chen Ge had to take turns dealing with two scenarios. He only got to rest during lunch.

The Haunted House's reputation grew bigger. Even though Chen Ge's workload had increased, he felt satisfied. At 12:30 pm, Chen Ge sat on the steps leading to the Haunted House to count his morning income. He was only halfway through when his phone rang.

He glanced at it and realized it was an unregistered number. He wanted to ignore the call as he was too busy to deal with it, but in the end, he still picked it up.

A woman's voice came through. "I'm sorry, are you Chen Ge?"

"Yes, I am."

"Good afternoon, I'm calling from Jiujiang's Children Home. In the space for Fan Yu's guardian, your name has been listed. Now that his aunt is currently in jail, we need you to come over to the Children Home to deal with some things."

"Is it related to Fan Yu?" The boy who drew about ghosts had left a deep impression on Chen Ge.

"Yes, he has found an older sister for himself at our Children Home."

“That’s a good thing; the boy doesn’t like to communicate with people. I’m glad that there have been positive changes...”

“But what if that sister is not a human but a spider?”

“A spider?”

“Yes, Fan Yu adopted a spider as his sister. The situation is slightly complicated. If you have time, do you mind coming over to Jiujiang's Children's Home?”

“Of course, is it okay if I arrive at 6 or 7 pm?”

“No problem. Thank you for your cooperation.”

After hanging up the phone, Chen Ge thought back to the last sentence the worker said. “But what if that sister is not a human but a spider?”

Fan Yu was the Haunted House's first special visitor and a poor child. He had witnessed how his father killed his mother and how his aunt pushed his father into the well. Then he had lived for several years under the same roof as the killer.

The boy no longer has any family left on this world. No matter what, I should go take a look.

Chen Ge initially wanted to run out to the sun to spin the wheel, but thanks to the call from the Children's Home, his mood was lost. The lunch break soon ended. Chen Ge busied himself until 5:30 pm, but the number of visitors did not decrease. Chen Ge's team had to delay the closing time until almost 7 pm.

The sky was darkening. Chen Ge did not even have time to do his accounts. After Xu Wan left work, he rushed toward the Children's Home. This was the first time Chen Ge had visited Jiujiang's Children's Home. It was different from the dirty, cold, and unfeeling orphanages that he had seen on television. The decor of Jiujiang's Children's Home was very friendly, and it had its own courtyard that was filled with various flowers.

“Hey, what are you doing here? We do not allow outsiders!” The gentleman who guarded the door blocked Chen Ge.

“Nice to meet you. I’m Chen Ge, Fan Yu’s family. This afternoon, a member of staff here called me.”

“Fan Yu’s family?” The old gentleman studied Chen Ge, and his attitude changed instantly. “Please wait here for a moment. I’ll go ask. Be back in a minute.”

The gentleman did not use his phone but ran into the courtyard to yell up the stairs. Not long after that, a woman who looked about Chen Ge’s age came out from the building. She was wearing a nurse’s outfit, and she gave off a friendly feeling.

“Mr. Chen, you’re finally here.” The nurse signaled for Chen Ge to follow her. “Let me introduce myself first. I’m Fan Yu’s mother; you can call me Xiao Liu.”

“You’re his mother?”

“Yes, we have adopted many abandoned children and babies here. To make them feel the warmth of home, we normally allow them to call us mother and father. Of course, it’s not forced, but most of the children here like it.” The nurse was a friendly character, but she was shy. She did not even dare look at Chen Ge’s eyes when she was talking to him.

“That’s wonderful. I admire that.”

Jiujiang’s Children’s Home was like a big family. It was completely different from what Chen Ge thought an orphanage would be like. The nurse flashed a sunny smile. She was about to say something when the window on the other side of the courtyard flew open, and a middle-aged man who held a tray of tea cups in his hands yelled at the nurse, “Xiao Liu, you’re running off again? Get back to your post! Keep an eye on Jiang Ling and Fan Yu! They’re getting worse!”

The man’s voice sounded angry, but Xiao Liu was not afraid. Instead, she was embarrassed. “Yes, I understand.”

The nurse led Chen Ge into the building. The wall was pasted with cute decorations, and the corridor was very clean.

He used to work at a large clinic, but after that, he came to serve here.”

“Doctor Chen? There’s a specialist attached to the children’s home?”

“Yes, we have doctors, nurses, nutritionists, and teachers. Each of us is responsible for different jobs, but we’re all these children’s fathers and mothers.” Chen Ge nodded. Compared to the orphanage that Mu Yang High School’s headmaster had built privately, this place was much more official. When they walked down a corridor, one of the doors was suddenly pushed open, and two kids ran out holding a toy between them.

“Jiang Jin, Jiang He! Stop making noise in the corridor—it’s past 8 pm already. Get back to your room!” the nurse scolded, and the boys went back to their room unwillingly. Before the door closed, Chen Ge glanced into it. There were two bedrooms and one living rooms, and it housed six children.

“You have quite a good place here. The children have new toys and new clothes.” Chen Ge looked at the painted cards on the door. They were written with the children’s names. “This is weird. Why do the names of all the children here start with Jiang?”

“They’re Jiujiang’s children, so we used Jiujiang as inspiration for their surname.” The nurse explained and smiled with embarrassment. “Of course, some of the children arrive with a name, so we wouldn’t force them to change.”

The nurse led Chen Ge to the first room on the left on the third floor. She walked in without knocking.

There was an old man in his sixties watering the plants by the windowsill. He was wearing a pair of spectacles and looked like a retired teacher.

“You’re finally here, please take a seat.” The man looked at Chen Ge like he was their savior. This confused Chen Ge even more.

“Sir, what is the problem? Did our Fan Yu create some problem at the Children’s Home?” Chen Ge felt like he was attending a parent-teacher’s conference for Fan Yu. He was asked to stay until the end because the teacher wanted to have a private chat with him about Fan Yu.

“I’ll be frank.” The old president gave the nurse a look. As if afraid that they might be overhead, he had her close the door. “You’re the guardian assigned to Fan Yu, so you should know about his condition better than us. The boy is not a social person... how shall I put this? He has no knowledge of concepts like family, groups, or happiness. We tried our best to help him, but the effect has been lacking.”

Chen Ge knew Fan Yu better than most, so he understood the trouble the Children’s Home was facing. “I’m so sorry for creating all this trouble.”

The president shrugged. “That’s fine. We’ve seen children who were more introverted. The main problem is that, not only are we unable to fix his problem, he has also managed to influence our other children who are facing recovery.”

“It’s a sad truth that many children who have faced trauma or been abandoned by their family will have some psychological problems that need counselling.” The president smiled sadly. “Fan Yu is a good example, but this boy keeps arguing with the doctor. He not only refuses to accept his treatment but keeps saying weird things to the other children. Some of the children’s conditions have worsened after interacting with him. With no other choice, we had to send those children away.”

The sensitive Chen Ge realized the source of the problem. Fan Yu had a pair of eyes that could see ghosts. The boy was not bad, and the things that he said might sound weird to adult ears, but they were most likely true.

“Yes, to not interrupt the other children’s treatment, we had to send them to an actual children’s psychiatrist for counselling. You have to understand that we’re a public institution; the budget we receive is limited. Most of the time, our operation depends on kind donations from the public.” The president sighed. “It’s fine if we need to send the children to a psychiatrist once or twice, but we won’t be able to afford it if this continues.”

Then, the president raised his head to look at Chen Ge like he was trying to gauge his attitude. He saw Chen Ge was in deep contemplation. He assumed Chen Ge understood what he was trying to say, so he sighed in relief. He said directly, “Based on Fan Yu’s condition, the chance of him being adopted is low, and since you’re Fan Yu’s only family, I feel like compared to an environment like the Children’s Home, Fan Yu is more suitable staying with his family.”

The room fell into silence.

After two minutes, Chen Ge came to a decision. “Fan Yu did not do anything wrong.”

The president was startled. He thought that he did not explain himself clearly enough. “I know this is not Fan Yu’s fault. We’re merely hoping he can have a healthy growth, so do not misunderstand.”

“What did Fan Yu tell these kids?” Chen Ge looked at the president seriously. “You have to tell me without missing a word; these kids might be in danger.”

“Danger?” The president stared at Chen Ge for a full three seconds. His lips fell open, and the speech that he had prepared was completely useless. They were not on the same wavelength. Looking at Chen Ge, he suddenly felt that Fan Yu’s condition might be hereditary.

“Yes, please tell me what Fan Yu has said and the names and contact information of those children. They might be in serious danger,” Chen Ge repeated seriously; it did not sound like he was kidding.

The president forced a smile. “Mr. Chen, I’ll be direct. Fan Yu doesn’t feel any sense of belonging to our Children’s Home; he probably wishes to stay with his family. He’s a very clever child, but he has some internal issues. If you have the financial power, we hope that you can bring him away with you and send him to an official and professional psychiatrist for treatment.”

“Temporarily, that is not possible. My place is not safe.” Chen Ge was telling the truth. At least until the ghost stories society had been taken care off, he could not take Fan Yu back to his Haunted House.

The president had heard many excuses when people refused adoption, but a lack of security was a first. “Okay, but you have to come see him often to communicate with him. We will try to do our best.”

“Thank you.”

The nurse led Chen Ge out of the president’s room. The nurse felt embarrassed, and she said, “It’s not our intention to chase Fan Yu away. The boy is obedient and clever; he just tends to do weird things.”

Chen Ge smiled but did not argue. “I know what you’re trying to express, but have you considered that what he says is the truth?”

The nurse slowed down. She glanced at Chen Ge. For some reason, she felt like this man was rather convincing. “We’re here.”

The nurse stopped at the door next to the room when they ran into the two boys earlier. Both rooms’ doors were open. “Jiang He and Jiang Jin are on the run again.”

She entered one of the rooms in a hurry. Then there came the sound of glass shattering from the bedroom. A girl started to cry, wailing the words, “Big Sister!”

It sounded like her sister was being bullied.

“Jiang Jin, Jiang He! Go and face the wall!” The nurse lectured the two boys while Chen Ge stood at the door. He looked at the painted card, and among all the children with the surname Jiang, Fan Yu’s name stood out.

This boy sure likes to make people worry about him. Chen Ge entered the bedroom and saw Fan Yu, who was seated at the table, drawing with his head lowered. He did not seem to mind the outside world. Beside Fan Yu was a little girl who could not stop crying. She used her small hands to wipe her eyes, but the tears would not stop falling. She kept calling for her sister.

After the nurse dealt with Jiang Jin and Jiang He, she hugged the girl to console her, but the girl only cried even harder. Her watery eyes turned red, and her finger pointed at Jiang He and Jiang Jin. “They killed sister! They killed my big sister!”

The girl was cute, and the clothes she was wearing was rather thick. Carried in the nurse’s embrace, she looked like a ball of cotton. But from the lips of the cute girl, cruel terms like killed and murder kept coming out.

“We just wanted to take a look at her glass cup, but she refused to give it up. It accidentally broke, and someone accidentally stepped on the spider inside the cup,” the two boys grumbled with dissatisfaction.

“Spider? Big sister?” Chen Ge turned to look at the center of the bedroom. The glass cup was shattered, and amid the broken pieces, there was a flattened spider.

After the situation had been cleared up, the nurse had the two boys leave the room first, and she focused on consoling the girl. However, the girl refused to listen, and she cried even harder. She struggled from the nurse’s embrace and picked up the flattened spider from the ground. Without any disgust, she held the spider in her palms and ran to Fan Yu. With a despairing voice, she wailed, “They killed sister! Big sister is dead!”

The little girl looked like she was only four or five. Even when she stood on her tiptoes, she was just slightly taller than the table. Fan Yu, who was focused on his drawing, ignored the girl.

In the end, however, his patience was worn thin by the girl. He put down the pen and placed his hand on the girl's head. "Sister is not dead—she just left temporarily."

Fan Yu used his other hand to pick up the picture and showed it to the girl. "Your sister was just behind you."

On the normal paper, a black coloring pencil drew out a little girl that was closely bound, and behind the girl was a large humanoid monster that was sketched out using a red pencil!

It was lying behind the girl, and its head was stretched to rest on the girl's head. Its limbs were arced on the ground just like a spider. Looking at Fan Yu's drawing, the little girl finally stopped crying.

He tussled the girl's hair, and Fan Yu turned to look at Chen Ge at the door. "Look, Sister is now standing behind that man."

Chapter 284: Jiang Ling

The little girl stopped crying and turned around to look at Chen Ge with a blank expression. Her palm-size face was covered with tears, and her eyes were red with a layer of mist. The girl's pitiable eyes could melt anything. Even the cruelest person would let their guard down in her vicinity. The nurse could not help herself anymore. She picked up the little girl and pressed her face to the girl's head, patting her lightly on her back.

If the picture was just of the nurse and the two children, it would have been nice. It was like an older sister looking after two younger siblings with all her might. Even though things were tough and difficult, life was blissful with family around. However, the image turned curious after adding Chen Ge into the picture.

Chen Ge stood at the door with his muscle all tensed. It was like he was stranded alone in the jungle, and a monster was eyeing him from the dark. According to the ratio on Fan Yu's picture, the monster is about three times the size of a normal man.

Knowing Fan Yu, Chen Ge had long realized that the boy's eyes could see ghosts. In other words, this meant that the spider in Fan Yu's picture was really standing behind him!

His finger hung over the recorder, and veins popped on his arm. Before he arrived, Chen Ge did not expect that he would run into a monster at this heart-warming children's home.

"Fan Yu looks like he has a good relationship with the girl, and Fan Yu knows me. Does this mean that I'm also a friend of the girl?" Chen Ge grumbled to himself at the door. He kept his voice low, just enough to be heard if there was someone behind him.

"Stop crying, big sister left already. We'll go find her tomorrow." Fan Yu tussled the girl's hair. He was especially kind to her.

“Okay.” The girl rubbed her reddened eyes and struggled loose from the nurse. She sat on the little chair in the bedroom unwillingly and still held the spider’s body in her hands; she refused to throw it away.

When Fan Yu said that the girl’s sister had left, Chen Ge sighed in relief. He walked into the room and picked up the broom to sweep the glass to the corner.

Standing in the middle, the nurse felt awkward, like she had been ignored.

“Mr. Chen, let me.” The nurse swept the glass pieces into a dustpan and very naturally pulled Chen Ge out of the room.

“You’ve seen the situation for yourself.” The nurse’s voice was filled with helplessness. “I was the one who took care of Jiang Ling after she was sent here. It has been almost six months already. She used to call me mother and wouldn’t leave my side. She was just like a little angel, but ever since Fan Yu arrived, everything changed. She follows behind him every day and only listens to him—no one else.”

“Why do I hear envy in your complaint?” Chen Ge leaned against the wall. He had a good impression of this Children’s Home; they were doing good work.

“I’m not!” The nurse glared at Chen Ge. “If Jiang Ling was playing with other kids, of course, I wouldn’t stop her, but Fan Yu is the only exception. You’ve seen those things that he draws. Do you think it’s appropriate a six-year-old girl to see those drawings every day?”

“It is more than inappropriate!” The nurse closed the door and dragged Chen Ge to the corner of the living room. “Jiang Ling was found at a crime scene. You do not understand what she has been through. When she arrived at the Children’s Home half a year ago, she wouldn’t even speak and had a fear of everyone. Doctor Chen spent half a year conducting counselling, and her condition was finally improving.”

Chen Ge’s expression turned serious. “Do you mind telling me about Jiang Ling’s past?”

The nurse lowered her voice. “I also heard this from the police. Jiang Ling came from a happy family, and the family of four lived outside the city. Even though they weren't rich by any means, they were happy. Her father was an honest farmer, but her mother didn't look like a local. She was fair and beautiful. Jiang Ling also had a big sister who inherited her mother's genes; she looked very pretty.

"Around one year ago, her father made a loan to buy a plot of land to raise peach trees. They lived far from the already isolated village and thus separated themselves from human contact. Just as the peaches were getting ripe and things were going to become better for their family, disaster struck."

After a sigh, the nurse continued with anger and pity. "First it was Jiang Ling's sister who disappeared, and not long after that, Jiang Ling's parents passed away. Their food was mixed with a lot of rat poison; the killer wanted them dead."

"Has the killer been caught?"

"No." The nurse shook her head. "The police didn't reveal too much information. The only thing I know is that the killer didn't steal any of the money, and it wasn't a crime of passion. I suspect the killers are the villagers who were envious of the family's happiness! The place was isolated, and other than the villagers, nobody would have gone there. Also, a few days before the poisoning, one of the villagers was caught trying to steal the ripening peaches. He was caught by Jiang Ling's father, and they had a scuffle inside the peach plantation."

After listening to the nurse, Chen Ge also felt like the villagers might be the killers. Murder usually had a motive, and revenge was a very good one.

"After the investigation, the police couldn't find any suspect in the village. The only survivor was Jiang Ling, who didn't drink the soup. Perhaps she was stunned after watching her parents collapse. The police suspected that Jiang Ling had seen the murderer, but since they couldn't communicate with Jiang Ling, they couldn't do anything. After that incident, something was wrong with the girl's mental state.

"As you can see for yourself, she calls every spider her big sister. People usually run from these creepy crawlies, but she feels close to them. Can you imagine the girl leaning close to spider webs, talking sweetly to spiders?

"After some interaction, I noticed other problems with her. There is something wrong with the girl's conception. She calls the quilt on the bed mother and the rope hanging from the ceiling her father. Others did ask her about it, but she couldn't explain herself."

The nurse was sad. It seemed she really did care for the girl. "Our Children's Home has been trying to correct her mindset, and she has now stopped calling rope and quilt her parents. After she stops referring to spiders as her sister, she will be able to live life like normal. However, with Fan Yu's arrival, he only took few days to ruin all our effort."

"Let's not talk about Fan Yu for now." Chen Ge needed ghosts to deal with the ghost stories society, so he was more interested in them.

"Have the police investigated Jiang Ling's sister? Why did she disappear? Could she be the killer?"

"The police did suspect that the killer could be Jiang Ling's sister, but even now, they have not found Jiang Ling's sister."

“Now is not the time to speculate who the killer is. That is the police’s job.” The nurse sighed. “I’m more worried about Jiang Ling’s therapy.”

“I’ll handle that, but you have to give me some time.” Chen Ge had a brief understanding of the story. The case described by the nurse had many inconsistencies, and they demanded a closer look.

...

“You’ll handle it? You’ll bring Fan Yu away with you?”

“I mean, I’ll cure Jiang Ling’s sickness.” Chen Ge was the one who was most familiar with Fan Yu. He knew that the boy had not lied.

The nurse was baffled. “How are you going to cure her? You’re not a doctor.”

“Letting me try is no skin off your back anyway.” Chen Ge ignored the nurse and walked back into the bedroom. He had a wealth of experience dealing with baleful specters and knew how to gain their goodwill.

The death of their parents should be the source of the problem within Jiang Ling and her sister. Finding the murderer and bringing them to justice should gain me the affection of the sisters.

From Fan Yu’s painting, Jiang Ling’s sister did not seem to be that weak, she might even be a Red Specter. If he could build a good relationship with her or even invite her to join the Haunted House, Chen Ge would not be so worried during this period when Zhang Ya was in her slumber.

Chen Ge tried to communicate with Jiang Ling, but the little girl ignored him other than occasionally using a fearful gaze to look at him.

“What do you want to know? I’ll ask.” Fan Yu walked to the girl and pointed at Chen Ge. “He’s a good guy; he can also see your big sister.”

“Really?” The little girl turned to Chen Ge with innocence, and Chen Ge nodded quickly. Using this chance, Chen Ge asked the girl several questions and promised that he would help her find her sister. Jiang Ling was very happy when she heard Chen Ge say that. She even gifted the flattened spider to Chen Ge, saying that was what her sister looked like.

Chen Ge did not reject the child’s kindness. Carefully, he slid the spider’s body into a plastic bottle and kept it on him. After their relationship got close, Chen Ge tried to get more information from the girl.

However, the more he asked, the more confused he became. Perhaps due to her young age, she could not remember much, and most of the things that she said did not make sense. In the end, Chen Ge only managed to get the girl’s former address and her sister’s name—Zhu Xingrou.

Chen Ge left the Children’s Home with the accompaniment of the nurse at 9 pm. After retuning to New Century Park, Chen Ge packed his backpack with the hammer and Xiao Xiao. He planned to visit the address that Jiang Ling had given him that night.

I should bring this with me—perhaps it might be useful. Chen Ge shoved the plastic bottle with the spider into the backpack as well. Then he called a taxi to head for Lin Guan Village, which sat at the edge of Western Jiujiang’s district limit.

While he was inside the taxi, Chen Ge tried to give Inspector Lee a call to see whether he could get some information on the case, but to his surprise, his phone was not on.

Is he on a mission? Chen Ge looked at his watch. Being a cop these days is not easy.

Chen Ge finally arrived at Lin Guan Village at around 11:30 pm. The place was so isolated. It was carved into the mountains, and the roads leading there had only been repaired a few years ago. The winds in the mountain were cold. There was no light even though it was just 11 pm. The people there either had a habit of sleeping early or the place was completely deserted.

There’s not even a streetlight or a convenience store; how am I supposed to ask for directions? The place the girl mentioned should be further inside the mountain, but it will be easy for me to get lost if I wander into the mountain alone. Chen Ge realized how complicated things were when he arrived at the destination. He walked into the village using the recently repaired asphalt road.

He walked for ten meters when the asphalt road turned into a muddy road. The village looked new from the surface, but its interior was old and broken down. Many of the buildings were several decades old already.

Something is not right. Why does this village feel so creepy? Chen Ge stopped moving. He opened the zipper on his backpack to reveal the head of Doctor Skull-cracker's hammer.

Most of the doors are covered with dust. This village should have plenty of empty houses, and the number of villagers still living here should be very small.

He wandered to a random home, and when he got near, he realized the door was locked from the outside. If someone was in, the lock would definitely be on the inside. What has happened to this village?

He slowly retreated. When he planned to leave the village, the two phones in his pocket vibrated at the same time.

What's going on? Chen Ge first took out the black phone to glance at it. The message said that the completion rate for Third Sick Hall's Trial Mission had been increased to 87 percent. Looks like another patient has been captured.

Chen Ge opened his own phone. It was a call from Inspector Lee. "Uncle San Bao, I thought you'd blocked me. That saddened me."

"There was a mission tonight, and everyone involved had to switch off their phones." Even though Inspector Lee sounded tired, his good mood could be heard through the phone. "Good news, the Third Sick Hall's Patient 8 has been captured."

"Xiong Qing has been captured?"

"You should be glad. The man has been seen patrolling around New Century Park for the past few days; he was probably targeting you."

"Where is he? Can I talk to him?"

“He’s in the ICU. The madman assaulted many officers, and the people from the main station had to shoot him in his legs and shoulders to detain him. He is now unconscious.”

“Inspector Lee, capturing the murderer is a good thing, but you have to be careful. After all, safety first.”

“Stop going in circles with me. What do you want?” Inspector Lee was familiar with Chen Ge. Once Chen Ge tried to care about him, he naturally wanted something in return.

“Then I’ll come right out with it. About six months ago, there was a poisoning case at Western Jiujiang’s Lin Guan Village; do you have any recollection of it?” Chen Ge asked directly.

“I do, but that is not within our jurisdiction.”

“Lin Guan Village is counted as part of the mountains.” Inspector Lee sighed. “Listen to me. Don’t go starting some insane investigation. Many weird things have happened in that village before. At the time, the case was quite a big one; it was followed by Captain Yan’s team.”

“That will be confidential information.”

“Then can you tell me about the poison case six months ago? Fan Yu is staying at the same Children’s Home with the only survivor, a little girl. I’m doing this to help them.”

“I admit she’s a bit weird, but there’s no need to avoid her.”

“According to the investigation, the final suspect and the one who had the power to commit the murders was the little girl.”

After a brief pause, Inspector Lee added, “She once said something very curious.”

Inspector Lee did not seem like he was willing to talk about it. There were footsteps coming from the other end of the phone. He walked to a more secluded place before explaining, “The child has a twisted misunderstanding about death.”

After meeting Men Nan’s main persona, the weirdest child looked normal in Chen Ge’s eyes. “At the time, a child’s worldview hasn’t been shaped yet. Perhaps death is just a journey to somewhere faraway—that, I can understand.”

“If only that’s all. After the girl was rescued, she didn’t say a word for the next three days. She didn’t make a fuss or even cry. She was so obedient that it was quite creepy.” Inspector Lee thought back to those days. “It was until the fourth day that things changed. A female officer found the girl curled up in the corner of her bed, spacing out while looking at a spider. She thought the girl was scared solid by the spider, so she reached out to kill it. However, the girl started crying, saying the officer had killed her big sister.

“That was the first time the girl spoke, and it was from then that we realized there was something off about her. A child her age didn’t feel sorry about the passing of her parents but cried like it was the end of the world for a dead spider. What kind of world she was living in?

“We tried to explain the meaning of death to her, and we realized that, in her heart, death was not the final destination. The girl told us, completely serious, that people would turn into something else after they died. It was not that different from the talk of reincarnation. It was because she was not fearful of death that we kept hearing some cruel words from the girl’s lips.

“A cute girl that looked as innocent as an angel using her childish tone to talk about death. Is she an angel or a demon?

“After further investigation, we unearthed more details. The first who reported the case was a passing villager. According to the autopsy report, the girl had been living with her dead parents for at least two days before she was rescued.” Inspector Lee lowered his voice. “A child of five was already mature enough to think for herself, but she didn’t call the police for two whole days and didn’t even go searching for help from other adults. Don’t you think that’s weird?”

“Could it be that her parents hadn’t taught her about these things?” Jiang Ling’s pitiable appearance surfaced in Chen Ge’s mind, and he also felt that something was off about this girl.

“There were only the girl and her parents’ fingerprints inside the house. The method of killing was direct, but it was surprisingly successful. There were many other anomalies. In any case, this case is not as simple as you think.”

There was someone who called Inspector Lee’s name. Someone was looking for him, and he answered back. “Chen Ge, I need to leave. I know I wouldn’t be able to stop you, but I still want to remind you. Be careful of that child, and do not go to that village at night.”

“Why not?”

“Look at the map, don’t you think it’s weird that there’s nothing else around the village for several miles? When we interviewed the nearest village—which was basically in another district—for the case, there was an elder there who told us there was an epidemic at Lin Guan Village some time ago, and it killed many people.” Someone was rushing Inspector Lee. After a few more reminders, Inspector Lee ended the call, leaving Chen Ge stranded in the dark, abandoned village.

Chen Ge pocketed his phone. He said some time ago; how many years ago was that?

Looking at the rectangular blocky houses in the door, he realized that they looked like coffins. “Lin Guan Village, after separating the Lin ¹, it’ll become Mu Guan Village ² !”

He exited the village and stopped beside the asphalt road. Even in broad daylight, Chen Ge would not have found a taxi, much less at midnight. His way back to the city was gone.

Jiang Ling said that her father’s peach plantation is to the western side of the village. I should go take a look.

Chen Ge turned on his flashlight and followed the road to the western side of the village. The road became smaller as he neared his destination. Chen Ge hiked over a small hill, and just as he was about to give up, he suddenly saw a light ahead of him.

Someone's there? The light moved slowly into the mountains; it did not seem to have noticed Chen Ge. Chen Ge nudged the hammer further out of the backpack and placed Xiao Xiao in his chest pocket before moving forward. The mountain roads were rocky, so he did not dare move too fast. After tailing it for ten minutes, the light slowly disappeared.

Wait... Could it be spirit fire?

Left alone in the mountains, he was reminded of the ghost stories that he had been told when he was a babe. They were about how ghosts led innocent people deep into the forest with stray light.

Calm down. Chen Ge patted himself on his face. He pulled the jacket tighter and jogged slowly toward the direction of the light. After turning around hill, the scene before him changed. A peach plantation appeared to have been inserted into the face of the mountain.

Due to the lack of care, the plantation was overgrown with grass, and the peach trees tipped to their sides. From afar, they looked like living humans with abnormal growths. The light reappeared amid the trees.

This should be the peach plantation that belongs to Jiang Ling's father. Chen Ge did not feel happy even though he had found the location. If anything, he was tense due to the appearance of the mysterious light.

Everyone nearby knows about the murder case in this village, so why would someone purposely come here in the middle of the night? Chen Ge moved cautiously. He switched off the flashlight. Thanks to his Yin Yang Vision, Chen Ge could see better than most in the dark.

He slowly moved into the plantation, and then came the sound of shoveling.

What is he doing? Chen Ge was close enough to get a good look. There was a lamp hanging on a peach tree's branch, and underneath it was an old man in his sixties. He was using a hoe to unearth the soil of the plantation like he was looking for something. The old man's behavior was weird. Chen Ge did not announce himself and slowly followed behind the old man to continue his observation.

Even though the man had a halo of white hair, his body was strong. His hands were filled with calluses, a sign of a lifetime of farming. He was wearing a shirt that had almost been washed white, and his face was tense like he did not know how to smile.

Just a normal old man...

No matter how Chen Ge saw it, this was an elderly farmer. However, why would he come to a crime scene to work the plot in the middle of the night?

He was afraid that his sudden appearance might shock the old man, so he purposely returned several meters back and turned on his flashlight before yelling in the peach plantation's direction, "Is someone here? Is there a way to leave this mountain?"

The old man was still frightened by Chen Ge's voice, which seemed to appear out of nowhere. His forehead was covered with cold sweat instantly.

“Sir, I’m a young man who likes to explore, and I’m an outdoor livestream host.” Afraid that the old man might not believe him, Chen Ge told out his phone and showed him the page with his videos. “I’m quite famous online. You can Google me if you want to.”

He confused the old man since he kept saying terms that the senior could not understand. ” Goggle you? ¹ How would staring at you help?”

The old man tightened his palms around the hoe, and he looked at Chen Ge with alarm.

“To put it simply, I’m a famous outdoor explorer,” Chen Ge summarized. He did not care whether the old man understood him or not. He took out a banknote from his pocket. “I’m lost exploring this mountain, and it was lucky for me to run into you. Can you please tell me how to get back to Jiujiang City?”

The old man did not reach for Chen Ge’s money. He kept his eyes on Chen Ge. Obviously, he did not trust Chen Ge. The two stood in the plantation. The weather in the mountain was prone to change. There was a chill in the air, and it soon started to rain.

“It’s raining?” Chen Ge opened his palm and allowed the rain to fall on it. The moment the rain turned heavier, the environment in the mountain would turn complicated. It would be bad for him.

“I don’t know where you’re from, but this place is called Lin Guan Village. It is right in the middle of Jiujiang and Lin Jiang. It’s far from the city, and there are no cars nearby. It’ll be difficult for you to return to Jiujiang.” The man leaned on the hoe. His legs were weak from the shock that Chen Ge had given him. Who would have thought that a man would suddenly appear behind him in the middle of the night?

"Then what should I do?" Chen Ge twisted his face like he was really worried.

"I can walk you to the foot of the mountain, but it'll probably take the whole night." The old man sighed. "Right, there's a village at the bottom of the mountain. I can walk you there, but do not go into the village. Head straight for the road."

"Why can't I enter the village? If there are some villagers, I don't mind spending a night there."

"Just listen to me! Why do you have so many questions?" the old man said sternly. This seemed to be especially important.

"But you've said so yourself, there are no cars. Even if I leave the mountain, I won't be able to return to Jiujiang. It looks like it's going to pour soon; I'll need a place to hide from the rain, right?" Chen Ge was telling the truth, and the old man could not come up with a retort. He glared at Chen Ge, and the silence stretched between them.

The rain picked up, and the old man sighed. "Since it's raining now, it'll be misty in the morning. If you don't mind, you can stay with me for the night."

He removed the lamp from the branch. He dragged the hoe for about three meters before asking Chen Ge, "Are you really an famous explorer?"

"Why would I lie?" Chen Ge did not feel afraid even though the old man could assault him with the hoe. He took out his phone with one hand while his other reached for the hammer inside his backpack. "You can search for me online. Look, this is me."

Chen Ge showed the video of himself inside the Third Sick Hall. It was the most normal video of himself that he could find.

"You've been on television before?"

"I suppose you can say that. I'm considered quite famous in Jiujiang."

Looking at Chen Ge inside the phone and the comments that followed it, the old man nodded. "No wonder. A normal person wouldn't come here so late at night."

After that, he realized that he might have let something slip, so he picked up the hoe and continued on. "Come with me."

Chen Ge and the old man exited the peach plantation, and after a few minutes of walking, they came across four wooden huts.

"You can take the first one. After I turn off the light, stay in your room. No matter what you hear, do not come out." The old man unlocked the first hut, but he did not give Chen Ge the key.

"That sounds scary. Is it because there are wolves here?" Chen Ge came up with a lie. "I hear wolf attacks are common in the mountains..."

"There are no wolves. Just lie down and sleep. Nothing will happen to you if you don't come out." The old man ushered Chen Ge into the hut. When Chen Ge was in the wooden hut, he added, "Remember, don't come out. Don't even push your hand or head out, remember?"

"Don't worry. I'm easily-scared. I will never purposely do things that are dangerous." Chen Ge sat on the bed inside the wooden hut honestly.

"Good. Then rest well. When the morning mist disappears tomorrow morning, I'll lead you out of the mountain." After the old man bade Chen Ge farewell, he entered the second wooden hut.

This place is just weird. Chen Ge looked around the room. There was not much furniture; there was only a wooden bed, and it did not even have a blanket. The first wooden hut had been vacant for a long time already. Dust was everywhere, and the corners of the room were filled with spiders' webs.

How does one live in a place like this? Did the old man purposely give me this hut, or are there problems with the other huts as well? Chen Ge walked to the door to inspect it, and he realized something weird. Normally, the door lock was inside the door, but the lock for this hut was on the outside.

He told me not to leave, but the door can't even be locked from the inside. Chen Ge felt like the old man had to be hiding something from him. He leaned against the door and yelled at the hut opposite, "Sir! I still don't know your name!"

"Can you please keep your voice down? I'm not deaf." The old man's voice was shaking. He seemed to be worried about something. "My surname is Bai. Quickly go to sleep!”

“Okay.”

After twenty minutes, Chen Ge yelled at the hut next door again, “Master Bai, are you there?”

“What now?”

“Nothing, I just want to thank you and wish you a healthy life!”

“Go to sleep!”

Chen Ge leaned against the wall, and the expression on his face was serious. He yelled at the hut next door at twenty minutes interval. Normally, if someone was woken up, their voice would be mixed with anger or drowsiness, but Master Bai’s replies did not sound like that. None of his replies sounded like he was asleep, and his voice was shaking. This meant that he was not sleeping. If anything, it felt like he was waiting for something to arrive!

Master Bai looks like an honest man, and he even warned me about the village at the bottom of the mountain. He doesn’t seem like a bad person, but his curious activities make me worry. Chen Ge silently opened the wooden door a sliver. The rain was pouring, and darkness covered everything.

These four huts should be Jiang Ling’s family’s old home, but it’s unclear which one is the hut where her parents died.

Pressing the play button on the recorder, Chen Ge pulled open his backpack to grab the handle of the hammer. He did not stay in his hut but slowly inched toward the three other huts.

The sound of rain muffled his footsteps. Chen Ge held the hammer and stopped before the old man’s hut. He leaned his ear on the door.

Chapter 288 - Friends?

Chapter 288: Friends?

The wooden hut was completely silent. Chen Ge stayed at the door for about ten seconds until Xu Yin's suppressed voice came out from the recorder. "So painful..."

The old man probably was still awake because when Xu Yin spoke, there was a commotion inside the hut. The old man heard the noise coming from outside the door, but he did not come out to take a look. Instead, he buried his head deeper under the covers.

He must be very afraid.

The door of the second wooden hut was also locked from the outside. Chen Ge tried to wiggle the lock loose, but the door only moved a centimeter before it got stuck on something. Chen Ge looked through the gap, and the second wooden hut was filled with more furniture than his hut. There was a wooden bed, a wooden table, a chair, and a dresser without the doors. A bunch of clothes that had been washed a few too many times were hanging inside it.

Looks like he has lived here a long time already.

Chen Ge could not understand it. The old man was obviously afraid, so why did he move to live at the crime scene? Even more curiously, why did he go digging at the peach plantation at night? It was not yet time to demand an explanation from the old man. Chen Ge retreated silently and headed for the third wooden hut.

There was no moon or stars, and the rain made the night even darker than usual. Chen Ge did not turn on the flashlight, but his Yin Yang Vision allowed him to see clearly in the dark. He soon arrived at the third wooden hut. The third wooden hut was the largest. There was a rusted lock on the door. Chen Ge pushed on it slightly, and to his surprise, the lock was just for decoration.

The door creaked opened, and this door of the third wooden house was different from others because it could be locked from both inside and outside. Chen Ge felt confused by this anomaly.

For a normal village house, there would be locks on both sides. Even if there was not a lock on the inside, there would be a door bolt so that the person inside could lock the door if they wanted some privacy. However, it was not like that for the first and second wooden huts. The inside of the door was completely blank.

It feels like the first and second wooden huts act as a livestock pen, and the lock is on the outside to prevent the animals locked inside from getting out.

Chen Ge entered the third wooden hut. The hut was separated into two rooms. There was a large wooden bed in the inner room, and the outer room had a wooden table and a simple hearth.

This should be the house where Jiang Ling's parents died.

Chen Ge did not feel uncomfortable—perhaps he had gotten used to it. He ransacked the place and realized that there were many hemp ropes hanging on the walls, and he found a set of carpentry tools under the bed.

The layer of dust is very thick, meaning that the tool box hasn't been touched for a long time already. It probably belonged to the victims. Chen Ge replaced the box and looked at the wooden hut. Jiang Ling's father was probably a carpenter. Did he build these wooden huts himself? So, were the doors of the first two huts designed like that on purpose?

Chen Ge left the third hut and headed for the last one. The hut was situated at the deepest part of the plantation. It seemed isolated from the other three, and it sat at least ten meters away. Chen Ge treaded along the muddy path before he reached the fourth wooden hut. There were two locks on the door, one rusted and the other new.

The new lock should be the old gentleman's doing. What kind of secret is this hut hiding?

Chen Ge walked around the hut, but the house did not even have a window. It was completely sealed. He leaned at the gap of the door and looked into the room. There were plenty of nails in the walls, and several hemp ropes hung from them. The corners were filled with spider webs.

There was something that looked like a medieval torture device in the middle of the room. It was built from several wooden parts, and it could shackle someone in the middle of it, to stop said person from moving.

“So painful...” Xu Yin’s voice came from the recorder. Different from the earlier voice, this time he sounded like he was warning Chen Ge.

This is weird. There’s not even a table or bed in this fourth hut; what is the purpose of this place?

Chen Ge took out his hammer, and after a short hesitation, he convinced himself not to smash the wooden door.

I shouldn’t act too brash; it might leave a bad impression.

The rain continued to pour, and lightning occasionally crossed the sky. Chen Ge did not find anything. He returned to his own room. There’s nothing here other than the bed. It’s hard to even block the door.

He was worried that someone might sneak into his room at midnight, so he moved the bed to the door. Looks like that’s all I can do.

Chen Ge curled up in bed, holding Xiaoxiao while he kept his eyes on the small window of the hut. The window was about the size of a basketball. Living inside the wooden hut felt like he was trapped inside a prison. If nothing happens, I’ll go ask the old gentleman for an explanation when the sun rises.

The rain picked up the pace outside the window. The wind caused the branches to creak, and their shadows looked like small hands reaching for the wooden huts. Chen Ge was looking through his phone at 2 am when he heard the sound of a door opening. It did not sound like it came from the hut next door but the third wooden hut.

The old man didn’t leave his room, and it was someone else who opened the door. Looks like the thing that he is afraid of has finally appeared!

Chen Ge took in a deep breath and grabbed the sheets that were covered with spider webs. Ignoring the dirt, he covered his body with them, only leaving his eyes outside. He kept his eyes on the window.

The rain kept falling, and it sounded like something was moving outside. The footsteps were rushed and irregular like a crowd was bustling to get somewhere. It’s coming!

There was scratching on the wooden door next door; it sounded like several hands were scratching the wooden door. It lasted for a whole minute ,and Chen Ge suddenly heard a woman's voice coming from the old man's hut. "Save me, save me."

The woman was crying, and from the voice, it sounded like she was young.

This is the thing the old man is afraid of?

Chen Ge's mind turned. The old man seemed to know that the woman would appear, so he pretended to be asleep inside the hut and did not respond in any way. The voice lasted for about ten minutes before it disappeared. The irregular footsteps began again, but this time, they were heading toward Chen Ge's hut.

The scratching sound began outside the door. The other party seemed to realize something because it increased its strength until the wooden door started to swing. Curling inside the covers, Chen Ge was thankful to have moved the bed to block the door.

The wooden door could not be opened, and the monster scratched madly. After several seconds, the woman's crying voice started. "Save me, save me, save me!"

The door continued to swing. Chen Ge reached into his backpack to grab the hammer. He was ready for the confrontation, but the voice only lasted for several seconds before it disappeared alongside the scratching noise.

I don't hear footsteps; she hasn't left yet! Such a cunning creature.

Chen Ge stayed inside the covers. He wanted to poke his head out to look at what was happening, but when his gaze swept across the window, his breath stopped.

A woman's head hung outside the window. Her eyes were completely white, and blood red spider silk dangled from her lips, intertwining with her black hair.

"Save me, save me!"

The woman opened her lips, and the blood red spider web climbed into the hut. Numerous hands gripped the edge of the window.

Chen Ge tossed the backpack aside after grabbing the hammer. He looked at the woman and walked toward her voluntarily!

The temporarily flash of light made the dangling head look even scarier. Several slender hands reached for the window, and the edge was covered with fingers—creepy! At this crucial moment, however, Chen Ge was thinking about something else.

The woman's face is similar to the spider monster drawn by Fan Yu. She doesn't look old; it fits perfectly. She should be Jiang Ling's older sister.

The wooden beam creaked. The hut seemed like it was going to crumble under the pressure and was shaking. The spider web crawled toward Chen Ge, and the woman squeezed her head into the room. "Save me, save me!"

"I did come here to save you!" Chen Ge did not dare wait anymore lest the situation got out of control. This was probably the first time the woman had heard such an answer. She stopped talking but continued to crawl into the room. Blood red web stuck to the wall, and the woman's face twisted with various emotions.

"You're Jiang Ling's sister; we've met before!" The woman was unfazed like she did not understand what Chen Ge was talking about. "Jiujiang's Children's Home! Don't you remember?"

Chen Ge was ready to call Xu Yin when he suddenly remembered something. He retrieved a plastic bottle from his pocket. "This is what your little sister gave me!"

There was a flattened spider inside the bottle. When he left the Children's Home, Jiang Ling had given Chen Ge the spider's body as a present. The hut stopped shaking. The woman's eyes that were lacking pupils looked at the plastic bottle. She stopped destroying the window. After looking at Chen Ge for a while, she leaned her head toward him.

The woman's neck was fair and sexy, but the length was double that of a normal human neck. Chen Ge twisted the bottle open and handed it to the woman with one hand. The scary monster finally calmed down. She kept her mouth closed like she was considering some stuff.

"I bear no ill will toward you. I just feel like you and your sister are very sad, so I came to help you." Chen Ge silently turned off the recorder. "Your sister has told me many things. I can understand your situation and your pain. Technically speaking, we're about the same; I too have survived some despairing ordeals."

Chen Ge had told Xu Yin the same thing before. He was not good at social interactions, so the only thing he could do was place himself in other people's shoes. The ghost and the human looked at each other with a wall between them.

"I'll help you clear your name, and I'll take care of your family!

"Why do you think I entered the mountain alone in the middle of the night?

"I just want to help you little sister, who wants to relieve her sister's pain!"

In the end, even Chen Ge believed in what he was saying. He looked serious and pain could be heard in his voice. The woman pulled back her head. She looked at Chen Ge with her head tilted. The expression on her face did not look that angry anymore, and in its place was confusion.

"I can help you put down your resentment and bring you away from this painful place. I can find you a new home to live," said Chen Ge earnestly.

The woman appeared like she had started to believe Chen Ge. She did not quite understand what Chen Ge was saying, but when he mentioned bringing her away, she shook her head.

"I know you love your sister and want to protect her, but do you know? It is because of your presence that your sister is bullied by other children and is seen as a monster, a patient. She cannot return to a normal life, love normally, and enjoy being loved.

"I can understand you, but others can't. Believe me, if you continue to shadow her, one day, you'll become her darkest nightmare!

“Do you want to hear from your own sister’s lips that she hates you?”

The woman felt like things had developed beyond her expectations. Her white eyes turned before she shook her head again.

“I will not force you to make any choice. I’m just telling you the truth. It’s for your own good.” Chen Ge’s voice had a trace of indescribable sadness in it. “The pain that you’ve suffered and might suffer in the future, I’ve experienced it before. If you find yourself with no place to go, you can come find me.”

Then, he made a brave move. He hid the right hand that was holding the hammer behind him and reached out with his left hand to the woman. “My little brother is your little sister’s best friend. If possible, how about we be friends as well?”

He did not purposely lower his voice. When he said so, there was a weird sound coming from next door. It sounded like someone had fallen from the bed. The woman’s eyes turned crazily. She leaned back, looking at Chen Ge’s extended hand.

“We can be friends.” Chen Ge walked forward, and the woman’s eyes turned even faster. She opened her lips to shoot a spider web at the door before retreating into the plantation and disappeared.

“Wait!” Chen Ge moved the wooden bed away and rushed out the door, but the woman had already disappeared. I still haven’t given her my address... Never mind, this was a good start. To employ her at the Haunted House, I still need to go through Jiang Ling.

The door next door flew open, and the old man rushed out, holding both the lamp and the hoe. He stood at the door, shaking. He was truly afraid of Chen Ge. The man did not get scared meeting a ghost but even opened the door to chase after it! What was with that expression of regret on his face?

Rain wet Chen Ge’s hair. He turned to look at the old man. Chen Ge’s gaze caused the old man to quiver with fear.

What is he going to do? Kill me to silence me? Also, where did he find that hammer that looks like a murder weapon?

“No, I was awoken by the words you said when you were sleeping. I’ll be going back to sleep since you’re fine.” The old man gripped the hoe tightly until the back of his hand was popping with veins. He was so nervous that his lips were quivering.

“You don’t need to lie to me anymore. This place is a crime scene. A family of four: the parents were poisoned, the older sister went missing, and I believe that the creature I just saw was that sister.”

Chen Ge thought about it before adding, “She disappeared into the peach plantation, and when I first met you, you were digging inside the plantation. If my guess is correct, you should have been searching for her body.”

The old man was stunned. After a long time, he said with a voice heavy with guilt and regret, “How did you find out?”

“Not only do I know that you’re looking for her body, I also know that her body is hidden under the tallest tree at the plantation.” Chen Ge pointed at the blood red spider web on the door. It was the clue left behind by the woman.

There was a line of words that was formed by the spiderweb, but weirdly enough, when the old man turned to look, the words dissolved into blood and washed away.

“You’ve been searching for Jiang Ling’s sister’s body; is it because you’ve done some wrong by her?” Chen Ge heard the guilt and self-reprimand in the old man’s words.

“Come in first.” The old man hung the lamp by the door. He was flustered because his secret of many years had been discovered. Chen Ge joined him in the second wooden hut. The old man released a long sigh. “Actually, I know who the killer is that poisoned the couple.”

“I can make a guess.” The old man peeled back the wooden bed, and there was a coffin hiding under it. It was smaller than a normal coffin, and it was pure black.

“The coffin was prepared for the Zhu family’s eldest daughter.” The old man pushed the coffin lid open and took out an incomplete plaque. It was carved with the name—Zhu Xinrou.

“Why did you prepare this coffin for her? Are you related to her disappearance?”

“The story starts a long time ago.” The old man looked at the plaque in his hand dumbly. “When I was a child, I heard from the adults that there was a Coffin Village deep in the Jiujiang mountains. The villagers there never interact with outsiders, and the villagers all have weird growths. They observe weird traditions like preparing a living coffin inside every home, but no one knows what they are for.”

Chen Ge could still follow the earlier half of what the old man said. Since the villagers did not mingle with outsiders, this led to consanguineous marriages ¹, and it was common for that to lead to abnormal growths. However, what the old man said next confused Chen Ge.

What is the meaning behind every family owning a living coffin? Placing a coffin inside the house is much too unlucky.

Chen Ge closed the door and softly asked, “Master Bai, is the village still there today?”

“Initially, I thought the village was just a rumor. After all, no one had seen it before, but one day, we were proven wrong.” The old man placed the plaque down and reached into the coffin to look for something. “About a decade ago, there was a tragedy that happened at Coffin Village, and several families managed to escape.

“The families who managed to escape looked just like normal, and they did not follow these weird rumored traditions, so Bai Family Village, which sits at the foot of the mountain, accepted them. However, no one expected that, within that same year, Bai Family Village would be struck with an epidemic as well.” The old man’s voice was steeped in regret. It felt like some of the villagers were against keeping these people, but the majority accepted them.

“Who can really tell? Those with the power to move migrated long after, and the village was practically deserted. However, the families from Coffin Village stayed and extended their roots there. In fact, later, they even changed the village name, and that is the Lin Guan Village you see today.” Master Bai finally found the thing he was looking for. It was a black outfit.

“This jacket was made for the Zhu family’s eldest daughter. Those who died outside was requested to wear black when they were moved into the coffin—that way, the blood wouldn’t be so obvious.”

There was something curious about the clothes that the old man was holding. The place where the back was located had four sleeves that were about a quarter the length of normal sleeves.

“You too realize how weird this outfit looks, right? But that’s what the Zhu family’s eldest daughter looked like.” The old man’s voice became smaller and smaller. Chen Ge could hear the pain in his voice. "The child's parents were one of the families who escaped from Coffin Village. Her mother already carried her at the time of their escape, so in other words, the child was Coffin Village's last 'seed'."

"This level of abnormality can no longer be explained by consanguineous marriage; something is very wrong with that Coffin Village!"

Chen Ge did not expect that would be the answer. Looking at the black jacket, Chen Ge could imagine what Zhu Xinrou looked like.

"I don't know much about the problem Coffin Village was facing; I only know that the child had a harsh life. Her parents were afraid to let other villagers see her, so when she was small, she would be wrapped in many layers even when the weather was scorching hot.

"However, the secret would inevitably be exposed when she got older. Therefore, the parents came up with the idea to lock the child inside their home, to prevent her from leaving."

The old man folded the outfit and placed it on the coffin lid. It would serve its purpose soon.

"Then, what happened?"

"Eventually, the villagers still found out about the Zhu family's eldest daughter, and to my surprise, the other families who escaped from Coffin Village did not come out to help the couple but even prepared to kill the poor child.

"They were close to holding a riot. In the end, it was Bai Family Village's people who stepped out to calm the crowd. They decided to chase the family out of the village. The Zhu family's father was a coffin maker, so he was good at carpentry. After leaving the village, he moved the family to this peach plantation and lived a fairly isolated life.

"Life went on as usual, and there was a rumor in the village that the family had given birth to a second daughter.

"Just as everyone thought that was the last that we would hear about them, the couple ran back to the village to warn everyone because their eldest daughter had gone missing. Yes, you heard right. They didn't come to ask for help to search for their daughter but came to warn us to be extra careful.

“A few days later, the eldest daughter was found in the mountain, and her parents dragged her home to be given heavy punishment. They strung her up and beat her.

“Every few months, the eldest daughter would escape, and she would be dragged back every time to be delivered corporal punishment whenever she was found.

“The wooden hut that was built at the deepest part of the plantation was used to lock up the eldest daughter. To punish her, her father even built a special device.

“The eldest daughter was treated as monster by the villagers, and her parents seemed like they wished she hadn’t been born. Only her younger sister was good to her and treated her as family.

“There was an abnormality about the youngest daughter too, but it was not as obvious as her sister, plus she was kind and cute. She was a well-loved child.” The old man sighed. “My land is just adjacent to the peach plantation, so I had many interactions with the little girl. She was never shy around strangers, and we became fast friend.

“One day, while I was working the field, the girl came crying to me, asking me to save her sister. I knew about her family’s condition, so I ignored her...”

At this point, the old man choked on his words like he could not continue anymore. His muddy eyes stared at the black jacket on the coffin, and his hands gripped his knees. “I should have helped her even though she was treated as a monster. The girl left crying. In the end, I couldn’t stop myself from worrying, so I came to the plantation to take a look.

“I saw the eldest daughter inside the fourth hut, and that was the last time I saw her. Her body was shackled to the wooden device, and her several arms were tied by ropes. There were plenty of wounds on her body, and she appeared to be dying.

“I couldn’t imagine what she had been through. She begged for me to save her, but I was too afraid and ran in a hurry.

“Several days later, I finally gathered enough courage to return, but the couple told me that their eldest daughter had escaped again.”

The old man kept his head lowered with he spoke. His words were filled with guilt and regret. After some time, he continued.

...

“I visited them again after one month to see whether they had found the girl. I knocked on the door for a long time, but there was no answer.

“I walked to the side of the hut and saw that the window had been shattered. I stood on my tiptoes and glanced through the window. The girl’s mother was collapsed by the window, and one of her hands was gripping the edge of the window. She seemed like she was trying to escape, but the room was built like a prison. The window was too small for her to fit through.

“I grabbed the hoe to smash the lock on the wooden door. The father had built a sturdy house, and I needed to knock several times before the door fell open. There was a faded stench inside the room, and the tables and chairs were all tipped over. The father was lying beside the door, and there was a deep scratch mark gouged into the door. It must have been painful for him.

“I called the police and the ambulance. When I was about to run back to the village to call for help, the door to the hut next door suddenly opened. It was the Zhu family’s second daughter. She walked out obediently from the house.

“This place was so isolated that normal people wouldn’t come here, and the villagers gave the family a wide berth, so no one would come to poison them for no reason and lock them inside the hut. There was only one possibility, the killer had to be the daughter.

“Suddenly, looking at the young girl, it felt like I could not recognize her anymore. Perhaps she saw her future in her sister, so she was just trying to protect herself. After all, the little girl had been born with a not-so-noticeable abnormality.

“However, a scarier thing happened. When the girl saw me, she did not panic or show fear. She walked over like normal. She raised her beautiful face and looked so innocent, but the words that left her lips still chill me to this day.

“She said them with a flat tone without any emotion. She told me that her sister had been buried inside the peach plantation several weeks ago, and she hoped that I would help her find her sister. I wanted to tell her, after one was buried in the ground, they were dead already. I tried to explain the concept of death to her, but she just smiled happily at me. She told me, after we die, we would change into something else, and her sister actually hadn’t left!”

The old man gripped his hands tightly. Thinking back to the day, his forehead still broke out in cold sweat. “I didn’t know how to communicate with the child, so I ran back to the village alone to call a few young men to guard the perimeter of the plantation while we waited for the police to arrive.

“Then there was a long investigation. I told the police there might be a body buried in the plantation, but the police couldn’t find Zhu Xinrou. They tried to use the little girl as an opening, but she refused to speak; it was as if she had turned mute overnight.

“Due to my guilt toward Zhu Xinrou, I didn’t expose her sister. Furthermore, from how I see it, their parents got what they deserve.”

There was a bitterness in the old man’s voice.

“The couple always hit their children, and when the escapees from Coffin Village wanted to execute Zhu Xinrou, they not only did not stop them but even gave their silent approval. If not for the people from Bai Family Village, a tragedy would have happened a long time ago.”

“Other than the little girl, you’re the biggest suspect, right? Didn’t the police say anything to you?” Chen Ge was calm; the case was as he expected.

“I tried to hide the little girl, but the police were not so easily fooled. They managed to discover many things from the little clues, and I believe that one of them by the name of Yan seemed to have figured out everything. However, he did not point it out.”

The old man looked at the coffin and reminisced about the past.

“He was not that interested in the poison case but showed more interest in Coffin Village. After giving my statement, I was free to go.

“The girl was taken away by the police, and I moved to the city to live with my son. However, whenever night came, I could hear Zhu Xinrou’s voice crying, ‘Save me, save me.’

“I asked my son and daughter-in-law, but they claimed that they didn’t hear anything. It was normal for the two adults, but my grandson who had just started kindergarten would point at the bottom of his bed or the cupboard and yell, ‘Spider! Spider!’

“We ransacked the house but could not find any spiders. I suspected it had something to do with Zhu Xinrou, so I bought the peach plantation and moved here. My aim is to find Zhu Xinrou’s body. I’m old now, with a few years ahead of me. I only have two wishes left in my life—one is the safety of my family, and the other is to find Zhu Xinrou.”

The old man held the black jacket and stood beside the coffin. He seemed to be ready. His voice lowered like he was talking to himself. “Whether she can be found or not, at least this coffin can be put into good use already.”

“Old master, don’t be that pessimistic. Now that we know the exact location of the burial site, we can report to the police tomorrow.”

Digging for body would disrupt the crime scene, so Chen Ge wanted to leave that to the police.

“That’s fine but I wanted to go and check. When the poison case happened, I told the police there is a body inside the plantation, but they couldn’t find it. I’m afraid of an accident.”

The old man grabbed the lamp and the hoe.

“You have a point.”

The rain outside had receded. Chen Ge grabbed his backpack and followed the old man to the largest tree that was at the middle of the plantation. They dug around it for a long time but could not find Zhu

Xinrou's body.

"This shouldn't be." Chen Ge believed Zhu Xinrou had no reason to lie to him. After all, he only wanted to help her.

"Sigh, looks like it's not here either." There was a thick disappointment in the old man's voice.

"Wait a minute." Chen Ge looked at the decaying tree, and he retrieved the hammer from his bag to smash at the trunk. The trunk wasn't that thick to begin with, and it shook from the force.

"The roots are dead; the trunk might be hollow."

The two worked together to loosen the soil around the roots and then pushed the trunk down. Underneath the cluster of roots was a hole filled with spiders' webs, and through it was something that looked like a woman's legs.

"This is it!"

Zhu Xinrou was buried headfirst, and the peach tree sealed off her body.

"Save me..."

When the body was found, Chen Ge's black phone vibrated. He took several steps back to look at the message.

"Congratulations, Specter's Favored! You've triggered the trial mission for a three-star scenario—Coffin Village! The scenario is extremely dangerous! Please decide whether to accept the mission within a week!"

Chapter 292: A Miracle Draw?

The night rain slipped through his collar and chilled Chen Ge's skin. He stood at the fringe of the plantation and stared at the message on his phone. In the slot where he could choose the Trial Missions, there was a new option—Coffin Village!

A three-star scenario is still too difficult for me. The Third Sick Hall is also a three-star scenario. Without Zhang Ya, I would have died then.

Since the difficulty was three-star, this meant that the scenario possibly had more than one Red Specter. Based on the information Chen Ge had, the only source of threat to a Red Specter was another Red Specter.

The Trial Missions given by the black phone are more than just a mission. I need to consider the other variables both in real life and in the future. I cannot rush into this. Chen Ge hesitated. Well, I have a week to think. Perhaps Zhang Ya will wake up in a few days. If that happens, I will not hesitate to take the mission.

He came to the decision and glanced at his shadow before shoving the phone into his pocket. I'll decide in five days.

Coffin Village was a new choice, but ultimately, it was a choice. Based on the accident revolving around Jiang Ling and Zhu Xinrou, Chen Ge had a feeling that this three-star mission would be as dangerous as Third Sick Hall. The key problem was that the village at the foot of the hill was called Lin Guan Village, but the mission venue given by the black phone was called Coffin Village. Based on what the old man had told him, Chen Ge suspected that the real mission venue was that mysterious village hidden in the depths of the mountain!

After unlocking such a scenario, it would be a real attraction at the Haunted House. After all, there were not that many Haunted Houses that used an abandoned haunted village as the theme. Once unlocked, it would attract many new visitors. To be honest, Chen Ge was intrigued. However, he was also cautious.

Coffin Village was situated deep in the mountain, not near anything. The place probably would not have telephone signal. If something dangerous happened to him then, seeking escape alone would be difficult.

The villagers of Coffin Village are born with abnormalities, and each family prepares a living coffin. This place is probably hiding plenty of monsters. Those who escaped to Bai Family Village looked normal, but their attitude toward those with abnormalities was curious. It was like they wanted to kill all of them.

Why did these people escape from the mountains? Was it really because of an epidemic?

Chen Ge could not understand why, but he was certain of one thing. Before entering Coffin Village, he needed to make friends with Jiang Ling. The girl was definitely not as innocent as she looked.

Both Yin Xiaoxiao and Fan Yu seem to like me. Perhaps I'm more natural around children than adults. It shouldn't be too hard to make friends with Jiang Ling.

The peach trees rustled in the dark. The old man used the hoe to pry the hole underneath the tree open. His motion was soft, and guilt hung on his face.

Chen Ge wanted to help but was rejected by the old man. He removed his jacket and hung it over an overhanging branch like he was trying to keep the body from being ruined by the rain. The old man moved the soil away, and the female body started to slide. When Chen Ge saw the small arms that grew under her normal arm, he did not feel so good. She was born into this body, so why did the people around her fault her for it?

Chen Ge thought back to Zhu Xinrou's childhood that the old man had described. No matter the weather, she would need to be wrapped up tightly, and when her abnormality was discovered, she had to face the bullying and mockery from people around her, and she had to apologize to them for something that she could not control.

She must have loved the winter when she was young.

When he saw Zhu Xinrou's full body, the shock could not be described by words. However, compared to disgust and isolation, what Chen Ge felt was pity. He had seen many monsters and many people who had seen many monsters, so he could see it from a more subjective perspective.

Chen Ge stood facing the wind to block the rain that threatened to pour into the hole.

Suddenly the black phone in his pants vibrated again. He took it out and the black phone said the affection Zhu Xinrou had for him increased from stranger to Slightly Favorable Opinion.

When I first saw Xiaoxiao, that was how she thought about me. Looks like this one also won’t attack me for no reason.

Without a taxi, leaving the isolated Lin Guan Village in the middle of the night was difficult, but Chen Ge already had a plan.

...

At 3:15 am, the police arrived at the scene. As the one who found the body, Chen Ge requested to follow the police to the station to give his statement. At 5:30 pm, Master Bai and Chen Ge were in Inspector Lee’s office.

Compared to the nervous Master Bai, Chen Ge was more relaxed. He even managed to get some shut-eye in the police car.

“Master Bai, just tell the truth, don’t be afraid. Our Jiujiang’s police are the best of the best; they will not purposely make things difficult for you.”

When Inspector Lee walked into the room, Chen Ge was trying to teach the old man how to face the police like he was an experienced master. Inspector Lee did not even know how to react. “This kid looks more and more like our informant as the days go by.”

“Uncle San Bao!” Chen Ge stood up when he saw Inspector Lee. “Tonight, we’ll trouble you again. The police’s work is never done, isn’t it?”

The old man beside him nodded. He was an honest man. He realized that they had reported the case in the middle of the night, and the police officers had trekked into the mountain before daylight. They were indeed hardworking. “Thank you for all the trouble you’ve gone through, sir.”

“It’s our job,” Inspector Lee told Master Bai with a smile then he turned toward Chen Ge. “Jiujiang is so big. Can you please wander out of our district once in a while? I beg you to leave the district for holiday—give yourself a break and give us a break.”

“Inspector Lee, you’re so nice to me. Don’t worry, my body can still stand it.” Inspector Lee looked at Chen Ge and wanted to stand up to smack him, but since an outsider was there, he held it in.

Inspector Lee rubbed his temples, and after taking their statements, he hastily called Da Yong to lead Chen Ge out. Da Yong, who had dark circles under his eyes, walked Chen Ge to the door. He gripped Chen Ge’s shoulder as he said, “Brother, Inspector Lee is a straight shooter, don’t mind him. But if you don’t feel like going on a holiday, how about staying home to relax for a few days?”

Da Yong sounded sincere; he was really looking out for Chen Ge. Accepting the kindness from Western Jiujiang’s police station, Chen Ge nodded and replied with sincerity, “Okay, I’ll try my best.”

Chen Ge jumped into a taxi and returned to New Century Park. The sun was just climbing over the horizon. Staring at the sun, standing before the Haunted House, Chen Ge suddenly took out the black phone.

I remember the effect of lucky draw during midday is not so good. They say a good morning is a good start to everything. Perhaps I might be lucky if I initiate the lucky draw now!

Chen Ge thought about and spent one hundred screams to spin the Wheel of Misfortune.

Chapter 293 - Drawer

Chapter 293: Drawer

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Sunlight fell on his face as Chen Ge stared at the phone screen. When the spinning needle slowed down, his heart tightened. One hundred screams was not a small number; if he won something useless from the lucky draw, it would have been such a waste.

I purposely picked early morning to do the draw. It shouldn't be a baleful Specter this time. Just from the perspective of probability, it's time for me to see what other things the Wheel has to offer, right?

...

Chen Ge could not remember the last time he had been so nervous. His heart rose with anticipation while he kept his eyes on the phone.

It stopped!

“Lucky Spin completed. Congratulations for having won a Rare Special Item: The Drawer that Cannot Be Opened (Chance of Winning: 1/100)!”

When he saw the message, Chen Ge sucked in a cold breath. A series of nouns appeared in his mind. Cursed Love Letter, Crying Tape, Drawer that Cannot Be Opened. They sound like they're from the same series!

Chen Ge continued to read.

“I felt like someone was watching me. He was probably hiding in this room. I searched all the corners that someone could hide in, but I could not find him. I grew afraid. Whenever I worked at the table with my back facing the living room, the feeling of being watched returned. He was spying on me. I was so afraid that he would sneak to stand behind me when I was not looking.

“To save myself, I hid a knife inside the desk's drawer. One night, the feeling of being watched reappeared. I couldn't wait any longer and pulled the drawer open to grab the knife. But when the drawer was pulled open, I realized the man wasn't hiding in the living room.

“Congratulations, Specter’s Favored! You’ve won another rare Baleful Specter.

“Warning! If you win five Baleful Specters from the Wheel of Misfortune, your title will be upgraded!”

The morning breeze touched his face, and the sun was warm. Chen Ge slowly moved his gaze away from the screen. Why is it a drawer this time?

When Chen Ge saw the name of the reward, he knew it was a baleful Specter. He had spun the wheel four times already and won three Specters. His title would be upgraded soon based on his luck.

I have a feeling I won't be seeing anything else in the wheel. Then again, how is a drawer going to help me fight the ghost stories society? Chen Ge felt like he needed a bigger backpack. The probability of drawing Zhang Ya's love letter was one in one thousand, and this drawer was one in one hundred. It should be weaker than Zhang Ya but slightly more powerful than Xu Yin. It's at least a rare item, which is better than nothing.

Chen Ge ran into the Props Room. When he earned any reward from the wheel, the item would appear inside the wooden box that his parents had left behind. Chen Ge kept the box inside the Props Room. However, Chen Ge searched for a long time, but he could not locate that drawer that could not be opened.

Could the black phone be referring to the actual drawers inside the Props Room?

He pulled open the drawer one by one and found a rental notice in one of them.

“A brand-new home! Upscale furniture! 46-inch LED television! Large sofa! Wooden floor! Can move in immediately!

“Rental: 900 per month

Chen Ge was made confused by the string of exclamation marks that were used on the flyer. Two bedrooms and one living room. The location is not bad. Normally, it should cost 3,000 per month, so why is it so cheap?

The notice looked old like it was from several years back, but even so, it should not cost 900 per month. There's something fishy about this room; it's probably haunted.

Although Chen Ge could not find the drawer, he did find this notice. Chen Ge understood what the black phone was trying to say.

This new friend requires me to go find him personally. Chen Ge leaned the hammer against the wall. He looked at the time. I can take a half an hour nap before the park opens at 9 am. In the afternoon, I'll go to Jiujiang's Children's Home to visit Fan Yu and Jiang Ling. On the way home, I'll go deal with the drawer.

After changing his clothes, Chen Ge prepared to feed the white cat. He tried to use the cat food as bait to train the white cat to find the food itself. He tried for long time, and he came to the conclusion that taking care of Xiaoxiao and the Pen Spirit was more convenient.

Since I can't train the white cat to look for its food on its own, perhaps I should train Xiaoxiao to feed it. Chen Ge rustled Xiaoxiao's head and suddenly felt like there were many abilities of his current employees that he had not yet discovered.

The Haunted House opened at 9 am, and the number of visitors was obviously bigger than before. Director Luo's promotional tactic was good, but Chen Ge believed that the power of his Haunted House played a bigger part.

To match the promotion, New Century Park had made a lot of adjustments. One could purchase tickets online, and the visitors could also share the link on social media to enjoy a greater discount. After the discount, New Century Park's ticket did not cost much anymore.

This meant that those who had tried one-star scenarios before invited their friend to challenge harder scenarios. After all, visiting a Haunted House alone was a vastly different experience to visiting with friends.

With the growing popularity, there were guides to Chen Ge's Haunted House appearing online. The number who cleared the two-star scenarios increased, but none of them had a perfect clear. The highest record was held by a group of students from Jiujiang Medical University and normal visitors. Twelve of them worked together to find 21 nametags in twenty minutes.

It was to Chen Ge's regret that when one group finally gathered to challenge a three-star scenario, the Third Sick Hall, they swiftly retreated when Chen Ge opened the door and they saw the mattresses that littered the corridor like mass graves.

Some visitors are already challenging the Third Sick Hall. Looks like I need to unlock a new scenario soon.

Chen Ge finally got time to rest when the park closed at 6 pm. After Xu Wan left, Chen Ge grabbed the rental notice and left New Century Park. He stopped at a supermarket to purchase a bunch of snacks and toys before arriving at Jiujiang's Children's Home. The president thought Chen Ge finally decided to bring Fan Yu away, so he came out personally to welcome Chen Ge.

Of course, he was disappointed by the result. Chen Ge carried the bunch of snacks into Fan Yu and Jiang Ling's room. The two kids, who did not know that he was going to visit them, were drawing quietly in the room.

Chapter 294 - Fan Yu's Warning

Chapter 294: Fan Yu's Warning

Red and black were still the only colors on the paper; Fan Yu's style had not changed.

"This is the room we're living in, and your sister was lying there at the time." Fan Yu's finger moved on the painting. It passed several black people before stopping at a black window. The nurse looked at Fan Yu's drawing, and she was confused. She was standing near the window, so if Fan Yu was right, the spider-like humanoid monster was just above her head.

"Ling Ling, let's go back to the room to play, okay?" The nurse squatted down and moved her gaze away from Fan Yu's drawing. Her rational mind told her that Fan Yu was drawing those thing from his imagination, but the more she looked at it, the more unsettled she became, as if there was a real monster beside her.

No wonder many mental doctors fall ill with psychological issues. After extended interaction with these abnormal patients, their worldview will slowly be twisted as well.

The nurse told herself that the source of her fear was her brain playing tricks on her. She tried to hug the little girl away, but the girl struggled; she did not want to leave Fan Yu's side.

"Let me, you should not be so rough with kids." Chen Ge placed the toys and snacks on the table before reaching for Jiang Ling's small hand.

"I'm rough?" The nurse stood to the side with a speechless expression. "I just think daily exposure to these scary drawings will have a negative effect on Jiang Ling's growth, so I'm trying to lead her away."

"Understood. Taking care of children is not easy." Chen Ge looked confident and mature. There was an indescribable warmth in his smile. The nurse glanced at him before turning her head away with a harrumph. Even so, her gaze would drift back to Chen Ge occasionally.

“Jiang Ling, I’ve met your sister,” Chen Ge said directly. He did not treat Jiang Ling as a little kid. “I just came back from Lin Guan Village, and I’ve gained a new understanding of what happened to you and your sister. After some time, I’ll go deep into the mountains to Coffin Village to investigate the truth!”

The girl stopped crying when she heard the terms Lin Guan Village and Coffin Village. Her watery eyes seemed to be conveying a special emotion; it appeared like fear and shock. Neither of them spoke, and the room suddenly turned quiet. The nurse grumbled to herself, “What is this man doing? Coffin? Investigation? Why did he start playing along? There has to be a limit; don’t lie to children!”

To the nurse’s surprise, Jiang Ling, who had been crying, suddenly reached out her hand to grab Chen Ge’s collar. “Don’t go.”

“Is it very dangerous there?” Based on what Master Bai had said, Jiang Ling also had some slight abnormality. Similar to her big sister, Jiang Ling was that village’s ‘seed’ and probably knew some secrets about it.

“Yes.” The girl nodded obediently. “My mother said that the village has many things similar to big sister, but they’re very bad.”

“Similar to your sister? What else did your mother say?”

“I know.” Chen Ge tussled Jiang Ling’s head. He picked her up from the floor and placed her on the chair. The girl did not resist.

“What are you two talking about?” Afraid that Chen Ge would say more weird things, the nurse immediately snatched Jiang Ling away. This time, Jiang Ling did not make a fuss, but before they left, she kept her eyes on Chen Ge.

Don’t touch the coffin—this is quite crucial information. Chen Ge closed the door and sat beside Fan Yu. Fan Yu had started his second picture. There was a black man who stood in the middle, and around him were plenty flying red shadows.

“Fan Yu, would you like to move to my Haunted House?” Chen Ge peeled open the bag of snacks and started eating. Fan Yu put his pencil down and turned to look at Chen Ge before nodding seriously.

“After I deal with this issue, I’ll come and fetch you, but I need you to promise me a few things.” Chen Ge leaned closer to Fan Yu. “I know that you have no psychological issue, and the reason you’re acting so strange is because you have an ability that others don’t. Actually, in comparison, you’re much smarter and more mature than people your age. I will not force you to go seek psychiatric help or medication. I just need you to do one thing for me.”

“I will enroll you into a normal school and give you a life similar to other children. I don’t ask that you score in class, but I hope you can make a friend your own age and walk out of the enclosed world that you’ve built for yourself.” Chen Ge was being sincere.

When he made this decision, he had already prepared the money required to start Fan Yu’s schooling. He was not one to splurge, but some expenses were necessary. Fan Yu did not reply. He lowered his head and started on his third drawing.

“Think about it.” Chen Ge looked at Fan Yu’s drawings but did not force him to decide. “Also, one last piece of advice. Stop looking like the world owes you money. You have to learn how to smile, like me. Do you know why I’m so popular? It’s because of my winning smile.”

The expressionless Fan Yu finally got tired of Chen Ge’s blabbering. He shoved his latest drawing into Chen Ge’s hands. He then lay down in bed and used the quilt to cover his face.

“This kid...” Chen Ge shook his head and looked at the drawing. He had thought that Fan Yu was just doodling, but Chen Ge could not move his eyes away when he saw what the drawing was.

There was a little girl drawn in black standing in the middle of the drawing. Behind the girl was a large red spider monster. This was similar to what Fan Yu had drawn earlier, but after a closer look, Chen Ge realized that there was a pair of crying red shadows twined around the girl’s left and right hands. They appeared to be her parents.

Is this a warning from Fan Yu?”

Chen Ge pocketed the drawing. He looked at the boy who hid himself under the quilt and sighed. He picked up his backpack and left the Children's Home.

The girl is not as she appears. Chen Ge called for a taxi and gave the address on the rental notice. After taking this drawer, I'll need to rest for the night.

He called the phone number given by the notice, but the number had already been disconnected. Since he could not contact the person who issued the flyer, he had to visit the place personally. Third Hospital's Staff Residence was part of the old city. The place had low population, and the buildings were generally low.

Chen Ge found the place at around 9 pm. The area was quiet, and most of the streetlights were not functioning.

Third Hospital's Staff Residence looked old and battered. There was not even a guard post. Chen Ge glanced at the rooms on the first floor and realized that none of the rooms there had a room number.

The rental notice only stated Room 304. How am I supposed to find it?

Chen Ge stood at the entrance holding the backpack. He wanted to find someone to ask for direction. Ten minutes later, a high-schooler entered the area on an e-bike.

"Hello, do you mind telling which building Room 304 is in?" Chen Ge spoke when he was quite far away. He did not want to spook the kid.

"Room 304? That sounds familiar." The high-schooler stopped the bike and pointed toward the residential area. "Should be somewhere inside, I'm not sure."

"I have another question if you don't mind. Has any weird stuff happened in this residential area before?" Chen Ge tried to make himself look as friendly as possible. "After all, the Electrical Plant's Residence is as old as this place, but theirs is livelier and more exciting."

"I don't think so..." The kid looked at Chen Ge guardedly, thinking that the man was weird.

"Yawen! Who are you talking to?" A middle-aged woman's voice came down from the third floor. Chen Ge turned to look and saw a woman in pajamas looking at Chen Ge with caution and waving for the high-schooler to come home.

"Coming." The high-schooler pushed off and quickly left.

"Wait a minute!" Chen Ge did not want to miss this opportunity. He was there to take the drawer, so he did not want to make things so complicated. He then yelled at the lady upstairs, "Sister, do you know which building has Room 304?"

He shouted that once, but after that, all the lights in the building switched off simultaneously.

"Is it that serious?" Only the middle-aged woman's home had its lights on.

"Walk down there. The third floor of the first building on your left." The lady's face was dark, and when she returned to her own home, the light was turned off as well.

What is with this reaction? Chen Ge did not leave instantly but quietly tailed the high-schooler. The kid, who did not know anything, parked his bike and went up the stairs.

"Mum, what are we having tonight?"

The kid was opening the door when the middle-aged woman could be heard yelling, "Don't touch the door! Stomp your feet on the ground before coming in!"

"Mum, what are you saying? I just came back from a long study session, and I'm tired."

"Stop arguing with your mom!" The woman's voice suddenly turned up like she was incredibly angry. It shocked Chen Ge, who was hiding on the second floor. The kid followed the order unwillingly. Then the woman opened the door, her lips mumbling, "The child doesn't know anything. Please forgive him..."

She repeated it several times before allowing the kid to enter the room. "Remove your clothes. I'll wash them for you."

"But just I changed this morning!"

"No dinner if you don't change."

The door on the third floor slowly closed. Chen Ge walked out from the stairwell, thinking to himself, What's with the people at this place?

The chance of winning the drawer was one in one hundred. Xu Yin's was three in one hundred, so technically speaking, the drawer was just slightly stronger than Xu Yin. However, it should not be a Red Specter. So be it, I need to get the thing before night falls.

Probably due to his shout earlier, the number of rooms with their lights on had decreased dramatically. Chen Ge found the building that the woman mentioned and did not sense anything weird when he stepped into it. The place looked old and had been abandoned for a long time already. He came to the third floor, and there were two adjacent rooms. Neither of them had a room number, but the one of the left had a contact number pasted on the door.

Is this Room 304?

Chen Ge took out his phone to call the number. It only rang twice before it was picked up. “Thank you for calling Yi Ju Real Estate, how can we help you?”

“It’s like this. I’m interested in a room you’re renting in Third Hospital’s Staff Residence. I’m in the area, so if it’s not too much trouble, can I look at the place tonight?”

“Please wait a minute. I’ll ask our agent who is responsible for that area.”

After a while, the reply came. “He just got off from work, but I’ve reported your situation to him. He’s currently heading your way. This is his number...”

“Thank you.”

Around ten minutes later, a man in a black shirt, holding a suitcase, stopped outside the building. He looked around thirty and very friendly. “This is such a coincidence. My home is nearby. If you want to look anywhere else, you’d have had to wait until tomorrow.”

“Sounds like fate if you ask me.” Chen Ge chuckled, thinking about how he could shuttle the drawer away without the man noticing. “How about we go take a look at the room?”

“Sure.” The man was obviously scared, looking at the darkened stairwell, but he did not show it on his face. “Come with me.”

He took out his phone to use as a flashlight and started his sales pitch. “This area is not bad. It has plenty of nearby amenities like a hospital, school, library, and so on. Plus, the price is cheap.”

He took out a cluster of keys when they reached the third floor. With the aid of Yin Yang Vision, Chen Ge realized that every key was taped with a number. The man prepared to use the key to Room 305.

Hearing that, the keys almost fell from the man’s fingers. He turned to laugh drily at Chen Ge. “This is Room 305. Room 304 is haunted, so how could we...”

“I want Room 304. I don’t mind its history as long as the price is right. Bring me to Room 304,” Chen Ge said firmly. The man gripped the key to Room 304, but he did not dare open the door.

The stalemate continued for a long time before he moved to the door with a saddened face. “If I knew you’re interested in Room 304, I wouldn’t have come.”

He pushed the key into the door. “The price for Room 304 is half of Room 305, but I have to tell you some things just in case you complain to me later.”

“What is it?” Chen Ge focused; he had a feeling that he had won an unusual drawer.

“The first tenant of Room 304 was a gambler. He put the house on sale to clear the debt that he owed the loan sharks, but it was not enough. In the end, the man jumped out from the window of his room and died.”

“That’s the cause of it being haunted?”

“When I tell you the truth, you won’t want to rent this place anymore.” The man pushed the door open. “He committed suicide after midnight. When the police arrived, they realized that one of his arms had been chopped off, but even now, no one knows where the missing arm is.”

Chapter 296 - You Want to Scare Me?

Chapter 296: You Want to Scare Me?

If it was just a suicide, it would not have been so scary, but the dead man's detached arm still had not been found. No one dared move in—what if an arm poked out at them when they were cleaning the place?

"I still want to take a look," Chen Ge said calmly, like this was nothing serious to him.

"Okay." There was a patch on the back of the man's shirt that was wet, drenched by cold sweat. "Actually this place is not bad. The same model at Electrical Plant's residence is four times the price."

After the door opened, a weird stench flew out—it smelled like mildew. The man tried the light in the living room, but perhaps because it had not been used for a long time, he had to work for it for some time before the light came on. The light banished the darkness and seeped into the room. Chen Ge walked into the room. He did not want to do anything extra; his purpose was to look for that drawer.

The black phone provided a description of the drawer. It sounds like it belongs to the desk in the bedroom.

Before the man standing at the door could stop him, Chen Ge had already entered the bedroom. However, he searched both bedrooms, but there was no table, only a large dresser.

The description is different to what's described by the phone.

Chen Ge walked out from the bedroom and glanced at the agent with confusion. "Brother, are you sure this is Room 304?"

"That is what it says on the key; it can't be mistaken." The man showed Chen Ge the key. There was no desk in the bedroom, but there were tables in the other areas of the place. It'll take time for me to go through them. Will I really need to stay here tonight?

“What do you think of the room? We can still discuss the price.” The man was afraid; he stood at the door and did not dare enter.

“I like this room a lot. Can you let me stay here for a night?” Chen Ge reached into his backpack to search for something.

“A stayover? We don’t provide that service. If you’re not satisfied, how about we look at the room next door?”

“There’s no need; I want this one.” Chen Ge interrupted the man. He took out his ID and 500 from his bag. “500 for one night, and this is my ID. I will not destroy anything in the house. If nothing weird happens tonight, I’ll take this place.”

The agent had not seen this kind of customer before. “I’m sorry, but the company has rules that I need to follow.”

“Are many people asking for this place? If you don’t sell it to me, this room will remain vacant for who knows how long.” Chen Ge finally managed to persuade the man to give him the key.

“There are security cameras around the residential area. If you need help, just run out. I’ll be back tomorrow morning at 8 am.”

“You’d better come sooner because I have something else to do in the morning.” Chen Ge sent the agent out. Looking at the key in his hand, he felt something was off. The key itself was old, but the tape was new.

This is weird.

A sound in the kitchen interrupted his thought. He took out the hammer from his backpack. Chen Ge walked into the kitchen and saw that the cleaver on the chopping block had fallen into the sink.

Where was this cleaver earlier?

He picked up the cleaver to take a look. Then he opened the gas stove. Holding the wooden handle, he seared the cleaver. Baleful Specters should be afraid of fire, right?

The bright knife was burned until it was charred. Chen Ge then dropped it back into the sink.

There are so many drawers, but one of them has to be one I’m looking for.

He turned on all the lights in the room and started to search for that drawer that could not open. Night had fallen, and the residential area was freakishly quiet, like none of the rooms were occupied.

One hour passed without Chen Ge noticing. Chen Ge sat in the living room, looking at the drawers that had been pulled out.

All of the drawers in this place can be opened. There's nothing out of the ordinary with them.

Leaning against the sofa, Chen Ge felt drowsy. He had not had a good rest in a long time already.

This is different from my previous draws at the wheel. Is it because the Specter is particularly powerful? Or does it have a special power?

He placed the recorder beside him and fell asleep on the sofa, hugging the hammer. He was about to close his eyes when his phone rang.

The real estate company? Why are they calling? Chen Ge answered the call, and it was the familiar female voice. "Hello, I'm sorry but I just received the news that the agent responsible for Third Hospital's Staff Residence just ran into an accident while he was on his way to find you. He's currently unavailable to provide his service. If you're still interested in that room, please come back in three days."

Car accident? Chen Ge lost his desire to sleep instantly. The agent had gotten into an accident, so who was the man who had shown him the room? A baleful Specter that haunted the residential area or the agent's soul? Either way, the result was the same; he had met a ghost!

"Can you describe the appearance of the agent?"

"I'm sorry, but I'm only responsible for customer service. I'm not really familiar with the individual agents in Jiujiang."

"You're not familiar with your own company's employees?" Chen Ge looked at the key in his hand. This key had been left behind by the soul. The more he looked at it, the more off he felt about it. The tape was new, but the key old. He pulled the tape back, and there were three crooked numbers written underneath—305.

The room that the man tried to recommend me earlier was the real 304! The one that he wanted me to buy is the real haunted room!

Chen Ge's lack of rationality surprised the man. Normally, people would avoid haunted places, but that 'customer' was the complete opposite and was adamant about entering the haunted room!

“I’m sorry, is there anything else I can help you with?” The woman on the phone was very nice, and her tone was polite.

“Since you’re with the agency, you should have the information on the house, right? Can you help me check the information on the former tenants of Room 304? I know it’s haunted, but I’m interested in it because the price is low, so there’s no need to hide anything from me.”

“Okay,” The agent answered quickly. “There were three former tenants in Room 304. The third tenant was a gambler, and the loan sharks chopped one of his arms off because he didn’t have the money to pay his debt. In the end, he was cornered and jumped off the building. The second tenant was an English teacher who mysteriously disappeared in the house. The first tenant...”

Chen Ge focused on the phone when there was a knock on the door.

Someone is outside? At this time? Chen Ge grabbed the hammer and muttered into the phone, “Please snap a picture of that information and send it to me. I’m definitely taking this place!”

Chen Ge hung up the phone and gripped the doorknob. With his right hand on the hammer, his left hand pulled the door open a sliver. The light filtered into the corridor, and the simple door seemed to split the world in two.

“Who are you looking for?”

...

There was a thin, lanky man standing at the door. His eyes were sunken, and his skin looked rough. He seemed tired.

“I came to give you a warning.” The man kept a fair distance from the door. “Don’t stay here overnight. If you have to stay within this residential area, do not stay on this floor.”

“Don’t mind why. Just don’t stay here overnight.” He coughed twice and pulled his hand out of his right pocket to put over his mouth like he did not want people to hear him. He whispered, “Someone went missing on this floor before.”

“Went missing?” Chen Ge was reminded of the information given to him by the agent. The second tenant was an English teacher and mysteriously disappeared inside the room.

“How do you know about all this? Are you also a tenant here?” Chen Ge exposed half of his body while he kept his hand that held the hammer behind the door.

“Yes, I live upstairs, and I overheard your conversation with yourself earlier.” The man was wearing a dusty jacket and kept both his hands in the pockets. He looked physically weak and teetered unstably. “I thought you'd leave in the end, but you ran into the room. You look like you're planning to stay overnight, so I came to warn you."

"Conversation with myself?" Chen Ge gulped. Other people would have start to panic by now. "Have similar events happened at this building before?"

"Yes, but normally people come during broad daylight. This is the first time someone has visited at night."

"What happened to those people?"

"Some went mad, and others stayed as tenants. Then again, I'd say those that went mad got lucky. After all, the tenants either committed suicide or disappeared."

"Went mad? Disappeared? Why are the endings so different?"

"There's apparently a reason." The man signaled for Chen Ge to come closer with his right hand, but Chen Ge did not follow his order. In the end, the man had to lean closer to Chen Ge to whisper, "I heard that those who went mad found this place through the actual agent while those that stayed as tenants called the ghost agent's number."

"Ghost agent?" Chen Ge was reminded of the girl's voice who remained the same throughout their conversation, the only defining feature about her voice being the politeness. "What is a ghost agent?"

"This story began several years ago. There was a murder in this Room 304 next to you. The victim was a real estate agent, but even now, the murderer hasn't been caught." The man took in a deep breath and turned his attention upstairs. Other than Chen Ge's room, every corner was shrouded in darkness, so Chen Ge had no idea what he was looking at.

After checking their surroundings, the man continued. "Ever since his death, this room has been vacant, but weird things kept happening. People would come to see the room, but when asked where they got the information, their answers would be different. Some said they saw it online, others said roadside advertisement, but some of them could not even remember how the information got into their mind."

The man paused while he looked at Chen Ge with confusion. "By the way, how did you find out about this place? And... how did you get the key to the room next to Room 304?"

“About 30? Black shirt?” the man mumbled before his eyes widened. “He’s returned!”

After saying that, the man rushed upstairs like he was running for his life.

“Hey! Finish your story!” The man was too suspicious, and Chen Ge did not intend to let him slip away. He grabbed the hammer and chased after the man. It was unclear whether the man saw the hammer or just focused on running upstairs. The building was old, and it only had eight floors. When Chen Ge chased the man until the fifth floor, Chen Ge’s phone started to ring.

“Stop!” Chen Ge did not allow himself to get distracted. He rushed until the sixth floor when he finally caught up to the thin man. “Why did you run?”

“The agent was thirty plus! When he died, the white formal shirt that he was wearing was dyed black by blood!” The man was panicking, and the fact that Chen Ge was holding a scary-looking hammer did not help.

It’s like I thought. Looks like the agent I saw was the first tenant. Now the issue is whether the female agent is same or not. Chen Ge’s phone was still ringing, and he pulled it out. The thin man leaned against the railing like he did not want to be close to Chen Ge.

The screen unlocked, and it was the information sent by the agent. The first picture recorded the information on the third tenant, the gambler. Chen Ge swiped the screen to the bottom, and the agent was nice enough to include the gambler’s picture.

“Tired-looking, sunken eyes, and slight of frame!” When he saw the picture, Chen Ge’s body moved faster than his mind. He picked up the hammer and swung at the railing. When he saw the thin man, Chen Ge already had this speculation. No matter what the man did, he only used his right hand and kept his left hand in his pocket. At the time, Chen Ge had suspected that this man had no left hand!

The hammer smashed the railing, and the thin man evaded to the side as his body twisted in unnatural angle. He did not fight back. With a weird smile on his face, he jumped over the railing and disappeared to the third floor.

He's probably run back to Room 304.

When Chen Ge left the room, he did not take the recorder with him. To prevent further accident, he decided to return to the third floor first. Chen Ge felt better when he was inside Room 305, and he turned on the recorder.

This building sure is interesting. Everyone looks like they're telling the truth, but everyone is lying. I can't trust anyone. Chen Ge thought back to his conversation with the thin man. The gambler kept persuading me to leave. Why is that?

After picking up all his stuff, Chen Ge took out his phone and looked at the screen.

The agent only gave me the information on the gambler but not the other two tenants. Did she do that on purpose? What is the connection between these people to the drawer? Chen Ge shook his head. Looks like the Baleful Specter I've won this time is rather unique!

He called the agent's number. He held the hammer in one hand, and his other held his phone to his ear.

"Good evening, the information has been sent to your phone. How can I help you?" The voice on the phone was still very polite, but the time was already close to midnight!

"Yes, I still have one last question to ask."

"Please, go ahead."

"I'm sorry, but are you a ghost?"

Chapter 298 - Videotape

Chapter 298: Videotape

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge's directness surprised the lady on the phone—she did not expect a question like that.

“Are you a ghost?” Chen Ge repeated the question, and he sounded easy on the phone, like he was asking if a friend had eaten dinner yet.

...

The woman's breathing turned urgent, and she felt weirdly agitated. The line started to break up, and the signal suddenly worsened.

“I'll take that as a silent admission.” Chen Ge leaned against the door with his phone on his ear. He looked like he was chatting with an old friend.

“I...” The woman wanted to say something but eventually held back. She could not understand how Chen Ge managed to make a ghost feel uncomfortable. Shouldn't a person's first reaction be screaming as the phone drops from their hands when they realize they are conversing with a ghost?

Even if you don't do that, at least end the call with shaking fingers! Why aren't you doing that but instead asking those questions?

The call was abruptly ended.

Hearing the dial tone, Chen Ge was not surprised. Looks like she was angered after her lie was exposed.

He pocketed the phone and stood in the darkened corridor. There are three tenants that found their tragic end inside Room 304. I've met the gambler and the agent, so the woman on the phone is probably the second tenant, the English teacher.

It was not yet midnight, and Chen Ge had already met three different ghosts. He felt this was only the beginning.

I wonder what kind of weird creature I'll meet after midnight. Looks like I need to be prepared.

Chen Ge grabbed his backpack and headed for Room 304.

Instead of waiting for them to come to me, I should be more active.

The light from Room 305 fell into the dark corridor. In Third Hospital's Staff Residence, only Chen Ge's room had the light on.

Most of the tenants live in the two buildings in front. Looks like this block is a no-go zone for them.

Chen Ge grabbed the lock to Room 304. He shook on it twice, and it broke off. Perhaps due to the many murders, the police had broken down the lock many times, so there were obvious signs of tempering on the edge of the lock.

Breaking down the door is too rude and not something I like to do, but there's no better option now.

Chen Ge made his aim and swung at the door.

Bang! Bang!

Several hits later, the lock yielded under Chen Ge's assault. Chen Ge fitted the handle of the hammer into the open sliver and pried the door open. No one came to stop me even though the commotion was so loud. Looks like the ghosts here have left quite an impression on the nearby tenants.

After turning on the light in the living room, Chen Ge realized how weird Room 304 was. The furniture, like the sofa and dining table, was all normal, but everything that could be opened like drawers and dressers were all sealed up with wooden planks.

Now this looks like a haunted house.

Perhaps due to the old wiring, the light kept flickering, and it made one uneasy.

Walking to stand in the middle of the room, Chen Ge touched the back of the sofa. The place had been vacant for a long time, but there was no dust. It was as if there were daily cleaners.

Two bedrooms and one living room. The layout is similar to Room 305, but the stuff is much older.

Chen Ge walked to the shoe rack. Looking at the nails on the boards, he was curious. Why are all the racks and drawers sealed? Are they hiding something scary?

With a swing of his hammer, the shoe rack was opened. It was holding several pairs of shoes, nothing interesting about them. Were these left behind by the victims?

Slippers, high heels, and boots were shoved inside the rack. Chen Ge tossed the shoes out, and he was surprised to find out they had all been slashed through with a knife. Knife marks? Who did this?

Chen Ge could not find anything on the shoes, so he looked elsewhere. The living room was small, and across from the sofa was a television cabinet. Interestingly enough, even the drawers under the television were sealed up by planks.

The thing that I won is called the Drawer That Cannot Be Opened. Does this mean, after I try all the drawers, the one that cannot be opened is mine?

No one could give Chen Ge an answer, so he could only try it out himself. Due to the positioning of the cabinet, Chen Ge took some time before he managed to pry the planks off.

He pulled open the drawer, and videotapes that were kept inside black boxes fell out.

Videotapes? How old are these?

He found a rather new-looking one from the bunch and slotted it into the videotape player situated under the television. He plugged the machine in and switched it on. As the television came on, a shadow flashed across the screen.

Was that a shadow? Something just ran past me? Chen Ge stayed on high alert. He knew the gambler who had lost his left hand had run into Room 304, and he was hiding in one of the corners.

The videotapes were from many years ago, and the quality was bad. Adding to the problem was the television; it was filled with white pixels and stripes. Then again, the fact that the antique was working was already a miracle. Chen Ge ignored the details and squatted down before the television to watch the video.

The video was showing the image of the room. The video was still, so the person who recorded it had probably fixed the camera to a certain corner.

What is he trying to record?

After one minute, the video had not changed. Chen Ge was getting impatient, he used the remote to fast forward. The first half of the video was normal, but the latter half was weird.

The latter half was shot at night, and the video looked similar to what Chen Ge was experiencing in real life. The light was on in the room, and the camera was placed on top of the television. The camera was facing the living room, so the angle included the entire living room and the two bedrooms.

The whole drawer is filled with videotapes, meaning the person recording them has been recording this home for a long time already.

Chen Ge could venture a guess at the person's intention. They had probably experienced something supernatural, and to prove the point, they wanted to use the video camera to record everything.

Didn't they know curiosity kill the cat? He should have moved when he noticed something is wrong with the place.

Chen Ge hugged the recorder to his chest and continued watching the video.

The video quality was horrible. When Chen Ge reached the end of the video, the image that remained the same suddenly changed.

The lights in the video, like in reality, started to flicker, and after each flicker, the closed bedroom door in the video opened little by little.

The camera was placed on top of the television, meaning the video on screen was the image that Chen Ge would see if he turned around. With the flickering light, squatting before the television, Chen Ge felt as if he was not looking at a recorded video but what was happening behind him.

The lights continued to flicker, and the flickering in real life started to match the tempo of the flicking in the video. When the light dimmed in the video, it also did in reality. Then, the light came back at the same time.

The video is influencing reality? No, the ghosts are playing tricks on me.

Chen Ge did not turn around but kept his focus on the bedroom door in the video that was slowly opening. Whenever the light turned down, the door would open several centimeters. When the light flickered for the seventh time, Chen Ge saw a head of black hair poking out from behind the door.

The hair is long, should be a woman. Could she be the second tenant?

Chen Ge still did not turn around, but his grip on the hammer did tighten. When the light flickered for the eighth time, the hair swayed in the wind, and half an exposed face reached out into the living room. Chen Ge stared at the face in the video, and he counted silently. The time between each flicker seemed to be constant.

When the face in the video was about to show itself, the light in the video and in reality suddenly shut off at the same time!

The hammer landed on the soft cushion, and Chen Ge looked around him. The room was dark, and something seemed to be moving.

Several seconds later, the light came back on. Nothing changed in the living room in reality, but the bedroom door was open, just like the one in the video!

Chen Ge turned back to look at the television. The screen was white; the video had ended. Kicking the sofa aside, Chen Ge looked at the slowly turning tape. When Xu Yin's voice returned, he moved toward the bedroom slowly. The wooden door was half open, and there were several strands of long hair on the floor. Chen Ge picked them up and rubbed them between his hands.

"If you are intent on trying my patience like this, I might just torch the whole place down."

Walking into the bedroom, Chen Ge was greeted by a mess. Various trash littered the ground, and there were wooden planks on the dresser. Even the bedside table was sealed up.

Everything that can be opened is sealed up. What is this furniture hiding? Which tenant left the videotapes behind?

Looking at the sealed furniture, an idea appeared in Chen Ge's mind. Did the tenant find the reason of the haunting from the videotapes, so he closed up all the drawers and dressers?

The more he thought about it, the more convinced he became. The tenant probably saw the ghost crawl out from a piece of furniture, and to prevent that from happening again, they sealed up all the furniture that could be opened.

Chen Ge stood in the middle of the bedroom, and he thought of another problem. Counting that female ghost, I've met three ghosts already. All of them can move through the room freely, meaning sealing up the furniture was pointless. This means that the tenant probably missed a drawer, and this drawer is probably the one I'm looking for.

He placed Xiaoxiao on the bedroom door to act as a lookout, and he used the hammer pry open all the drawers and dressers. All the furniture is sealed tight. Could the drawer be in the other bedroom?

Xiaoxiao collapsed onto the ground like she was trying to crawl out. When Chen Ge picked her up, he realized her hand was pointing outside of Room 304. Initially, he did not pay it much attention, but when he passed the living room, he glanced out the door accidentally.

The doors to both Room 304 and 305 were not closed, and in the middle of the two rooms stood an old woman with a hunched back. The old lady did not say anything as she faced Room 304. The wrinkles on her face were like tree rings; she looked quite scary. Chen Ge stood where he was and unconsciously moved the hammer to hide behind him.

“Elder, are you a tenant here?” Chen Ge kept his voice calm and collected. The old lady did not answer Chen Ge. She was not even looking at Chen Ge but at the drawers that Chen Ge had pried open with force.

An old lady standing quietly in the dark, there had to be something weird about her. If this was someone younger, Chen Ge would not have hesitated to reward them with a hammer to the face.

“Was it you who opened these drawers?” The lady’s voice was hoarse. It sounded like tree bark grinding against each other.

“Yes, I plan to buy these two rooms, and now I’m arranging the furniture.” Chen Ge kept his gaze on the old lady. If she did anything suspicious, he would summon Xu Yin.

“You’d better leave immediately. Find a good doctor to look at you—perhaps you’ve been haunted by her already.” The old lady gave Chen Ge this advice before turning to walk away. She moved slowly, her footsteps wobbly.

“Haunted by her? What do you mean?” Chen Ge followed her to the stairs. The old lady pointed at Room 304. “Before this, an English teacher stayed in that room. She was very pretty and had a sweet voice.

“In the end, she was killed by her lover. She was chopped into pieces and hidden inside the drawers. She was discovered a long time after her death, so she bore great resentment. She haunts everyone who lives here.”

“English teacher?” Chen Ge realized that the old lady’s story matched what he knew. She probably was not lying, but the problem was... why would an old lady stand outside the door in the middle of the night?

“Elder, why would you tell me all this?” Chen Ge stood under the light and did not follow her down the stairs. He asked, “Can you tell me how you know these things?”

“I live in the next building; the English teacher was my daughter.” The old woman’s face fell, and even her tone turned sad.

“You’re the third one. She has done many bad things, and I don’t want her to do it anymore.

“Leave, don’t stay in that room any longer.”

The old woman continued down the stairs. She walked slowly like she was waiting for Chen Ge to catch up.

“But I still have a question.” Chen Ge was about to ask who the other two victims were when he received a message on his phone. It was from the female agent.

“Do you know why the tenants at that residential area don’t dare make any noise and turn off their lights so early at night? There’s an old lady haunting the place, and she tries to find her way home by following the light and noise!”

After reading the message, Chen Ge raised his head. The old woman stood at the corner of the stairwell. The wrinkles on her face were folded together, and she said in a creepy voice, “Come with me. That room is very dangerous.”

Chen Ge’s gaze flitted between the phone and the old lady. Chen Ge suddenly dropped his backpack as a story slowly formed in his mind. None can be trusted, but there’s no need for me to trust anyone.

He summoned Xu Yin and tightened his grip around the hammer. “I’m just here to retrieve the thing that I’ve won. I’m really not interested in your stories.”

Xu Yin slowly climbed out from behind Chen Ge, and the pair rushed toward the old lady in unison. The wrinkles on her face folded together.

When the old lady saw Chen Ge exit Room 304 and enter the shadow, her dry lips curved into a smile. However, before she could do anything, a man wearing a half red shirt suddenly rushed at her!

“So painful!”

The wounds on his body oozed blood, and the man landed on all fours like he was some feral animal. The smile froze on the old lady’s face, and with a speed that did not match her age, she morphed into a shadow and escaped down the stairs.

“Didn’t you ask me to follow you?” The hammer landed heavily at the spot where the old lady had stood a moment ago, and the sound echoed throughout the building.

“None of you are escaping me tonight!”

Xu Yin and Chen Ge gave chase after the old lady.

The stairwell was filled with the sound of rushing footsteps. The steps were like endless, and this was the first time the old lady had felt that the stairwell was so long; this was probably the scariest night she had ever experienced.

The exit was just before her.

The shadow ran with all her energy. She was just a normal lingering spirit; her soul was lost when she saw Xu Yin with half a red shirt.

Xu Yin was slightly faster than the shadow. Just as the shadow was about to escape, he managed to grab its arm. The shadow shuddered, and without hesitation, it tore its arm off and rushed out of the building, disappearing into the darkness.

Looks like I need more training—I was running too slow. Chen Ge sighed with regret.

When he turned to look at Xu Yin, he realized that the broken arm had already disappeared, and the blood stain on Xu Yin's shirt seemed to have grown.

Perhaps it won't be a terrible thing if Xu Yin becomes a Red Specter. Chen Ge looked down at the dark residential area. Since we've met, I can't just sit idle. After I find the drawer, I'll come back to deal with the old lady's lingering wish.

Calling Xu Yin, Chen Ge returned to the third floor. He called the agent's number. The call was not answered, so Chen Ge messaged the number asking for a reply. He wanted to 'thank' the agent in person for her reminder. Why isn't she taking my call?

Chen Ge held the phone in his left hand and dragged the hammer back into Room 304 with his right. I've inspected the living room and the bedroom closest to the door. The only remaining room is the deepest bedroom. These spirits have been trying to stop me from going there.

The last room was locked from within, but this was solved by a swing of the hammer. The bedroom is locked from the inside; does this mean the gambler's missing arm is inside?

Chen Ge cracked the door open and finally gained entry to the last room. The bedroom was tiny; a large bookshelf and a desk took up half of the space, and the remaining half was occupied by a rusted mini-fridge and a tattered sleeping mat.

The edges of the mat are frayed, looks like the owner used this mat often, but there's a bed in the other bedroom, right? Why did he insist on staying in this room? Was he afraid of something?

The atmosphere in this room was totally different from outside. There was no chill in the air, and the drawers and shelves were not sealed up with wooden planks.

The working table and shelf are perfectly clean. They look like they've been cleaned daily.

Chen Ge looked at the tidy bookshelf, and a weird thought appeared in his mind. Feels like it's the lingering spirits that help with the cleaning; does this mean the spirits here have an obsession with cleanliness?

The bookshelf had literature related to drawing comics.

How to draw a famous comic series, how to create an exciting world, an understanding of human anatomy...

These books don't seem to fit the previous tenants' identities, so has this place played host to a fourth tenant?

Chen Ge replaced the books and found a box of abandoned drafts under the bookshelf. The weirdest thing was the drafts had signs that they had been crumbled, and some had been torn apart, but someone had gruelingly pieced them back together with tape.

Why are all the drafts preserved? Chen Ge picked up the thick stack and started to read. The characters drawn were off. It was obvious that the artist had tried to make the characters look cuter and more mainstream, but the effect was just scarring.

The artist was definitely not a professional. The characters did not have vibrant expressions, and in fact, a few of them had blank eyes—some of them were frozen in fear. However, it was observable that the artist had been trying to improve, to fit the taste of the public, but something was different about his eye for beauty. Even if he was mimicking other people's work, he managed to draw the famous comic book character like a female dead body.

It's a kind of talent to be able to draw every picture as scary as these.

Chen Ge placed the drafts down and saw a thin notebook with a yellow cover at the back of the shelf. He flipped through it and realized that it was a budget book. It recorded the artist's weekly expenses and what he earned from selling his script.

Reading the content, Chen Ge's face slowly creased into a frown. Technically speaking, the comic artist was also a tenant at Room 304, but he shared it with someone else, and the place he rented was this small bedroom.

He had a hard life. He was a comic book lover, but looking through the notebook, for the three years the artist stayed in the room, the income he gained from drawing was a measly 1,200. The 1,000 was sponsored by the old landlady or his only fans, and the other 200 was the payment he got when he moved under the bridge to do people's portraits.

In the end, he drew the living people like a dead men, and he was chased by the angry customer for several blocks. After the police came to intervene, the person gave him 200 as compensation.

He powered on with his passion and love. He kept his monthly expenses to under 400, and his belief held firm—one day, he would succeed. However, the cruel reality was, even until his final day, his work did not find any appreciation. The last page of the notebook was a folded newspaper; one of the articles was on a middle-aged man who sacrificed himself to save a drowning boy. The article did not mention the man's name.

This is different from the other spirits. Just how many tenants Room 304 has had? Chen Ge replaced the notebook and walked to the desk. It's facing away from the living room. This should be the table mentioned in the black phone.

The table was filled with a lot of drawing equipment like it was waiting for its owner to return. Chen Ge scanned the desk, and he saw the three drawers that came with it. He pulled open the first drawer, and it was filled with drawing pencils and pens.

"This isn't it." Chen Ge pulled the second drawer open. It was filled with the rejection letters that the middle-aged man had received. They were almost overflowing out of the drawer.

Then Chen Ge tried the third drawer. He gave it a powerful yank, but the drawer remained unmoved.

Try as he might, Chen Ge could not get the third drawer to open. He pulled out the top two drawers to try to see the contents of the third drawer from above. However, to his disappointment, there were wooden boards partitioning the different levels, so he could not see anything.

“The room is purposely kept clean, and I do not want to ruin it. If you can hear me, you’d better come out on your own.”

This was not the first time that Chen Ge had threatened a ghost, but he had no idea whether it would work or not. He grabbed the edge of the drawer and tried to pull, but the drawer seemed stuck on something.

“Xu Yin!” Chen Ge summoned Xu Yin, and they grabbed the drawer on both sides. As Xu Yin channeled his strength, the wounds on his body opened again. The red blood trailed down his white arms to drop on the edge of the drawer. The drawer that remained unmoved started to loosen.

“Keep going!”

Xu Yin did not hold back. He would do what Chen Ge told him to. The wounds on his body tore open, and blood dyed his shirt. His face was twisted from the exertion, and his hands were covered with his own blood.

“So painful!”

The tightly-closed drawer finally was pulled open the width of one’s finger. Xu Yin’s power seemed to affect the stuff inside the drawer. The blood continued to flow, and the drawer was slowly pulled open by Xu Yin. When the drawer opened to the size of half a palm, several human hands suddenly reached out from within!

There were male and female hands. They tried to stop Chen Ge and yanked the drawer close. Surprised, Chen Ge and Xu Yin released their grip, and the drawer closed shut with a bang.

“Why do you insist on this struggle?” Chen Ge stopped Xu Yin, who intended to repeat the earlier effort. He picked up the hammer and said, “I’m trying to be nice. After all, we might work again in the future.

“I hope you’ll give this serious consideration. I can use brute force to smash the table or use fire to burn everything and look for what I need in the rubble, but I won’t. I’m a kind person, and you can ask any of my friends to confirm that.”

Chen Ge squatted beside the drawer; he was not afraid of the stuff that might reach out from within the drawer. He gripped the drawer’s handle. “This drawer belongs to me, and I’m just taking it back.”

He increased his strength and said, “I will forget what happened tonight. Even though all of you have tried to trick me again and again, none of you came for my life. You only wanted to scare me away. I’m telling you not to waste your time. I’m someone who you can reason with. If you have any issues, come out and talk to me.”

Then Chen Ge’s empty hand picked up the hammer. “Like now, you have no other option. Eventually, you’ll need to face me. Why not lower your guard so that we can start this over the right way?”

The drawer slowly vibrated like the spirits inside it were in a disagreement. After ten seconds, the drawer voluntarily bounced out for one centimeter. “Good, I do appreciate cooperative spirits.”

Chen Ge took out the third drawer and placed it on the table. It contained several comic books. “These are by the artist’s hand?”

The notebook said that none of the publishers wanted to work with the artist, so he probably went the route of self-publication.

“So many ghosts came from these comic books?” Chen Ge thought back to his experience that night, and he understood certain things. He flipped through the comic books that looked to be the artist’s work.

The artist had a semi-realistic style, and it was understandable why no publishers wanted to work with him. The characters in his story felt uncannily real. The whole comic was made up by five individual stories. The main character of the first story was a gambler. He was thin and tall; he looked similar to the man Chen Ge had seen earlier. The gambler was born in a single-parent family. He had never seen his father and was raised by his mother. He did not receive any worthwhile education.

If he did not make anything of himself, it would have been fine, but he suffered from the vice of gambling. Even in his thirties, he had no work and relied on his mother. For him, life was meaningless other than being alive.

However, when he was 37, his peaceful life was shattered. The mother who took care of him fell seriously ill, and they quickly burned through his mother's savings. His mother wanted to give up on the treatment, but the gambler did not agree. He sold everything they had but the old house that was under his mother's name.

Even so, the surgery still needed some money, and even if the surgery was successful, she could not do heavy work again. He thought about it and began to borrow money from loan sharks.

The surgery was successful, but the loan had tripled from the interest. The loan sharks forced the gambler to sell his mother's home to settle the debt. The gambler asked them to give him one night to consider.

The second day, the loan sharks returned, and they got a shock of their life when they pushed the door open. There was a basin on the round table, and it was filled with blood. The gambler's left hand was chopped off, and he stood next to the table with the cleaver in his right.

He said that he had not done anything worthwhile for his mother before in his life. Now that his mother could not do heavy work anymore, if he sold the house, she would have nowhere else to go. Therefore, he would never sell the house. If they wanted something as compensation, then he would give them his life.

He was the one who signed the loan papers. He rushed out of the bedroom, slashing the cleaver, so no one dared to stop him. They watched on as the man jumped from the eighth-floor window. The gambler died on the spot, but the arm that he chopped off was still not found.

The main character for the second story was an interning English teacher. The old landlady rented her the living room and the master bedroom while she stayed in the small bedroom. After her son passed away, the old lady became quite confused and absent-minded. The teacher took care of her like she was her real mother. The two got close, and things were moving toward a positive ending.

The English teacher would conduct tuition at night, so she came home late. However, when she returned, the old lady would have dinner prepared for her. She was already old, so she would be asleep when the teacher returned.

Afraid that she might wake the old lady up, she would advise the old lady to close the door when she went to sleep. One day, the teacher came home late again. She did not realize that someone was following her. Once she left the stairwell, someone reached out from behind to clamp his hands over her nose and lips.

She struggled vehemently and tussled with the culprit in the corridor. Surprised by her vehemence, to prevent her from making noises and attract attention, the murderer slit her throat. The body could not be left in the corridor, so he dragged the teacher's body back into the bedroom. He cut her into pieces to hide them inside the many drawers.

It was the old lady who found the teacher inside the drawers the next day.

The killer was caught five days later, but the old lady's condition worsened. With the neighbor's help, she was sent to the hospital.

It was then that the room welcomed its third tenant. It was a real estate agent, and he was the main character of the third story.

Chapter 302 - I'll Fulfil Your Dream

Chapter 302: I'll Fulfil Your Dream

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Since the old woman was in the hospital for her treatment, she rented the whole room to the agent. The agent, who was around thirty, was not a local, and following the company's requirement, he wore a white formal shirt every day. He was polite and kind.

However, that was hiding a broken man. He was an unlucky man. No matter what he did, he would fail for some reason. Other than that, weird things kept happening to him like having nightmares that his wife had been chopped up and shoved into drawers. It would haunt him for the whole night, and then he woke up in the morning, realizing he did not even have a girlfriend.

When he left home, the sun was shining, but the moment he stepped out, it started to pour. His shirt was soaked, and he decided to stop at the nearby shop to have breakfast. After breakfast, he realized that he had left his wallet at home. This meant that he could not call for a taxi. He walked to the company and was scolded by his boss for being late. He lost the client because he was late to the appointment, and when he returned home, he realized that a burglar had broken into his home.

Such a day of tragedy was an everyday occurrence for the man. However, compared to these things, the real despairing event was the realization that his own house was haunted!

He stayed in the old house alone, and whenever he wanted to relax at night by watching the television, before the punchline, someone would laugh behind him. There were many similar things. In the middle of his shower, someone would pass him the shampoo, and when he was trapped on the toilet without paper, the toilet paper would roll in on its own.

He had once been a firm non-believer, but the many things he had experienced inside the house changed his worldview. To prove that he did not suffer from a mental illness, he bought a camera and started to record his own home. One week later, he realized that there was indeed a ghost inside the home, and it was hiding inside the drawers!

The agent used wooden planks to seal up all the drawers and dressers, and the ghost stopped appearing. However, his bad luck seemed to worsen. About one month later, he was fired from his job, and on his way home, he died in a car accident.

After he died, the agent realized that a malicious ghost had been following him, and it was the spirits inside the home who had been helping him. After he sealed up the drawers and dressers, the malicious ghost had stopped being affected by the spirits, and it eventually took the agent's life.

The main character of the fourth story was the old landlady. The tenants who rented her place had all died from accidents. Her heart was wrought by guilt, thinking this was all her fault. Slowly, the old lady's mind twisted. She had this feeling her own son and the two tenants had not left the room and had stayed to accompany her.

She asked the neighbors, but those who knew about the home's past gave her a wide berth. They thought that she was a tragic woman. Some even moved away like the old lady would curse them. The tenants in the building slowly decreased, and the old lady retreated into herself.

Slowly, there were rumors that the old residential area was haunted, and the old lady was equated to the source of these stories. Everyone stayed away from her, and no one wanted to interact with her.

This went on for a long time until the old lady met a poor artist under the bridge. The man's face was wounded like he had just been in a physical altercation. The old woman pitied him and asked the artist to draw a portrait of her dead son.

Initially, she just wanted to find a reason to give the artist some money so that he could eat, but the finished portrait was not just similar to her son—he managed to capture his presence, aura, and gaze. The old lady treasured the portrait and hung it in her house.

To her surprise, there was someone who came to ask her about the rental the next day, and the newest tenant was the artist. The artist was surprised that the landlord was the old lady. He went through the old residential area and found the cheapest room.

Life was constructed by many coincidences. The artist found his first fan in his life, and the old woman found someone who was not afraid of her and wished to talk to her. The artist became the home's latest tenant. The old lady took the rental from him in a symbolic manner. She treated the artist like her own son, and her favorite thing to do was talk about his dreams and wishes.

One month later, the old lady found something weird about the artist. He would converse with his drawings, and every night at midnight, there would be weird noises coming from his room.

During the third month, the old lady finally followed her curiosity and sneaked into his room when the artist was out. In the end, inside the artist's drawer, she found a homemade comic made from a sketchbook. It had four stories.

The creepy drawing style and scary stories brought the characters to life, and the most surprising detail was that the first three stories matched the old lady's son, the English teacher, and real estate agent perfectly.

The more she read, the more afraid she became. Then she turned to the fourth story. To her surprise, she was the main character of the story, and it was telling the events that happened after she met the artist. The fourth story ended there, and it was the last story.

The fifth story was very short—it felt more like an epilogue. The main character was a comic artist. He did not look extraordinary. He was just like a normal middle-aged man.

The comic introduced his daily life. He woke up at 5:20 am and gave himself a pep-talk in the mirror. Then he started working. He would work until 8:20 am. He arranged his draft and personally went to Jiujiang's local publisher to recommend his story to the editor.

Alas, a month's hard work was denied in less than fifteen minutes. He left the office like a walking dead. He held the draft and sat by the road. He looked at the cars that zoomed past him and only returned home when the sky was dark.

He walked through the busy city and into the darkened staircase. He pushed the door open to Room 304.

The warm light fell on his body. The landlady cooked him dinner and said that she had seen the painting that he drew that morning. She told him it was a masterpiece. The artist could not remember how many times he had been rejected already. He apologized to the old lady and promised he would not pick up the paint brush again.

He hid himself in his room and locked the door. Hugging his knees, he curled up in the corner of the room. He looked at the drawer full of rejection letters and buried his head in his chest.

He had failed once more. He crumbled the rejected script into a ball and tossed it inside the dustbin. He kept complaining, saying that he had no talent, and decided to give up everything. He would jump from the building before he continued drawing. He talked to himself until midnight, and the tired artist fell asleep on the mat.

The lights in the room flickered before going out completely.

The draft in the trashcan floated out on its own, and it flattened itself out. It was placed carefully into the box under the bookshelf, and the table was carefully arranged to a tidy state.

The last panel of the comic was black and white. In the small room, the artist was already asleep, but there were several 'people' floating around him.

The first was a thin man; he used his remaining right hand to cover the artist with a blanket, grumbling how worrisome the man was. Beside him was a woman whose body seemed like it was going to collapse anytime soon. The woman's beautiful face was locked in a deep frown. She carefully taped the torn drafts together.

On the other side of the table was a man in a black shirt. He was using a pen to correct and edit the comic artist's draft.

The night passed by just like that. At 5:20 am the next morning, the alarm rang punctually, and the comic artist woke up from his dream. He turned off the alarm and looked at himself in the mirror. He smiled and gave him the daily pep talk. "A new day has begun. Give it your best shot! At least you're alive. One day you'll make it!"

Chen Ge was absorbed in his reading, but when he flipped to the next page, all he saw was blank. “That’s it?”

He looked at the date that was marked by the comic artist and then picked up the notebook that was sitting beside him.

...

He removed the yellowed newspaper and compared the dates. The day after finishing this panel, the artist died. The newspaper was probably slotted into the notebook by the old landlady or the other tenant. “That was the day his dream died.”

Chen Ge sat on the bed with the homemade comic and a new appreciation for the few ghosts he had met that night. The comic told the five stories of the five tenants of Room 304. None of them could be considered bad people.

Chen Ge’s initial guess was that the ghost in the comic had affected reality, but after reading the comic artist’s own story, he understood the ghosts in reality had entered his comics.

To get all the spirits to look after him, this uncle is quite amazing.

Turning to the fifth story, Chen Ge told the despondent middle-aged man, “I understand your dissatisfaction. You wished for your stories to be seen and loved by more people—I can help you do that.”

The ears of the uncle who was hiding in the corner while hugging his knees perked up when he heard Chen Ge. It felt like he wanted to turn his head around.

The comic is indeed interesting. It should be something that spirits can attach themselves to.

Lingering spirits that were not Red Specter needed to possess a certain item to ensure their longevity. The comic of the artist had over thirty empty pages. If this thing could let other spirits inhabit it, Chen Ge would not need to carry a backpack with him everywhere. In fact, he could bring the twenty-four students from Mu Yang High School to go for a stroll whenever he wanted to.

Thinking about this, Chen Ge was intrigued. “Uncle, neither yourself nor the characters by your hand had your wishes fulfilled. Why don’t you tell me what you need? I can help you undo the regrets that you still have in this life.”

To increase his persuasion, Chen Ge provided many examples like helping the comic artist publish his work, helping the real estate agent deal with the malicious spirit that gave him bad luck, helping the gambler find his missing left hand, or helping the English teacher meet up with the families she had not seen for many years.

After some time, the middle-aged man in the comic finally turned his face around. He had a typical middle-aged man, and he looked like he had no love for life. He stared at Chen Ge with caution and suspicion.

Several minutes later, the panel underneath him had these few words surfacing on it. “Please take care of us.”

At the same time, the black phone vibrated. Chen Ge did not mind the middle-aged man, and he opened the message before him.

“Ability One: Affinity with Baleful Specters (He looks so saddened and devastated that he can easily get the pity from other spirits.)

“Ability Two: Spirit Drawing (After seeing a baleful Specter, there’s a chance for drawing it into the comic’s sketch book, excluding Red Specters.)

“Ability Three: ?”

Reading the message on the black phone, Chen Ge’s eyes almost fell out of their sockets. He could not imagine that the middle-aged man wearing a white shirt, curled up in the corner, with sadness overflowing from his face could be a Lesser Red Specter!

You really cannot judge a book by its cover!

This was the first time Chen Ge had met a Specter with three abilities, but the appearance of this Specter shamed all Specters. Even Xiaoxiao tried day by day to pretend to be scary, but this uncle had completely given up. He did not have any pride as a Specter. He did not look scary; he looked sad, tired, despondent, and depressed.

The third ability has not been unlocked yet; it's probably the reason the uncle is called a Lesser Red Specter. Perhaps it's a power that allows him to control all the ghosts that are not Red Specters. Chen Ge understood the comic artist's meaning. He had not fully trusted him yet. He needed to wait until he finished the uncle's wish before he could become an official Haunted House employee.

The uncle is familiar with drawing, and his style is a perfect match for a Haunted House. Other than him, there are other spirits inside his comics. Buy one, get four for free. I can probably ask them to help me maintain the props or clean the house. When the situation calls for it, I'll get them to help around the scenarios. This bunch of actors will be perfect inside a Haunted House.

A smile formed on Chen Ge's face. He promised sincerely, "Brother, I understand your wish. Don't worry, I'll definitely help you make it a reality!"

Collecting all the drawings, Chen Ge shoved the painting equipment on the table into his backpack before exiting to the narrow corridor. "It's time to say goodbye to the past."

He closed the door to Room 304. When he exited the stairwell, a faded black shadow floated out from behind the nearby bush and entered the comic. It was the escaped landlady.

Chen Ge returned to New Century Park and headed for Mu Yang High School. He explained the situation to all the mannequins, holding the comic, and left without knowing whether his message had been understood or not.

The Specters inside the comics aren't malicious spirits. They will help me resolve the lack of manpower inside the Haunted House. Yan Danian himself has three abilities. After completing his wish and unlocking the strongest power, he might give me another surprise.

Returning to the staff breakroom, Chen Ge logged into his video-sharing app's account. His livestream room was still blocked, but his followers had jumped to 510,000 already. The private messages kept coming.

Looks like people still care about me.

The Haunted House's first exposure had been through the app, so Chen Ge did not plan to give up such a wonderful promotional channel. He opened the comic and snapped the panels that looked the weirdest.

"Boss, I'm going to show your work to 500,000 people, and that is first step I'm going to take to help you promote your work.

"Times have changed. A few years ago, you still needed to personally beg the publishers to look at your work, but this time, I'll make them come to you."

Chen Ge did not worry about Yan Danian's popularity. Only those who had seen his drawing would understand the creepiness that they radiated. It was a style that could not be changed or mimicked. The characters looked like they were captured at the time of their death.

Chen Ge shot a few short videos inside the Haunted House to announce his return and used Yan Danian's name to start a serial comic called 'Ghost Tenants' on the platform's forum.

Very soon, Chen Ge's comment section exploded. With the combined promotion of online and offline activities, in less than ten minutes, Western Jiujiang's House of Horrors became a hot topic search, and the popularity was still climbing.

Qin Guang and Chen Ge's livestreams were blocked at the same time, but Chen Ge had announced his return, whereas Qin Guang was still nowhere to be seen. A bunch of curious viewers swamped Chen Ge's comments; they wanted to know what had really happened that day. Chen Ge did not even tell the police about what really happened inside the Third Sick Hall; naturally, he would not reveal the secrets to the viewers. He gave a few vague replies before going offline. It was then that his phone rang; it was a call from Liu Dao.

Since they were once partners, Chen Ge accepted the call.

"Chen Ge, has the platform approached you to inform when your livestream will be unblocked?"

"Not yet, but I believe it shall be soon. What's wrong?" Livestreaming was just another promotional method for Chen Ge, he did not worry over the details. As the fame of the Haunted House grew, he had the intention of making the livestream a way of communicating with his fans, like releasing daily progression of the visitors and releasing information about new scenarios.

"It's like this. Our previous cooperation was really successful, so I want to do something similar, but something easier to control." Liu Dao had not given up yet. His cooperation with Chen Ge was the first time he had managed to faceslap Qin Guang's studio ever since their falling out.

"What kind of idea do you have in mind?"

"I will arrange a few of my most popular hosts to enter your Haunted House to do a livestream. What do you think?" Liu Dao anticipated Chen Ge's answer. Before asking Chen Ge, he had made multiple investigations already.

"It sounds like a great idea, but the timing is not right. You'll need to wait for a while first.”

“Don’t worry, we’ll definitely give you a number that you’ll be satisfied with. Furthermore, the livestreams will help promote your Haunted House, won’t it?” Liu Dao was an experienced member of the business, so he knew Chen Ge’s concern. “Plus, we will never leak the content of your Haunted House. They’ll use phones to carry out the livestreams, so the quality will not be that clear.”

“I don’t have enough scenarios. I’ll get back to you.” Chen Ge did not want to expose the details of the Haunted House, so he rejected Liu Dao in a roundabout way. Even though there were many detailed guides to Chen Ge’s Haunted House online, reading the guide and experiencing it were two different experiences. One had to experience terror to know how it would grip one’s heart.

After ending the call, before Chen Ge put the phone down, another call came in. He thought it was Liu Dao, so he was surprised when he saw that the call was from Captain Yan.

“He won’t be bringing me good news,” Chen Ge grumbled, having no idea the other person was thinking the same thing.

“Captain Yan? How can I help you?” Chen Ge lay in bed and sighed. He was in a good mood that night.

“I heard from Inspector Lee that you went to Lin Guan Village last night.” Compared to Chen Ge, Captain Yan sounded serious. He used this tone whenever a case was involved.

“Is there a problem with that village?” Chen Ge sat up immediately. He did not think much of Lin Guan Village, which was at the foot of the mountain. After all, the real scary village was Coffin Village inside the mountain.

“Stay away from Lin Guan Village—don’t go there at night.” Captain Yan seemed to have talked to Inspector Lee before making this call and knew something about Chen Ge.

“Captain Yan, you have to be clearer than that, or you’re just going to make me more interested.”

“You should know about the poisoning case at Lin Guan Village, right? The only survivor of the family of four was a little girl.”

“I do. In fact, I just met the girl at the Children’s Home.”

“The girl’s previous caretaker was found dead inside an abandoned old house at Lin Guan Village.” Captain Yan’s voice was chillingly calm, but his suppressed anger could be heard.

“Why would the body be placed in Lin Guan Village?” The first suspect that came to Chen Ge’s mind was Jiang Ling’s sister, but he had interacted with her before. Even though she had a monstrous exterior, internally, she was no different from a normal person.

“That is a question that confuses me as well. At the time, the case came to a standstill because of this as well. We traced back all the victim’s words and actions for the few days prior and found something weird.” Captain Yan sounded like he was hesitating over revealing this sensitive information to Chen Ge. After several seconds, he sighed. “The victim utilized the channel she obtained through her career to purchase blood.”

“Yes, that was our only lead.” Captain Yan reminded Chen Ge again. “Do not go to Lin Guan Village alone at night, at least before we have a clearer idea of what’s going on.”

“Then how long shall I wait?” Chen Ge could wait, but the mission on the black phone could not. The three-star scenario, Coffin Village, would disappear in six days. The missions that passed their expiration date would not be unlockable in the future.

“At least until all the mental patients from the Third Sick Hall have been caught.” Speaking of this, Captain Yan felt a headache coming. “Initially, they still acted rather normally, but after that incident at Fang Hwa Apartments, we realized that we’ve greatly underestimated their lethality.”

Chen Ge heard the message that Captain Yan did not say. “Is there another related case?”

“I’m standing at the crime scene, dealing with the mess.”

“Crime scene?” Chen Ge slowed down. “Someone died?”

“Yes, two deaths to be precise, and the crime scenes are weird to say the least.

“The first victim was a burglar. According to the camera, the victim just committed a crime and escaped into the back alley, but he never exited it. A passing drunk called the police. The victim's eyes had been gouged out, and he died from an unknown cause.

"The second victim was a fugitive hiding in Jiujiang. He was found hanging in his rental room. If not for the gouged eyes, we wouldn't have tied the two cases together."

Listening to the description, Chen Ge was confused. "Why would they gouge out the victims' eyes?"

"We're dealing with mental patients, so who really knows why? They're operating on a different worldview." Captain Yan sighed. "In any case, these kinds of similar cases are due to something in the killer's history. The gouged eyes could be some sort of ritual, or the killer might have experienced trauma related to eyes when they were young. Or possibly this is just something to throw our investigation off."

"The chance of childhood trauma is big. The patients at the Third Sick Hall were all traumatized when they were young." Chen Ge remembered what Captain Yan said. The killer was most likely the chairperson; he wanted to try his best to understand this sick man.

"Instead of the eyes, I'm more curious about another thing." There was a drumming on the table from the other side of the phone, Captain Yan's habit when he was thinking. "Why would they purposely target these sinners? Are they trying to tell us they're different from normal criminals?"

“They are indeed different from normal criminals. They have a purpose, and they’re more insane.” Chen Ge was reminded of a story he had heard while he was at the ghost stories society. “The bunch of crazies once drowned a middle-aged man to help cure one of their partners’ illness.”

“The patient was abused since she was a child; her father forced her head into the water many times. Curses and threats, claiming he was going to drown her. This left a mental scar that couldn’t be forgotten. After she grew up, she had an irrational fear of water. Even when she drank normal water, she felt like it was suffocating her soul. Other patients thus drafted this treatment for her. It was to deal with the source of the fear. From their perspective, she wasn’t afraid of water but her own father.”

This was the story that Chen Ge had overheard when Lychee asked about other members of the society. “The whole group of patients from the Third Sick Hall are insane. They know they are not normal and are sick, but they do not approve of the traditional methods and intend on using their own methods to cure themselves.”

Chen Ge’s words caused Captain Yan to think. “Every citizen’s personal safety is protected by the law; no one has the right to deprive another of their life. No matter their reason, they will never escape the persecution of the law.”

“I’m not giving them a reason; I’m just telling you the truth.” Chen Ge paced in the room. “All the victims this time are sinners, and their eyes were gouged. The similarity is too obvious, so I believe this is another attempt at curing one of their members.”

“What kind of belief will link trauma together with sin and eyes?” Captain Yan thought Chen Ge had a point.

“That, I don’t know, but you have to be fast. You’ve found two victims, but based on my understanding of these people, their favorite number is three.”

“You mean there will be a third victim?”

“No matter what they do, they always aim for three. I don’t understand why.” Chen Ge told the police everything he knew. The society was his enemy, and helping the police was helping himself.

“Okay, we will pay closer attention to this.”

After the call ended, Chen Ge could not sleep. “There are only three members left. Xiong Qing has been captured, so he isn’t one of the members. Plus, with his personality, he would expose me during the Wednesday meeting. From the list of patients that escaped from the Third Sick Hall, only three confirmed living ones remain—Wang Shenglong; Patient 6, Han Bao’er; and Patient 9, Wu Fei.

“Wang Shenglong was at home during the Wednesday meeting, and this was confirmed by the police. He isn’t a society member, and the monster possessing him escaped silently from behind the door. Then this will lead to another problem. Of the three remaining members, only two came from the Third Sick Hall.”

Chen Ge had plenty of information on the ghost stories society. He was familiar with the chairperson’s voice—she was someone he had seen before—and then No. 10 seemed to know him, but his stance was still an unknown.

“When the investigator jumped off the building, his dying words were Men Nan. Could the last unknown member be Men Nan?” Chen Ge then soon vetoed this speculation. He could not trust the enemy’s words fully. At the time, the investigator had been under the control of the society member, so his message could have been to lead him astray.

“Whether the investigator was lying or not, at least I garnered an important piece of information from him. The person controlling him knew about Men Nan, or else he wouldn’t have left Men Nan’s name at that crucial moment.

“Wu Fei is hiding in the shadowy corners of the city while Men Nan is the complete opposite. He's trying to live a normal life and can be found at any time. Neither of them are my opening." Chen Ge thought about it and decided to make Han Bao'er his next target. "If I just send all of them into jail, then I won't need to waste time guessing who the chairperson is."

Chen Ge cleared his mind and slowly fell asleep.

At 8:30 am, Chen Ge stretched lazily in bed. He went for a shower, and when he past the first floor toilet, his heart almost stopped. There was a very thin crack on the cubicle door. It looked like a narrowed eye looking at the world outside the door with evil intention.

"Something appeared behind the door at midnight last night and left this crack."

After Chen Ge sealed the cubicle up with wooden boards, it had been relatively peaceful. He had thought that the problem was resolved and tossed it out of his mind.

However, after discovering the crack, the anxiety in his heart returned.

"The crack is very even, and the surface is smooth. This should be a new ghost that I've not seen before."

The world behind the door was still too unknown to Chen Ge, and he did not want to deal with them yet. "The ghost stories society knows how to close the door, and Men Nan's main persona should know some secrets as well. Now that there's a change to this door inside my Haunted House, the mission for the Third Sick Hall cannot be delayed anymore."

Chen Ge had a plan after he exited the toilet. The park opened at 9 am, and the resting tent at the door was filled up within twenty minutes. There were a few familiar faces. They were excited as they talked with their friends, their voices filled with anticipation.

"Every Haunted House boss would love to see something like this. Their work is renowned and can bring in many visitors." Chen Ge put on Doctor Skull-cracker's mask. It had not been easy leading the Haunted House to this stage; he could not allow everything to go to ruin due to a door.

"Before the trial mission for Coffin Village disappears, I need to capture all the society members and get the way to close the door out of them.”

Filled with pointed hatred, Boss Chen gave the visitors a few authentic experiences. The screams inside the Haunted House rose like waves and did not stop for the whole day. At 3 pm, Captain Yan called Chen Ge several times. Chen Ge was busy chasing after visitors inside the Haunted House, so he did not notice it.

Chen Ge saw it when the park closed, and he immediately returned Captain Yan’s calls.

“Captain Yan, you’ve caught the killer?” Chen Ge wiped the make-up from his face and gave Xu Wan the permission to leave.

Captain Yan was silent, and after a long time, he said, “We’ve found the third victim; it’s an employee at Linjiang New Schistosomiasis Control Station. We found him in the same state as the other two victims.”

Chapter 306 - Disappeared

Chapter 306: Disappeared

This was not the first time Chen Ge heard the name Linjiang New Schistosomiasis Control Station, but he had not had the time to go take a look.

“The time of death was last night?” What Chen Ge predicted did happen—the ghost stories society seemed particularly obsessed with the number three.

...

“The coroner believes the time of death is between 3 am to 4 am yesterday morning. Cause of death is still currently unknown. The victim is a worker, and he left work at 6 pm. However, at 11 pm, he sneaked back to this place. There is no camera inside the building, so no one knows what really happened. We only know that he didn’t leave after he entered.”

“The murders are very symbolic and ritualistic. Since the patients from the Third Sick Hall have selected this worker, he must have done something wrong in the past; we should investigate that.”

“We did, and the man is squeaky clean. He doesn’t have a criminal record, and the other workers said he’s an honest man and doesn’t have any enemies or bad habits.”

Captain Yan’s words confused Chen Ge. In his mind, the ghost stories society was very specific on their rituals, and rarely were they mistaken.

“Could that honesty be just a front? Perhaps he’s a sinner within?”

“Our investigation hasn’t reached that part yet, so temporarily, we cannot make any conclusions. However, one thing’s for certain—this victim is slightly different from the rest. Not only were his eyes gouged out, a painting was carved into his back.”

“Can I take a look at that painting?” Chen Ge’s heart skipped. The crucial clue should be this painting.

“I have to follow the rules. Pictures of the crime scene mustn’t be leaked. If you want to see it, then come here.” Captain Yan did not agree to Chen Ge’s demand. He made this call and gave Chen Ge all this information because Chen Ge was the only person who had interacted with the patients from the Third Sick Hall. He was the person who was most familiar with that group of crazies other than the police.

“Okay, I’ll be there in a minute.” After hanging up, Chen Ge took out his phone and sat at the entrance to the Haunted House to think.

After I completed the Nightmare Mission for the first time, the mirror monster wanted to kill three people, and there was a corresponding number on the mirror that reflected the blood door. Is the ghost stories society related to the door in such a way as well?

Chen Ge soon reached Linjiang New Schistosomiasis Control Station in a taxi. This was somewhere isolated, and people rarely came here. Chen Ge found the officer on duty and explained his purpose. The officer did not let him into the crime scene but led him to one of the adjacent buildings.

“Captain Yan, Chen Ge is here.” The officer called out Chen Ge’s name directly. He no longer needed an introduction.

“Thank you.” Captain Yan waved for Chen Ge to come closer. He placed the photos on the table. “This is the most I can do for you.”

Chen Ge scanned all the pictures before stopping at a bloody picture of the victim’s back. The victim’s back was torn open, and a half-open door was carved in flesh and blood. Unlike the blood door Chen Ge saw on the society’s flyer, in the middle of this door stood a little girl. She poked half of her face out and had a bright smile on her face.

“Did you discover anything?” Captain Yan agreed to have Chen Ge come over because he believed that he could get some information from him.

“This little girl looks very familiar.” Chen Ge did not sound like he was joking. He focused on that bloody picture.

“The blood hasn’t even been cleaned yet. Can you really tell anything from these rough lines?” Captain Yan had studied every photo on the table for a long time already.

“Yes, very familiar.” Chen Ge picked up the picture and when he leaned in, a sense of familiarity appeared in his mind like he had seen this image before. He tried this several times before it hit him. “Isn’t this Jiang Ling?”

Chen Ge focused on the girl’s face that was exposed outside the blood door. It reminded him of Jiang Ling when she ran over to give him the spider.

“The little girl from Lin Guan Village’s poisoning case?” Captain Yan was part of the investigation team responsible for that case, so he was familiar with the girl’s new name after she moved to Jiujiang’s Children’s Home.

Captain Yan looked at it. Initially, the name Jiang Ling did not even cross his mind, but now that Chen Ge mentioned it, he also felt it could be her.

“We’ve investigated Jiang Ling and her family; they have no connection with the patients from the Third Sick Hall.”

“They’re a bunch of crazies who can do anything. They don’t need reasons or connections.” Chen Ge pulled out his phone to call the nurse. He wanted to make sure of Fan Yu and Jiang Ling’s safety. The painting on the victim’s back was hinting that their target was Jiang Ling. The girl was the only seed remaining from Coffin Village. Perhaps like Men Nan, she had once opened a door!

The phone rang twice before a slightly alert voice said, “Mr. Chen? Why are you calling so late at night?”

“They’re in the middle of counselling with Doctor Chen. If this is nothing urgent, can you wait several minutes?”

“As long as they’re safe. Tell Fan Yu to call me back later.” Chen Ge pocketed his phone. He looked at the photos and considered creating an ambush around Jiujiang’s Children’s Home.

“Captain Yan, I have a feeling that the murders are just a prelude. Most of the patients have been detained, and the remaining patients should be prepared something big.”

“Indeed, things might get messy tonight.” Captain Yan tapped his fingers on the table and turned to Chen Ge. “You will stay with us tonight.”

“Me?”

“The real person they want to kill is you.”

Thinking about it, Chen Ge realized that Captain Yan had a point. After all, it was no inconvenience for him; he only swapped a place to sleep. If that could help capture the remaining ghost stories society’s members, it would be a good thing. Captain Yan nodded after he got Chen Ge’s agreement.

They talked for another twenty minutes to discuss the details when Chen Ge’s phone rang. He saw that it was from the nurse, so he picked it up naturally.

“Mr. Chen! Both Fan Yu and Jiang Ling have disappeared! I swear they were still inside the home this afternoon!” The nurse’s urgent voice came through the phone. “I’ve already informed the president. Now everyone is looking for them!”

“Disappeared?” Chen Ge’s eyes turned serious. “Weren’t they with that Doctor Chen? Get him to answer the phone!”

“Doctor Chen has also disappeared. Everything in the room is tidy and untouched, but the person has disappeared!”

“Wait for me, I’ll be there in a minute!”

Chapter 307 - Going Home

Chapter 307: Going Home

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge knew that the ghost stories society was going to make their move, but he did not expect it to be so soon!

“That Doctor Chen is suspicious. I’ve seen that name in the letters written by the Third Sick Hall’s old president, but they were addressed to Linjiang New Schistosomiasis Control Station.” The surname Chen was very common, so when Chen Ge heard about Doctor Chen, he did not think much of it. After all, the letter was addressed to the control station, not Jiujiang’s Children’s Home.

“Jiang Ling has gone missing?” Captain Yan looked at the picture on the table; he was getting more intrigued by Chen Ge. The man not only had very powerful observational skills but also a special instinct and talent, one that Captain Yan felt the man himself did not realize.

“Three people have gone missing. Fan Yu, Jiang Ling, and the doctor, who was supposed to be with them.”

“The doctor is a patient in disguise?” Captain Yan could not believe a patient would turn up as a doctor years later.

“We still cannot confirm that doctor’s identity.” After hanging up, Chen Ge forced himself to calm down. Based on his analysis, of the remaining three society members, two were from the Third Sick Hall, and one of them had met him in real life before. The one who was familiar with him could be the chairperson!

He had met Doctor Chen once when he visited Jiujiang’s Children’s Home, so the chance of him being the chairperson was slim.

“Captain Yan, can you go through all the information on the workers here starting from five years ago; there might be a detail on the killer.” The letter at the Third Sick Hall was addressed to this place, so the old president’s correspondent should have working here back then.”

“Okay. I’ll get Ol’ Wei to follow you to Jiujiang’s Children’s Home. Go take a look around and leave the investigation here to me.” Captain Yan called Ol’ Wei over on the walkie-talkie. It was Ol’ Wei who had driven Chen Ge when they were saving Gu Feiyu. Chen Ge did not reject Captain Yan’s kindness. He might need to travel to many places that night, and being with Ol’ Wei would be more convenient.

“Captain Yan, you’re looking for me?” Ol’ Wei would retire in a few months. Normally, Captain Yan would not send him to the frontlines—he wanted to let the senior officer enjoy a few peaceful months before his retirement.

“You’ll be partnering with Chen Ge tonight, take good care of him.”

“Understood!”

When Captain Yan brought Ol’ Wei up to speed, Chen Ge was still trying to understand the connection between Jiang Ling, the ghost stories society, and the New Schistosomiasis Control Station.

Chen Ge leaned against the table. There has to be a reason the ghost stories society selected their last victim from this place, and several years ago, the old president was also conversing with someone working here. The key question is, what is the connection between the New Schistosomiasis Control Station and the girl from Coffin Village?

“Chen Ge, don’t waste time. Both of you move out immediately.” Captain Yan patted Chen Ge’s shoulders. He assumed that Chen Ge was worried about Fan Yu and Jiang Lin. “I’m sure the two kids are safe.”

“I’m thinking about something else.” Chen Ge suddenly turned around to face Captain Yan. “You told me before that Jiang Ling’s former caretaker was found inside an old home at Lin Guan Village.”

“That person bought blood before she died!” Chen Ge’s eyes sparkled. “There has to be a connection between Jiang Ling, this New Schistosomiasis Control Station, and the patients from Third Sick Hall, and I believe that connection is related to blood.”

“You misunderstood something; this New Schistosomiasis Control Station doesn’t have blood storage.” Captain Yan shook his head. “This place mainly deals with prevention of diseases contracted via blood. You can call it a specialist hospital.”

“Then could there be another possibility. They’re breeding a special kind of parasite that needs human blood to survive? Or it’s not a parasite but something else that need human blood to survive. The patients need this, and Jiang Ling has this!”

Chen Ge voiced his opinion, and it confused Captain Yan and Ol’ Wei. Chen Ge only explained half of his thought; Jiang Ling was Coffin Village’s final seed. Most of villagers from that village were born with abnormalities, and the rate of occurrence was too high to be explained by close marriage. Chen Ge now suspected that the abnormality was caused by this thing.

“Go to the Children’s Home first. I’ll have someone inspect the station closely. If there’s any update, I’ll inform you.” Captain Yan thought about what Chen Ge said, and he believed it could be a good opening.

“Be careful, it’s best if the investigation is done in groups.” Chen Ge was worried. The thing the society wanted might not be a physical parasite; it could be a curse or even a rare Specter.

The sky was dark when Ol’ Wei drove Chen Ge to the Children’s Home in the police car. When they arrived, the old guard and nurse were already waiting for them.

“We cannot find them, and the camera at the front door didn’t catch them. They should have slipped out through another channel.” The guard was feeling guilty.

“Bring us to the room where Fan Yu and Jiang Ling were last seen.” If this was really the society, then it was normal for them to miss the clues.

“Follow me.” The nurse led Chen Ge into the counselling room. The room was painted brightly and could make people feel relaxed as they walk in.

“At 4 pm, the two children were still playing in here, but when I came to take a look, they had disappeared,” the nurse explained as she fidgeted all over the place.

“Calm down.” Chen Ge did not touch anything in the room and just looked around. “There’s no sign of struggle, and everything is in its place; the two children probably left voluntarily.”

“Could it be Doctor Chen who brought them away? Impossible! Doctor Chen is a good man. He had saved many children here, giving them the courage to face life again.” The nurse’s voice turned loud; she refused to accept this reality.

“Sometimes a good person and a bad person is just a thought away.” Chen Ge walked to the table where he saw several weird drawings. In the first drawing, two black people were sitting in the middle, and a red person with a long body reached in through the window.

This should be Fan Yu’s; he’s leaving me clues. Chen Ge picked up the drawing. The black ones are people, and red ones, ghosts. Looks like the society has really targeted Jiang Ling.

He flipped over to the second picture, and a red woman shaped like a spider tore the ghost that was reaching through the window apart. She seemed to be feasting. Jiang Ling’s sister saved them. Of course, with Jiang Ling’s sister around, unless the society came with full force, they wouldn’t be able to hurt them.

Chen Ge turned to the third drawing. Under the protection of the spider lady, the two black people walked into a door, and beside the door was something written in red crayon—Going home.

“Since he still had time to draw, this means that both of them aren’t injured. They probably left on their own since they sensed danger coming.” Chen Ge had never treated Fan Yu and Jiang Ling as normal children.

“What are you looking at?” Ol’ Wei and the nurse wandered over. They saw the writing on the paper. “Going home? What does it mean?”

“Before they became orphans, they had their own home.” When he saw these words, the first thing that entered Chen Ge’s mind was Lin Guan Village; that was the place Jiang Ling grew up. “Brief the situation here to Captain Yan; tonight, we might be heading to somewhere remote.”

“Okay.”

Chen Ge turned to look at the fourth drawing that was at the very bottom. It was a broken home drawn in black, and something that looked like a coffin was leaning against its left wall. The third picture is entering the door, and this last picture is a home. Fan Yu is trying to tell me the door’s location?

He folded the last drawing and pocketed it. Based on his speculation, the ‘door’ that Fan Yu and Jiang Ling entered should be hiding inside this old home with a coffin. Last time I entered Lin Guan Village, I didn’t see anyone placing coffin outside their door. The home in Fan Yu’s painting should be referring to Coffin Village inside the mountains.

The people had disappeared, and the only way to clarify this speculation was to go Coffin Village personally. Chen Ge took a deep breath. I have to find them as soon as possible. After entering the door, it will be difficult for them to leave!

“Mr. Chen, do you think anything will happen to Jiang Ling and Fan Yu?" the nurse asked with worry. Chen Ge looked at the nurse and placed the drawings down. There was another question that needed answering.

None of Fan Yu's four drawings featured Doctor Chen!

What kind of role did the doctor play in this disappearance? If Doctor Chen was a member of the ghost stories society, why did the thin monster in Fan Yu's drawing come from outside the window and not from Doctor Chen's back?

Based on Chen Ge's understanding of the ghost stories society, after the ghost possessing someone was torn open, the human would suffer mental pain and faint, but Doctor Chen could not be found at the scene.

The guy is not simple; I have to be careful.

After consoling the nurse, Chen Ge and Ol' Wei left Jiujiang's Children's Home. "I've already reported what happened here to Captain Yan, where are we going now?"

"Back to New Century Park first, I need to go grab some tools." The society had lost three quarters of their member in a week; they had been forced to jump the gun, so naturally, Chen Ge would not be careless. Ol' Wei did not question Chen Ge; the order that he had received from Captain Yan was just to protect Chen Ge.

When they arrived at New Century Park, Chen Ge rushed into the Haunted House to grab the hammer, the recorder, Pen Spirit, and Xiaoxiao. Then he took the comic from Western Jiujiang's Private Academy and invited the boy with the stench and the hanging student to join him.

If Zhang Ya was here, then this wouldn't be so troublesome.

Chen Ge looked at the bulging backpack and sighed. "I still don't feel safe!"

He glanced at the white cat that was laying on the table biting its tail. He thought about it and picked up the cat. "There's a saying in the countryside that ghosts are afraid of cats."

With the white cat looking at him with confusion, Chen Ge placed it in another bag. "Having fed you for so long, I'll depend on you tonight."

Before the cat could react, Chen Ge rushed out of the Haunted House carrying the two large bags.

Inside the car, Chen Ge opened the bag for the cat to breathe. “Ol’ Wei, start the car. Today, we’re going to Lin Guan Village at the edge of the mountain.”

Ol’ Wei’s face turned with curiosity when he saw Chen Ge enter the car with the two large bags. He thought Chen Ge had overreacted. After all, from a normal person’s perspective, between looking for missing children and the group of murderers going around gouging people’s eyes out, the latter obviously was more dangerous.

“What are you carrying? Why do I hear a cat meowing?” Ol’ Wei started the car. He had been on the same team as Captain Yan for the poisoning case, so he knew the village’s location.

“My cat can protect us from curses.”

At 10 pm, they finally arrived at Lin Guan Village. As the car stopped, Chen Ge jumped out of the car and raced into the village with the white cat trailing behind him.

“Wait for me!” Ol’ Wei parked the car, and when he looked out, Chen Ge had already disappeared. Chen Ge took out Fan Yu’s drawing and compared it to the buildings inside the village.

There was a road leading to Lin Guan Village, but it was a halted project. It ended at the entrance to the village. The surrounding buildings were abandoned, and all the houses were locked.

It’s only just gone ten, but the village is already completely dark.

Similar to his last visit, Chen Ge could not see another living person inside the village.

“Don’t wander around like this; you’re going to cause unnecessary misunderstanding.” Ol’ Wei finally caught up to Chen Ge and quickly rushed over to drag him out of the village.

“Then what do you suggest we do?”

“How about we find someone to ask?” Ol’ Wei knocked on one of the doors. Initially, the man had a bad attitude, but after Ol' Wei showed his badge, the villager obediently opened the door and welcomed them in.

"Did you see a middle-aged man around thirty leading two kids into Lin Guan Village today?" Ol' Wei asked directly.

"A child-kidnapper?" Their host was an honest farmer.

"Just answer the question."

"No, people rarely come to this place anymore." When they were talking, Chen Ge looked around the room. There was a small shrine, and on top of it was a black-and-white picture of an old day. Other than that, the place was a normal farmer's home.

"Look at this drawing, does this village have something similar?" Chen Ge placed Fan Yu's drawing before the farmer.

He scratched his head. "What is this? Is that a shelf beside the house?"

"That's a coffin." Chen Ge said and this caused the other two to go silent.

"Who would leave a coffin by the door. We don't have that here." The farmer sneaked a look at Chen Ge. For some reason, he felt afraid of the man.

"I'll ask you another question, do you know Coffin Village inside the mountain?"

When Chen Ge said Coffin Village, the farmer's eyes twitched, and he grabbed the water to hide his panic. "Why are you asking that? The place was cursed by an epidemic. Those who didn't die escaped. None of the villagers here dare bring up that name lest we too get cursed."

"Looks like you do know about the village. Do you know where it is?" Chen Ge spoke calmly, but his gaze was scary. "I want to go to take a look."

“Yes, now. My two kids are missing, and they might have wandered into Coffin Village.” Chen Ge could not afford to delay this any longer. The mountains were hard to trek through, and the two kids might get into some accident.

“Go ask another family.” The water in the host’s cup spilled out. He was clearly nervous and afraid. “I’ve only heard about the stories from the older generation; I don’t really know the location.”

He noticed Chen Ge’s gaze changing, like it was turning colder, so he immediately added, “You can ask the seniors in the village. They must know something. I can bring you to go meet them.”

When the farmer said so, Chen Ge nodded. “Please.”

“Of course, of course.” The farmer wiped the sweat from his brow and went inside the house to look for a flashlight.

“Chen Ge, be careful, don’t scare the poor man,” Ol’ Wei, who stood beside Chen Ge, reminded him. To be honest, he was worried about partnering up with Chen Ge, especially when he thought back to the things that Chen Ge had done.

“I know what I’m doing,” Chen Ge said softly. Now was not the time to mind the details; they needed to find the children first.

“I’ve heard from my grandparents that the village once accepted a group of people who escaped from the mountain; they should come from Coffin Village.” The farmer walked out with the flashlight.

“Those people are staying at the western side of the village, and the rest of us live on the east side. Normally, we have no interaction. Before my grandmother passed away, she used to tell me that those people aren’t clean.”

The farmer was honest and did not hide anything from Chen Ge and Ol' Wei. "At the time, I secretly mocked her for believing in something like that in this day and age. I just brushed it off as her superstition, but as time went by, I realized that there was something off about these people."

"What do you mean?" Chen Ge and Ol' Wei were curious.

"They rarely leave their homes, especially after the sun has fallen, like there are things waiting to harm them outside," the farmer said softly. "Every one of their houses has a rope hanging across the window and a cleaver hidden behind the door. I asked them once why they did that, and they said it was to prevent thieves."

"That's all?"

"There's also one very strange thing." The farmer's voice turned even smaller. "Every few days, one of them will go missing, but they never seem worried. If anything, they appear very happy just like..."

"Like what? Tell us," Chen Ge urged.

"Just like as long as it wasn't them who got caught." The farmer's words were a bit accusatory, and it made Chen Ge and Ol' Wei silent.

"I'm just sharing my thoughts. Please don't read too much into it!" the farmer quickly explained. The trio walked to the middle of the village and turned left. After a short walk, they saw a broken brick home.

"Here we are." The farmer prepared to knock on the door, but when his hands fell on the door, it swung open on its own. "Elder Zhu?"

He walked into the room, but he only took one step before he froze. On the dining table facing the door sat an old man's black and white picture. The old man's face in the picture was looking at the door, and the scariest thing was, the eyes in the picture were gouged out.

"Don't panic." Chen Ge patted the farmer on his shoulder. He strode into the room without putting on the light and picked up the black and white photo from the table. "The picture looks old, and the edges are worn. He probably knew this day was coming a long time ago."

Thinking about what the farmer said earlier, Chen Ge believed that the old man in the photo had gone missing.

The people who escaped from Coffin Village hang rope across the window and hid a cleaver behind the door. Obviously, they are afraid of something getting in. Chen Ge scratched his chin. Could it be the monster from Coffin Village? Also why are the eyes gouged out in the picture? This is too similar to the ghost stories society's MO.

"Big brother, can you please put the picture down? I have a feeling he's looking at me for some reason." The farmer stood at the door and showed no intention of coming in. "Shall we move on to another family?"

"Sure, let's go ask them about Elder Zhu." The trio went to the house next door. Before they reached it, Chen Ge had a bad feeling. With Yin Yang Vision, he could clearly see that the family's door was open. As he expected, the family residing there was also missing. Creepily enough, there was also a black and white picture on the table, and the eyes were also gouged out.

"Where are they?" The farmer led Chen Ge and Ol' Wei here. The two outsiders didn't say anything but the local started to panic.

"Let's go look at the other homes first." They looked through other homes, and it was as if all the people who escaped from Coffin Village had disappeared. There were black and white pictures on the table, and the whole village felt like a ghost village.

"What is going on?" The farmer's face was blanched, and he turned to Chen Ge and Ol' Wei for help. Looking at his inquisitive gaze, Chen Ge pulled out his backpack to grip the hammer. "Everyone has disappeared, but why are you still here?"

Chen Ge told the farmer that, and it honestly freaked him out. "I really don't know! The mouth of the village still has a few families from Bai Family Village; they should be fine."

The farmer was proven right. Only those from Coffin Village were missing.

"Chen Ge, where do you think those people have disappeared to? And why did they leave behind these black and white photos?" Ol' Wei had a feeling that things were heading down a weird direction.

"They probably returned to the Coffin Village." Chen Ge took out Fan Yu's third drawing, which read—Going home.

"We cannot wait any longer. We need to enter the mountains now!" He walked to the farmer. "Someone at the village has to know how to get to Coffin Village, right? Several lives are at risk, please show us your cooperation.”

“Brother, I really want to help you, but the people who knew about the village are either missing or dead or too old.” The farmer staggered back and stopped beside Ol’ Wei.

“Too old?” Chen Ge suddenly thought about a suitable candidate. He called Ol’ Wei and headed for the peach plantation in the mountain. “Master Bai should know where Coffin Village is!”

Hopping over the mountain, Chen Ge found Master Bai inside the wooden hut. After explaining his intention, the old man pretended not to know anything. However, when he heard two kids might have been kidnapped and taken to Coffin Village. He agreed to take them into the mountain.

Chapter 310: Move Faster

“Chen Ge, should we wait for Captain Yan’s support team to come before we head into the mountain together?” Ol’ Wei looked at his phone that had no signal—the time shown was 00:50 am.

“It takes at least one hour to come from Jiujiang to Lin Guan Village. If we need to wait for them to enter the mountain, the sun will have already risen.” Chen Ge’s group had been walking through the forest for almost two hours, but there was still no sign of any village. All they could see were mountains and mountains.

...

“But can we do this with just the three of us?” Ol’ Wei was worried that if there was a real altercation, they probably still needed to worry about Master Bai.

“That shouldn’t be a problem.” Chen Ge had initially been worried about Master Bai’s physical condition, but after one hour of trekking, he realized that his worry was unfounded. Master Bai was healthy since he had grown up in the mountain and knew the local geography very well.

“What are you two mumbling about?” Master Bai walked in front with a branch. “A few more steps, and we’ll reach a fork in the fork. If we take the road going over the mountain top, we’ll need to walk for another two hours, but if we take the shortcut that crosses through the mountain valley, we’ll only need thirty minutes before we reach Coffin Village. Which one should we take?”

“Is the shortcut not an easy path to trek?” Chen Ge clearly understood that since Master Bai had brought it up, something had to be wrong with that path.

“Yes.” Master Bai’s face was serious. “The mountain valley is haunted.”

“Hauntings are fine. I thought you’re going to say that it is home to wolf dens.” Chen Ge patted his backpack, and the white cat poked its head out with dissatisfaction.

“Now, I’m curious. In your world, why are wolves more terrifying than ghosts?” Master Bai leaned against the branch. He could not understand Chen Ge’s way of thinking.

Chen Ge rolled his eyes but did not argue. “We’ll trek through the valley.”

“Are you sure? There are things in this world that can’t be explained.” Master Bai once again asked for their opinion.

“Master Bai, did something happen to you before?” Chen Ge saw the unnatural expression on the old man’s face. He was really reluctant to go through the valley. “You are very familiar with this path, so you must have taken it more than once already. We’re doing this to save the children, so I hope you won’t purposely hide something from us.”

“I’m not trying to, but I’m afraid you won’t believe me even if I tell you.” Master Bai shared the events from his youth. “My father knew a thing or two about medicine. In the forties, when there was an epidemic of the measles, he trekked through the mountains to help all the nearby villages, and it was then that he discovered Coffin Village.

“This village is isolated from the world, and there weren’t many who even knew how to read. They depended on folk remedy for their sickness, and when my father arrived, the condition of the village was very serious. To save the villagers of Coffin Village, my father paid the place several visits.

“At the time, I was still young, and my father wanted me to take over his practice. After all, a doctor is more respected than a farmer, so he would bring me on these visits. Everything was fine the first few times, but there was that one time my father got into an argument with one of the villagers. I’m not sure what the cause was.

“Normally, we left at 2 pm, but that day, when we left Coffin Village, it was already late afternoon. However, since the sun hadn’t fallen, we decided to trek through the valley. Half way through, my father suddenly urged me to move faster. All I was thinking about then was the hot meal at home, so I did run faster.

“However, after some time, my father urged me again from behind, telling me to run even faster. It was then that I realized something was wrong. I was about to turn around and ask him what was wrong when he used his hand to cover my eyes.

“All he said was for me to move faster. I peeked through the slit in his fingers, and I saw someone leaning on my father’s back!

“My father’s face was white, and he walked behind me, pushing me forward. Perhaps due to his regular acts of charity, the thing on his back didn’t harm him. However, I remember that when we entered the valley, the sky was bright, but when we exited it, the sky was completely dark.

“After that, my father fell seriously ill, and we stopped visiting Coffin Village. Even now, I have no idea what the source of the argument was or what the thing that was leaning on his back was.”

Master Bai sounded sad when he told this tale. Chen Ge understood why Master Bai would feel so guilty for not helping Jiang Ling’s sister. He had seen a ghost when he was young, so he believed these things more than most.

“The detour will take too much time; we’ll take the valley.” Chen Ge gripped the Pen Spirit. “The two of you can walk in, and I’ll close up the back.”

“Are you sure you can do that?” Originally, that was the role assigned to Ol’ Wei. He had been making marks on trees as they moved through the forest. Master Bai wanted to advise Chen Ge, but he remembered what had happened that night. Chen Ge chased Jiang Ling’s sister out of the room and even seemed like he was trying to communicate with her. The old man’s lips twitched. Now he suspected that Chen Ge had purposely told them to use the shortcut through the valley because he heard it was haunted.

“Why are you two looking at me? Don’t worry, let’s go.” Chen Ge did not feel panic. His backpack had a white cat, so if the ghost wanted to have someone to lean on, it would attack the white cat first. He nuzzled the cat’s head gently before following Master Bai and Ol’ Wei into the valley.

The trees became more common and twisted like everything around them was changing.

“Move faster, we must leave within twenty minutes.” Master Bai’s emotions were shaking. He looked nervous, probably because the memory from his youth was returning.

“Chen Ge, you be careful at the back.” Ol’ Wei walked in the middle. Although he gave Chen Ge a reminder, he did have some faith in the lad. They walked for five minutes before the narrow path became completely covered by brush and branches. They could see half-buried coffins by the side of the road. The coffins looked like they were placed there on purpose. Some of them were not even closed.

“Don’t be afraid.” Master Bai’s voice was shaking. He forced himself to calm down. “This is Coffin Village’s tradition. These are all empty coffins. They line the side of the road in increasing height, representing moving higher in life.”

“Not really afraid, but I agree that we should move faster.”

Chen Ge turned to look behind him, and a shadow seemed to be trailing them. He did not tell Ol’ Wei or Master Bai about this. He rummaged in his bag for something.

Only one? Don’t say I’m bullying you with my advantage in numbers.

Chapter 311 - You Done Crying?

Chapter 311: You Done Crying?

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Master Bai and Ol' Wei rushed ahead, but Chen Ge purposely slowed down to put some distance between them. This should be good enough. Ol' Wei and Master Bai are still in my sight; I don't need to worry about losing them.

Chen Ge placed the recorder in his hand but did not look back; he just pretended like nothing was happening. The wind in the valley stilled, and the surroundings became quiet, as if they had gone through some limit and entered a different world. The temperature dropped, and Chen Ge could feel a cold draft encroaching. It's coming.

...

Perhaps because he had the white cat as a meat shield, Chen Ge walked forward with ease. When the cold draft was just three meters away from Chen Ge, it suddenly stopped like it could sense something.

I haven't even turned the recorder on yet—why did it stop? Chen Ge gauged the distance in his heart. He pretended like he was afraid and scared, shaking too much to move forward. He slowed down again, trying his best to 'lure' the ghost to attack him.

Why isn't it coming? Does it want me to lean back to knock into it? Chen Ge was seriously considering walking backward. He had confidence in his acting, but he was afraid his unusual movement might scare the monster off. I should wait a little while longer.

The road narrowed, and it was almost swallowed up by brush and branches. Even Master Bai and Ol' Wei had to slow down to deal with the blockage. Chen Ge knew that he could not make it too obvious. If the monster was not going to take his bait, then so be it. He walked forward to help Master Bai.

However, the moment he picked up speed—perhaps panicking—the monster finally made its move. Chilliness climbed all over his heart, and this familiar feeling reminded Chen Ge of his first date when Zhang Ya stood behind him. The hairs on his neck rose, and the temperature dropped even more as iciness surrounded him.

Before Chen Ge could do anything, the white cat in his backpack suddenly squeezed its way out. It meowed at him twice before running away!

You coward! Don't they say cats have nine lives?

Well, at least the white cat warned him before it left. The chill grabbed Chen Ge's shoulders like a pair of hands.

This feels familiar.

A woman's sobbing came from behind Chen Ge. It sounded scary and sad. Weirdly enough, it seemed like only Chen Ge could hear this. Master Bai and Ol' Wei were busy with their own stuff and did not seem to hear anything.

Ice curled into his heart, and his shoulders slowly slumped from the pressure. Chen Ge was reminded of Master Bai's story. The old man's father should have been experiencing this kind of pain then. To protect Master Bai, he had forced himself to carry the ghost the entire journey. His body turned heavier, and there was a pulling force coming from behind him like it was trying to pull Chen Ge into one of the open coffins.

Is it what they call a scapegoat? The air seemed to freeze into ice, and it froze up Chen Ge's lungs. The crying beside his ears influenced Chen Ge's thought. The trees around him moved like they were coming alive. The sobbing echoed in Chen Ge's mind, and a pale white face slowly appeared from Chen Ge's back. It leaned toward Chen Ge's ears, but before it could say anything, Chen Ge suddenly turned around.

"You done crying?"

The face stopped on Chen Ge's shoulders, its dark abyss of a mouth wide open.

"If you're done crying, then be on your way." Chen Ge pressed the recorder, and Xu Yin appeared in half a red shirt to yank the monster off from Chen Ge's back. Before it could resist, it was torn into pieces and consumed by Xu Yin!

The screams echoed through the woods, and even Chen Ge thought Xu Yin was a bit cruel. "If you're not done crying, why didn't you tell me?"

I'm a reasonable person."

When Xu Yin finished his feast, the blood stain on his shirt grew. Based on this speed, it would not be long until he became a real Red Specter.

"Chen Ge! What are you doing back there! Don't stay too far from us!" Master Bai waved at Chen Ge. They did not notice anything weird until Xu Yin disappeared. With their sense of alertness, without Chen Ge, both of them would have been pulled into the coffins already.

"Coming!" Chen Ge pocketed the recorder, and the white cat, which had escaped earlier, returned. It jumped on Chen Ge's shoulder and refused to enter the backpack again.

"A life of contentment has dulled your survival instincts. You weren't this cowardly before. Looks like I'll need to bring you out with me more in the future." Chen Ge nudged the cat's face. "This is for your own good."

After catching up to Ol' Wei, Chen Ge suddenly realized that since the ghost had been eaten directly by Xu Yin, he was not even sure what kind of power it had. It's probably a normal ghost. There's so many coffins—it should have friends.

With Master Bai leading way, they used twenty minutes to exit the valley.

"Thank God nothing happened." Master Bai was covered in cold sweat. "We were lucky this time. We'll reach the place after ten minutes or so. Before entering the Coffin Village, let me go talk to them first." He stared at Chen Ge. "After we're in the village, no matter what happens, do not act rashly! I'm considered a village friend, let me handle this."

"You've been back here for decades already, do you think they will still give you face? Furthermore, the villagers knew you might not even be alive anymore." Chen Ge was telling the truth.

"In comparison, I know about their culture better than you do. We're here to find people, not to wage a war. It's better not to make enemies." Master Bai tried his best to advise Chen Ge. He was afraid that he might do something dumb.

"We'll do what you say." Ol' Wei dragged Chen Ge. "Finding the children is more important."

Master Bai did not continue this topic. He pointed the cat on Chen Ge's shoulders. "Keep your cat inside your bag or else the villagers will kill it on sight."

"They don't keep cats to deal with rats? Don't you say every family has a coffin? Aren't they afraid rats might bite through the wood?" Chen Ge chased the cat for a long time before he caught it and shoved it inside the bag.

"There are not many living creatures inside this village. In fact, I've not seen them rear livestock," the old man said. "I'll tell you about it as we walk. The village has many weird taboos, and they look different from normal humans, so you'd better be prepared."

Chapter 312 - Don't Knock on the Door at Night

Chapter 312: Don't Knock on the Door at Night

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

After leaving the valley, his phone completely lost its signal. The electric compass that Chen Ge downloaded beforehand malfunctioned as well. Something told him that the world inside and outside the valley were different. Perhaps because he had met plenty of ghosts, he was sensitive to these things. He tipped his head back and glanced through the canopy. There was no moon or stars in the sky. The night was like a cloth smothering them no matter where they went.

“Be careful, we’ve almost reached the place.” After another ten minutes of walking, Chen Ge’s group finally left the jungle. They looked down the horizon, and what they saw confused and shocked them.

“Those are... lanterns?” Ol’ Wei touched Master Bai’s shoulder, but this was also the first time Master Bai had come to Coffin Village at night.

“I have no clue.” He took out a piece of jade and wore it around his neck. “I’ll scout ahead. Stay close to me; don’t wander off.”

The three of them walked toward the village, and the shapes of the buildings became clearer and clearer. No one would have expected a village to be hidden in such a desolate place. All the buildings were built in a style from decades ago; they looked old and abandoned, but the most curious point was every family had a white lantern hanging before the door.

The lanterns were like white eyeballs, hanging by the side of the road, staring at the three newcomers.

There were people inside the village!

This village that was supposedly abandoned decades ago due to an epidemic still had people living there.

“Master Bai, are you going to enter just like this?” Ol’ Wei moved to stand beside Chen Ge. He still remembered Captain Yan’s order. His mission that night was to protect Chen Ge.

“Let me think about this.” Master Bai looked at the empty village and the white lanterns that lined the road, and his palms were covered with cold sweat. “In the past, my father always came in the morning, so I had no idea this is how Coffin Village looks at night.”

With the bitter smile on his face, Master Bai’s meaning was clear; he did not want to enter the village. Of the three of them, he was the only one who had entered Coffin Village before. He understood the creepiness of the village, and if morning was already so scary, night did not bear thinking about.

“Don’t panic, we don’t need to enter directly.” Ol’ Wei then patted Chen Ge on his shoulder. “How about we take a look around the village first?”

Chen Ge did not answer, and he stood at the back of the party alone. His expression was unreadable.

“What’s wrong with you?” Ol’ Wei was worried about Chen Ge. Even though he admitted Chen Ge could be a bit rash, he had to admit that facing the entrance to this ghost village, standing beside Chen Ge gave him the most security.

“I’m thinking about something.” Chen Ge shrugged and lowered his head to look at the black phone. When they neared the village, Chen Ge’s black phone had vibrated, and he had received a new message.

“Congratulations, Specter’s Favored! You’ve found Coffin Village deep inside the mountain. Do you wish to accept the Trial Mission for the three-star scenario, Coffin Village?”

“Thanks, but I’ve already made up my mind.” Chen Ge clicked on the accept key.

“Coffin Village (three-star scenario): Survive until morning inside Coffin Village, and the new scenario will be unlocked.

“Mission Hint: That day, other than me, they all came.”

Memorizing the mission hint, Chen Ge pocketed the black phone and turned to look at Coffin Village, shrouded in darkness. "Let's go, we'll go take a look."

"Are you sure?" Ol' Wei grabbed Chen Ge's arm and gave Master Bai a look, hoping that the old man would help him convince Chen Ge. However, the night was too dark for Master Bai to see it.

"I've already made up my mind." Chen Ge's consideration was different from Ol' Wei's.

"Stop arguing. It should be fine for us to enter the village. Even though the villagers look strange, they're quite kind." Master Bai had interacted with Coffin Village's people before, so he had the most right to speak.

"Master Bai, are you sure these kind villagers would light white lanterns at night?" Of the three, Ol' Wei was the most rational.

Master Bai touched the jade around his neck like he was remembering something from long ago, "My father once told me, a bunch of poor people are living inside the village. He said that when I master medicine, I should go help them."

When Chen Ge's Yin Yang Vision caught sight of Master Jade's Jade Necklace, he felt pain in his eye. However, that pain only lasted for a second. If he was not sensitive enough, he would not have noticed it.

"Master Bai, your father left you the necklace?"

"Yes, he would wear it whenever he went out to help people. After we came out from Coffin Village for the last time, he gave it to me and then soon after he fell ill."

There's more to this necklace than meets the eye. Chen Ge wanted to study it. He had run into ghosts and monsters many times already and had been trying to find something that could affect them. He had been searching for weeks, but he had only found a butcher's cleaver.

"My father said that others cannot touch the jade or it'll lose its powers." Master Bai seemed to be telling the truth. "I cannot give you the necklace, so you'd better stay close to me tonight."

"Master Bai, can you remember other things that your father told you?" Ol' Wei asked. "We're entering the village, so you need to tell us everything."

“That’s all I believe. He told me, no matter where I go, I have to face my conscience and those with a clean conscience will be protected by both humans and ghosts.” When he said so, Chen Ge understood why the old man was so focused on helping Jiang Ling and her sister; Master Bai’s family was good-hearted people.

Chen Ge had his own philosophy and had been following his own conscience. He has a point, but ghosts are like people; there are good ghosts and evil ghosts.

The three walked around the outer perimeter of Coffin Village. The village was very big. To get an overall view of the village, they needed to climb up to the adjacent hill.

“There are probably more than a hundred families living inside the village. Be careful not to get into an altercation with them.” Master Bai was mainly talking to Chen Ge. “We’ll go in through the entrance; there’s no need to hide.”

Thus, the three entered Coffin Village. The road was overgrown with grass, and the houses on both sides were closed. Weirdly enough, the doors were not pasted with the common pictures of door guardians but white paper with the character ‘福’ (good fortune) turned upside down. It looked scary.

“The culture here seems to be the total opposite of the outside world.” Chen Ge stopped before one of the doors. “Shall we go in?”

“It’s rude to barge in like that.” Ol’ Wei moved his hand to the gun in his holster. This place gave him plenty of pressure.

“We’re here to look for the children. Eventually we need to interact with the villagers. We will need Master Bai’s help to liaise with them.” Chen Ge raised his arm, and when his hand almost reached the door, the white lantern hanging above the door suddenly went out.

Chapter 313: Three Rooms

The sudden disappearance of the light cast where Chen Ge's group was standing into darkness.

"What's happening?" Both Master Bai and Ol' Wei were spooked. Chen Ge's hand hung in midair and did not fall on the door. "I'm not sure. It doesn't seem like a coincidence."

...

There was no wind, and the lantern was hung high enough that they would notice if someone reached out to extinguish the light. The other white lanterns swayed even though there was still no wind.

It felt weirdly suffocating.

Chen Ge and Ol' Wei turned to look at Master Bai, but he had not experienced this before either. "Shall we retreat for now?"

He walked two steps back and turned to look down the road, then he stopped. "Be careful, someone's coming!"

"Who?" Chen Ge looked down the direction Master Bai was looking. Under the glow of the swaying lanterns, a blurry human-shaped shadow slowly approached them. "It seems to be waving at us?"

The shadow moved faster, and Chen Ge finally got a good look at it. It was an old lady who was wearing a dark-colored jacket. She kept her head lowered as she moved forward, and she only stopped when she almost ran into Chen Ge.

"You also came from the outside?" The old lady's voice was weird and made Chen Ge feel uncomfortable.

Noticing the old lady's choice of words, Chen Ge asked in return, "Also? There's another party that entered the village earlier?"

"Yes." The woman kept her head lowered when she spoke like she was afraid of others seeing her face. Chen Ge was reminded of Jiang Ling's sister. The villagers of Coffin Village were born with abnormalities, so Chen Ge would not be rude enough to purposely sneak a look at the old lady's face.

"Was it a middle-aged man and two kids who entered the village before us?" Chen Ge asked a follow-up question, but the old lady ignored him. It seemed like she was not there for Chen Ge. Keeping her head lowered, it felt like the old lady's head was almost falling to the ground. However, she did not seem bothered by this. "Don't knock on the door at night. It might not be people who answer the door."

It was unclear who the old lady was talking to. She blocked them in the middle of the road, and the lanterns on both sides swayed harder.

"Things have been complicated in the village lately. Don't wander about. Come with me, I'll bring you somewhere to stay." The old lady turned to head back in the direction she came from. Her steps were small, but she moved fast. Combined with her head that almost reached her chest, the whole thing was just weird.

"Shall we follow her?" Ol' Wei turned to look at Chen Ge and Master Bai. When he saw the old lady earlier, he already wanted to leave.

"Let's follow her for now." It was Master Bai who spoke. "I feel familiar around the old lady. Is it possible that I've seen her when I came to visit as a child?"

Master Bai walked ahead, and Chen Ge as well as Ol' Wei followed behind him. The old lady led them deeper into Coffin Village. They took several turns before they stopped. "Tonight, you can stay here. We can discuss the rest when morning comes."

She still kept her head lowered, and the tone of her voice had not changed; it felt like they were talking to a puppet. "There are three rooms inside the house. Each of you can take one. Remember to stay inside your room, and do not share rooms. Do not touch the rope on the window or the cleaver behind the door. Stay in bed and wait for the night to pass."

"One room each? We'll share one room; it'll be fine for one night." Master Bai had to stay close to Chen Ge. If he did not keep a good watch on him, he would run off on his own.

"There are three rooms inside the house; each of you can take one..." To their surprise, when Master Bai said so, the old lady only repeated her earlier instruction, but this time, her tone was uglier.

"Granny, we're here to look for two children. We have no time to waste, especially not until morning. Can you bring us to meet the other group who came from outside?" Chen Ge studied the old woman and could not find anything weird about her. Could it really be her face?

When the old lady turned around, Chen Ge bent down to glance at her face. The face was totally normal.

The eyes are still there, and the face looks normal, but she does look familiar, Chen Ge thought to himself. He looked at the old lady and then glanced at Master Bai. "Master Bai, you said the old lady gives you a sense of familiarity, could she be from Lin Guan Village?"

"I didn't see her face, but based on her attire, you might be right." Master Bai pushed the door open. The place was not big.

"Looks like someone from Lin Guan Village and familiar to you and me." Chen Ge thought about it, and his face slowly changed. "Wait, I know who she is!"

"Who?"

"Ol' Wei, do you still remember the first home we visited when we arrived at Lin Guan Village?"

"Yes, the owner was a middle-aged farmer." Ol' Wei had good memory.

"He has a shrine in his room, and an old lady's black-and-white photo sat on it." Chen Ge kept his voice lowered. "The old lady who showed us the way earlier looks exactly like the old woman in that picture!"

"How is that possible? Are you sure?" Ol' Wei couldn't believe Chen Ge.

"Now that you mention it, she does look like an old lady from Lin Guan Village!" Master Bai made the connection in his mind. "But that old lady died a long time ago!"

"No matter what, it has happened." Chen Ge calmed down quickly. "If the old lady is not a living person, then should we still stay in the home that she assigned for us?"

The white paper on the door fluttered. Neither Master Bai nor Ol' Wei could not make the decision.

“Let’s go in to take a look first. The old lady had a good relationship with me before she died; she won’t harm us.

“At least, I think she won’t.”

Chen Ge’s group entered the home, and the place was similar to other houses, but there was not a white lantern outside the door.

“This isn’t like what the old lady said; there’s only one room in here.” Chen Ge walked in front, and after crossing the empty courtyard, he opened the inner room door.

A weird smell drifted out from the room. When they got used to it, the three of them turned to look inside the room with their eyes bulging. Inside the home’s only room sat three black coffins.

“One home, three rooms? Could the old lady be referring to the coffins?” Ol’ Wei’s face was completely white. “Something is seriously not right with this place; we should leave.”

“Calm down!” Master Bai grabbed Chen Ge. “Those are for dead people!”

...

He was a bit loud, and Ol’ Wei came to stop both of them. “This place is off; we need to be very careful.”

“The three rooms mentioned by the old lady should be these three coffins. She’s not a living person, so for her, coffins are rooms.” Chen Ge pried Master Bai’s hand off calmly. “Is there something wrong with my logic?”

After a long pause, Ol’ Wei asked, “Aren’t you afraid around these things?”

“Of course, I am, but fear is not going to help us in this situation, is it?” Chen Ge looked at Ol’ Wei. “Don’t let it get to you. Come help me.”

The three walked to the coffins. They were roughly made, and they had a layer of dark brown coating. There was a light smell.

“No, decomposition is much worse. This should be the smell of decaying wood.” Knowing Chen Ge would not leave that easily, Ol’ Wei quickly got into the correct frame of mind. After all, he was an experienced police officer and would be dependable during the crucial moment. “Listen to me, we cannot believe the old lady fully. We’d better be careful.

“When we were led this way, I memorized the route. The three of us will stay here for now, but if danger comes, we'll run out immediately. Remember to follow behind me, and make sure not to get left behind!"

"There's only one way to find out whether the old woman was lying or not." Chen Ge put his hands on the coffin lid.

"What are you doing?"

"Opening the coffin." Chen Ge pushed, and the lid slid off a little.

"You seriously plan to sleep here with one of the coffins?"

"It depends." Chen Ge pushed the coffin half open, and he peered in. It had a set of graveclothes at the bottom of the coffin.

"Don't touch it! This is a real taboo. What if you offend the spirits?" Master Bai held Chen Ge's hands tightly, and Ol' Wei also ran over to pull Chen Ge back.

"I just want to see what's so mysterious about this place." Ol' Wei and Master Bai sighed when they finally got Chen Ge to calm down. However, what Chen Ge said next got them all worried again. "My plan is to open all the coffins we find in this village. The village's biggest secret should be inside the coffins."

"Please don't say something like that when you're outside; I'm afraid the villagers might kill you if they hear you." Master Bai walked to stand beside the coffin. He thought about closing the coffin, but when he glanced at the clothes inside, his brows locked. "Why are their graveclothes bright red?"

"Yes, that confused me when I first saw it too, so I planned to take it out to have a closer look." Chen Ge joined Master Bai. "White lantern above the door, white paper on the door, red graveclothes; this village seems to invert all the common Chinese practices. This reminds me of Minghun."

"You even know about Minghun?" Master Bai glanced at Chen Ge.

"One of the scenarios at my Haunted House is Minghun-themed. A living bride for a dead groom..."

Chen Ge wanted to continue the story when both Master Bai and Ol' Wei waved at him to stop. "That's enough, it's already scary enough."

The two of them stood beside the coffin, looking inside at the red graveclothes, and it just did not feel right.

BANG!

A sudden noise spooked Master Bai and Ol' Wei. They turned and saw Chen Ge was pushing the other two coffins open. Three coffins meant three set of red graveclothes. As they shone the flashlight at them, it looked like the coffins were bleeding.

"All the sizes are different, there's for male and female. Looks like a family of three." Chen Ge stood beside the coffin, "I'm wondering, the coffins are inside the house, so where are the bodies?"

He turned to ask Master Bai, "Could this be one of Coffin Village's cultures? Every family will prepare a living coffin even when they're still alive?"

"I suppose so." Master Bai could not be sure.

"There aren't any bodies inside the coffins, and if this is really a living coffin, then it means that the owners are still alive." Chen Ge scratched his chin. "What do you think the chances are that they will return tonight? How will they react when they see we're inside their home?"

He was just asking that, but Master Bai and Ol' Wei each sucked in a cold breath.

"Perhaps it'll be good if they return; we can ask them what's going on with the village." Master Bai still insisted that Coffin Village's people could be communicated with.

"Special times call for special measures. Would normal people leave their home in the middle of the night inside a deep mountain?" Chen Ge gave his suggestion. "I think we should ambush them at the door and capture them when they walk in. They're a family of three, and there's three of us. After detaining them, remember to keep their mouths shut. Shove them inside the coffins, and we'll use the graveclothes to bind them. Then we can start the interrogation."

Chen Ge gave his plan, but Master Bai and Ol' Wei looked at him with weird expressions.

"That isn't good, right? They haven't done anything bad to us after all." Master Bai was an honest man. He moved away from Chen Ge and stood beside Ol' Wei. At a time like this, he felt better siding with the police.

"It'll be too late to react when we realize they want to harm us. This is called taking the initiative." Chen Ge said so and moved to stand behind the door. He appeared masterful as he readied himself for the ambush, as if he had done this many times already. "Ol' Wei, you can hide under the window, and Master Bai, you hide beside the second coffin. I checked it earlier—that corner is perfectly hidden from sight."

"Who did you learn all this from?" Ol' Wei and Master Bai moved to their spots. For some reason, they followed Chen Ge's instruction.

"I operate a Haunted House, and the best skill is to make use of the geography to scare the visitors." Chen Ge looked through the slit into the small courtyard. "You two can rest for a while; it must have been tiring walking for so long already."

"Okay, we'll do this one hour each, so everyone can have the chance to rest." Ol' Wei suggested.

Master Bai nodded. "No problem, I might be old, but I'm still healthy. I should be able to survive one sleepless night."

"There's no need." Chen Ge turned back from the door to look at Ol' Wei and Master Bai. He reached into his backpack to sooth the angry white cat. "Shush, they're coming."

Ol' Wei and Master Bai zipped up their lips and held their breath. Chen Ge grabbed the hammer's handle in his backpack and turned his eyes back to the door. Along the dark road, a cold misty light was getting closer. "What is that?"

The light stopped at the front door and filtered into the courtyard through the slit in the door.

CREAK...

The front door was pushed open. There was nothing outside the house; there was no one at the door. The only change was an additional white lantern hanging on the door. When Chen Ge's group entered the house, there had definitely not been a white lantern. Inside this village, the lantern seemed to have some special importance.

"They're coming in?" The white lantern shone a pale light on the floor. There was no one in the courtyard, but there were three shadows on the floor, two tall and one short. The shadows flickered in the courtyard, and they did not seem to notice the three outsiders hiding inside the room.

A cold draft picked up, and the front door closed on its own. When the pale light disappeared, three strange creatures appeared. Their heads were pressed to their chests, and they walked forward on tip-toe. The unkempt hair blocked their faces, and their clothes were stained with blood. They were radiating a strange stench.

It's similar to the smell at the Third Sick Hall! They've been inside the door?

Chen Ge signaled for Ol' Wei and Master Bai to hide. The three creatures stood in the middle of the courtyard, and as Chen Ge expected, there were two adults and one child. The way they were standing was very weird. They leaned forward like they would topple into the room at any moment.

The atmosphere was tense.

As time passed, the three creatures outside the room seemed to sense something. They moved forward at the same time and walked to the door with a weird gait. Since they were just separated by a door, Chen Ge could see the pattern on their clothes. The three shadows did not enter the room but stopped at the door.

The two adults kept their heads lowered, but the child had a paper doll in its hands. It kept using its fingers to tear on the doll, and whenever he did so, the paper doll seemed to come alive, its expression filled with pain as it begged for mercy. However, the child did not stop. If anything, it continued to find other ways to 'play' with the doll.

It seems like there's a name on the doll.

With his Yin Yang Vision, Chen Ge could see the name on the doll, and he felt like he had seen that name in Lin Guan Village. Wait, could the doll be one of the people who disappeared from Lin Guan Village?

There was a bunch of Coffin Village's escapees that settled at Lin Guan Village, but other than themselves, no one knew the real reason they escaped from Coffin Village. The shadows stopped at the door for several seconds. Seemingly intent on investigating if there were people hiding inside the room, one of the shadows walked to the window.

Chen Ge could clearly see the lowered head stick itself to the window and use it to push the wooden windowpane open. The sticky hair dangled downward. It planned to poke its head in!

At the time, Ol' Wei was squatting below the window. He did not know there was another head just above his own. Chen Ge looked at Ol' Wei, but his expression did not change. Ol' Wei saw Chen Ge looking at him, and based on the young man's expression, he thought everything was fine.

The hair touched Ol' Wei's neck, and he even reached out to scratch it. Ol' Wei's hand practically brushed past the face above his head. Master Bai, who hid behind the coffin, saw everything. His lips were chattering, and he tried his best to alert Ol' Wei.

Perhaps Ol' Wei also felt that something was wrong. He moved his eyes away from Chen Ge and turned to Master Bai. Master Bai reached out one finger, and he kept pointing upward; it was hard to miss the hint.

Above me? Ol' Wei reached out to touch his head, but he did not find anything. Since Master Bai kept pointing up, he raised his hands upward. Behind the door, Chen Ge gripped the hammer. His original plan had been to wait for the ghost to reach half of his body in before he made his move, but Ol' Wei had pushed his plan forward.

As Chen Ge expected, under Master Bai's instruction, Ol' Wei's hands kept moving upward. His fingertips touched something, and it felt very cold. His neck froze, and Ol' Wei slowly turned his head upward. He leaped back and looked right into the male ghost's eyes.

"Now!" Chen Ge pressed the recorder and swung the hammer at the window above Ol' Wei's head!

Almost at the same time, the three ghosts attacked from the door and window. The ghost that was closest to Ol' Wei peeled his mouth back. Blood vessels moved within it as he tried to bite Ol' Wei's face.

Ol' Wei, who had been wondering what was above him one second earlier, did not have chance to react. He did not even have time to show fear when the ghost's mouth opened wide. He was about to scream when a scary-looking hammer flew past his head!

BANG!

Chen Ge did not hold back, and the hammer landed right on the ghost's face. It sent the ghost flying along with the window frame!

"My god..." Ol' Wei had not even closed his lips, and Chen Ge also fell out of the room with a man wearing half a red shirt standing beside him. After the ghost at the window was knocked out of the room, the two shadows raised their heads. The dead faces exposed vicious expressions. They wanted to charge into the room, but Chen Ge was running at them.

The battle ended as soon as it started. In less than one second, Xu Yin already got two of the shadows on the ground. Xu Yin was maddened by bloodlust. He did not have the habit of leaving things alive, so the two shadows soon became blood stains on his shirt.

The last shadow landed on all fours. It was about to clamber out when it was pressed down from behind by Xu Yin. The whole process took, at most, ten seconds. During that time, the only thing Chen Ge could do was turn around to close the door.

Xu Yin seems to have gotten stronger.

The shirt knitted with blood stuck to his body. Xu Yin was like a lonely pianist, waving his tapered fingers to flick the blood off his hands. His body disappeared as Chen Ge turned the recorder off.

“What happened earlier?” Ol’ Wei and Master Bai ran out of the room. They were covered in cold sweat, and panic was apparent on their faces.

“I don’t know either.” Chen Ge shrugged. “When I gave chase after them, the three shadows immediately left the place.”

He pointed at the open front door and picked up the hammer. “We should be more careful. We made a loud commotion earlier—perhaps more monsters will be coming.”

“Do you know the meaning of the word ‘careful’?” Ol’ Wei touched his head as he looked at the hammer in Chen Ge’s hand. He could not believe that thing flew inches away from his head earlier.

“That was to save you.” Chen Ge shoved the hammer back into his backpack. “The escape of the three shadows means that we’ve been exposed; we cannot stay here any longer.”

...

“Coffin Village is very quiet at night, so our fight earlier must have echoed very far. I’m afraid other monsters might hear that and come to surround us.” Chen Ge had his own plan. “The first reaction of the earlier three monsters when they saw us was to attack. This goes to show that it wasn’t out of kindness the old lady led us here. The villagers here are not as kind as Master Bai assumed.”

Master Bai disagreed with Chen Ge. “I haven’t been inside Coffin Village at night before, but I don’t understand this change. In my memory, Coffin Village’s real villagers would not do something like this; they’re no different from normal people.”

“Master Bai, you haven’t been back here for years already; you don’t know what happened when you were gone, so we’d better be careful.” Chen Ge looked around and bent over to pick up the paper doll on the floor. The paper doll that had been tormented by the boy had its limbs almost torn off, and its expression was one of pain.

“Zhu Fengxi?” There was a name on the back of the doll. It was unknown what kind of ink it was, but based on Chen Ge’s experience, it felt like dried blood.

“This name is rather familiar.” Master Bai moved close to Chen Ge to take a look at the doll. “He sounds like one of the escapes from Coffin Village.”

“The dolls have the names of the escapees.” Chen Ge related this to the weird phenomena he had observed at Lin Guan Village. Many old houses had a cleaver behind the door and a rope by the window. Combining that with what had happened to them inside the house, he had a brief understanding why things were that way.

If a monster tried to crawl in through the window, then the rope was to tie around their neck, and the cleaver behind the door was for self-defense. The more isolated the village, the weirder the tradition—that was the only way Chen Ge could interpret these traditions.

Those who escaped from Coffin Village spent their days in fear. Could the thing that cause that fear be the ghost from Coffin Village? If they were captured, would they end up as paper dolls to be tormented eternally?

Chen Ge had another question that needed to be answer. Why did these people escape from Coffin Village in the first place? What kind of event transpired at this old village to cause a mass exodus?

To know all that, I'll need to find a villager to ask. Chen Ge pocketed the paper doll. "I have a plan to discuss with you."

"Tell me."

"First, we leave this village."

"Okay." Ol' Wei and Master Bai nodded. They also felt that the village was too dangerous.

"Then, we'll inspect each house, starting from the ones near the entrance, moving inwards. No matter what we come across, we must detain them." There was a sparkle in Chen Ge's eyes. "As long as we don't make too much noise, we should be able to take them down one by one."

Chen Ge had given his plan much thought. Whenever Xu Yin consumed a ghost, the blood stain on his clothes increased. Based on this progression, there was a high chance of him turning into a real Red Specter that night!

There was a great power difference between a normal Specter and a Red Specter. Without a Red Specter by his side, Chen Ge did not feel safe.

"You're planning to demolish a whole village?" Ol' Wei was a police officer, so he frowned when he heard Chen Ge's suggestion. However, Master Bai had gotten used to Chen Ge's crazy ideas.

“We should leave the village first before we decide what to do.” Master Bai walked ahead, his hand holding the jade. A pale-faced Ol’ Wei followed behind Master Bai, but Chen Ge stood where he was. After the three monsters were consumed by Xu Yin, the white cat did not return to normal. It was still hissing and scratching the backpack.

Something is still nearby. Chen Ge looked around him. A human head seemed to flash across the left wall of the room with the coffins.

The room next door? Chen Ge did not stay and walked out.

White lanterns hung on both sides of the road, shining a pale light. For some reason, Chen Ge had a feeling the number of white lanterns had increased. What is the meaning of these lanterns? If there’s a white lantern, meaning the place is occupied?

“Chen Ge, why aren’t you coming?”

“Coming.” Chen Ge passed the door next door, and he turned to look. The wooden door was locked, and weirdly enough, there was not a white lantern on this door. The thing I saw earlier wasn’t a ghost?

Chen Ge maintained his distance from Ol’ Wei and Master Bai, but he kept his attention on the road behind him. When he turned the corner and Chen Ge would be lost behind the wall, he slowed down, leaned back, and glanced down the corner. The door had been opened, and bright red graveclothes dangled at the door.

To not expose himself, Chen Ge stopped for less than one second, but his heart was gripped with concern. “The graveclothes moved on their own?”

They continued walking through the weird village decorated with white lanterns, followed by the red graveclothes. The wind blew, and it carried out voices from the houses on both sides. It sounded like laughter and tears. If one paid more attention, there was also the sound of chewing. As the night deepened, the village became creepier.

Other places become quieter at night, but this place is completely different. The later it gets, the livelier it becomes. Chen Ge tried to remember the ghosts that he had met that night. The ghost who wanted to drag me into the coffin inside the valley and the family of three seem to be different. In comparison, the one inside the village is smarter.

They had been inside Coffin Village less than half an hour, but so many weird things happened already. Chen Ge suspected that a blood door was hiding inside this village, and it was a door that was wide open without anyone watching over it!

If we search the houses one by one, eventually, we'll find that home in Fan Yu's drawing.

When Chen Ge turned the next corner, he glanced behind him. The graveclothes were collapsed on the floor and closer to them.

Being chased by clothes worn by dead people doesn't feel good. Chen Ge reached for the recorder, and he bumped into Ol' Wei. "Why did you stop?"

"Something is wrong..." Ol' Wei looked at completely unfamiliar street, and his face turned paler. "The road that we used earlier seemed to have disappeared."

"We're lost?" Chen Ge thought about it and patted Ol' Wei on his shoulder. "Don't worry, we only need to ask for directions."

"This place has more ghosts than people; who are you going to ask?" Ol' Wei said, but there was no reply. He turned around and saw Chen Ge walking away with the hammer.

“Don’t move away on your own! Slow down!” Ol’ Wei grabbed Master Bai and rushed after Chen Ge. Their combined age was more than one hundred, but they tried to keep up.

“I’m just trying to ask for directions, why are you guys following me?” Chen Ge did not want to expose Xu Yin before Ol’ Wei, so he moved his finger away from the recorder.

...

“There are no living souls in this village; who are you going to ask?” Ol’ Wei was worried that Chen Ge might do something stupid like using the hammer to break down the door of some of the houses.

“You’ll see.” Chen Ge told Ol’ Wei to keep quiet. He leaned against the wall by the corner. He counted his heartbeat and tightened his grip on the hammer. He waited for a full minute, but the red graveclothes did not show up. Chen Ge leaned forward, and the clothes had already disappeared. “It ran away?”

It had probably heard Ol’ Wei’s voice, so it had gone into hiding. Chen Ge leaned back against the wall and considered his next course of action.

Coffin Village is a three-star scenario, but the fright level so far hasn’t reached the standard of a three-star scenario. Chen Ge looked at the many houses that were no different from one another. Making us lose our way is just the beginning. The monsters inside this village are slowly waking up.

There had to be a Red Specter in the village somewhere!

That was what Chen Ge worried about the most; he knew how dangerous those two words could be.

Temporarily, there is no better option. I’ll need to continue this investigation and feed the stragglers to Xu Yin. If he can transform into a Red Specter tonight, even if I fail the mission, not all is lost. Chen Ge was a good person, but he was afraid of running into a bad Red Specter. If Xu Yin consumed so many spirits inside the village, it might anger the Specter.

Chen Ge calculated the ghosts that he had, and the only one he could depend on was Xu Yin. The newly acquired Yan Danian might be a Lesser Red Specter, but his last power had not been unlocked. Furthermore, based on his usual appearance, he did not look like a particularly aggressive spirit. If he was torn apart by the Red Specter, then Chen Ge would cry for a long time.

I'll need to be careful. Chen Ge reminded himself and turned toward Master Bai. "The monsters inside the village are rousing. You've been here before; do you know if there are any special buildings at this place?"

"There's an ancestral hall at the deepest part of the village; the place is forbidden to outsiders. The village has many wells, but the villagers normally go to the other side of the mountain to gather fresh water instead of using the wells. They gave wells a wide berth." Master Bai tried his best to jog his memory. "There's also another strange thing. This village has no village elder; the one who looked over everyone was a woman. She wasn't old and lived at the largest house alone."

"Forbidding outsiders from going to the ancestral hall is understandable, but why are they afraid of wells? Is the water tainted? Does the water caused the abnormalities?" Chen Ge was confused.

"The water was fine. My father once used a captured animal to test it out, and it was normal water. However, the villagers refused to drink it and even forbade us from doing more testing." Master Bai also did not know why.

"We have to pay attention to these places; the more they stop us from getting close to these places, the higher the chance they're hiding something."

"Okay, so where shall we go now?" Completely lost with the white lanterns swaying in the wind, it was scary.

"We'll keep moving on for now." The three went back down the road, but the old home with the coffins was gone. Instead, there were homes with white lanterns on their doors.

“Now, we’re truly trapped.” Master Bai’s hand went to the jade necklace on his neck. “It’s not good for us to keep going around in circles. Why don’t we just stay in one of the houses for the night?”

“The houses with white lanterns are mostly occupied by ghosts, but the information was given by the old lady. She might be trying to trick us.” Ol’ Wei thought back to what had happened that night, and it felt like a dream.

“Shall we go inside to confirm?” Master Bai walked to one of the homes. He raised his hand but did not dare to knock on it. The warning given by the old lady reverberated in his mind— Don’t knock on the door at night.

Chen Ge did not stop Master Bai. He was concentrating on what to do. He might have appeared rash, but that was because, of the three of them, he knew how dangerous Coffin Village was.

“We cannot stay at the same place anymore; it might attract the ghosts.” Chen Ge was trying to come up with a solution when the white cat in his backpack suddenly meowed. It was shrill and mixed with a rare emotion of fear. The last time Chen Ge heard this was at his Haunted House when the door in the toilet was almost open.

“Something is coming!” Chen Ge responded immediately. He grabbed Master Bai and Ol’ Wei, and the three of them rushed into the house with the white lantern.

“Chen Ge, what are you doing?”

“Shush, do not say a word!”

Chen Ge closed the wooden door, and in that instant, there were the cries of a baby coming from the street.

“Quiet!”

Seeing how intense Chen Ge was, Ol’ Wei and Master Bai were also made nervous. They stood where they were, unwilling to move. The crying sound came closer and closer. Even with their hands over their eyes, the blood-curdling cries still echoed in their brain.

Chen Ge’s upper body leaned forward; he did not dare to make a move lest he made a sound. He leaned closer to the middle gap in the door and used his Yin Yang Vision to look out at the street.

The lanterns hanging on the doors darkened like they were dyed red. The wind stopped howling, and only the baby's crying remained.

It's coming!

A small arm reached out from the corner. Chen Ge's pupils narrowed as he focused his gaze in that direction. Soon, the monster showed its face. It looked like a drowned baby. He had no hair, and his skin was bloated. His facial features were blurry, and he was swaddled in a red cloth!

A Red Specter? A Red Specter this young?

The baby continued crying. He crawled speedily on the ground like he was looking for something. He crawled until he reached the house that Chen Ge's group was hiding in.

The boy's face turned up, and the wrinkled skin was pulled back to reveal his real face. The baby had no eyes and nose but only three black holes and a weirdly-shaped mouth.

Chen Ge held his breath. He was thankful that he had brought the white cat with him because without its warning, with the monster's speed, he would not have had time to start the recorder before he was assaulted.

His finger pressed on the play button, and Chen Ge slowly bent his body down. His muscles tensed like a bow ready to fire. The memory of fighting the ghost stories society's Red Specter was still fresh in his mind. That day, he had summoned Xu Yin and the Pen Spirt at the same time, but they could barely stop the Red Specter for ten seconds. This was the second time he was going to face a Red Specter without Zhang Ya. Different from Fang Hwa Apartments, this time, he had brought all of the ghosts inside the Haunted House with him.

Ten against one, it should be fine!

His hair stood on end; Chen Ge was ready for combat. The ghost baby outside looked at the wooden door, and its body slowly turned wrinkled. Pungent red liquid seeped out of his skin, and after it landed to the floor, it circled around him like tadpoles. All the blood seemed to possess its own consciousness. It looked similar to the blood vessels on the monsters possessing the ghost stories society's member. It was filled with resentment and malice.

"The child looks only several months old—he shouldn't remember much about life—so how can he carry such strong resentment?" Chen Ge had not discovered all the details concerning the formation of a Red Specter. He knew what the key points were: they had to filled with resentment at the time of death, and they were naturally aggressive!

Red Specters were the representation of cruelty and violence. The first reaction when they saw other ghosts was to tear them open and consume them! Both Zhang Ya and Xu Yin showed this quality. Chen Ge did not dare let his guard down when facing the Red Specters.

The light shining from the lanterns dampened, and the street was slowly dyed red. The baby turned his body around, but he did not launch an attack directly. Instead, he crawled slowly toward the door. The blood flowed underneath him like it would rush at the door at any moment.

Chen Ge rehearsed the event in his mind. He would call out Xu Yin first and then jump back to use Yan Danian's power. Even if he could not pull the ghost baby into the comic, at least it would be able to slow him down. Using that chance, he would summon the other ghosts in the comic. With the collective power of all the ghosts, maybe they could ambush the ghost baby. Chen Ge had been avoiding altercations with Red Specters, but that did not mean that he was completely helpless.

The risk is huge, but if I can kill the ghost baby for Xu Yin to consume then he will certainly transform into a new Red Specter!

Thinking about this, Chen Ge made the decision to bet his life on this chance!

His Yin Yang Vision was radiating with coldness. He was completely ready when the ghost baby outside the door stopped. His wrinkled ears moved. A woman's voice was calling his name from somewhere faraway.

The ugly face showed a trace of fear and concern. The pool of blood on the floor returned to his body, and the skin returned to its usual plumpness. The ghost baby then left the scene quickly. When the ghost baby disappeared, Chen Ge loosened his tightly gripped fists, and he sighed.

Hard to tell whether his departure is a good thing or a bad thing.

Chen Ge's expression was complicated. The ghost baby's departure meant that he had avoided a battle that he would have had a hard time winning, but since the woman's voice could scare the baby away, this meant that the village had a Red Specter that was scarier than the ghost baby.

After all, it is a three-star scenario.

Massaging his fingers, Chen Ge straightened himself and returned to Ol' Wei and Master Bai. "Temporarily, it's fine. The thing has left."

"What happened earlier? What came? Did it stay outside the door for a while?" Ol' Wei rubbed his nose. "Even through the door, we could smell the pungent smell of blood."

"It was a little baby."

“A baby?”

“It’s hard to explain,” Chen Ge grumbled. “But remember this. If you see anything wearing red clothes in this village, go into hiding immediately. Do not try to fight it; running is probably pointless.”

“Red clothes...” Ol’ Wei nodded and remembered this warning. “So, where shall we go now?”

“Let’s stay here for now.” The night deepened, and more and more scary things started to appear inside Coffin Village, so Chen Ge did not dare move about wantonly. “This Coffin Village’s Trial Mission only asks me for one thing, but the difficulty is probably higher than the Third Sick Hall.”

Staying alive, two simple words, but for Chen Ge, it was a huge challenge.

Ghost baby and the woman who summoned the ghost baby away, Coffin Village has at least two Red Specters, and that woman is probably stronger than a normal Red Specter.

Chen Ge turned to look at his own shadow. Other than Zhang Ya and Xu Yin, the other Specters from his Haunted House only looked scary on the surface.

Thankfully, there was no fight, or the ten might have lost to the one.

Chen Ge patted the white cat on its head. The cat had done a good job, but it still had not recovered from the shock. Its pair of multi-colored eyes looked at Chen Ge with resentment, and the hair on its neck was still standing. “Don’t worry, tell me if there’s danger. I will not leave you behind.”

Chen Ge carried his backpack and stood in the courtyard with the hammer. The old house was huge. The courtyard was filled with weeds, and it had two dead trees. “There are lanterns on the door, so this place probably houses some ghosts. Be careful.”

“Chen Ge, wait a minute.” Master Bai used the flashlight to shine at the two trees. “Don’t you think these trees are familiar? Dried branches, exposed roots, and a bulging trunk. Doesn’t it look like the tree that covered the Zhu family’s eldest daughter?”

Chen Ge did feel that way after being reminded by Master Bai. At the time, Zhu Xinrou had been shoved into the hole under the tree headfirst. He pushed the tree, and the roots were already rotten. Chen Ge could see roughly someone was buried under the tree.

The three studied for a long time before they managed to identify the trees as locust trees.

“Locust trees are the most wicked of all the trees; this is the first time I have seen people planting locust trees above someone’s grave.” Master Bai gripped Chen Ge’s arm. “Let’s not create any more trouble. We’ll stay away from them, and perhaps they will leave us alone.”

“That’s hard to say. There are two bodies buried in the courtyard, so this place is definitely haunted. Perhaps we’ve already been targeted.”

“Why are you so intent on jinxing us?” Master Bai still minded these things, but Chen Ge was the complete opposite.

“It’ll be fine. Just follow behind me.” He walked through the courtyard with the hammer and entered the main room.

...

The layout of the old house was very interesting. There were bedrooms on each side of the main room, but there were no beds. Instead, each bedroom had a coffin in it.

“Have you noticed something peculiar about these houses?” Chen Ge leaned against the hammer and scanned his surroundings.

“You mean the coffins inside the house?” Master Bai pushed the door open through his clothes; he did not want to touch anything there.

Chen Ge shook his head. “Not that.

“The houses don’t seem to have an oven or a fire starter.”

Ol’ Wei looked at Master Bai. If Chen Ge had not brought that up, they would not have noticed this problem.

“The fire starter is the place where people light a fire and cook meals. Without that, how are they supposed to eat?” Chen Ge sat on the chair, and his tone slowed down, “Or do the villagers not need to eat? Is this a dead person’s home? If that is true, then it would make sense to have coffins instead of beds.”

His voice was calm, but it sent chills up his two listeners’ spines.

“The white lanterns, white paper on the door, coffin in the room, could this whole village be a Ghost Village?”

Chen Ge thought back to the information he found when he was building the Minghun scenario.

“There was a story about a massacre that happened to a village deep in the mountains during the war period. Several years later, people got lost inside the mountain, and they accidentally wandered inside the village. Then they saw every family was having a funeral, and the villagers looked weird. The outsiders didn’t dare ask any question and escaped the village in the middle of the night. When they returned to the village in the morning, the place had been abandoned for a long time already, and there was no sign of people living there.”

“Coffin Village is scarier than that. I feel this place has a bigger secret that we haven’t uncovered yet.” Chen Ge placed the hammer on his feet and cupped his chin in his palm. “The people in this village are much more complicated than we think. There are original villagers that turned into ghosts, escaped villagers who were captured, and then us outsiders. The old lady’s soul had no need to lie to us about the outsiders. Other than us, other people are also trapped inside this village. No matter who they were, I think we should meet up with them.”

“But how do we do that? We can’t even find a way out ourselves.”

“I think we need to be more careful of our surroundings then.” Chen Ge then turned to look outside. He accidentally saw half a human face lying on the wall.

“What did you see?”

“There was a human face on the wall. I saw it once inside the previous home. At the time, it flashed past temporarily, and then I saw a set of graveclothes walking out the door; it was following us.” Chen Ge told the situation to Ol’ Wei and Master Bai.

“He’s just next door; shall we go take a look?” Ol’ Wei was just suggesting that; he did not want to wander off.

“If the person wants to run, we won’t be able to catch it.” Chen Ge looked at the wall. “I have a feeling it has a reason for following us, and it didn’t seem like it’s going to harm us.”

He just finished when the front door slowly opened and bright red graveclothes stood in the middle of the door.

“Don’t fret. This is the thing that has been following us.”

In the middle of the night, the door was pushed open, and the graveclothes stood alone. Anyone would have been scared looking at this.

“Are you a person or a ghost?” Chen Ge stood inside the room and hid the hammer behind him. The person seemed to struggle for a long time before coming to a decision. The graveclothes were opened from the middle, and they were hiding a thin, short man. His lips fell open, and after a long time, he said, “I’m here to help you.”

“Help us? Wonderful, why don’t you come in first?” Chen Ge smiled kindly. He gripped the hammer; he wanted to trick the man to come into the room first. The man shook his head. He had been following Chen Ge, so he knew Chen Ge’s tricks.

“I’ll just stay out here.” The man removed the graveclothes, and when his body completely removed itself from the graveclothes, Chen Ge saw that the man had one large arm and one small arm.

“I’ve seen you when you entered the village, but before I could accost any of you, you were tricked away by the ghosts. I was worried, so I trailed behind you while wearing the ghost’s graveclothes. I wanted to find the chance to save you.”

The man sounded sincere, but Chen Ge did not believe that the man would put himself in such danger for a stranger. “You followed us just so you can save us?”

“Saving you is saving me. You might not believe me, but if we are unable to leave this village tonight, we’re all going to die.” The man lowered his voice, and fear and anxiety were apparent in his tone. “The door will open tonight, and the thing will come out from behind the door again.”

“The door will open tonight?” Chen Ge frowned. “You’re one of the original villagers here, right? Can you tell us what happened to Coffin Village? Why did it turn into its current situation?”

“Coffin Village? I guess the name fits.” The man closed the door and walked to the middle of the courtyard. It was hard to tell how old he was from his looks. “No one can remember this village’s original name. The reason it has become like this has plenty to do with a woman.

“Our village is hidden deep inside the forest, and this isolates us from the rest of the world. It was very difficult for a man to find an unrelated wife, so we settled with close marriage. However, that led to many abnormalities.

“The elder at the time worried that we would die out eventually, so after a discussion with the villagers, they decided to ‘kidnap wives’ from the outside. The first few times were perfectly fine. If the new wife refused to listen, they would be locked up, starved, and beaten. Eventually, they would learn.

“However, the last time, they caught the young lady of a scholar’s family. She was stubborn and refused to submit. She escaped several times, and she was almost beaten to death every time. It was not until she was pregnant that she stopped running away. The villagers thought that was the end of her resistance.

“But just as the girl’s new family was preparing to celebrate the happy occasion, she jumped into the well.”

Chapter 320: Sacrifice!

“One body, two deaths. All the villagers said that the woman was unlucky, so they found a few young fellas to come crack open the well to haul the body up. However, weird things happened then. The woman’s head was facing downward when she jumped, but half way through the digging, people saw the woman’s face turning upward.

“The dead person’s face was soaked until it was white. Her eyes were bulging, staring at the people outside the well. With guilt suffocating their hearts, the young men were all spooked, and none had the courage to continue digging.

“But they couldn’t just leave the body inside the well. The elder discussed this with the girl’s new family, and they would provide the money to hire outsiders to dig the well. However, when they returned to the well the next day, the body, which had been facing upward, changed to legs facing upwards. It looked like she was trying to swim deeper into the well.

“Those who saw this reported it to the elder. To prevent panic, the elder said the earlier digging must have affected the water flow and the body slipped down on its own. No one bought this excuse, and on the third day, the villagers discovered that the body inside the well had disappeared!

“There are in total four wells around the village. They were built on top of the same underground river. Since the body had disappeared, they thought it might float up in any one of them. Then weird things continued to happen. The well that the woman died in was the west well, so to avoid her, many people went to the east well.

“The water looked normal, but when they used it to cook rice, they would discover woman’s long hair in the rice. One week later, those who lived near the well heard the sound of water splashing in the middle of the night like something was climbing up the wall of the well.

“The following day, the villagers discovered the woman’s husband dead in his own bedroom. The woman’s husband was one with a deformity; he had a problem on his face and his arms. When he died, his head was shoved inside a water barrel, cause of death was drowning. This sent a wave of panic through the village. The elder called everyone and suggested calling a doctor from outside to take a look, but before the doctor arrived, the livestock in the village started to die by massive numbers.

“Some who were afraid uprooted and left. However, the scariest thing was, every night, those deserters would be found deposited at the valley in front of the village with various causes of death.

“It appeared like whoever drank the well water would be dragged back and killed. The villagers didn’t have time to build coffins and have funerals because there were too many dead people, so they just left them half-buried.

“Escaping the village meant certain death, and staying behind wasn’t going to save us either. The villagers tried many things, but they couldn’t do anything to the female ghost. Her resentment was too deep, and every night, one or two families would be found dead.

“The number of deaths soared. The people here were superstitious, and we believed if the dead weren’t buried inside coffin, they would return as a hungry ghost. No one knew who would die next, but death was coming. Therefore, every family started to make their own coffins, and this was why each family had coffins instead of beds.

“One month later, the woman finally stopped, but by then, there was no normal looking person left in the village. She had killed every normal person and sinner in the village.

“Then, people understood what she was trying to do. It was because the villagers were afraid of the effects of consanguineous marriages on the future generations that they started kidnapping outside women. Thus, the female ghost would kill all the normal villagers and leave behind the abnormal monsters inside the village. Her message was—let the villagers only show themselves as monsters!”

The more the man got through his story, the more agitated he became. He waved his arms of different lengths. “The ancestry’s lineage has been corrupted, and only monsters remain in the village. Those who were born normal were killed, and only deformed creatures please the woman and might escape her wicked claws.”

The man’s story was rather heavy. Chen Ge did not say anything; it was Ol’ Wei who spoke first. “My identity aside, there’s no one I hate more than human kidnappers.”

“That happened many years ago, and the people have been punished and killed. Now, only the innocent are being affected.” The man waved his arm. “No one wishes to be a monster. When I saw my reflection in the water, I wanted to die, but I’m not satisfied!”

He clenched his fists, and it looked funny, but no one was laughing.

“If this was one year ago, I wouldn’t have thought to resist, but things are different.” There was an indescribable expression on his despair-filled face. “I have my own child, a little boy with no deformities.”

“You have your own child?”

“Yes, it is miracle. Two monsters with their own child.” The man sighed. “I cannot leave him here; he’ll be targeted by the woman. Even if the woman doesn’t discover my child, the other monsters in the village will sacrifice him to her to save their own lives.”

Chen Ge heard the anomaly in the man’s words. “The other villagers will sacrifice your child?”

“The people here have gone insane. No, they can’t even be known as people anymore.” The man’s nails scratched his skin. “Many years ago, when the ghost massacred the village, only one family escaped her vengeance. The family had a single daughter. The family was the Zhu family.

“It was this Zhu woman who aided her first escape. After the woman got caught, even the Zhu daughter suffered the same fate and got tied up and beaten. Then, when the woman got bullied, it was often this Zhu woman who came to her aid. That was probably why Zhu family was spared.

“As the number of villagers dwindled, the remaining villagers asked the Zhu woman to become the new elder to protect themselves. They wanted her to communicate with the female ghost. The villagers thought she would help them beg for mercy, but reality was different. The Zhu woman sided with the ghost, and she became the tool for the ghost to manage the village.

“To enjoy better torment, the ghost demanded that whenever we spot a normal newborn, we have to carry it to the Zhu woman. If someone dares to hide that secret, they will be tortured and killed!

“No one knows what happens to the babies after they are brought to the Zhu family. We only know that after the Zhu woman carries the babies into her darkened home, they never return.”

His eyes were filled with fear and uncertainty. The man clasped his abnormal hands together. “This rule persists until today. My boy’s situation has been exposed to the villagers, so I can only choose to collaborate with you outsiders. Please take my son out of this place before it is too late!”

Chen Ge's group of three looked at the man before them, and each of them had a different expression.

"Is what you're saying real?" Master Bai was shocked. He and his father had come to Coffin Village a long time ago. At the time, he had only thought the villagers looked weird, but other than that, they were no different from normal people. He did not expect they would be hiding such a scary secret.

...

"Yes, it's all real." The man took several steps forward and stood inside the inner room's door. "I could keep all this to myself, but I told you everything. This is proof of my sincerity."

It was quite curious to hear a deformed man saying these words inside a village filled with coffins. Master Bai and Ol' Wei looked at each other before their gaze collectively fell on Chen Ge.

"Wait a minute, I want to ask him a question first." Chen Ge asked for the man to move forward. "How shall I refer to thee?"

"You can call me Ah Qing."

"Okay." Chen Ge walked to the man, dragging the hammer. "You can get us out?"

"Yes, I know the way, and I have that power." The man was urgent, like he was running out of time.

"In that case, why didn't you leave the village with your son on your own?" From Chen Ge's perspective, they were using each other. Since Ah Qing had volunteered his service then there had to be something useful on the outsiders for him, "You're afraid of being chased by the spirits, so you're planning to use us as bait?"

"No, that's really not my intention!" Ah Qing waved his hands. He was trapped inside the village and had little interaction with the outside world. His expression was obvious, and it showed his real thoughts easily.

“Then, why do you need us?”

“The first month after a baby is born, the Zhu woman pays the family a visit personally to inspect the baby. If the baby is normal, she takes the baby away, but there was an exception.” An Qing counted on his finger. “Every year, on the day the female ghost jumped into the well, the village will hold a sacrificial ceremony. Around that time, the Zhu woman collects all the babies born in the village for the past three months. She will carry them into a room and let the female ghost choose the sacrifice.”

“Today is the day she jumped into the well. The ceremony is starting soon; this is our chance! When the ceremony starts, everyone will be summoned by the ghost, but as long as we manage to sneak into the building to steal the baby away before she wakes up, it’ll be fine!”

“You sure are optimistic.” Chen Ge interrupted the man. “The female ghost, you’re saying, has the power to wipe out an entire village with her own power. Even if we manage to escape, I don’t see why she would leave us be.”

“This is the best solution.” Ah Qing’s nails dug into his flesh. “The female ghost’s resentment is only directed at this village; she doesn’t seem interested in outsiders.”

“Is that true?”

Ah Qing nodded with difficulty. “Just as she has never harmed the Zhu woman, I’ve never seen the female ghost attack an outsider. When you see my child, bring him away, and I will go back to the village. If you’re accidentally exposed, I’ll try my best to buy you some time.”

“But the key problem is, your child is a villager. If we bring him with us, it might get us targeted by the female Specter.”

“If she chases after you...” Ah Qing released his tightened hand and sighed with resignation. “Then you can put my son down and run away on your own.”

Master Bai felt pity for the man. "Why don't we promise him for now? After all, we don't have any better options."

"The man's words have too many holes," Ol' Wei commented. "He said that female ghost wouldn't hurt outsiders, but count the amount of times we've been assaulted since we entered this village. I believe he just wants to take our lives as bet. If we're really chased by the female ghost, both us and the child won't be safe."

"The things that happened to you so far have nothing to do with the female ghost." An Qing sighed. "There are fewer and fewer living souls in the village, and this attracted plenty of Yin energy. This is not something that I can explain easily. In summary, the population of this village is ten percent living, ten percent dead and eighty percent ghost."

Ol' Wei still wanted to ask something when Ah Qing put the graveclothes back on. "The ceremony is starting soon. If you miss this chance, there will be no chance of leaving in the future!"

"Why don't we follow him? After all, it's unsafe to stay here, and the ghost baby knows that we're here." Chen Ge put the hammer inside his backpack.

"Er... why don't you leave your bag here?" Ah Qing's voice came out from the graveclothes. "The graveclothes of Coffin Village can hide you from the detection of the ghosts to a certain degree, but your backpack is too obvious."

"It'll be fine." Chen Ge took out the recorder and walked into the adjacent bedroom.

"What are you doing? We don't have much time."

"Taking some graveclothes. It won't take much time." Chen Ge closed the bedroom door and hit the play button. One minute later, Chen Ge exited the room with two sets of graveclothes he found inside the bedroom.

"These are for both of you. Consider putting them on when the situation calls for it." Chen Ge passed them to Ol' Wei and Master Bai. Master Bai had the protection of the jade necklace, so Chen Ge did not worry that much about him. The issue was Ol' Wei; he did not want something bad to this retiring policeman.

"You took these from the coffin?" Ah Qing looked at the clothes Chen

Ge was holding. The fabric still had signs of nail clawing. Since the man was perfectly unscathed, the claw marks were probably made by the original owner of these graveclothes.

“Yes, I saw them deserted, so I picked them up.” Chen Ge smiled.
“Don’t worry, if there’s a chance, I’ll return them in the future.”

Ah Qing moved his gaze away, not daring to meet Chen Ge’s eyes. The man gave him a unique feeling. Standing in the dark, he was filled with power and hope, like the sun was surrounding him.

“Follow me closely, and put on the graveclothes or you might run into ghosts,” Ah Qing said as he moved forward. He stuck to the left wall and turned left at every corner. After eight minutes, different buildings appeared on both sides of the street.

“I’ll bring you to the center of the village; the ceremony will start there.” Ah Qing led Chen Ge’s group into an old home. “I hear outsiders will be participating in this year’s ceremony. I will find some way to contact them, to hear what they have to say.”

“Other outsiders?” The main reason Chen Ge’s group had entered the village was to search for Fan Yu and Jiang Ling, so when they heard there were other outsiders, their ears perked up.

“Before you arrived, two kids accidentally entered the village because they were lost.” Ah Qing tried to remember the details. “A boy and a girl. The boy is very thin and of average height. The girl looks about four; she’s just like a China doll, very cute.”

“Fan Yu and Jiang Ling!” Hearing Ah Qing’s description, Chen Ge’s speculation was confirmed. He grabbed Ah Qing’s graveclothes. “Where are they now? Bring me to see them!”

“I don’t think that’s possible.” Ah Qing tried to pry Chen Ge’s hand away, but he realized that the thin-looking man before him was quite strong. “When they entered the village, they were spotted by the other villagers. Then the Zhu woman appeared and personally arranged a place for them to stay. She paid special attention to the girl.”

“According to rumors, that Zhu woman plans to have the girl join the ceremony. At the time, I was also confused. This is the first time in decades that someone from the outside has joined the ceremony.” Ah Qing finally stopped struggling and allowed Chen Ge to grip his shoulder.

Did the woman notice Jiang Ling’s history? She plans to gift Jiang Ling to the female ghost? Chen Ge started to think. Zhu Xinrou is staying by Jiang Ling’s side, and she wouldn’t let any harm come to Jiang Ling, so there are only two possibilities. Either Zhu woman has some method to suppress Zhu Xinrou, or Jiang Ling joined the ceremony voluntarily.

On the drawing that Fan Yu had left behind, he had written two words—Going Home. There had to be a reason they returned to Coffin Village that night. Coincidentally, that day was the day the ghost stories society made their move and placed their target on Jiang Ling. All roads led back to Coffin Village.

Other than the villagers at Coffin Village, I have to be cautious of the society's members. Chen Ge released his grasp and patted Ah Qing's shoulder lightly. "If possible, try to bring that thin boy out."

"Understood." Ah Qing rubbed his shoulder. "When the ceremony starts, the whole village will be affected. The maze will automatically be deactivated, and the sleeping monsters will awake. You'll see this village's real face."

He spoke very fast, and he kept looking around. "There have been too many deaths in this village, collecting a heavy amount of Yin energy. It's the perfect birthing ground for ghosts and monsters. They will wake up following the ceremony. You have to be careful, don't taunt them. After stealing the baby, leave immediately."

"But how are we supposed to steal the baby?"

"The ceremony starts at the ancestral hall that is in the middle of the village. All the children will be taken inside the ancestral hall, and then the procession will move toward the well that the woman died in. All you need to do is sneak into the ancestral hall after the procession leaves to find a baby with a copper coin around his neck and bring him away with you." Ah Qing paused and took out a cloth from his pocket with hesitation. "The village layout can get quite complicated. Some roads lead to hidden monsters and ghosts. If you want to leave, follow this map."

He handed the cloth to Chen Ge. "You have to save my son!"

After that, Ah Qing left in a hurry. Chen Ge looked at the cloth in his hand. It was a simple map for Coffin Village, and more than twenty spots were marked with a red cross.

"He trusts us so much to leave the map with us? Isn't he afraid we'll leave without saving his child?" Master Bai looked at the map, and his heart was chilled. He had been to many places with crosses when he was young, but at the time, it had been during the day.

Chen Ge shook his head. "The man has planned this for a long time. He wouldn't commit such a careless mistake. This could be a fake map and the real one is probably on the baby."

The streets outside started to change. All the white lanterns were extinguished at once, casting the whole village into darkness. In the silence of the night, someone's house was pushed open, and a woman's voice rang in the dark.

She seemed to be calling someone's name like she was trying to rouse them. The doors were pushed open, and footsteps echoed on the street. The deformed villagers exited their homes with masks on their faces. They held white lanterns in their hands, but none spoke. They passed the door of the old home Chen Ge's group was hiding in and stopped about ten meters away. The woman's screamed became clearer, and the weird village was shedding its disguise.

Night fell like silver, suffocating those underneath it. Blood stains started to surface on the village's clean walls, and scratch marks as well as knife marks appeared on the ground. The things that once happened at this village had been bloodier and scarier than Ah Qing's described. The story he told was probably part of the whole truth.

The maze was broken, and where all the streets intertwined was an old ancestral hall. Standing just next to this building was a bright red coffin!

The woman's voice stopped. The deformed villagers stood before the ancestral hall. They looked like soulless puppets with their heads lowered and hands holding the lanterns. No one spoke; the place was deathly quiet.

Creak...

A door of a two-story building next to the ancestral hall was pushed open. The building was the tallest inside the village and was also the best preserved. The darkened home puffed out a cold draft. Several minutes later, a woman in a bright red dress came out of it. Her face was white and lips purple like a frozen dead person.

Her eyes scanned all the villagers as she walked to the ancestral hall. She gesticulated to the coffin three times, mumbling some local language. When she was done, several villagers come out of the crowd holding bamboo baskets. The baskets were covered with a layer of fabric, and the crying of babies came out from underneath it.

The woman walked past them one by one, lifting the cloth off to inspect the product closely. When she came to the forth basket, she stopped and opened her lips to say something. The one holding the fourth basket was Ah Qing in his mask. His arms of different lengths shuddered like the woman was telling him something scary. After looking at all the babies, the woman pulled out a bloodied scissors from inside her sleeve.

She stood beside the coffin and had the first villager place the basket in the middle of the ancestral hall. Then she walked into the hall with the pair of scissors. The door closed, and the baby cried. The plaques in the hall creaked, and all the villagers lowered their head with despair. Only the red coffin at the door emitted the echoes of a laugh.

The door of the ancestral hall opened again. The scissors in her hands were dripping with blood, matching the color of her dress. Seeing this, the villager who sent the basket into the ancestral hall collapsed to the ground. She tried to hold it in, but she still cried. No one came to help her; no one even dared raise their head to look.

The woman walked out the ancestral hall to stop beside the coffin. She whispered to the coffin like she was communicating with the thing inside it. Then, she turned to speak to the villagers.

The villager who held the second basket kept shaking her head like she was unwilling to give her child away. The woman held out three fingers; before she finished the countdown, the villagers beside the second villager grabbed the basket away from her and placed it before the woman.

The hand that held the scissors lifted up the basket. With the smell of blood surrounding him, the baby cried harder, but no one dared to stop this travesty. The woman entered the ancestral hall, and the door slammed shut. No one knew what happened inside.

The ceremony continued. As the babies' cries rose, Coffin Village turned creepier and creepier. Strange eyes opened in the dark.

Chen Ge and Ol' Wei, who were hiding in the room, also faced a problem. The relatively quiet courtyard started to move. The soil loosened like something was trying to crawl out. The pieces of fabric that were tied to the beam fluttered in the wind. Some of them seemed to be covering twisted faces. Shadows were cast on the windows, and there were weird noises inside the room like someone was knocking on the wooden bedframe from underneath the bed.

The ghosts were waking up, and horror gripped every villager's heart. The old door of the ancestral hall was pushed open, and the crying stopped. The blood trailed down the scissors, and even against the red of her dress, one could pick out the blood stains.

That's the second one. Chen Ge kept his gaze on Ah Qing. The man's arms kept shaking. The woman stood beside the coffin. A woman's cackles could be heard coming out from the coffin; it was like a curse that could not be broken.

The hand that held the scissors rose. The woman seemed to understand the meaning of the red coffin. She turned to look at the villager holding the third basket.

Detached, aloof, and hopeless, the villager voluntarily placed the basket before the woman. When the woman took the third basket inside the hall, the ceremonial table shook, and the plaques all fell to the floor like they could not witness this anymore.

The door slammed shut, and the baby's crying intensified before it stopped suddenly. Blood seeped out from the door, and various voices echoed around the village like the ground itself was crying.

The old house Chen Ge's group was in started to change. The coffins in the bedroom creaked. The eyes of the people in the pictures on the wall flew open, and their expressions twisted with pain. The female ghost seemed to be tormenting the people inside the village. Even when they were dead, they were not going to have their release.

The woman came out of the ancestral hall for the third time. Blood trailed down her dress, and Chen Ge finally understood why she was wearing such a bright red dress. With every step, a bloodied footprint formed on the ground. The woman asked the coffin, but only laughter was her answer.

Hearing this sound, Ah Qing's quivering legs finally gave. He crumbled to the floor, and his arms of uneven length held tight to the bamboo basket. The woman held out her three fingers, and the other villagers wearing the masks forcibly separated Ah Qing from the basket. Before the countdown finished, the basket was handed to the woman.

The ancestral hall's door closed. No one knew what the woman did to the baby, but they knew all the souls in the village were crying. The forgiveness that the villagers prayed for did not happen. It was not until all the babies were carried inside the ancestral hall that the laughter inside the coffin stopped.

The woman's dress was completely drenched. She put the scissors away and had the villagers open the red coffin. There was no body inside the coffin but a set of jewelry. They were probably what the woman had been wearing when she was kidnapped to Coffin Village. The woman put the jewelry on piece by piece. The more she added to her body, the chillier her presence became, and even her skin turned whiter.

After putting on all the jewelry, the woman walked into the crowd. The villagers moved away, and only a pair of boy and girl remained in the center of the ground. The boy was thin, and even though he was surrounded by such a creepy environment, he did not feel fear.

The girl's reaction was completely different from the boy. Her body was shaking, and she looked pitiable like a newborn kitten. The children were Fan Yu and Jiang Ling.

"Welcome home, no one will be able to harm you here." The woman touched Jiang Ling's head. She held her hand and led her toward the village entrance. The other villagers followed behind with the white lanterns. The crowd soon left the center of the village, taking Fan Yu and Jiang Ling with them.

Based on the woman's tone, it doesn't sound like they will harm Jiang Ling. Fan Yu escorted Jiang Ling home, so they have no reason to harm him either.

With his Yin Yang Vision, he could see the wounds on Fan Yu's body. His shirt had been torn apart by branches, his arms were scratched, and there were mosquito bite marks on his face. To protect Jiang Ling, he had suffered quite a bit.

The woman said no one can harm Jiang Ling here, so it does look like Jiang Ling and Fan Yu had to run back here to protect themselves. Chen Ge thought about it from another perspective. In Jiujiang, the only party that can cause Jiang Ling's sister such pressure that they had to escape is probably the ghost stories society.

The village was still changing. Chen Ge did not dare to delay. He called Master Bai and Ol' Wei as they headed for the ancestral hall. Once he pushed the door open, the smell of blood hit them like wave. The scene they saw made them frown.

"Would the woman have... those babies..."

Chen Ge entered the ancestral hall. The ceremonial table was covered with dust like it had not been cleaned for a long time already. The plaques were on the floor. Some were cracked, but no one had cleaned them up.

“Chen Ge, this blood probably didn’t come from the babies.” Ol’ Wei touched the blood on the floor. “When the woman entered the ancestral hall, she was holding a pair of scissors. If that was from a murder, the blood splatter wouldn’t have been so uniform.”

“In other words, the babies might be safe?” Chen Ge followed the trail of blood and eventually stopped at the corner of the hall where a bunch of trash was piled up. He moved it away and discovered an underground tunnel.

“Stay out here. I’ll go take a look.” Chen Ge pressed on the recorder and climbed into the tunnel. The tunnel was only three meters wide, and the end was covered by a wooden board. Chen Ge pushed the board aside and found himself inside the two-story building next to the ancestral hall.

Isn't the home for the Zhu woman?

Chapter 324 - Approved by the Spectres

Chapter 324: Approved by the Spectres

Chen Ge crawled out of the tunnel and looked around. There were no windows in the room, and not far from the mouth of the tunnel were a few livestock that had just died.

Hearing the faded sound of a baby crying, he followed the voice and went up to the second floor. The room felt obviously feminine. There was simple furniture in the room. Different from other village homes, there was not a coffin but a wooden bed.

Pulling the heavy curtain back, there were several bamboo baskets placed next to each other on the wooden bed, and each baby's lips were covered with a piece of grass. The grass seemed to have some sort of tranquilizing effect. Even though the babies were taken away from their parents, they did not cry that heavily.

“The reason the Zhu woman takes the babies away every time is to save them?” Chen Ge found a notebook underneath the pillow. He flipped it open and realized it recorded a list of names and address. The author of this notebook was probably barely literate, so most of the pages were represented by symbols.

“The Zhu woman outside looks to be in her thirties or forties, but this book is already yellowed; this should be from many years ago.” Chen Ge read through the book, but he could not understand the content. It looked like Chinese, but Chen Ge could not recognize the characters. “The addresses are fuzzy. I can recognize a few of the names. Could they be the children that were rescued?”

“You're right. These are all the children that I've managed to smuggle out.” An old lady's voice suddenly came out from behind him. Chen Ge turned with his finger on the recorder. “I should be the one that's afraid, or do you think this old lady that has one foot in the grave can still harm you?”

The old lady's speech was off, probably because she had no teeth. Chen Ge walked deeper into the room with the recorder. In a small room, he found a seriously hunchbacked old lady with wrinkled face. She was leaning against the wooden bed. Both of her legs and one arm had severely atrophied, and she could only barely move her head and the remaining arm.

"Madam, you are?" The woman looked so old that Chen Ge felt the need to show her respect. The senior looked at Chen Ge and smiled. "I'm someone who is favored by the Specters."

Hearing that, Chen Ge's mind woke up. He could not have been more familiar with that term!

"You have this sense of familiarity about you. You have interacted with them before, yes?" The 'them' on the old lady's lips naturally referred to the baleful Specters.

"You're right. I've not only interacted with them; I've built them a home to give them a place to live."

"Then, you're much stronger than I am." The old lady tried her best to express her goodwill. "Come, take a seat. I didn't hear the door open, so you must have entered from the tunnel connected to the ancestral hall. I believe you're here to smuggle the babies away while the ceremony is ongoing?"

"Yes, that is the plan." Chen Ge did not get close to the old lady, but he did move his finger away from the recorder.

"It is as I thought; those who are favored by the Specters have something approved by the Specters." The woman's voice was flat but comforting.

"Something approved by the Specters?"

"Yes." The old woman nodded with difficulty. With Chen Ge pressing her, she told Chen Ge what really happened that year. It was similar to what Ah Qing had said, the only difference being the baleful Specter was not completely inhumane. She still had some humanity left. The old woman had once told the woman 'three times', so she promised to do three things for her that were not out of bounds.

She was also showed some kindness to the old lady, like she would never enter the old lady's home, and whenever a Specter in the village tried to harm the old lady, she would consume them.

“She massacred the village, and all the sinners were killed. I can understand why she did that. In fact, I agreed with her actions, but what happened next unsettled me.” The old lady’s physical condition was weak. She needed to rest after speaking for some time. “A red door suddenly appeared at the family home that she stayed in, and only she can open the door. She planned to leave the village and let go of her resentment after massacring the village. She planned to enter the door before leaving the village, and that was when the problem started.

“When she exited the door, resentment consumed her, and her eyes were filled with venom; she had morphed into a different person. I don’t know what happened behind the door, but I could see that she was filled with hatred. She planned to trap the future generations of sinners here and force them to live their lives as monsters. Her mind became so twisted that those who looked normal became sinners in her eyes.”

There was deep pain in the old lady’s voice. “I have no power to stop her; the only thing I can do is use my own method to save some innocent children when she was in a rage. Like what you saw today, every year, she will awaken to enter the world behind the door. If the children were placed somewhere else, she will definitely kill them, so the only safe refuge for these innocent lives is my home. After surviving tonight, once she exits the door, she will go back to sleep.”

The old lady did not know what was behind the door; all she knew was that the ghost would enter the door every year around this time.

“Those who drank the well water will never escape; she haunts us forever. That is the reason I only save newborns.”

“Forever? But around one and a half decades ago, some villagers managed to escape, and nothing happened to them.” Chen Ge was referring to Jiang Ling’s father and the rest.

“That was an accident. Around one and a half decades ago, she entered the door, but that night, she did not return. The villagers lived the whole month in fear. When they found out she still hadn’t returned, some thought she had died behind the door.

“At the time, two voices appeared within the village: one was to stay inside the mountain, and the other was to use this opportunity to escape. In the end, those with minor deformities chose to escape. On the third day of their escape, she returned.

“I begged her to let them go. I used two favors in exchange for twenty years of safety for them.”

The old lady started to cough violently. Chen Ge did not dare press her anymore; he had found out enough from the senior.

“Madam, please take a good rest. I’m not going to disturb you anymore. I’ll only take one of the babies; that is a promise I made with one of the villagers.” Chen Ge turned to find Ah Qing’s boy.

However, he only took several steps before the old lady spoke again. “Actually, there’s another reason why I called for you.”

“Is it related to the female ghost?” Chen Ge had found the baby with the coin around his neck. He looked so cute.

The old lady shook her head. She kept her gaze on Chen Ge’s face. “Did you discover that your body temperature is dropping?”

Chapter 325 - Crying Soul

Chapter 325: Crying Soul

His hand hanging over the bamboo basket, Chen Ge slowly turned around. Starting from several days ago, he had discovered the changes to his body. Even if he had only three to four hours of sleep, he would still wake up refreshed the next morning, his senses were extra sensitive in the dark, and his mind turned agile. The only drawback was the sudden chill that gripped his body. It would not be alleviated even if he wore thick layers.

“Looks like you’ve noticed it.” The old lady raised her arm to reveal the row of red pieces of string that were tied around her wrist. Each string was attached to a small jade pearl. “Of course, a living person will not be able to digest the Specters’ favors. A few years after the village massacre, probably due to my constant interactions with ghosts, weird things started happening to my body, the most obvious being the drop in body temperature. No matter the season, my body rarely feels warmed.”

Chen Ge had the condition the old lady described, but there was a small difference between them. Chen Ge held the basket that carried Ah Qing’s children and returned to the small room. “Granny, you noticed the drop in your body temperature a few years after dealing with the Specters?”

“To be accurate, it was ten years later, and at the time, I was just like you; I didn’t pay it much attention.” The old woman sounded kind. “Your condition is still light, so you must have started interacting with them several years ago, right?”

“Several years?” Chen Ge’s eyes twitched, and after some hesitation, he told the truth. “I saw my first baleful Specter several weeks ago.”

The room became silent. The old lady stuttered, probably due to old age, “Sev... several weeks ago?”

“In any case, it’s less than a month.” Chen Ge touched the back of his hand, and it did feel colder than normal.

"I live in a haunted village and thus interact with ghosts often; the noticeable changes occurred a few years later. You only saw Specters several weeks ago, so how come the body temperature changed so soon?" There was confusion in the old lady's voice. "Did you garner the attention of many ghosts at the same time?"

"Not really." Chen Ge counted in his heart. "Those directly related to me are like ten."

The old lady was silent as she processed this message.

"Probably it has to do with my home. I live inside a Haunted House, so you can consider them my housemates." Chen Ge turned to look at his shadow. "Right, there's also a Red Specter hiding in my shadow; she sticks close to me."

The old lady did not speak. Using her own arm as support, she nudged backward like she was trying to get away from Chen Ge. Noticing the changes to the old lady's behavior, Chen Ge was unsettled. "Granny, how did you resolve the problem? If the issue isn't solved, what will happen in the future?"

"Our situations are not the same; I don't think I can help you." The old lady removed a piece of string from her wrist. "Extended exposure to ghosts will gather Yin energy inside the body. The bead on this string is made from Heat Jade. The people rear the jade, and the jade rears the people. If you wear this long enough, the Heat Jade will balance the Yin and Yang energies in your body. Other than that, you'll need to go to crowded palaces and absorb the sunlight."

"I'll remember that." Chen Ge nodded. There would be crowds at New Century Park in the morning, and the number of visitors would only increase.

"Be careful, my legs became like this because I didn't pay close attention to this." The old lady tied the string back on her wrist. "Actually, I planned to give you several jade beads, but based on your situation, even if I give you all of my Heat Jades, it won't be useful. The key now lies in you." She looked at the row of babies on the wooden bed. "There is a difference between humans and ghosts; make sure that line is still there."

"Okay." Chen Ge was frustrated, but he had no solution. He did not tell the senior that Specters' Favored was just the beginning for him. After winning five baleful Specters, his title might upgrade!

“If there’s nothing else, take the child and leave. The person hosting the ceremony is called Zhu Shumei; she’s my handpicked successor. She’s a kind woman, and as long as you do not purposely show up before her, she will not harm you.” The old lady raised her hand. “After midnight, the creatures inside this village will rouse. Be careful when you leave the village, do not enter doors that are open, do not answer when people call your name, hide when you see bright lights, and do not touch any of the coffins.”

After thanking the old lady, Chen Ge grabbed the basket and retraced his step. He could sense the pure kindness inside the old lady, so he did not doubt what she said.

Just like I thought, those who are favored by the Specters have pure, kind hearts.

He crawled out of the tunnel, and the cold gripped Chen Ge. There was only a wall of difference, but the world changed.

When he saw the leaf on the baby’s lips, he tried to take it off but was stopped by Chen Ge. “That leaf seems to be able to stop the baby from crying, don’t touch it.”

Chen Ge had wasted some time inside the old lady’s home. Chen Ge waved for Master Bai and Ol’ Wei to join him at the ancestral hall’s door. He pulled out Ah Qing’s map. “The ceremonial procession will pass the wells around the village; we must be careful not to run into them.”

The trio soon decided their route, left the ancestral hall, and walked down the street. The ceremony was still ongoing, and the village had changed. Those who had left returned, and death was in the air. All the old houses became creepy, like their original owners had returned for the night.

There were knockings coming from inside the coffin, and unknown footprints could be seen on the streets. The blood on the walls turned vibrant like time was returning to that night. Chen Ge’s group turned a corner when Master Bai, who carried the baby, suddenly stopped.

“Did you hear that? Someone is calling my name.” The cold wind brushed against their faces, and there was a wispy female voice that resounded in their ears.

Reminded of the old lady's warning, Chen Ge told Master Bai, "Ignore it. No matter what she says, do not answer back."

The three continued to move forward. The previously-clean roads were filled with paper money, and the white paper on the doors of old house fell off. The wooden boards creaked. The sound of the woman became clearer, and it felt like it was coming from all sides. They could not tell where she was coming from, but they did know she was getting closer.

This village is hiding a Red Specter and many tortured souls. Since the Red Specter hasn't awakened yet, these souls will probably attack us so that they can take over our bodies and leave this place.

Chen Ge knew that with the awakening of the many ghosts, the real horror of this three-star scenario was showing itself.

Chapter 326: Dangerous Roads!

The woman's voice circulated around their ears, and it made them panic. The harder they tried to ignore it, the sharper the sound became, as their brains tried to figure out what the female voice was saying. Bloody handprints appeared on the wall. The street that Chen Ge's group was going down seemed to have been the setting for one heavy tragedy before this.

"Don't listen to it! Move!" Chen Ge felt something was chasing after them. With his trusty hammer in hand, he stood at the back of her group, carrying the backpack. These tortured souls did not want to be tormented by the female ghost anymore, and this was their only chance to escape her control.

...

Invisible rain seemed to fall from the sky, and there was moisture in the air. A light smell of blood touched their nostrils as the street turned complicated. The woman slowly approached, and her voice changed; it overlapped with a voice in their memory. She called after them like family calling them home.

"That sounds like my daughter?" Master Bai tried to turn behind him to look. "Is that real or fake?"

Chen Ge grabbed his shoulders. "Do not turn back! Do not answer!"

He had just told Master Bai that when Ol' Wei screamed at the front of the group, "Look up at the house on the left!"

Ol' Wei kept his hand on the holster, his emotions running wild.

"Look up?" Chen Ge looked up, and his pupils narrowed. There was someone squatting on the top of the building!

The man's body was very thin, and his arms very long; he looked like a monkey.

“I’ve heard my father tell stories about them before—they’re called Eaves Ghosts.” Master Bai’s face was white. “They will lie in wait on top the eaves at night. After the home owner falls asleep, they will crawl in through the window to steal the owner’s belongings and suck their blood dry. It’s a common rumor in villages, but no one has really seen them.”

Chen Ge moved his gaze away from the monster. As long as it was not a Red Specter, there was nothing he was afraid of. “Ignore it, we’ll run past him!”

The group ran past the Eaves Ghost carrying the baby. The thing on the eaves seemed to be particularly interested in living humans. Its elongated arms grabbed the pillar as it swung downward. It moved between beams as it chased after Chen Ge’s group. The thing was very clever; it maintained its distance, staying not too close and not too far. It was biding its time. Soon, a second Eaves Ghost appeared. Their appearance was different from a living human. Their skulls protruded outward, their eyes were small, and their mouths were filled with sharp teeth.

“Chen Ge, we cannot just keep running blindly!” This was the first time Ol’ Wei had seen something like this. If given a second chance, he would never follow Chen Ge to come to this isolated village.

“Ignore everything, just focus on running.” Chen Ge did not mind those Eaves Ghosts. The only thing he was afraid of was the Red Specter and the voices that circulated around their ears. The danger that they could see was not really dangerous; what they could not see was the real fatal threat.

They ran for several meters, and when they about to turn the second corner, the Eaves Ghosts who were tailing them finally got impatient. However, they were cunning and careful. They did not attack the living humans directly but placed their focus on the backpack Chen Ge was carrying.

Several thin hands reached for the backpack, and Chen Ge finally lost his patience. He swung the hammer to smack the Eaves Ghosts’ arms away and pressed on the recorder.

“Let’s get this over with quick!”

When Zhang Ya was asleep, Xu Yin was Chen Ge's biggest combat power. This young man would pursue his target relentlessly when he was let out. Chen Ge was afraid that Xu Yin might be led away, so he did not summon him until the last moment. He wanted to keep a trump card for him. However, the incessant provocation from the Eaves Ghosts had erased his patience.

After releasing Xu Yin, Chen Ge grabbed Ol' Wei and Master Bai's shoulders to tell them to slow down. When the two Eaves Ghosts saw Xu Yin, they turned and ran. With red in his eyes, Xu Yin grabbed one of them and tore it into pieces. When he finished his meal, the other Eaves Ghost was already several meters away. Xu Yin was in a bloodlust; without waiting for Chen Ge's order, he leaped forward to chase after his dinner.

The tape in the recorder continued to play. Chen Ge's group had to leave the village before the ceremony ended; the time was limited, so they could only force themselves to move forward. Master Bai and Ol' Wei followed Chen Ge's instruction. They covered their ears to ignore the woman's voice carried by the wind and focused on running forward.

The distance was slowly pulled away. Neither one of them discovered the faces that appeared on the wall before them. The expressions on the faces were all different. They looked like mural and were inconspicuous in the dark. They chose to strike when their targets were close enough by reaching out their hands from the wall!

"The baby!" Master Bai's first reaction was to use his body to protect the baby. He exposed his back to the wall. The many arms reached for the old man; all of them wanted to take over his body. Due to the great number, it felt like the arms were trying to tear Master Bai apart.

"Watch out!" Due to desperation, Chen Ge slammed the hammer into the wall without thinking twice. The hammer made contact with the wall, creating a loud noise that echoed throughout the village.

"We're definitely exposed now. The villagers of Coffin Village and the hidden members of the ghost stories society will definitely confirm there are other outsiders in the village," Chen Ge said calmly; there was no panic in his eyes. "Since we're already exposed, there's no need to hide anymore."

He aimed the hammer crazily at the wall of faces. The faces cried for mercy. “Don’t stop, keep moving!”

Regardless of whether the monsters inside the walls reached out for them or not, whenever Chen Ge saw a wall with human faces, he would greet them hammer first. The man’s madness stunned even Master Bai and Ol’ Wei. Master Bai used his palm to cover the baby’s eyes.

Chen Ge turned to yell at Master Bai, “Are you alright?”

“I’m fine. Those looked like Wall Spirits. In other words, people who died close to walls. Their power is limited; they just look scary.”

Master Bai waved his hands repeatedly. He was worried about the Wall Spirits.

The three continued to move forward. By then, Xu Yin had returned, and he had two more small blood stains on his shirt. The tape in the recorder made some white noise. This time, Chen Ge did not tell Xu Yin to return to the tape. He had made the decision to level Xu Yin up to a Red Specter that night!

“The whole village of malicious spirits, if we fight our way out, it should be enough to dye your whole shirt red!” They continued to move forward as paper money fluttered on the street.

The old house’s front door was blown open, and a voice floated out from within. “Help me, my death is so unjust...”

BANG!

The old wooden door was kicked open by Chen Ge. He rushed into the house with the hammer and Xu Yin!

“Where are you? I’m here to deliver your justice!”

Chapter 327 - Why Do You Run?

Chapter 327: Why Do You Run?

The layouts of the old homes were similar to one another. There were two dead locust trees in the courtyard, a large water tank under the tree, and beyond that was the inner room and bedrooms. The wooden door slammed open; Chen Ge's kick almost broke the door. "Tell me about your injustice!"

He walked forward, and the soil in the courtyard started to loosen. The dead locust trees started to lean like something was trying to crawl its way out. Chen Ge walked to the locust tree. The soil fell off to reveal a shallow grave, and a pair of arms were trying to reach out.

...

"You want to come out? Fine! I'll help you!" Chen Ge looked at the venomous gaze of the body, and he raised the hammer. "I'll smash your skull so that you won't get stuck!"

The hammer fell, and a series of creepy voices came out from the old home. It was worth noting that the other locust tree stopped moving, and the soil flowed backwards. After he was done, Chen Ge and Xu Yin yanked the ghost out from underneath the tree. After that brief exercise, Chen Ge turned his attention elsewhere. "They were hiding under the tree earlier, so it wasn't them who called for help."

The voice earlier came from inside the old home, but once Chen Ge entered it, the voice stopped. He looked around and noticed a round rubber ball floating inside the water tank. The weird thing was the ball slowly sunk downward like it was trying to drown itself. "The ball is sinking on its own?"

Chen Ge walked to the water tank with the hammer. He looked into it and saw the ghost hiding inside the tank. Its body was bloated from being soaked in water, and its bloated head floated on the surface like a rubber ball. "Was it you who called for help me? If you have some injustice in your heart, you have to say it out loud!"

The hammer smashed the tank, and water flew everywhere. Chen Ge left Xu Yin to help the ghost with its ‘injustice’, and he walked into the inner room. The room was filled with paper money like they had just held a funeral. There was a dark coffin sitting in the middle of the room, and weird pictures hung on the walls.

“Where are you? Why aren’t you talking?” Chen Ge stared at the pictures for quite some time. The villagers here did not pray to Gods but spirits of the mountain. The pictures on the wall were all creepy-looking monsters. “They look so real.”

They were paintings, but there was something about them that made Chen Ge feel there was more than met the eye. Chen Ge was not sure whether it was because he had stared at them for too long or it was due to another reason, but he saw one of the eyes in one of the paintings move.

Wait, it moved! Are the ghosts hiding in the painting?

While Chen Ge was contemplating, Xu Yin walked in with half of his red shirt. At the same time, several shadows escaped the paintings and rushed into the bedroom. Xu Yin gave chase immediately. When he entered the bedroom, the coffin in the middle of the room shuddered, and the lid of the coffin was pushed open slightly.

A ghost with some blood stains on its body looked at Xu Yin cautiously before pushing the coffin lid open and running for its life!

“There are blood stains on the body. This ghost also has the potential to become a Red Specter?” Chen Ge called Xu Yin and gave chase. The black shadow discovered Chen Ge and Xu Yin chasing after it, and it ran faster. The old home was filled with the sound of soil moving, glass shattering, water splashing, and the coffin bursting open. Master Bai and Ol’ Wei stopped outside the front door and did not dare go in.

“Who is Chen Ge talking with inside? Why hasn’t he come out yet?” Ol’ Wei was worried. He gathered some courage and walked to the door. Before he got close, a black shadow with flashes of red blasted past him.

“What was that?” Ol’ Wei’s heart gripped. Before he recovered, he saw a bloodshot Chen Ge ran out, waving the scary-looking hammer in the air.

“Stop right there!” The death flags on the streets were snapped, and Chen Ge’s voice echoed down the street.

“What’s going on...” Ol’ Wei and Master Bai stood at the door holding the baby. They looked at the whole hide-and-seek and felt it looked perfectly normal.

“Xiao Chen is chasing after the person in front?”

“Looks like it.”

“But shouldn’t we be the party on the run? Why is he chasing after some other people?”

“I’m not quite sure, perhaps because he looks scary?” There was another sound of the hammer hitting the wall. Master Bai and Ol’ Wei immediately ran after them.

The black shadow moved very fast. Chen Ge could barely keep up, but Xu Yin slowly closed the distance. The movement speed is so fast, so its power must be quite high. After consuming it, Xu Yin might become a Red Specter!

Inside this creepy village, he had to have a Red Specter to accompany him before he could feel safe. If Xu Yin can become a Red Specter, then this mission will have been worth it!

The black shadow did not dare slow down, but its escape route seemed predetermined; it was heading toward one of the buildings inside the village. The atmosphere turned heavy. The paper money became less common, and in their places were the ‘joy’ characters cut from white paper.

After another ten meters of chasing, at the end of the street, Chen Ge saw a wedding sedan. The red sedan and the white ‘joy’ characters formed a great contrast, and the sedan was radiating a heavy sense of resentment. The wind fluttered the curtain, and the woman’s voice came again. The shadow stopped at the door where the sedan was placed before it ran into the old home.

“It knows how to ask for help? This ghost is clever.” Chen Ge lifted the curtain on the sedan, but there was nothing inside. He followed the black shadow and ran into the old home. The old home looked grander than other homes, but the lingering blood stains and signs of struggles were also more numerous than others.

“Could this be the village elder’s home?” Chen Ge pushed open the door, and there were white ‘joy’ characters everywhere. This looked like a wedding where an accident had cut it short.

“When the shadow stopped at the door, I saw clearly it was wearing the groom’s outfit. He came back to find his wife?” Chen Ge waved the hammer and scoffed. “What a man.”

He entered the inner room, and the woman’s voice in his ear intensified; it influenced Chen Ge somewhat.

“The thing that has been calling is the shadow’s wife?”

The woman’s voice seemed to drill into the body and curled around the heart like strings. With every beat of his heart, the familiar notes flowed to every part of his body following the blood. The voice felt very close, and it made one lower one’s guard involuntarily.

Looks like the shadow’s wife is the one with the greater ire.

Chen Ge was considering whether the wife could be the Red Specter when the door closed, and the candles on the ceremonial table were lit on their own, shining an eerie red light.

Cast in the light, a woman in bright red wedding dress poked her head out from inside the bedroom. She was wearing a pair of embroidered shoes and looked rather scary.

A Red Specter? Chen Ge gripped the hammer until the veins on the back of his hands popped.

Walking forward, the woman revealed the lower half of her body. The wedding dress was not completely drenched by blood. It was half torn to reveal the dirtied underclothing.

Chapter 328 - Tonight, I'll Let You See

Chapter 328: Tonight, I'll Let You See

The wedding candles gave off an eerie red light, making the old home look even creepier. At the bedroom door, the woman in a tattered wedding dress looked at Chen Ge. Her lips moved, and the voice echoed in Chen Ge's mind. The memories were muddled, and a weird feeling gushed up his heart. She seems to be calling my name.

When he was young, Chen Ge once heard the elders of his family say that there was a kind of ghost in the world that called passersby's names in the middle of the night and then transformed into the person who was the most memorable in the passerby's mind to approach them and harm them.

This female ghost has a similar power?

The voice that they had been hearing amplified; it disturbed Chen Ge's power of thought. He tried to focus, but his body relaxed completely. He raised his eyes to look, and the woman's face changed. There was a general outline, but it slowly turned familiar like he was looking at someone from his memory.

The wonderful memory was sewn together by threads, and the dead woman lifted her sleeves lightly to cover her face. She walked out of the bedroom gracefully. The embroidered shoes stepped on the white paper. The woman's wedding dress glowed redder. She lowered the sleeve slightly, and the originally scary face became exquisite and beautiful. The facial features slowly formed, and there was a sense of familiarity comforting Chen Ge. She should be someone important in my life.

The woman's voice sneaked into his bone marrow like strings controlling Chen Ge's body, stopping his means of harming the other party. His mind froze, and his body moved on its own. Chen Ge took a step forward like someone in his mind was urging him to not give this opportunity up lest he regretted it forever.

Such a familiar voice, who is she?

The memory buried in his heart was pulled to the surface, and Chen Ge felt like his soul was leaving his body. The voice echoed in his mind, and the hall stopped being scary. The surrounding melted away, and with the voice leading him forward, Chen Ge took his steps.

The distance between the two closed, and the woman's bright-red sleeves slowly lowered. The pale face shifted as she flipped through Chen Ge's memory and found the woman who loved him the most. The blurry facial features became clear and flawless. Even the pickiest artist would gasp and say, "Beautiful!"

With the familiar face, the exquisite expression, the woman lifted her head to look at Chen Ge in anticipation. Their eyes met, and Chen Ge, who was under the woman's spell, felt struck by lightning!

His body shook continuously, and his heart raced. An indescribable terror tore through the memory and romance. "Zhang Ya?"

A strong survival instinct made Chen Ge jump backward. No matter how the woman called for him, it was useless. The flickering candlelight extinguished, and facing the extreme fear, the woman's voice had lost its power over Chen Ge. The woman's face turned back to normal. She was holding a pair of scissors and red string, standing the middle of the room.

She used her power to morph into the most memorable woman in Chen Ge's memory. She used that to weave a trap for Chen Ge to walk into. Initially, everything was going according to plan. The man was under her full control, so she could not understand why, when the man saw the woman who loved him deeply, his reaction would be so drastic?

Chen Ge gasped greedily for air. This was the first time he had felt the true meaning of fear since he entered Coffin Village. He did not expect to see Zhang Ya's face when she was slumbering. The voice in his mind disappeared. Chen Ge wiped the cold sweat off his forehead and calmed down again.

That was most likely the ghost's special power. The ghost was powerful, her voice carried his own memory and could enter a normal person's mind with being noticed to make others lower their guard around her. That was a hard threat to deal with; it was because of pure luck that Chen Ge managed to survive this time.

When Chen Ge escaped the ghost's control, even the ghost herself was injured. Her voice stopped, and a part of memory was left in Chen Ge's mind. Chen Ge thus gained a new understanding of this ghost who had the potential to become a Red Specter.

She was the village elder's daughter, and the night of her wedding was also the night of the massacre. Her whole family had been torn apart, and there was not enough of them left to become ghosts. She was the only survivor. Her resentment kept her alive, and as the years passed, she became more and more powerful... until she met Chen Ge.

The ghost in the wedding dress was several steps away from Chen Ge, and her face twisted with a pair of eyes burning with vengeance. Xu Yin was battling the groom, but it was not much of a match. All the groom could do was buy time. Their original plan was probably to possess Chen Ge and then cooperate to kill Xu Yin. Unfortunately, the ghost's plan ran into some trouble.

Looking at Chen Ge, who had regained his sanity, the ghost was irrationally angered. Her hands reached out from underneath the sleeves, and her wounded palms were tied with red strings. She screamed, and the red strings that flowed out from her flesh rushed at Chen Ge.

The door was sealed, and the hammer did not have much use against the red strings. Xu Yin, who was some distance away, saw the situation Chen Ge was in, so he tore the groom's arm off and turned to fight the ghost in the wedding dress.

The red strings stuck into Xu Yin's body, but it did nothing to stop him. The greater the pain, the stronger Xu Yin got. Fresh blood spurted out, and it almost dyed his shirt. Both Xu Yin and the bride were half Red Specters, and they were equally powerful.

His senses returned, and Chen Ge could feel the weight of the hammer in his hand again. He circled the outskirts of the battle, trying to find a chance to help Xu Yin, but did not anticipate the ambush from the groom. Xu Yin was unable to help Chen Ge, and the groom realized this was a perfect chance.

His cracked face revealed a dirty smile. He walked toward Chen Ge like he planned to return all the damage that he had suffered from Xu Yin's hands to Chen Ge.

"Going for the weaker party? Then you've got the wrong target." Chen Ge did not retreat. He was also quite mad that day. "Even if you have the potential to become a Red Specter, as long as you're not a Red Specter now, you possess no threat to me!"

Chen Ge's calm voice sounded like a bluff to the groom. He hugged the torn arm and walked toward Chen Ge with a wicked grin!

"Don't believe me?" Chen Ge did not fight back as the groom approached. In fact, he put his only weapon, the hammer, down on the floor. "Actually, compared to a duel, I prefer a brawl."

Chen Ge took out the comic from his backpack. He flipped through it, and a heavy stench covered the old home. "Tonight, I'll let you see what the real meaning of strength in numbers is!"

The stench coagulated to form a large fatty, and more shadows appeared from the comic!

Chapter 329 - Sedan Kids

Chapter 329: Sedan Kids

In the blink of an eye, Chen Ge was surrounded by several shadows. They had different expressions; some were curious, some harsh, some cunning, and some quivering with fear. The ghosts filled up the courtyard, and the old home became several times scarier than before!

Chen Ge put the comic back and pointed at the groom. The situation changed instantly as the shadows surrounded the poor man. "It's time for dinner."

Chen Ge picked up the hammer and charged ahead. The battle was not fair from the beginning. The groom was slightly more powerful than normal ghosts, but he could not fight so many of them. The wounds on his body increased, and his body started to fade. When he was almost at his limits, the groom tried to lean toward the bride like he was trying to get his wife to help him.

However, the bride was locked in the battle with Xu Yin and did not have the time to deal with him. Chen Ge saw this opportunity to attack. The groom had already been injured by Xu Yin earlier; one of his arms had been torn off, and he could not even fight back. The ghosts tore him apart. He wanted to run, but the door was sealed. He had nowhere to escape to.

There's still an advantage in numbers. Chen Ge took a step back after making sure his workers could handle the groom just fine. Ten seconds later, the groom who acted as bait was consumed by Chen Ge's workers.

"Don't just stand there, go help Xu Yin!" Chen Ge ordered again, but only the fatty marched obediently forward. The rest of them jumped back when they saw the heated battle between Xu Yin and the bride. "Stop wasting time! Attack together!"

Xu Yin had been cruelly murdered by his loved ones, so he had a great amount of dissatisfaction and resentment to begin with. He had consumed so many ghosts, but he only fought to a stalemate with the bride.

The bride has a very powerful special power, and she is herself quite strong. If only she could become a worker at the Haunted House.

Realizing how fitting the bride was to the Minghun scenario, Chen Ge's interest was piqued. However, he thought about it from a different perspective. The bride was filled with resentment, and it was probably caused by her desire to take revenge for her family. That meant killing the Red Specter that jumped into the well.

That was too much to handle for Chen Ge.

The Haunted House workers have to be completely obedient so that they won't hurt the visitors. This particular one is too unruly, and her wish cannot be fulfilled. Even if I forcibly take her back, it'll only cause more problems. Chen Ge never suffered from hesitation. He called the other ghosts to help Xu Yin.

"Rest in peace. Actually, if you didn't attack me in the beginning, this wouldn't have happened."

The red strings were soaked with Xu Yin's blood. With the aid from the other ghosts, Xu Yin finally found the break he was looking for. A blood-curdling scream echoed through the old home, and several minutes later, everything returned to normal.

Afraid that they might influence Xu Yin, Chen Ge held the other ghosts back. The bride was consumed fully by Xu Yin. The red strings on the ground lost their color, and the bright wedding dress turned old and dusty.

Chen Ge anticipated the change to Xu Yin, wishing that he would turn into a Red Specter in that instant. Standing in the middle of the room, the wounds on Xu Yin's body recovered, but the blood that drenched his shirt did not recede. He raised both of his hands to look at his palms before turning to look at Chen Ge. His body slowly faded as he returned into the tape. "So painful..."

The recorder's play button bounced back. Xu Yin seemed to have exhausted all of his power to deal with the bride.

"Wait, something's wrong. If Xu Yin also slumbers..." Chen Ge looked at the shadows that might even be afraid of himself, and his lips twitched. "What am I supposed to do tonight?"

After collecting the ghosts into the comic, Chen Ge grabbed the hammer and raced out of the old home. "I need to leave this village as soon as possible.”

He ran out of the front door and saw Ol’ Wei and Master Bai. They were walking around a sedan, talking among themselves.

“Let’s go, we must leave this village immediately.” Chen Ge took out the map given by Ah Qing and started to study it. “Follow closely, don’t wander off. This place is getting more and more dangerous!”

You have the map. We’ve been following you!

Before Ol’ Wei and Master Bai could say that, Chen Ge hollered, “This way.”

According to the map, they were still quite far away from the perimeter of the village.

The three prepared to leave when the sedan at the door started to shake. Two kids appeared beside the sedan, and they were humming some kind of lullaby. Their faces were painted with something that looked like blood, and they were wearing clothes that were black and red.

Hearing the song behind him, Master Bai turned to look. He rushed forward from the back, holding Ah Qing’s baby. “Quick, run! Those are Sedan Kids!”

Chen Ge and Ol’ Wei did not even turn back to look and raced down the street. The sedan shook, and the two children smiled happily. They clapped their hands and danced some weird dance.

“Master Bai, that’s a dead-end! Stop!” Chen Ge pulled Master Bai. “It’s safe now. The two kids didn’t chase after us.”

“Good...” Master Bai sighed. As healthy as he was, the strain on his body was becoming clear. “Thankfully, we ran fast. If we’re haunted by Sedan Kids, it’s over.”

“What do you mean? Those children are that scary?”

“These are stories I heard when I was small. Sedan Kids hide under sedans and wear masks and uniforms from Chinese opera. They show up whenever there’s a ceremony. It’s okay if you don’t run into them, but if someone exposes them, they will find said person’s home and use different faces to play with you.” Master Bai felt better after the short rest.

“Yes, I regretted it right after. Who knew things from legend will appear in real life!” Master Bai gave himself quite a fright.

“Master Bai, where did you hear these stories from? Do you know other stories? Why don’t you share them with us so that we can be prepared?” Chen Ge held the hammer. Now that Xu Yin had returned to the tape, he had lost a powerful trump card.

“My father told me those. He was a wandering doctor, so he had been to many places and heard many things. He shared these stories with me. I thought he made them up, but who would thought I would run into them one day?” Master Bai laughed bitterly. He felt like the night was a dream.

The three slowed down. Before Master Bai could finish, the sound of a nursery rhyme came from behind them. Master Bai turned to look behind him. The two kids with red paint on their faces did not come close, like they were afraid of something. They just stood a distance away to look at Chen Ge's group.

"Talk as we move." Master Bai dragged Ol' Wei and Chen Ge to move forward. He combed his mind to come up with the stories that his father had once told him. "These kinds of villages deep in the mountain will be filled with various monsters at night. Other than the Pillar Ghost, Sedan Kids, Wall Spirit, the more difficult ones include the Pillow Ghost, Mummy Wraps, and Skull Lantern."

...

"Skull Lantern? Can you tell us specifically what these three look like?" Chen Ge and Ol' Wei had not heard of this before.

"In these villages, the pillows that people sleep on have to be burned after the person passes away. This is to prevent the formation of a Pillow Ghost. This kind of ghost is normally the lingering spirit of the dead person remaining in the pillow. If one falls asleep on these pillows, they will be tormented by nightmares and even hear the person whispering in their ears.

"If you're lucky, you might sleep until morning, but if you're not, you might wake up in the middle of the night and find someone lying beside you, sharing the pillow, and that person will be the Pillow Ghost." The senior did not have a talent in storytelling; the description was rather dry. However, Chen Ge made a note of the details of this Pillow Ghost—perhaps he could use it in his Haunted House in the future.

"Pillow Ghost cannot stray too far from the pillows, so as long as we don't enter these houses, it should be fine. The things that really concern us are the Mummy Wraps and Skull Lantern," Master Bai said carefully. He was worried these things might really appear in real life.

“Mummy Wraps are more difficult to deal with compared to Pillow Ghosts. These are the clothes that villagers put the dead person in when they carry out the burial. There are taboos and traditions to abide by for the clothes that dead bodies are buried in. If they are not followed closely, it might form the Mummy Wraps. They will wander the street when the Yin energy gathers. They look like a person, but it is actually only a layer of cloth.

“They will attack by wrapping themselves around the body of a living person. They make the living person wear the clothes of a dead body and use it to control the living human. If you see someone wearing a new set of clothes but they smell weird, remember to stay away from them because they might be wearing a dead person’s clothes.”

Master Bai looked around him. The ceremony was still ongoing, and the streets were empty. Only the two Sedan Kids trailed behind them with hesitation. Master Bai hugged Ah Qing’s baby and sped up. He continued to explain, “The skull lantern is the scariest ghost from all the stories my father has told me.

“No one knows how they’re formed, but people have seen them inside abandoned villages or places where high concentration of resentment gathers. Those rushing in the night would see lights inside a village. They rushed over, thinking it’s human activity, but the light kept moving away from them.

“They called for the light to stop, and it did. When they got close, it was actually a floating head, and it was biting a lantern with its teeth. According to legend, Skull Lanterns are spirit trying to seek help, so they float about with the lantern.”

After Master Bai finished the last story, he realized that neither Ol’ Wei nor Chen Ge replied. “What’s wrong with the two of you? I still know quite a bit of this village folklore.”

“Master Bai, you said the Mummy Wraps look just like normal people?” Ol’ Wei looked at the street behind them.

“Yes, they look just like humans because the clothes will take on the shape of a human. However, they have no face or hands; they are only clothes.” Master Bai had a very bad feeling.

“Then did you father tell you what to do if we run into Mummy Wraps?” Chen Ge grabbed the hammer and similarly looked behind Master Bai. Master Bai did not dare turn back, but his face paled. “My father said, if we come across these things, we need to run.”

Xu Yin was digesting the bride, so Chen Ge grabbed hold of the hammer and thought about it. “Looks like we have to change a different route.”

The three of them turned down a different street. Behind them, them old sets of clothes with weird smell stood in the middle of the road. The nursery rhyme beside their ears did not stop, and new things appeared. As the ceremony continued, more monsters woke up from the night. The number was unimaginable.

This is the real three-star scenario! Chen Ge compared Coffin Village and The Third Sick Hall. When he arrived at Third Sick Hall, most of the patients had already left, like the Devil and Wu Fei. The craziest ones had joined the ghost stories society; only those normal ones were left behind to watch over the blood door. This was the biggest difference between Third Sick Hall and Coffin Village. In other words, this was the first time Chen Ge had entered an actual three-star scenario.

Various monsters were crawling out from their hiding spots, gnashing their sinister teeth.

This village has all sort of monsters. If they’re fully replicated inside the Haunted House, the visitors will be scared to death!

Chen Ge was quite excited. Coffin Village was different from the Haunted House theme that was currently popular on the market. The style was unique and would be one of a kind if Chen Ge had it inside his Haunted House. The key was, the scenario would be three-star, and it would be enough for the visitors to explore it for a long time.

Chen Ge scouted ahead. He followed the complicated roads that was mapped out on the cloth. They walked for some time when bits of light appeared before them. The old lady in the two-story building had warned him to evade the bright lights. Master Bai’s story also had similar effect.

They stopped where they were as the monsters slowly surrounded them. The lights swayed in the wind and formed blurry human faces. Ol’ Wei and Master Bai did not look so good. They had not encountered scenes like this before, so they involuntarily turned their attention to Chen Ge.

“What should we do?”

Holding the hammer, Chen Ge felt the pressure. “We have no other choice but to power ahead. Stay close to me and try not to get separated.”

The three of them had just confirmed the route when a loud boom occurred at the western part of the village. It was much louder than the sound Chen Ge had made earlier.

“A fight has happened? The ghost stories society is fighting with the ceremony?”

Coffin Village’s peace was completely shattered. The night thickened. As long as they survived this, dawn would not be far away.

“Chen Ge, should we avoid the eastern exit and take a longer detour?”

“We don’t have time! Let’s charge out of this place first!”

Chapter 331 - Give the Child a Future

Chapter 331: Give the Child a Future

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

No one knew for sure how many ghosts were hiding inside Coffin Village. Chen Ge was reminded of what Ah Qing had said—Coffin Village had ten percent dead people, ten percent living people, and eight percent ghosts. Based on that percentage, we've only seen a small part.

Chen Ge's situation was not that optimistic. The three sets of dirty clothes floated toward them, the two kids with red paint on their faces bounced happily toward them, the door of the old house next to them creaked open, and something that looked like a human face poked out from underneath the pillow. All the roads were blocked off. They could only move forward, but what waited ahead seemed to be creepy bright lights.

Using his Yin Yang Vision, Chen Ge could see these were swaying human skulls. He charged ahead with the hammer. He did not plan to slow down. Rushing ahead meant he needed to deal with some of the ghosts, but if they stayed, they would be surrounded by all the ghosts.

"Chen Ge, slow down! It was so dark earlier; the sudden appearance of lights has to be a trick. Those are probably the Skull Lanterns that Master Bai mentioned earlier!" Ol' Wei was not consumed by fear, and he tried to warn Chen Ge.

"Don't worry, I got a good look. Those are just normal lights. Charge ahead! Don't be afraid!" Chen Ge's footsteps did not slow down. The three ran with all their might. The baby in Master Bai's arms started to wail, which drew more monsters to them. With the light from the Skull Lantern, the surrounding darkness was banished, and they could clearly see the advancing shadows.

Weird footsteps echoed down the street. Chen Ge raised his head to look. A dark coffin was moving through the alley. The coffin was carried on all four sides by villagers who had their heads lowered. They looked like normal villagers, but their expressions were extremely scary. Their lips cracked open with creepy smiles like they were not carrying a coffin but food.

“The Pallbearers? Xiao Chen! Stop! Chen Ge! Don’t go any closer!” Master Bai hugged the bamboo basket and used his arm to shield the baby. He could not stop Chen Ge.

Running at the front, Chen Ge saw the four weird men carrying the coffin, but he could not stop himself anymore.

The four Pallbearers walked out of the alley, and the coffin blocked Chen Ge’s way. It looked like a coincidence, but it could have been premeditated too. Chen Ge was not one to underestimate his enemy, even if they were ghosts. Since they were unwilling to let them past, he had to find a way to push through. Only by disrupting the opponent’s plan could they be safe.

“Don’t mess with the Pallbearers!” Master Bai yelled, but his warning fell on deaf ears. “We’ll talk later!”

The hammer fell right on the coffin. Splinters flew, and all the ghosts stopped.

“Quick!” Ol’ Wei grabbed the baby from Master Bai and hopped over the coffin. He had been a police officer for about twenty years, and this was the first time he had met someone as rash as Chen Ge. The four Pallbearers slowly raised their heads. The smiles froze on their faces as they looked at the shattered coffin lid. Green surfaced on their pale faces!

Shrill screams echoed down the narrow street, and the four Pallbearers chased after Chen Ge. The lingering spirits escaped from the coffin. They bowed toward Chen Ge before disappearing. Chen Ge had no idea what he had done. At the time, he only wanted to smash the coffin; he did not even turn to look at the aftermath.

The three raced down the road. They got close to the lights. Ol’ Wei, who carried the baby, realized that something was wrong. Behind the bright lights, there appeared to be something circular like a ball.

“Chen Ge, are you sure those are normal lights?” The baby in his arms cried, and a cluster of ghosts chased behind them. Ol’ Wei did not dare slow down.

“I’m sure!” Chen Ge dragged Master Bai to follow Ol’ Wei. The lights swayed. They moved for another few meters, and even Master Bai, with his poor eyesight, could see the pale faces behind the lights.

“Chen Ge, stop! Those are Skull Lantern!”

Master Bai pulled for Chen Ge to stop, but the man’s speed did not decrease. If anything, he dragged Master Bai forward. “Skull Lanterns are still lanterns, right?”

The hammer waved, and the first Skull Lantern that floated toward them was sent flying before it even managed to attack!

The candle fell to the ground and extinguished next to Chen Ge’s feet.
“Follow me!”

The three raced through the group of human heads, and there was suddenly the sound of a marching band. They turned to look. Inside the street that Ah Qing had marked with a red cross on a map was a group of people. They were blowing sad music on the trumps, and people were wearing mourning clothes. They wailed and wailed, but there were no tears. Paper money fluttered in the wind, and the death flag waved. They held paper dolls that were bright red as they headed for Chen Ge’s group.

“This is bad!” Master Bai’s heart was racing. His fists tightened, and he was so nervous that he could not finish a normal sentence.

“These are different from normal ghosts?” Chen Ge also realized something. When the funeral procession appeared, the Skull Lanterns floated off immediately—the Sedan Kids and Mummy Wraps also stopped. Only those four Pallbearers became more insane.

“Of course, this is the Death Funeral, the dead holding a funeral for the dead! The Pallbearers are part of the Death Funeral. If the coffin is not delivered, the Death Funeral procession cannot end,” Master Bai explained.

“Then, we’d better get a move on.”

The Skull Lanterns had been scared off by the Death Funeral, so the three made use of this opening to charge ahead. There was a split in the road. The left was an empty road, and the right led to the Death Funeral.

“Go ahead, I’ll stay back to buy us some time.” Chen Ge shoved the map into Master Bai’s hands. He had memorized the map. The ghosts that were at the front of the Death Funeral had already caught up with the Pallbearers. When they saw the coffin that Chen Ge had shattered, their expression was amusing.

“Go on, I have a feeling I’m being targeted.” Chen Ge felt the gazes of the ghosts on him. He stood in the middle of the road, holding the hammer, like he was telling them he was the culprit. Chen Ge was made uncomfortable by the hatred that collected on him. “Quick! I’ll delay them! Just leave me be!”

He slid the comic in his chest. Chen Ge did not want them around because it might affect the real power of his workers. However, his words had a different effect on Master Bai and Ol’ Wei.

“I’ll catch up in a bit, go!” Chen Ge was calling Xu Yin and Zhang Ya’s name internally, and Xu Yin seemed to respond.

“No!” Ol’ Wei and Master Bai said at the same time. They did not think Chen Ge would make such a choice; they could not handle the pressure.

“We don’t have time to argue.” Chen Ge pushed Ol’ Wei’s hands away as he said seriously, “Do this for the sake of the baby. He was born in the darkness and hasn’t had the chance to see the sun. You have to get him out of this place!”

Then Chen Ge charged into the fray. He was like a moth flying toward the flame. Seeing the young man submerged in the sea of monsters, Master Bai and Ol’ Wei’s eyes were red. In this starless light, his figure was like the only brightness.

“Chen Ge...” Ol’ Wei and Master Bai could not speak. There was really such an honorable person who would sacrifice their lives to save others. Ol’ Wei hugged the baby tightly. “Looks like I’ve misunderstood him. We were mistaken!”

Chen Ge rushed at the Death Funeral and immediately ran down the other direction. There was a whole group of ghosts chasing after him. Of course, he did not dare to turn around. As he called Xu Yin’s name, he flipped through the comic. “Uncle! Are you there? Help me!”

Without Master Bai and Ol' Wei holding him back, Chen Ge ran much faster. He raced through the village filled with monsters and screamed Xu Yin and Yan Danian's names. Zhang Ya was hibernating, so she gave no response. Xu Yin did give some response, but he was in the middle of a crucial transformation, so he could not help Chen Ge.

Yan Danian was the only ghost Chen Ge could rely on, but this Lesser Red Specter was cowering in the corner of his comic. He picked up his pen and drew circles on the floor, pretending not to hear anything. It was obvious that he was more scared than Chen Ge.

...

It was understandable. The uncle had locked himself inside the drawer and refused to interact with people. The first time he had chosen to trust some and exit his comfort zone, Chen Ge brought him to Coffin Village. The village that was filled with monsters and danger unsettled the uncle. The world that he had in mind was not like this.

The ceremony had reached its end. All the monsters inside the village had awakened. He could turn down any corner, and he would see dangerous monsters.

"There are only two relatively safe places left in this village. One is the small building next to the ancestral hall. The Red Specter cares about the old lady who lives there, so none of the ghosts dare get close. The second is to meet up with the ceremony procession. Jiang Ling and the Zhu woman are there. Based on the loud commotion earlier, they're probably fighting with the ghost stories society."

Chen Ge thought about it and decided to head to the loud noise. There was an old lady living inside that building next to the ancestral hall. If something happened, the old lady would suffer with him. Therefore, he decided to bring this chaos to the ghost stories society. Chen Ge ran for his life, and the monsters behind him continued to gather. Chen Ge was feeling wronged; all he did was wreck a coffin, why were these spirits so relentless?

The people who were fighting probably also did not expect Chen Ge to cause the whole village to chase after him. Seeing the group that grew behind him, Chen Ge stopped caring about the red crosses on Ah Qing's map. He ran past them; his only wish was to leave as soon as possible. This caused the group trailing behind him to get bigger.

Gradually, the chaos that he had caused was not smaller than the commotion near the outskirts of the village. The cold wind caressed his face, and the wails echoed endlessly behind him. Chen Ge forced his way through the Coffin Village. Probably because it had taken down so many spirits, blood trails appeared on Doctor Skull-cracker's hammer, and it looked even scarier.

Chen Ge leaned against the wall and took in big gulps of air. Even if he was physically stronger than most, he was fast approaching his limit. He turned to look back, and what he saw made his scalp tingle.

The quantity was unbelievable. In this situation, even Xu Yin broke through to Red Specter, it would not change the situation. Chen Ge needed Zhang Ya's help. "I knew a three-star scenario wouldn't be so simple!"

There was still some time to dawn, but Chen Ge did not think he could hold on any longer. "If I fail to unlock this three-star scenario, it won't appear again. I have to give it my all."

With a grit of his teeth, Chen Ge raced down another street and finally reached the western side of the village, the place where he heard the sound of fighting. Dragging the hammer, leading the host of ghosts, when Chen Ge exited the street, the two forces that were fighting stopped at the same time. When they saw Chen Ge, Chen Ge also saw them.

There were four wells around Coffin Village. The ceremony started at the western well. The ceremony then rounded the village and ended back at the western well.

The Zhu woman was hugging a Red Specter ghost baby with no facial features but few apertures on his face. Jiang Ling and Fan Yu were standing behind her. Facing them were two people wearing black robes. Their whole bodies were covered by the robes.

Ghost stories society!

These words appeared in Chen Ge's mind when he saw the black robes.

Two at once? Could the chairperson be among them?

The continuous murders, the trek into the mountain, it looked like the ghost stories society was determined to finish something that night. For the sake of their goal, they even went head-to-head with law enforcement.

Since it's something so important, the chairperson who has been hiding behind the veil might do this personally.

The situation was chaotic. The ghost stories society and the Zhu woman seemed to be fighting for the well. Standing next to the well, wearing a white and red shirt, was the spider-like Zhu Xinrou who was fighting a uniquely-shaped thin monster.

The thin monster, which symbolized human desire, was the most common monster inside the society. The stronger the monster, the longer its body and the more human faces it had on its body. However, this monster that was fighting Jiang Ling's sister was slightly different. It was sewn together by 6 shadows, but they shared the same lower body. It looked weird but was very strong. It had the upper hand when fighting Jiang Ling's sister.

The fight was bloody, and both had numerous wounds on their bodies. However, Zhu Xinrou, who had less fighting experience, was slowly losing. These two Specters looked to be stronger than Xu Yin, but they're not Red Specters.

Chen Ge initially thought that Zhu Xinrou was a Red Specter, but in comparison to the ghost baby, the difference was quite obvious. When the ghost baby showed up, the whole street's lanterns turned red; the presence was completely different.

Looks like I've underestimated the terror of a Red Specter.

Due to Zhang Ya, Chen Ge thought Red Specters were quite common. However, after witnessing the fight between these two Specters, he realized the gap between Red Specters and normal ghosts.

Jiang Ling's sister was barely hanging on, but the Zhu woman held the ghost baby tightly. It did not seem like she was going to help Zhu Xinrou. She did not turn to look at the adjacent battle. Her eyes were on the black robes.

The only threat that can make a Red Specter cautious is another Red Specter. The black robe opposite from the Zhu woman has to have a Red Specter on them.

The society's power surprised Chen Ge. The patient known at the Devil had two Red Specters, and now this black robe had another Red Specter. The society had three remaining members, but there were only two before him—the most dangerous one was probably still in hiding!

The two parties stood around the well; they were trying to feel each other out, and no one made a move.

Their plan was probably wait for Zhu Xinrou to lose, and then the situation would be bad for the Zhu woman. However, neither party anticipated Chen Ge's arrival. The scariest part was, this intruder was leading half the village's ghosts with him!

In just a few seconds, Chen Ge understood what was happening. He waved the hammer and yelled over his shoulder, "Come and get me!"

With numerous ghosts following behind him, Chen Ge led them to rush at the two black robes.

The members of the ghost stories society were surprised by Chen Ge's sudden appearance, but when they saw the stampede following Chen Ge, they had difficulty calming down. One Chen Ge was not that scary, but a whole village of angry ghosts was. There were so many of them!

The two members had chills run up their spine. The ghosts led by Chen Ge rushed at them like tsunami; the whole process only took several seconds. They were not even sure whether the ghosts were following Chen Ge or chasing after him.

As an outsider, the two naturally treated Chen Ge and the ghosts behind him as enemies. The monster that was sewn together from six thin monsters forced Zhu Xinrou back as it tried to return to the black robes. However, it was just one monster, so it was powerless before the wave of angry ghosts. Only a Red Specter could suppress a whole village of ghosts!

The black robes knew this fact well. They shared a quick word, and the one who had been staying back sighed lightly as he took out his hand from his sleeve. He was holding a wooden box in his palm. When the black robe showed his hand, Chen Ge's eyes narrowed. The blood in his body sped up, and he was reminded of the Wednesday meeting. "Very fair skin, tapered fingers, I've seen this hand before—the owner of this hand was just next to me!"

The familiar event appeared in his mind, and Chen Ge couldn't control himself anymore and shouted, "No. 10! You're ghost stories society's No. 10!"

When Chen Ge shouted out the number, the hand shook before it quickly recovered. The black robe was not affected by Chen Ge and opened the wooden box. The box was similar to the box Zhang Ya had snatched from the devil; there was a piece of black blood left on the edge.

As the box opened, the ghost baby in the Zhu woman's arm seemed to sense something. Its body started to leak blood like it was ready for battle. However, since the member dared to take out the wooden box, they had naturally come prepared. They did not mind the ghost baby but put their focus fully on the box. "Xiong Qing, you can come out now. Your wish will be fulfilled."

Chen Ge's heart shook when he heard that. "Wasn't Xiong Qing injured by the police and is currently hospitalized?"

He remembered this patient with hemi syndrome. Half of his face was covered with wounds, and the other half was normal. When he was at the Third Sick Hall, Chen Ge had chased this Xiong Qing throughout the building. The black robe continued to call, and the black blood at the edge of the box slowly dissipated as a strong stench leaked out from the box.

The blood vessels crawled out from the box and knitted themselves together to form a man in a red patient's garb. Half of this man was no different from normal while his other half was made up from pulsing blood vessels. It looked like the one half of the man had been torn apart when he was alive. The blood vessels tried to coagulate several times, but they failed.

Just how much pain was he in before he passed away?

Xiong Qing suffered from hemineglect, so his worldview was different from others. From how he saw it, the whole world was slanted, and only he had the means to fix it. He had once been the doctor at the Third Sick Hall and tried to do that to his patients. Now it appeared like he was trying to fix himself.

His eyes slowly open, and his bloodshot eyes fell on Chen Ge. Xiong Qing's resentment toward him was palpable, and even after his death, he wanted to kill Chen Ge!

What's going on? Didn't Inspector Lee say Xiong Qing has been captured? Then why would his soul show up here? And in the form of a Red Specter?

Rushing toward a Red Specter was the last thing Chen Ge thought to do, but now he had no other choice. If he ran in any other direction, the ghosts behind him would follow him, and the members of the society would discern the problem.

The chance was slipping. For Chen Ge, his only chance of survival was to make the ghost stories society and the ghosts at the village fight one another. He yelled Xu Yin and Yan Danian's names as he rushed at the black robes!

Leading the innumerable ghosts, Chen Ge charged at Xiong Qing with the hammer. Xiong Qing was completely different from when he was alive. When he smiled, half of his lips raised slightly, but the other half broke to his ears. This was probably the most 'correct' image in his mind.

Many blood vessels curled out from the left side of Xiong Qing's body. It seemed like he was going to bind Chen Ge and slowly pull him into his body. The blood vessels blocked his way like a carnivorous flower, waiting for Chen Ge to jump into it.

Shielding himself with the hammer, Chen Ge aimed for the spaces between the vessels. He tried to jump through them, but Xiong Qing expected that, and the blood vessels knitted themselves together.

Chen Ge was charging right into a beast's mouth and tried to squeeze through the gap between the teeth. He had zero point something seconds to do this, but Xiong Qing did not give him the chance. The smile on his face was filled with malice. Xiong Qing started to pull the vessels back; he was trying to pull Chen Ge into his body!

The vessels closed, and the road ahead narrowed. Chen Ge only managed to reach one of his arms out when the blood vessels almost consumed him. However, at this time, the comic in his pocket moved on its own, and a heavy sigh escaped from it.

The uncle hiding in the corner raised his pen and took up the comic. He flipped to an empty page and sketched Xiong Qing's face. When he was finished, Xiong Qing, who was now a Red Specter, stopped for a second like he was knocked in the head. A force tried to pull him away, but it only took Xiong Qing one second to undo the force.

However, with this one second, Chen Ge managed to squeeze through the blood vessels!

He held the hammer and rushed ahead without turning back to look. He did not have any intention of fighting the black robes, so he picked up his pace.

When they saw this, the two black robes understood something. Chen Ge was not there to fight them but use them as the scapegoat!

Chen Ge had survived certain death and charged ahead. He only dared to stop after putting some distance between them. Behind him, Xiong Qing, who had been stumped by Yan Danian, was angered, and he got into a battle with the ghosts from Coffin Village.

The Zhu woman also realized this was a great chance. She had the ghost baby and Zhu Xinrou ambush the black robes. The three-sided battle was complete chaos, and there were screams everywhere.

Yet, the instigator of this battle hid in the corner and watched the battle like a spectator. Hugging the hammer, Chen Ge's shirt was drenched.

That was too close!

The Red Specter suddenly paused... this is Yan Danian's power?

Chen Ge flipped the comic open to thank uncle in person, but he was in a low mood. Tonight's experience had completely shattered the hope toward life that Yan Danian had just regained. The uncle seemed to lose all hope and pick up his pen to draw circles in the corner.

Chen Ge looked at Yan Danian in the comic seriously. "Uncle, please cheer up! I promise you, tonight is really an accident! Your choice to follow me is really the correct one!"

After a long day of consolation, Yan Danian finally found the courage to face the world again. He told Chen Ge it was his power that paused the Red Specter earlier, Spirit Drawing. There was a chance for him to drag the ghost that was seen into the comic, but for a Red Specter, he could only delay them for less than a second.

Temporarily, Chen Ge did not know what kind of limitation this power had, but he realized there were not many empty pages in the comic, so the number of ghosts that could be stored was limited, and the success rate of the power was low. This power was not enough for Yan Danian to become a Lesser Red Specter; that hidden power was the most exciting for Chen Ge.

However, no matter how hard Chen Ge tried to convince Yan Danian, he did not reveal any information; it felt like he himself did not know he had that power. Xu Yin and Zhang Ya were asleep, so he still needed the uncle's help today. Therefore, Chen Ge did not press any further. After comforting the uncle, he put the comic away.

"Uncle Yan is not bad, just a little withdrawn." When Chen Ge was trying to console Uncle Yan, he felt like he was speaking the truth. "The things that happened tonight caught you by surprise, but after experiencing this several times, you should be able to get used to it."

Looking at the rampaging ghosts and Red Specter around the well, Chen Ge nodded slightly. "This kind of scenery is only visible if you stay with me. Perhaps in the future, you will understand my intention."

When he recovered, Chen Ge took the comic and hammer to circle around the outside of the battle. He called out his employees from the comic to have them pull the stragglers into the corner. Chen Ge believed that he was a reasonable person. He would have his employees beat the ghost until they were almost dead before asking whether they would join the Haunted House. If they were willing, it was a win-win situation as the ghosts entered the comic. If they were not willing, they would be food for his employees.

I will need quite a number of ghosts from this village if I want to complete the three-star scenario. I'm doing this for the sake of the visitors.

Initially, the employees in the comic did not know how to cooperate, but with Chen Ge's guidance, they slowly learned what to do. In the end, without Chen Ge's intervention, they would drag the isolated ghosts to their corner.

"Very talented." Chen Ge was satisfied with his employees' performance. He held the hammer and hid in the corner as his eyes narrowed on the two black robes.

"No. 10 is probably someone who knows me in real life. The chance of him being the chairperson is very high. If I can knock him unconscious, Xiong Qing will be somewhat affected." Xiong Qing was a hurdle that he had to take down if he wished to harm the members. Therefore, Chen Ge's gaze returned to Xiong Qing. When he arrived at Coffin Village, he had received the call from Inspector Lee saying that Xiong Qing had been captured around New Century Park.

However, two days later, Xiong Qing had appeared before Chen Ge as a Red Specter. The conditions to form a Red Specter were very harsh. This was observable from Xu Yin. They had to be tortured at the time of their death, filled with ire and resentment, and be highly aggressive.

Half of Xiong Qing's body was almost torn apart. If this is how he was when he died, then it's quite obvious how much pain he was in, but the key question was, why did he wander around New Century Park alone? Was it a coincidence that he was captured by the police? Where were the other members of the society when he was captured?

With these questions, some speculation appeared in Chen Ge's mind. Was it the society's plan to abandon Xiong Qing from the very beginning? To make him lose the last bit of hope and then slowly torture his body? Then, using his pain and resentment and the black blood inside the wooden box, they would create a Red Specter?

The ghost stories society had retained access to a blood door for as long as five years, so they knew about more secrets than Chen Ge. Creating a Red Specter could be one of them. They purposely abandoned Xiong Qing to make him lose all hope? But how did they complete the rest of the transformation after Xiong Qing was captured?

How did they gain access to Xiong Qing inside police detention?

This confused Chen Ge. He looked at Xiong Qing, whose body was breaking apart, and his gaze darkened. Did the society rely on ghosts, or is someone cooperating with them?

Regardless of the process, it was an undeniable truth that Xiong Qing was now a Red Specter. The society had managed that, and they had to have a bigger reason for coming to Coffin Village. What is their plan?

While Chen Ge was deep in thought, the scenario at the well started to change. The ghosts attacked everything in sight, their resentment exploding. A Death Funeral was very common at Coffin Village. It had been a tradition for many years, and no one dared to disturb the Death Funeral. However, that day, not only did someone interrupt the ceremony, he even smashed their coffin!

This was an offense that they could not stomach; all the ghosts were in a frenzy. The two members of the ghost stories society who were trapped by Chen Ge were angry as well. They felt seriously wronged. The boss of the Haunted House had done something horrible to provoke the entire village of ghost, but they were left to face the consequences.

If possible, the black robes wanted to reason with the ghosts to call for a truce so that they could work together to deal with the most horrible individual. However, the Zhu woman did not give them the chance. When she saw the village ghosts tangle themselves with Xiong Qing, she had the ghost baby crawl over to deal with the two black robes.

The members of the society were familiar with human psychology, at least better than the people trapped in this isolated village. When Chen Ge led the group of ghosts, they already anticipated this, so they called the special thin monster back to block the rampaging ghosts and had Xiong Qing deal with the ghost baby.

The two Red Specters fought, and their battle was different from normal Specters. Similar to other ghosts from the society, Xiong Qing used the blood vessels that came out from half of his body to change into different shapes to try to consume the ghost baby.

The ghost baby's tactic was weirder. His baby started to leak blood, which formed tadpoles that swam toward Xiong Qing. They tried to crawl into his body. Both of them were fast, but they purposely avoided the well during their fight.

The situation was worsening for the society. The thin monster was slightly stronger than Jiang Ling's sister, but it was ultimately not a Red Specter. Facing the village of ghosts, it was slowly losing.

“Ever since we ran into that guy, everything started to derail; this cannot be a coincidence.”

No. 10 was looking at the corner that Chen Ge had disappeared to. His face was hidden inside the robe, so no one could tell his expression.

“Who can tell for sure?” The black robe standing beside No. 10 laughed. “I have something I forgot to tell you, but I suppose now is as good a time as any.”

“If it’s bad news, then you can spare it. I’ve heard enough recently.” No. 10 squeezed on the wooden box until it had a noise.

“Several days ago, when I used my scapegoat to escape Fang Hwa Apartments, I was spotted by the man.”

“I’ve already warned you to not do unnecessary things.” No. 10 turned around. His voice was raspy and throaty. Even with his accomplice, he was using a fake voice.

“That’s where you’re wrong. That scapegoat had a worthwhile death because I got some valuable information from his mind.” The black robe’s voice was laced with laughter. Even though the situation was looking bad, he did not seem worried.

“What information?”

“That door at his Haunted House is currently unoccupied. This means that the door-pusher has already left.”

“The door-pusher left? He’s not the one who opened the door?” There was a discernible change to No. 10’s voice, but it returned to normal seconds later. “Why did you wait until now to tell me such an important thing?”

“The Red Specter in his shadow is not weaker than the female ghost haunting this village. The difficulty is almost the same; that's why I didn't tell you anything." The mention of the Specter in Chen Ge's shadow ended the cheeriness in the black robe's voice. He turned to look in the direction Chen Ge escaped. "However, he has just revealed several details, and this, I feel, is a chance."

The black robe's voice turned chilly. "The people that we sent to kill him haven't returned. All the Specters should have been consumed by the Red Specter in his shadow already."

He took in a deep breath and turned to look at No. 10. "Including the Devil's two Red Specter children."

No. 10 understood immediately. "Overconsumption of Specters will lead to hibernation. However, no Specter dares to consume so many things at once. Have you considered the possibility that Devil's two children have been made into puppets and the Red Specter in his shadow isn't asleep? This could just be a trap for us to walk into."

"You have a point. He does feel like someone who would do something like that." The black robe made a fluttering laughter. "Actually, I admire the man. He's wicked, cruel, and cunning but manages to disguise himself so perfectly and live a harmless life under the sun."

Regarding Chen Ge, the black robe gave a very good comment. No. 10 nodded and agreed, "The enemy is too cunning, so we have to be careful. Actually, I also wanted to take him down, but you saw it yourself. Earlier, when Xiong Qing wanted to kill him, he suddenly stopped. Only a Red Specter can affect a Red Specter. No matter whether the Red Specter in his shadow is asleep or not, the man is hiding yet another Red Specter!"

"So, are you willing to give up? If we can control all of them, then we can get two doors." The black robe was very persuasive.

"This is not a question of whether we're willing or not." No. 10 glanced at the black robe coldly. "Several days ago, the society still had twelve people, but how many of us remain today?"

An answer appeared in the black robe's mind. He was silent and did not answer.

"Only three of us remain, and he only taken five days to do that. Therefore, we cannot afford to be too careful when dealing with this man." No. 10's heart was bleeding. Each of the numbers was a living person, a valuable 'patient' that they had handpicked from the society.

"Then, we shall proceed according to plan."

"Let's move on before things change again."

"Okay." The black robe moved his neck. Ignoring the ghost baby and Xiong Qing as well as the rampaging ghosts, he walked toward the well.

"Jiang Ling, have your sister stop him," the Zhu woman said. Jiang Ling, who stood behind him, called for her sister, and after a while, the wounded Zhu Xinrou rushed at the black robe.

"Do you think I'm afraid of you?" The laughter in the black robe's voice increased. He pulled off the robe, and a blood red monster made from faces appeared!

"I don't think I'm that clever, but people around me are too dumb." He pointed at Zhu Xinrou, and the faces monster blocked her way.

Chen Ge saw this, and his heart shook. "The society has another Red Specter!"

When he heard what the black robe said earlier, he had a good guess as to this man's identity. This black robe was most likely Wu Fei from the Third Sick Hall. Jiang Ling's sister was already wounded, and she was facing a Red Specter, so the battle was concluded before it even started.

Wu Fei and the Devil were the most dangerous patients of the Third Sick Hall, and both of them carried Red Specter. No one dared stop him as he walked toward the well. He looked in and took out another wooden box from his chest. He opened it to reveal the black blood stain. Several minutes later, the water in the well did not change. The man smiled. "No Red Specter can resist this black blood. They cannot remain calm like this. It is as I suspected—the female ghost has already left the well!"

He closed the wooden box and turned to look at the Zhu woman. "If she's not inside the well, where can she be?"

The man's eyes were cold and icy; they felt like the eyes of a scorpion. He slowly walked toward the ceremony procession. The Red Specter that was covered with faces had completely apprehended Zhu Xinrou; they were not on the same level.

“We’ve been investigating this village for half a year. The ghost has already left the well; you’ve been lying to the villagers.” The black robe glared at the Zhu woman, his gaze sharp as knife that stuck into one’s heart. There was no chance of lying before him.

Hearing that the ghost had left the well, the first to speak were the deformed villagers. They were stunned before they got angry for being lied to. One of them wanted to demand an explanation from the Zhu woman, but before he could say anything, the Red Specter with faces dragged him away.

“I don’t like to be interrupted.” The black robe’s voice lowered dangerously. He walked up to the Zhu woman. “You have to know where the ghost in the well has escaped to, right?”

Chapter 336 - The Start of the Nightmare

Chapter 336: The Start of the Nightmare

“She’s inside the well. She just hasn’t awakened yet.” The Zhu woman did not get scared off but stood firmly, shielding the two children.

“In that case, I’ll go look for her myself.” The black robe waved at the Red Specter beside him. The ghost that was just faces crawled into the villager’s body. In less than one second, the villager collapsed to the floor, dead.

“Looks like it’s not him.” The black robe raised his head. “She was forced to her death by the villagers, so even if her ghost form might disperse, she would not possess a villager, then who could it be?”

...

Instead of contemplation, it sounded more like the black robe was trying to see the Zhu woman’s reaction. Before entering Coffin Village, the ghost stories society had gathered a lot of information, but it was vague and needed confirmation. Hearing what the black robe had to say, the Zhu woman was anxious.

“She hates the villagers, but there is one lady by the surname Zhu who is the sole exception.” The black robe called the Red Specter to return. His finger stroked the creature’s hair gently like he was treating his lover. “If I were that woman, I would leave my spirit with the person I trusted the most.”

He patted the Red Specter’s forehead lightly, and his tone changed as he pointed at the Zhu woman. “Kill her!”

The crazy man was still talking about something else the last moment, but the next second, he turned aggressive. The Zhu lady did not expect this turn of events. During the crucial moment, the jewelry that she took out from the red coffin changed. Each of the jewels was hiding a half Red Specter; this was the woman’s last trump card.

She whispered something to Jiang Liang before turning to focus on controlling the ghosts to deal with the man’s Red Specter. Jiang Ling and Fan Yu heard what the woman had to say and slowly retreated.

The Red Specter with faces elicited a creepy laugh. This Red Specter was different from others; it was more like a coagulation of people's resentment, and it had most likely come from behind the 'door'. The ghosts that came out of the jewelry were torn apart, and all the faces on the monster made the same small action—they opened their mouth to bite at the Zhu woman.

The black robe seemed to have been waiting for this moment for a long time already. His voice was shaking. "We're going to consume a top Red Specter. This was unimaginable in the past!"

The man finally said the real reason the society came to Coffin Village. They had managed to find out there was an injured powerful Red Specter in Coffin Village through some means, and their plan was surrounding this Red Specter. After consuming a powerful Red Specter, the society would have their own powerful Red Specter.

The mouths bit on the woman's body. After two to three seconds, the face monster stopped.

"She's not on here?" The black robe was surprised as he moved his gaze to Jiang Ling and Fan Yu. "This is rather troublesome. In that case, we'll just need to slaughter everyone."

The face monster charged at Jiang Ling while the black robe stood where he was. He seemed to already know the result, so he did not care about the rest and started to do his own stuff. He reached into his robe to search for something. He took out a handful of paper dolls, and each of them had a pained expression on their face.

"All 34 villagers of Lin Guan Village are here. According to their answers, all the villagers that escaped from Coffin Village decade ago had some connection to the Zhu woman. It even included her own progeny." The man slowly stood up and looked at Jiang Ling. "Of all the deserters, only that little girl wasn't made into a paper doll by me. In that case, there's a very good chance the ghost is in her body."

Fan Yu grabbed Jiang Ling's hand as they raced into the village, but how could the two kids outrun a Red Specter? As the face monster approached then, Fan Yu suddenly heard a familiar voice coming from the corner ahead. "This way!"

Chen Ge shoved the hammer and comic into his backpack. He stood before them with both of his hands empty. He looked like he was ready to run.

“Chen Ge?” Fan Yu slowed down. He was surprised, and this was also the first time he had said Chen Ge’s name.

Before he reacted, Chen Ge grabbed them off the ground. “How rude! Call me big brother!”

One in each arm, Chen Ge raced down the village. The same thing happened several minutes ago, but this time, the burden on Chen Ge increased, and the thing chasing him was a Red Specter.

Chen Ge called Xu Yin, Zhang Ya, and the uncle’s name. Zhang Ya gave no response; Xu Yin wanted to help but could not. When Uncle Yan saw the Red Specter, he hid himself immediately.

To drag the time until dawn, Chen Ge purposely ran through the dangerous spots that he could remember. The map given by Ah Qing was immensely helpful. Chen Ge ran through all the spots that were marked by a red cross, but even so, the distance between them and the society’s Red Specter did not increase.

“I cannot run anymore! Is there anything you want to tell me?” Chen Ge felt like there was a ball of fire in his chest, and his legs were getting numb.

“If you cannot do this anymore, run to the western side of the village and go into the third house on the left.” Jiang Ling’s voice appeared the same time as Fan Yu. However, it startled Chen Ge because the girl’s tone was completely different from before. She sounded like a young woman talking.

The society is right? The Red Specter is hiding inside Jiang Ling? This thought flashed across Chen Ge’s mind. He had been hiding next to the well, so he knew what had happened.

“Okay! We’ll go that way!” He changed direction and raced to the third home. “What now?”

“Go in the house and place me before the door to the left bedroom.” Jiang Ling’s voice was becoming weird.

Chen Ge kicked open the wooden door to enter the inner room. There was no coffin in this home and no furniture either. Even the walls were peeling. There was no time for Chen Ge to consider why. He placed the girl on the door of the left bedroom and then collapsed to the ground. He had raced throughout the village with all his might. Even if he was made of steel, he could not run anymore.

A wicked laugh echoed outside the house. The faces squeezed through the front door. The Red Specter had arrived.

“I know who has been kind to me. After we deal with this thing, I’ll thank you personally.” Jiang Ling looked at Chen Ge as she bit on her thumb. She allowed the blood to soak her palm. “I just want to be a human, why is that so hard?”

She leaned lightly against the wooden door. When her body touched the door, the simple door started to get covered with a thick layer of blood.

“It was me who left this layer of blood; this home was the start of my nightmare.”

Jiang Ling pushed the wooden door open, and there was a blood red world behind it.

Chapter 337 - Other Than Myself, They All Came

Chapter 337: Other Than Myself, They All Came

Jiang Ling held Fan Yu's hand as she walked into the door. Chen Ge had no other choice. Compared to the Red Specter that was just faces, the world behind the door felt safer. The moisture in the air thickened, and a stale smell of blood hung into the air. Chen Ge's sight was affected like he was standing in a world of fog.

This is different from the door in the Third Sick Hall.

This was the second time Chen Ge had entered the blood door. The world behind the door in Coffin Village was covered by a blood fog, and he could only see three meters before him.

...

"Be careful not to get lost. There are man-eating creatures in here." Jiang Ling had completely shed her disguise. Her childish voice was laced with undeniable strength.

"Understood." Chen Ge had a hard time believing this. "This is hard to process. A little girl who cannot hit me even if she jumps her highest is a powerful Red Specter."

"Even if you've saved me, please watch your mouth, or I might need to repay your kindness only in death." Jiang Ling looked at Chen Ge coldly. After entering the door, her dress started to change. The blood in the fog surrounded her like she was the master there. Chen Ge's eyes twitched slightly because the words were very familiar. It reminded him of Zhang Ya's love letter.

After Chen Ge got in, Jiang Ling closed the door. When she opened it again, the scene outside the door had changed. It was a blood red village, and the fog covered up the sky.

"The Red Specter will arrive soon. This door will not stop it for that long." When the blood fog got close to Jiang Ling, it would seep into her body. However, probably because she was injured, she could not summon the fog on her own. With Jiang Ling leading the way, the three headed into the village. The closed door behind them shuddered slightly, and there were echoes of growling coming from behind it.

“Where are you taking us?” The blood fog had no effect on Jiang Ling, but it made Chen Ge and Fan Yu feel uncomfortable. It felt like they were submerged in a swamp.

“Be quiet.” Jiang Ling signaled for them to hide inside the small hut. They waited for several seconds, and a curious monster walked past them in the fog. The monster was large, and his arms were deformed. His facial features were twisted, and he wore a roughly-sewn coat. He looked around like he was searching for something.

The monster soon walked past them and disappeared.

“The villagers.” The hatred in Jiang Ling’s eyes could not be eclipsed. “They are how the villagers look in my eyes.”

“The villagers in your eyes? The blood red world was constructed with your psyche in mind?” Chen Ge valued any information related to the world behind the door.

“I’m not sure how this world is formed, but this world is very similar to a nightmare that I once had. In that nightmare, all the villagers look like that, deformed and creepy. They’re constantly looking for me, trying to drag me back.” Jiang Ling did not continue. She changed direction and headed for the inner part of the village.

There was a blood red world behind the door, but even now, Chen Ge had no idea whether these worlds were connected or isolated. Based on the suicidal investigator, everyone had a door in their heart, and only at the most despairing moment could one push open the door.

The door at the Third Sick Hall was pushed open by Men Nan, and the world behind it reflected how Men Nan saw the world—the mummified patients, twisted doctors, and broken arms that formed from fear. The world behind Coffin Village’s door was covered by blood fog and populated by the villagers that wanted to capture her. This fitted the girl’s understanding of the village.

The world behind the door reflects the human heart? Is it a real nightmare? Chen Ge was reminded of the door at his own Haunted House. Then what about the door at my Haunted House? Who left that door behind?

The sound of fighting came from the fog. It was likely the society's Red Specter fighting the villagers behind the door.

"Let them fight, we need to find something."

Wading through the fog, Jiang Ling led Chen Ge and Fan Yu to the center of the village. The fog there was light, and in the middle of the village, a group of villagers were kneeling. Their bodies were heavily deformed, and their faces looked ugly. Even though they were wearing human clothes, they could not be considered humans.

"What are they doing?"

"Repenting."

The monsters had their heads lowered, and their bodies were facing the ancestral hall. Right in front of it was a red coffin!

Different from real life, the coffin behind the door blocked the entrance to the ancestral hall. The hall was the place where the villagers sent respect to their ancestors, but the coffin blocked the entrance fully.

"We'll be able to survive after we open that coffin." Jiang Ling walked around the crowd to slowly head toward the ancestral hall. "Do not awaken these monsters."

The three held their breath as they moved slowly toward the ancestral hall. The fog moved like it could sense the presence of living humans. Some of the monsters slowly raised their heads.

Fan Yu and Jiang Ling walked ahead, and Chen Ge covered them from behind. His heart chilled as he looked at the monsters on the ground. Red paper money covered the floor, and the monsters looked like they were attending a funeral. They were forced to make sad expressions, but the tears could not be forced out.

A funeral?

After Chen Ge entered the Coffin Village, he realized that the village had many traditions related to funerals, like the white lanterns that hung on the street, paper money, and coffins.

Both in real life and the world behind the door, there was a funeral, a funeral that had not ended until today. Chen Ge took out his black phone to take a look. Even after I entered the world behind the door, the phone didn't say that the mission has failed. Looks like as long as I am inside the village, regardless of whether it is inside the door or outside of it, the mission is still in effect.

He looked for the mission message. He saw the name Coffin Village on the black phone. Initially, he had thought this name was weird, and he did not think much of it. However, after concluding the stuff that he saw at the village, he had some ideas.

The screen moved, and Chen Ge looked at the details provided by the mission. "That day, other than myself, they all came."

The mission hint was short. Chen Ge slowly narrowed his eyes. He finally understood what it meant. These people came to 'my' funeral to cry on 'my' behalf. That is why there's a myself. The hint is telling me that the key is the funerals.

Chen Ge turned to look at the ancestral hall, and Jiang Ling had already reached the red coffin.

The small, fair hand pressed on the cold, antique coffin lid. When Jiang Ling touched the red coffin, all the kneeling monsters stopped mourning, and the twisted, scary faces started to rise.

“Come help me!” Jiang Ling screamed shrilly. Her face had lost the usual cuteness, and her expression looked scary.

BANG!

The solid coffin lid fell to the ground, and everyone turned to look inside the coffin. A woman was lying inside the large red coffin. Wet dark hair stuck to her slim body. Her skin was pale, and her face was handsome. Chen Ge would not describe her as pretty, but there was definitely something unique about her.

“Help me buy some time.” Jiang Ling walked into the red coffin and stared at the woman in the coffin. The villagers all stood up. They were conversing in a local language, and they looked so happy.

“How do you expect me to buy time?” Chen Ge turned to look at Jiang Ling, and he got another surprise. Jiang Ling lifted her hair back, and there was a bone missing from the back of her skull. Her head curved inwards. This is the only deformity on Jiang Ling’s body?

Walking forward, Jiang Ling rubbed her own blood on the woman’s hand and then placed the hand on the back of her head. The blood vessels reached out from the woman’s palm and crawled into Jiang Ling’s head through the depression.

What is she doing now? Has she reincarnated into Jiang Ling, or is she just possessing her body?

When the villagers saw the woman sleeping in the coffin, they charged at her like a bunch of crazed animals.

“This is why I hate children!” Chen Ge took out the hammer from his backpack and shielded himself before the red coffin. He felt himself being the target of a mob. Seeing the group of monsters charging at him, Chen Ge was flustered. The only thing he could do then was give it his best and call for Zhang Ya to appear.

When the crazed monsters had almost reached Chen Ge and the red coffin, laughter came from the blood fog. “If the female ghost doesn’t come out to save you at a time like this, she must really be in a slumber.”

A red wave made from faces blasted through the fog, knocking Chen Ge and the villagers away.

The society’s Red Specter!

Chen Ge was just brushed by the monster, but his face felt frozen. He looked at his chilled left hand. In the urgency of the moment, he raised both of his hands to shield his head, and his elbow brushed up against the Red Specter.

“I’ve been tailing you for this particular moment.” The faces coagulated to form the monster again. A black robe walked out from behind him. The man stopped beside the red coffin and turned to look at Chen Ge. “Surprised to meet again so soon?”

The black robe said the last sentence in a different voice. He was mimicking the voice of the investigator.

“So, it’s you.” Chen Ge still had a trump card on him—Yan Danian’s power—but he could not use it willy-nilly because his opponent had seen this power before, and they might have prepared for it already.

“Two birds, one stone. You’re one of our targets. You’re too dangerous; we cannot let you leave this place alive.” The black robe took out a small vial from his sleeve. It was half-filled with blood. He swirled it lightly, and the liquid parted to form individual vessels. “Enjoy your last few moments of freedom. In a bit, it’ll be your turn.”

The face monster had stopped the crazed villagers, so the black robe did not waste time and opened the cap, pouring the vial over Jiang Ling’s head.

“These blood vessels were found behind the ‘door’. They’re extremely precious and extremely useful. They also hide the biggest secret with regards to Red Specter.” The situation was in the black robe’s full control. He stared at the vessels that crawled out of the vial with extreme focus. "As long as they're touched by these blood vessels, even Red Specter won't be able to escape."

Chen Ge stared at the vial as the vessels slid down its wall and touched Jiang Ling's hair.

"If the ceremony between Jiang Ling and the woman is interrupted, it's over for me." Chen Ge patted his backpack and surreptitiously tapped the white cat's head. "It's your time to shine. Snatch that vial away. Remember, it's that glass thing in the man's hand!"

Chen Ge pointed at the black robe's palm. He did not know whether the white cat understood him or not. The blood vessels might affect the Red Specter's psyche. If the female ghost was controlled by the black robe, then there was definitely no chance for Chen Ge to survive the night. This was his last bet. He was going to use everything he had to protect Jiang Ling and the woman in the coffin.

Chen Ge did not have much time left. He was not one to hesitate. Just as the vessels were about to crawl into Jiang Ling's head, he grabbed the hammer and charged at the black robe!

"Such incompetence." The black robe did not move and maintained his posture. When Chen Ge was two meters away, the face monster burst through the village and blocked Chen Ge with a weird laugh.

"Yan Danian!" The uncle in the comic knew if he did not do anything now, he would also be affected, so he picked up his pen to draw the face monster in his comic. When he finished, the Red Specter stopped, and Chen Ge charged at the black robe. This was the chance he was looking for!

"We will not fall for the same trick twice." The black robe used his empty hand to send a bunch of paper dolls flying at Chen Ge's face. The paper dolls screamed and cried as they tried to climb on Chen Ge.

Chen Ge's movement was affected, and the Red Specter had already recovered. His situation was dire, but Chen Ge was exceptionally calm. He grabbed his backpack and threw it at the black robe.

"So god damn stubborn." The black robe used his free hand to grab the backpack, but when he did so, a white shadow flew out from within!

Even though he had created many ghost stories, he was stunned.

“What was that?”

The distressed white cat did not really understand what Chen Ge told it. It just thought there was something special about the vial. It opened its jaw and bit the vial. It then bounded away from the black robe and climbed onto the roof of one of the buildings.

“A cat?” The crazed villagers, the black robe, and Chen Ge were all looking at the white cat. Its pure white coat was a great contrast to the blood red world.

The white cat looked at the people underneath it as the vial dangled from its lips. Its little head swung left and right, and the blood vessels that were at the mouth of the bottle slid down its throat.

The white cat did not seem to realize the vial was empty. It blinked several times like it was trying to find Chen Ge among the crowd.

Chapter 339: Owe You a Favor

According to the black robe, the blood in the vial was the most precious thing they had found behind the door. It carried the Red Specter's secret and seemed to be the main method the ghost stories society used to control Red Specters. However, to everyone's surprise, it was swallowed by a cat.

"It ate it?" The black robe was so angry that his fingers were shaking. He really did not expect that someone would bring a cat to a place like this. "Get it to vomit it out!"

...

The black robe's voice turned shrill; this appeared like it was his real voice.

The white cat's ears were pressed against its skull. It sensed the aggression from the black robe and prepared to escape.

"Go and catch it! I want to split its stomach open and squeeze every drop of blood from its body!" The face monster beside him heard the order and rushed to the roof. The arrival of the Red Specter made the cat run immediately. It jumped over the rooftop before disappearing among the group of deformed villagers. The village was a mess. The black robe gritted his teeth. He was a careful person, but even he did not expect a turn like this.

"I need to catch it; that was the last bottle." The black robe saw the Red Specter that was led away by the white cat, and the distance between them grew bigger. After the Red Specter was ten meters away from him, the black robe had a black feeling starting in his heart. He turned over his shoulders and saw Chen Ge charging at him with the hammer.

"Enjoy your last minute of freedom! That was what you said earlier." Chen Ge found the opening he needed.

"I hate people like you who need to rely on others the most. Humans have to rely on themselves!” Chen Ge roared with the hammer flailing. “If you dare, let’s hash this out among ourselves!”

The black robe looked at the hammer in Chen Ge’s arms, and he sucked in a cold breath. “This madman.”

He turned to run, and Chen Ge followed close behind. The Red Specter had been lured away; this was the perfect opportunity, and Chen Ge definitely would not let it pass so easily. The black robe no longer had the ease to maintain the sense of mystery. He kept his hands on the hood as he called for the Red Specter to return.

This situation was similar to how it had been at Fang Hwa Apartments. After the Red Specter was lured away, those who were possessed opened themselves up to being attacked.

Looks like the Red Specters aren’t omnipotent. Chen Ge, having experienced this twice, realized the problem. That’s right, a single Red Specter is not enough. Looks like I need to befriend a few more of them!

They were both parties protected by ghosts, but the black robe’s physical condition was much worse than Chen Ge’s. This was probably because the way they interacted with ghosts was completely different. Chen Ge used tricks and goodwill to make the ghost accept him while the relationship between the society and their ghosts was more like a contract.

The black robe slowed down after some running. When Chen Ge noticed this, he picked up the pace!

“Today, I shall avenge the dead investigator!” Those who did not respect life would not be respected by life. The Red Specter heard the black robe’s call for aid, and it quickly hurried back.

However, when it passed the red coffin, the expression on all its faces changed like it had seen something very dangerous. The black robe was in grave danger, but the Red Specter did not go over to help him. It stopped beside the red coffin on high alert.

The blood fog in the village thickened. The deformed villagers seemed to feel something; they all turned to look at the red coffin, and their bodies shook.

“Another failure.”

The voice came from inside the red coffin, and the woman inside slowly opened her eyes. Her eyes were different from a normal person's, reflecting the shadow of the little girl, Jiang Ling. "In the end, I cannot sever my relationship with you."

The blood vessels crawled into her palm, and the woman touched the back of the girl's head lovingly. "I owe you a piece of your skull, so I owe you a favor."

Jiang Ling collapsed to the ground, and the woman turned her gaze to the Red Specter that was covered with faces. "Since you refused to give me the opportunity to be a human, then I shall refuse you the chance to be a ghost."

When she finished, the blood fog turned and formed invisible shackles controlling everyone present. The woman walked out of the red coffin, and there were numerous blood vessels trailing behind her. The face monster tried to struggle, but the blood fog kept it firmly in place. Half a village's fog morphed into blood water to stick on the society's Red Specter.

"Still want to fight me in the world behind my door?" The woman reached out to touch the thing's faces. When her fingers reached into its body, all the faces started to scream, but it was pointless. What happened next was gory and bloody. The woman peeled the faces off one by one and threw them right into the red coffin.

"Now, it's your turn." The woman controlled the blood fog to lift up the kneeling villagers. The louder they begged, the happier she was.

With the woman's laughter ringing beside his ears, Chen Ge, whose movement was also impaired, shivered involuntarily. He looked at those villagers in pain and shook his head. "Those who you've injured would eventually turn into your nightmare."

The blood fog seeped into the woman's body. After she finished tormenting the villagers, she carried Jiang Ling off the floor and walked to Chen Ge.

"You said I cannot hit you even if I jump?" The woman looked at Chen Ge with a faded smile.

"Did I say something like that? I don't remember anything like that." The hair on Chen Ge's body stood on end. The woman before him had a vengeful heart, and she was much more difficult to deal with compared to the ghost stories society.

"If you can't remember it, then so be it." To Chen Ge's surprise, this vengeful and scary woman did not trouble him. She moved several steps to the left and squatted down before Fan Yu. "You discovered me a long time ago, didn't you?"

Fan Yu nodded. He was just a child, so he did not think about lying at all.

"Then why did you choose to stay by my side?" The woman leaned her face close to Fan Yu like she was trying to see his expression closely.

"It was you who accompanied me. I don't have that many friends." Fan Yu pointed at Chen Ge. "Unless you count him."

The woman smiled and took out a jade bangle from her sleeve. "You can see them. Wear this, and they won't harm you anymore."

Standing up, the woman placed Jiang Ling beside Chen Ge. "Take her and leave. This village is going to be buried forever."

Chen Ge did not quite get what the woman was saying. He carried Jiang Ling and grabbed Fan Yu's hand. "I can leave?"

"Yes."

"Then can I bring him with me?" Chen Ge pointed at the black robe. "I have something to ask him."

Chapter 340: It Split

Chen Ge lifted up the hood, which was hiding a ruined face. “Who is your chairperson?”

“It’s not me.” The black robe’s face was filled with a smile. “Have fun guessing. You’ll definitely see him before you die.”

...

Then, blood vessels crawled out of the man’s lips. The blood seemed to have a life of its own. Veins popped up on the man’s skin; he seemed to be experiencing some kind of extremely painful torture. His lips fell open, and his throat and mouth were filled with blood vessels.

The blood in his body seems to be consuming him. Chen Ge gripped the hammer and wanted to give him a whack but was stopped by the woman beside him. After the blood crawled out from his mouth, it wrapped the man up fully, and only his general shape remained.

“The chairperson is just next to you. He has been watching you and is the most interesting person among all the people you’ve met.” The black robe croaked. Chen Ge and the woman watched as the black robe was slowly consumed from within. He gradually become a pool of blood and seeped into the blood-soaked ground.

“What are those blood vessels?”

“You can understand them as part of a Red Specter.” The woman picked up the black robe and seemed to discover something interesting within. “Take the children and leave. If you stay too long inside the door, you’ll be trapped here forever.”

The woman held the black robe and disappeared amid the blood fog. Chen Ge looked in the direction she had disappeared, and his heart was filled with confusion. “What was inside that black robe? How come I heard traces of joy in her voice?”

Chen Ge found the white cat on the rooftop of the ancestral hall. It still did not understand what had happened. It held the vial in its lips, and its white fur was standing on end. Obviously, it was spooked.

“Come down here, it’s safe now.” The white cat eventually jumped down from the beam. When Chen Ge caught it, he realized that the cat had gotten heavier.

“Why do you have to eat everything?” Chen Ge pried the cat’s mouth open to take a look, but he could not see anything off about it.

“That thing was prepared by the ghost stories society. Is it harmful to a cat if consumed?” This was the first time Chen Ge had come across such a problem. Realizing there was nothing wrong with the white cat, he placed it inside his backpack and led the two children to the bedroom where the woman had once stayed.

“The blood door is her room door, so for her, every time this door is opened, it’s the return of her nightmare.” The blood door was closed. Chen Ge tried pushing it several times, but it would not budge.

“Let me. Jiang Ling has taught me how to open the door.” When Fan Yu pressed against the door, the bangle gifted by the woman started to bleed, and the blood covered his palm. Slowly but surely, the door was being pushed open.

After they left the blood door, Chen Ge took out his black phone to take a look. He had been waiting for the message on his phone. The black robe was most likely Patient 9 from the Third Sick Hall—Wu Fei!

However, the black phone did not update after the man’s death. Whenever one of the patients from Third Sick Hall was killed, the mission completion rate would increase, and after gaining a ninety percent completion rate, he would receive the hidden item for this three-star scenario!

When Xiong Qing was captured and the Devil was killed, the black phone updated, but this time, there was no update after Wu Fei’s death.

What’s wrong? Chen Ge thought back to the events with the black robe and felt like he had overlooked something important.

The black robe has been tailing us and only made his move after he made sure Zhang Ya was asleep. When he saw me, the second sentence out of his mouth was uttered in the voice of the investigator. Chen Ge frowned.

There was not anything particularly suspicious about the black robe. Is he still alive? The blood vessels carried his soul and escaped? Or did he hide his real consciousness somewhere else, like how it was with that dead investigator?

Chen Ge thought back to the woman's reaction when she picked up the black robe and realized the key might have been that robe.

"This is such a waste." Zhang Ya was asleep, and he had no power to demand the robe from that woman. "The one who pushed open the door seemed to be more powerful than a normal Red Specter inside the door."

Chen Ge gave it some thought after leaving the old home. He decided not to return to the well but find a place to hide until dawn. Chen Ge led the two children to the middle of the village. He crawled through the secret tunnel to reach the two-story building.

"Granny, are you asleep?" Chen Ge carried the two children into the room, and when he went upstairs, the old lady was not in the small room.

"Where is she?" Chen Ge put down Jiang Ling and grabbed the hammer. "The old lady's legs are seriously atrophied, so she couldn't move on her own. Someone got here before me?"

All the furniture in the room looked tidy and untouched. If the old lady had been forcefully taken away, the place would not have been so clean. Chen Ge tapped Fan Yu's shoulder. "Can you see anyone inside this room?"

"No." Fan Yu shook his head.

"Then where can she disappear to?"

A baby's crying filled up the room. The place was not big. Chen Ge ransacked the place, but he could not find the old woman.

"This is weird." Chen Ge placed the unconscious Jiang Ling on the bed. He sat on the ground. He was about to take a breather when a gunshot was heard from the western end of the village!

"A gunshot? Is that Ol' Wei?" Chen Ge climbed up from the ground. "They've returned? Or have some accidents befallen them? Or has backup arrived?"

There was only one gunshot before the world became quiet again. Chen Ge was worried about Master Bai and Ol' Wei's safety, so he led Fan Yu and Jiang Ling out of the house and headed for the western part of the village. By then, the sun was coming up.

When Chen Ge arrived at the western part of the village, No. 10 had left. Xiong Qing and the ghost baby had disappeared. Only the fainted villagers remained.

"What happened here after I left?" Chen Ge grabbed a villager to ask, but the man was too traumatized to say anything other than the repeating, "It split. It split."

Chen Ge was not sure whether that was local slang or something really did split. He looked around and saw the Zhu woman collapsed next to the well. Her hair was a mess, and she looked horrible.

"Can you hear me?" Due to his work, Chen Ge was very good at treating fainting spells. With his aid, the woman slowly awakened.

"Don't worry, the black robe has already left." Chen Ge held the weakened woman in his arms. "Can you tell me what happened here? Where is the black robe carrying the wooden box?"

The woman blinked several times before she fully regained consciousness. She gripped Chen Ge's sleeves, and the first sentence out of her lips was... "It split open. The person's body split open!"

"Huh? Slow down. There's no need to rush." Chen Ge patted the woman on her back and slowly helped her to sit upright.

...

"After you left with the two children, the six-headed monster was torn apart by the village's ghosts, and throughout the process, the black robe didn't move a finger." The Zhu woman's body was weak, and her words came slow and stunted. "After the village's spirits shared the monster, they turned their attention to the black robe, but the moment they got near, they screamed and ran away."

"The ghosts were afraid of him?"

"Yes, red blood started to seep from his body, and after the robe was peeled off, I saw that he was carrying a dead woman on his back."

The woman's description made Chen Ge think of himself, but Zhang Ya had been hiding in his shadow. "When he pulled off the black robe, did you see his face?"

"No, actually, it felt like it was the female body that yanked the robe off."

"Are you sure it's a female body? Not a female ghost in a red outfit?" In Chen Ge's mind, the difference between a female body and a female ghost was still big.

"I can still tell the difference between something like that. However, there's something unique about that body that is different from all the dead bodies that I've seen before." The Zhu woman tried her best to explain the situation, but since she had spent her whole life cooped up in Coffin Village, the words just could not come to her as easily. "The body looked like it had been dolled up. It looked more like a display than a body.”

“The society is indeed filled with mad people.” Chen Ge was suddenly reminded of something and he asked, “Was the body beautiful?”

So far, other than Wu Fei and Wang Shenglong, only Han Bao’er was still unknown. The comment of the Third Sick Hall’s doctor about this female patient had been— Just how harsh must God be to make a woman as beautiful as this?

Chen Ge paid attention when he saw this message. Xiong Qing was made into a Red Specter, so Han Bao’er might have been made into something else. It’s hard to understand the world of the crazies.

“I don’t think you can call the body pretty.” The woman also did not understand why she was being asked to judge a body’s beauty, but she suddenly stopped. “I almost forgot, the body didn’t show any sign of decay, but the skin looked weird, radiating an aura of death.”

The more she described, the stranger it became. The thing No. 10 was carrying seemed to be different from everything he had seen so far.

“The woman’s body was made up from numerous red threads, and regardless of whether it was living or dead, she shoved everything into her mouth like food. When she ate, her lips could split until here.” The woman pointed at her ear. “The woman’s body could split open any place it wished. In a way, she looked like a moving body of lips.”

Listening to the Zhu woman’s description, the monster sounded like a Red Specter, but if it was a Red Specter, there was no way the Zhu lady and the villagers could have survived.

“So why did the monster leave?”

“The black robe wanted to capture the baby before turning to deal with us, but right then, someone entered the village.”

“Was it the police?”

The woman shook her head. “It was a doctor. He was wearing a white doctor’s garb, and many playing children surrounded him.”

When this image crossed his mind, Chen Ge was weirded out. “A bunch of children circling the doctor?”

“All those children are ghosts. They seem to treat the doctor as their father.” Now that the woman said that, it reminded Chen Ge of someone—Doctor Chen from Jiujiang’s Children’s Home!

“The doctor looks around forties, has a square face and thick eyebrows?”

“I was too far away to tell.” The woman thought about it. “After the doctor entered the village, he headed right for the black robe. They seemed to be nemeses.”

“Did they exchange any conversation?”

“No, when the black robe saw the doctor, he immediately left. We were attacked by the children following the doctor. However, they did not harm us; they merely knocked us out.”

“One last question. Was it you who transferred the babies from the ancestral hall to your home through the secret tunnel?” Chen Ge stood up and prepared to leave.

“You even know that?” The woman did not deny it. “Whenever the female ghost returns for the annual massacre, only my place is relatively safe.”

“I heard that from the old lady. Is she your family?” Chen Ge asked, but there was no answer. He turned to realize there was a weird expression on the woman’s face. “What’s wrong?”

“My grandmother passed away a long time ago; you couldn’t have spoken with her.”

Even though he had suspected that, Chen Ge’s heart still skipped a bit.

“But don’t you worry, she probably had something she wanted to tell you.” The woman signaled for Chen Ge to inspect the western side of the village. “Before I fainted, I saw the black robe and the doctor heading that way.”

“The gunshot came from that side as well. They probably ran into Ol’ Wei and Master Bai.” Chen Ge was worried about the almost-retired police officer and quickly rushed ahead. He ran for a while and started to hear the sound of a baby crying. Following the voice, he saw Master Bai and Ol' Wei collapsed next to a dirt wall with the basket between them.

They were not injured, and to Chen Ge's surprise, Ol' Wei's gun was sitting snugly in his holster. Chen Ge lifted the gun to take a look, and there was a shot missing.

"There is no slug around here. Did the thing that was shot get taken away?" He stayed on guard beside Ol' Wei and Master Bai until they woke up.

It felt like a nightmare. Master Bai could still remember some of the details from the night before, but the situation with Ol' Wei was slightly more complicated. He looked worried and kept telling Chen Ge that something scary had happened to him. When Chen Ge asked him about it, he had no recollection of said event.

Ol' Wei was clearly traumatized. He had forgotten everything that had happened in Coffin Village, but he kept saying that something was not right.

The night dispersed, and the sun was coming up. Chen Ge received the message that his mission had been completed.

"Congratulations, Specters' favored! You've completed the random three-star mission—Coffin Village! A new scenario has been unlocked!

"You have successfully completed the mission within the allocated time. Congratulations for winning the reward—Seamstress' Wedding Dress!"

“Seamstress’ Wedding Dress. My bone as the needle, my blood as the thread, my skin as the cloth—hopefully, you won’t mind my blood red wedding dress.

“Congratulations for obtaining the special-type baleful Specter—Seamstress’ lingering spirit!

“The three-star mission for Coffin Village has been completed. Completion rate: seventy percent—unable to obtain the hidden item.”

Chen Ge looked at the message on the black phone twice to make sure he did not see incorrectly. The completion rate is only seventy percent? I’ve run through the village several times already tonight, and I’ve been to all the places. How come the completion rate is only seventy percent?

The black phone would never make a mistake, so he started to think. The ghost stories society’s interruption caused the Coffin Village’s ceremony to fail. Could that be a reason why?

The key to completing the mission should be the female ghost. Either help her complete the ceremony or killing her will bring two different results—that should be the core of the mission. The woman said, since they refused to let her be a human, she wouldn’t give them a chance to be ghosts. This shows that the Red Specter’s desire has changed; she wants a rebirth!

Either helping her or stopping her would increase the completion rate, but due to the arrival of the society, before Chen Ge could commit to any choice, he had to start running for his life.

Safety first. As long as I’m alive, there’s a chance to raise the completion rate in the future. Chen Ge leaned against the wall and slid the phone in his pocket. But what shall I choose in the future? Help her get her rebirth or stop her?

Coffin Village was hiding a large secret. The whole village could be seen as a tomb—all the villagers were paper doll sacrifices, the Zhu woman was the tomb guard, and the only dead buried here was the Red Specter!

Rebirth is impossible. Possessing others to create a nightmare is more likely, but if I stop her, we'll turn into enemies, and it will be an endless battle. Chen Ge turned to look at Fan Yu. The boy had his head lowered as he toyed with the jade bangle on his wrist. Inside the jade bangle were lines of red blood.

The ghost seems to value Fan Yu a lot, and she has given him a precious bangle. She is Fan Yu's friend, and Fan Yu is my friend, so in a way, I'm also her friend. That's not so bad. Even though the woman is a vengeful spirit, she knows right from wrong, and she deserves the help. Furthermore, as a Haunted House boss, isn't it my job to befriend souls from the other side?

Chen Ge very quickly convinced himself. He told Fan Yu to try to keep that Red Specter big sister as happy as possible. For today's Trial Mission, Chen Ge was just an observer. Zhang Ya was asleep, and Xu Yin was in the middle of his transformation. That meant that he had lost the right to join the battle. Thankfully, the result was not so bad. The scenario was unlocked, and Xu Yin had a high chance to become a Red Specter. Even the white cat that swallowed the society's blood might experience some special change in the future.

I've been running for a whole night, but how come I feel I've been heavily rewarded?

The day was starting. It was 5 am. Chen Ge calculated the time. Even if he rushed nonstop, it would be hard for him to reach New Century Park before 9 am.

Director Luo has given everything for this promotion; I cannot let him down. I'd better return as soon as I can. Chen Ge found the Zhu woman to discuss the issue regarding Ah Qing's son with her. In the end, Chen Ge did not take the baby away but left him to be taken care of by the Zhu woman.

Ol' Wei also asked the woman many questions, but the woman sided with the Red Specter in the well. She did not reveal any information. She said that this was just a normal village with a unique ceremony during that time of year. Ol' Wei felt like he had forgotten something. It was as if he had drunk too much the night before and could not remember what had happened.

Chen Ge was afraid that Ol' Wei was affected by the society, so he led him to a room and had his employees check on him. They discovered that he was just fine. The gunfire from the night before should have come from Ol' Wei's gun. He must have seen something and fired. It was probably that thing that stole his memory. Only Ol' Wei had seen the thing that stole his memory, but he could not remember what that thing was.

Chen Ge told Ol' Wei to be careful and advised him from going out alone. He was worried that the death of the investigator might repeat itself.

The villagers hated the outsiders—probably because they were afraid that others would see their abnormalities—so they stayed far away from Chen Ge's group. At 6 am, Chen Ge, Ol' Wei, and Master Bai led the two children out of Coffin Village. They walked for one hour through the forest before Ol' Wei and Chen Ge's phones rang.

"Finally, there's signal!" Ol' Wei recovered and called to report the situation to Captain Yan. The two kids had been discovered, but the doctor at the Children's Home had disappeared. Based on Ol' Wei's understanding, he suspected that this was a premeditated kidnapping; the two children had probably been kidnapped by Doctor Chen to be sold.

Captain Yan also relaxed when he found out that Ol' Wei and Chen Ge were safe and the kids were found. He had them bring the kids to the station.

When Ol' Wei reported the situation to Captain Yan, Chen Ge logged into his social account. He realized from 1 am to 3 am, He San and Gao Ru Xue had messaged him many times. They seemed to have urgent things to tell him.

Chen Ge called He San and asked, "What's wrong?"

"Boss! Why didn't you answer earlier? Something big has happened!" He San was so loud that even Ol' Wei could hear him.

"Don't act so flighty, slow down." Chen Ge walked ahead to introduce some distance between them.

"Do you still remember Gao Ru Xue? It was the senior who joined me to visit your Haunted House. Someone has disappeared from her dorm!" Even though He San had lowered his voice, it still caused Chen Ge's ear some pain.

"In that case, you have to go to the police. Why come to me?"

"The person didn't disappear. I don't know how to explain this. The person looks the same, but the personality is completely different, like the soul has been exchanged!"

"A ghost possession?"

"Yes, just like that! Boss, do you want to come to our school to take a look tonight? This thing is just weird, and now my senior really needs your help."

"Temporarily, I don't have time." Chen Ge thought about it but did not reject directly. "I'll call Gao Ru Xue to ask for more details."

After hanging up, Chen Ge took out the black phone. The last side mission for the four-star scenario School of the Afterlife was at Jiujiang's Medical University.

I should give myself some time to rest. At least I have to wait until Xu Yin wakes up first.

Chapter 343: Look Behind You

When Chen Ge ended the call, Gao Ru Xue's call came in. He San had probably contacted her. "Is it that urgent?"

Chen Ge answered the call, but before he could say anything, Gao Ru Xue's purposely suppressed voice came through. "I'm not wearing earphones, and my roommate is just outside the corridor, so don't raise your voice."

...

Gao Ru Xue did not sound like she was in a good state—Chen Ge could hear uncertainty and anxiety in her voice. "I just heard from He San that your roommate is possessed?"

"It's scarier than that. I feel like she has changed into a completely different person."

"Is it because of change in habit?"

"She acts like normal, but I can feel that it's not her!" Gao Ru Xue sounded confident. "Listen to me. This is related to legend at our school. There's a stone statue underneath the old education block whose eyes can bleed. According to legend, as long as you can find it before midnight, you can ask it a question."

"I have two roommates. One of them is Ma Xin, and the other is Liu Xianxian. That night, they went out together."

"Why did they want to go look for that statue? Just out of curiosity?" Chen Ge interjected with a question.

"Liu Xianxian has fallen in love with a man that she shouldn't. She has been wondering whether she should get together with him or not. She comes from a single-parent family, so she lacks security. She would fall for anyone who treats her slightly better. We've tried to advise her, but she refused to listen."

“She stubbornly thought the man also loves her deeply but cannot be together with her due to multiple reasons. She wanted to have a clear answer, but she was afraid to ask the man, so she thought to ask the statue to see whether the man’s love for her is sincere or not.”

Chen Ge was inexperienced in the field of relationships, so he did not comment. “Then what about the other girl?”

“Ma Xin has a big sister, and she managed to get into Jiujiang’s Medical University five years ago. However, during her second year, she disappeared while she was on the way home and has remained unfounded to this day. She wants to find out about her sister’s location, her whole family do. When she heard about this rumor, she yearned to give it a try.”

Gao Ru Xue was halfway through when another female voice came from the corridor. It sounded like it was rushing her. After she answered, Gao Ru Xue spoke faster into the phone. “The two wanted to find the statue, but they’re both scared, so they dragged me with them.

“We departed last week and entered the old education block’s underground rooms at 11 pm. The place was filled with so many abandoned materials, so it was hard to find a statue. We searched the majority area on the first night but didn’t find anything.

“On the second night, I thought they would give up, but they dragged me with them again. Since we’ve been roommates for so long already, I didn’t have the heart to reject them, so I followed them underground a second time. However, this time, things were different. We didn’t walk too far into the place before I heard something laughing.

“I asked them about it, but both of them said they didn’t hear anything. I had a feeling something was wrong, so I forcibly dragged them out with me. I thought it would end then, but on the third night, they told me they still wanted to go.

“That was the first time I realized something off about them. I warned them if they insisted on doing this, I would report them to the school and dormitory security. Realizing I was serious, they unwillingly went back to bed.

“The real event that sent a chill down my spine happened on the morning of the fourth day. When I opened my eyes, both of my roommates were already awake. They lay in their beds, looking at me, with smiles on their faces.

“On the fourth night, they didn’t show any signs of going out, but I just felt something was not right. I lay in bed and pretended to fall asleep. At 2 am, they sat up simultaneously and sneaked out of the room like this was something planned.

“I didn’t dare chase after them. They returned at 3:30 am. They went back to bed like nothing had ever happened.

“The same thing happened on the fifth and sixth nights, but last night, things changed. They also left at 2 am and returned at 3:30 am, but when they returned, three of them returned—not two!

“The light in the bedroom was off, so I could not see clearly, but it felt like all three of them were dressed similarly. They walked to the three beds and lay down, and the strangest thing happened!

“There were only three beds in the room, so this meant that one of them crawled into my bed. I didn’t dare move throughout the whole night. I used my hands that were hidden inside my bed to call and send messages. You might not believe me, but this is the truth.

“All the replies, no matter who it was, was—Look behind you. Only when I messaged you did the system reply normally. The additional person should have been lying behind me, and at the time, I could only message and call you, but you were unreachable.

“I stayed put until morning. When I looked behind me, there was nothing on the bed. One hour ago, my roommates woke up, and they acted like normal, calling me to breakfast and class, but...”

“Aren’t you ready yet?” There was another female voice on the phone, and it sounded like a door had been opened.

“You rarely talk so much even to us; this isn’t like you. You sure it’s just a friend?” The other girl commented with a laugh. “In any case, don’t just chat on the phone. Today’s autopsy class is quite important.”

“Okay.” Then Gao Ru Xue spoke into the phone. “If you have time, why don’t you come over for dinner tonight? This is the first time I’m inviting someone over, so you’d better think about it.”

“Hurry on to your class. I’ll be over tonight.” Chen Ge sounded magnetic on the phone like a confident, mature man.

After hanging up, Chen Ge's expression changed. Gao Ru Xue asked me to meet her in person tonight, looks like this thing has really spooked her. Then again, why could only my contact be reached normally?

He placed both of his phones in his palm, but he could not figure it out.

Statue, the additional person, phone message...

Actually, Chen Ge wanted to ask Gao Ru Xue if that underground room had anything to do with a morgue or not.

No. 10 was carrying a body on his back. Could that body be related to the underground morgue at Jiujiang's Medical University?

Chen Ge examined all the clues in his mind, and the dots started to line up.

“When I see Gao Ru Xue tonight, I’ll warn her that it might be time to move out of that bedroom.” There was something scary buried underneath Jiujiang’s Medical University that Gao Ru Xue did not know about.

After pocketing the phone, Chen Ge ran out of the mountain. Chen Ge reached Lin Guan Village at 9 am, and Xu Wan’s phone call came, asking him why he was not at the Haunted House and if something happened to him. Chen Ge brushed her off with some random excuses, and Xu Wan told him some good news—Gu Feiyu had gotten out of the hospital already.

This young security had been assaulted by the ghost stories society at Fang Hwa Apartments and only recovered recently. He had already reported for duty at New Century Park early in the morning. “Xiao Gu is quite a responsible worker, and the Haunted House does need the manpower.”

Chen Ge told Xu Wan that he would arrive at the park within three hours. He hoped that she would be able to calm the visitors down. Bringing the two kids into the police car, Ol’ Wei planned to drive them to the station, but with Chen Ge begging him, he finally agreed to drop Chen Ge at New Century Park first. Chen Ge caught a quick forty-winks inside the police car and arrived at the park at around 11 am.

He had been rushing throughout the night, and his clothes had been torn open by branches and trees. There was a dirty cat on his shoulders. He looked rather worse for wear. “So sorry I’m late.”

The resting tent beside the Haunted House was already full, as were the steps. Many visitors came purposely for the Haunted House. The visitors were filled with complaints since they had been waiting for so long, but when they saw Chen Ge, the complaints were stuck in their throat.

“Xiao Chen, you’re so late! Don’t you know the time?” Uncle Xu had the park workers hand out some free gifts and water, and then he asked the question that was on everyone’s mind. “Where have you been all night?”

Many visitors came closer to listen. After all, they were intrigued by Chen Ge appearance.

“Last night, two kids went missing from Jiujiang’s Children’s Home, and I went to help them look for the missing kids. We followed the trail into the deep mountain and discovered a village filled with deformed people. The whole village is just like a tomb where joyful occasions are shunned, and funerals are welcomed. There are white lanterns and paper money everywhere. When I arrived, they were in the middle of a ceremony with babies in bamboo baskets and a red coffin standing upright. The woman at the village held a pair of scissors in her hand as she carried the babies into the ancestral hall. When she exited, her clothes are drenched in fresh blood...”

“Okay, you can stop now.” Uncle Xu quickly grabbed Chen Ge’s arm. There was already a group of visitors around them. They were originally filled with displeasure, but the story was quite interesting.

“Why did you tell him to stop? What happened next?”

“What kind of ceremony is this bloody? Is this village real?”

“Let’s leave, the boss has gone insane.”

Uncle Xu tried to calm the crowd, but Chen Ge spoke louder. “That’s not even the scariest thing!”

He grabbed the loudspeaker that the worker used to maintain order and stepped on the railing to climb onto the Midnight Ticket Counter. He was dressed normally, but he grabbed everyone’s attention.

“A place for the living in the day but for the dead at night. After midnight, the whole village is filled with ghosts!

“You definitely have not seen things like that before! Dead people holding a funeral for dead people, the funeral procession moving through the village!

“If you think that’s all, then you’d be mistaken! The most dangerous thing about this village was the houses. The courtyards were planted with locust trees, and they had weird-looking monsters buried underneath them. If you’re lucky enough to escape into the inner room, don’t be happy so soon!

“Every room in the village is placed with a coffin, and a set of red graveclothes is placed inside each one. Regardless of whether you touch them or not, the clothes will crawl out of the coffin to follow you!

“You have to be careful with your every breath because, at any given moment, someone will call your name. If you answer the call, you’ll enter the wedding night, and your partner will be a bride wearing a wedding dress made from human skin!

“A unique setting! Scary design! You only need to pay 30 to experience such an interesting scenario! That’s the reason I’m late today; I’ve been busy building this new scenario!

“This latest three-star scenario will be opened for a limited period! Believe me, this is definitely the scariest village-themed scenario on the market!”

When Chen Ge finished, his voice still echoed through the park.

“It was just a sales pitch, but why do I feel so excited?”

“What was I trying to say earlier?”

“Since you have a new scenario and a special offer, I’m willing to forget that you’re late. Losing memory...”

“I want to try it out, but I’m afraid. This is so hard!”

The update speed of Chen Ge’s Haunted House would scare his competition out of the market. Chen Ge nodded in satisfaction, looking at the visitors in deliberation. The new scenario and limited time offer would save him from being late. He jumped down from the ticket counter and returned the loudspeaker to the worker. He opened the Haunted House’s doors.

“We’re open for business!”

Chen Ge had Gu Feiyu change into the doctor's outfit and handed him the upgraded hammer. He was tasked with acting as the serial killer in Murder by Midnight. Xu Wan was tasked with handling the Minghun scenario.

The two one-star scenarios above ground had someone looking over them, and the underground Mu Yang High School had the twenty-four students. Uncle Xu was selling ticket, and Chen Ge was left with nothing to do.

I should find more spirits like Uncle Yan and the students. They aren't malicious. If this continues, I can rest myself at the counter daily, with the sole responsibility of counting my income.

Chen Ge rested at the door after sending the visitors in. He wanted to ask Gao Ru Xue for an update when he saw someone looking for him on WhatsApp.

"Ye Xiaoxin?" That was the professional critic who entered Chen Ge's Haunted House with the people from Tian Teng Medical School. She had been scared until she almost vomited. Then, she gave Chen Ge's Haunted House a very high remark online and asked for his contact, saying she planned to help him do the promotion online.

"What's wrong? How can I help?"

"Lately, there have been many comments trying to give your Haunted House a bad review online. I searched high and low and finally found the culprit." Ye Xiaoxin sent Chen Ge several pictures. "One of them is also a Haunted House reviewer. We share quite a rocky relationship. As long as it's a Haunted House recommended by me, she will critic it heavily. They might be visiting your Haunted House soon, so be careful. Among the pictures that I've sent to you, there's the reviewer's selfie that she posted on the platform."

Chapter 345 - The Kind Boss Chen

Chapter 345: The Kind Boss Chen

Chen Ge glanced at the picture. This woman looked just like a good little girl; she was wearing a cute dress in the picture and was a complete opposite to the tomboyish Ye Xiaoxin. He moved the picture, and when Chen Ge saw the second screenshot, he started to get unsettled.

The unassuming girl kept creating chaos online. One could find her on all the reviews Ye Xiaoxin had ever released. This was particularly obvious with Chen Ge's Haunted House review. Initially, it was 9.7, but after a wave of negative reviews, it was pushed down to 8.9. Thankfully Chen Ge's Haunted House had its own fans and many good reviews, or the point would have been lower.

...

The other screenshots showed the woman going around to bring down the reviews for other Haunted Houses and raise the ratings for the ones she reviewed. The main point was that many online users were tricked by her looks and supported her no matter what.

The comparison was quite obvious. The reviews on her main page were all maintained above 9, but the other reviews pointed out how unfair they were. However, she showed no sign of changing them. In Ye Xiaoxin's review, the highest was Chen Ge's Haunted House, and the second highest was only 6.

"It's one thing if you make enemies with Ye Xiaoxin, but you've flooded my Haunted House with negative reviews. In that case, I'll need to fight for myself or else it'll be unfair to my loyal employee." Chen Ge glanced at this woman's ID and even remembered what she looked like. There were many other screenshots. Other than this woman, there were parties purposely talking about New Century Park on forums and websites. It felt like they were trying to attempt something bad.

"I should tell Director Luo about this. After all, the Haunted House is now the park's main attraction, so the lowering in the Haunted House's review will affect the park's name."

Sitting at the door, watching the visitors being led into the scenarios, and listening to the screams that escaped from within, Chen Ge felt quite accomplished.

Earlier, Chen Ge had been calling all day, saying that the three-star scenario was temporarily open to public, but most of the visitors were experienced. They would google the review before they entered the Haunted House. For most, a three-star scenario was like a taboo for living humans. Chen Ge sat at the door until noon. He almost fell asleep when he was shaken awake by Uncle Xu.

"What's wrong? Uncle Xu?" Uncle Xu coughed twice and pointed behind him. "These few visitors want to challenge that new scenario that you mentioned."

"The environment is passable, four points. The worker is so lazy that he fell asleep at work, two points." Five visitors stood at the door, three males and two females. One of the females was typing on her phone. When he saw the woman's face, Chen Ge stunned before he turned habitually to a smile. "Welcome, the new scenario hasn't been tested before. You're so lucky."

"It's too late to change your attitude now. I want to see the most authentic experience your Haunted House has to offer." The woman raised her head. She had a baby face, but her voice was coarse, revealing her actual age.

"Aren't you here to visit the Haunted House?" Chen Ge pretended like he did not know what she was talking about.

"You can call me Cassie. I'm a professional Haunted House reviewer, and I have several hundred thousand fans online. If I feel like your Haunted House is not bad and I place it on my recommendation page, your visitor number will increase by 33 percent." The woman was prideful. "Of course, you have to make me believe your Haunted House is worth it, but so far, it is not living up to its name."

Chen Ge was too lazy to listen the woman's boasting. "Do you have a Chinese name? Like Tie Zhu or Gou Dan ¹, something easier to remember."

The woman's face fell immediately, but she did not get into an argument with Chen Ge. This girl would maintain her persona around her friends. She did not speak, but the two men saw how hurt she was and walked forward to defend her.

One of them had a head of hair dyed yellow, with an earring and nose ring. He looked like a hippie. The other was more normal, but he was around 1.9 meters tall.

“Fine, since you’re here, you’re my visitors. Let’s not waste time, sign these disclaimers.” Chen Ge did not want to get into an altercation with them. He gave them the contract to sign, and the excitement in his voice made the hair on Uncle Xu’s body stand upright.

“Haunted House has been open for long already, don’t you know me? When have I been reckless before?” Chen Ge pushed Uncle Xu out the door. “Don’t worry.”

“You say that every time.” Uncle Xu did not voice his real opinion since there were outsiders around, but there was obvious worry in his eyes.

The five visitors noticed the look in his eyes, and for some reason, they felt creeped out. Is this uncle also employed at the Haunted House? He’s such a good actor! Just a look can express so many complicated feelings.

After sending Uncle Xu away, Chen Ge’s smile grew brighter. “Come, sign the disclaimer. Coffin Village is open for the first time for visitation, so you have to be careful of safety. If you come into any danger, do scream, and the worker will come save you.”

Chen Ge’s attitude was flawless, but the more he acted like this, the more worried the five visitors became.

“The new scenario is just a gimmick; there’s nothing to be afraid of. Actually, this is just a trial. A uniquely eastern haunted house experience I made using local folklore; it’s completely different from the western and Japanese horror houses,” Chen Ge explained theme of Coffin Village briefly.

When the visitors heard it was not the western and Japanese horror theme that were common on the market, they sighed in relief. Actually, there were few eastern-themed Haunted Houses in the country, but probably due to budget and inexperience, the effect was lacking.

“An eastern-themed scenario? Earlier you also mentioned it was a haunted village, right? That’s very rare.” The one who spoke was the other woman. She had pigtails and looked quite young. Chen Ge glanced at the woman’s name on the disclaimer. It was rather common—Zhang Lan.

“That’s why I’m interested to give it a try.” Chen Ge collected all the disclaimers carefully. It felt like he knew they would come into use eventually. “Come with me. The new scenario is underground.”

“Wait a minute.” The woman suddenly spoke. She was a cunning one. Before she arrived, she had looked over all the information on Chen Ge’s Haunted House. Furthermore, they were challenging a three-star scenario, so she had to be careful. “I hear for scenarios above two-stars, you accept teams of ten. There’s only five of us now; why don’t we wait for other visitors to join us?”

Chen Ge thought about it and agreed. “Then let me go see if there are any other visitors who wish to join.”

“It’s nothing. Our Haunted House always put our visitor’s request first.” Chen Ge turned and walked out. After Chen Ge left, the few visitors started to talk among themselves.

“Sister Mao, what are you afraid of? The five of us have cleared how many Haunted Houses already? Other visitors will only drag us down,” the yellow hair grumbled with dissatisfaction.

“This guy is friends with Ye Xiaoxin. I’m afraid he might trap us inside the Haunted House. If there are other visitors, he won’t do something like that.” The woman took out her phone and added, “The worker has attitude, three points.”

Five minutes later, Chen Ge pushed open the door. He slid the comic into his pocket, and three people followed behind him.

Two guys and one girl.

The woman was very pretty, but her body was unsteady. One of the guys had his left hand stuck in his pocket, and the other was wearing a black shirt, grumbling about his recent bad luck.

“You’re so lucky. These three visitors also want to visit the new scenario, so the eight of you can experience it together.” A smile hung on Chen Ge's face like serving the visitors was a very happy thing for him.

“I’ve already introduced the scenario. Three-star scenario, there’s no path to follow, and it’s completely open. All you need to do is find a blood red wedding dress and bring it out.” Chen Ge came up with the rules on the spot. After all, this was his Haunted House; his words were the rules.

“That simple?” The young hair turned back to ask Chen Ge, “Are there any hidden conditions? Some Haunted Houses will design multiple side missions to make the experience more enjoyable. They allow the visitors to explore the place on their own, to increase playability.”

...

“There are many hidden plots inside my Haunted House. You can explore it to your heart’s content.” Chen Ge’s smile was like the sun, it made people feel warmed.

“Then how about time requirement for clearing the scenario?” The large man chimed in. It was quite obvious that they were experienced players. They knew the ins and outs of Haunted Houses.

“Since this is the first time the place has been open to the public, I’ll give you more time. As long as you can find the wedding dress in forty minutes, I’ll consider it a success.” Chen Ge was kind. He wanted the visitors to experience Coffin Village fully, so he purposely extended the time limit.

“We won’t need forty minutes.” The young hair flicked his bangs back. He too was a prideful man. “We’ve reviewed many Haunted Houses, and the longest we’ve taken was thirty minutes.”

“Forty minutes is indeed too long, but this way we can look around.” The leading woman still held her phone, having no intention of putting it away. When Ye Xiaoxin entered the Haunted House, she had used her paper and pen for her notes. Based on this alone, one could see they were not on the same level. Actually, Chen Ge knew what the woman was up to. The Haunted House review was just a gimmick. She wanted to use the scary atmosphere to create a contrast to her cute demeanor. She was a lesser reviewer compared to Ye Xiaoxin, who knew and respected the rules of Haunted Houses.

“Yes, go look around, you might find more hidden joys.” Chen Ge was so kind that even the three ‘visitors’ following him could not stand it. After he had the three new visitors sign the disclaimers, he led the eight of them to the end of the corridor and lifted up the wooden boards. A blast of cold air came from underground, causing them to shiver.

“Only a wooden board is used to separate the scenarios. It’s too rough, minus one point for set design.” The woman added another note to her phone.

Chen Ge was not angry. He was so nice that even his reminder was given with a kind smile. “Our Haunted House doesn’t allow the usage of phones and other recording devices. Please do mind that.”

“I’m a certified reviewer. The phone is just to record data. Don’t just assume stuff.”

“Understood, when you start your review, please be kind.” Chen Ge politely sent the eight into the scenario. “The one on the left is the two-star scenario Mu Yang High School; the one behind the steel door on the right is the Third Sick Hall. Coffin Village, which you’re challenging today, is just ahead.”

When Chen Ge entered the underground earlier, he had seen a meandering path appearing between the Third Sick Hall and Mu Yang High School. At the end of the path was a pale light.

“Coffin Village is at the end of the path. This is where I’ll leave you, have fun.” Chen Ge stood at the mouth of the path and sent the visitors away. It’s nice that the three scenarios are separated, but after the expansion turns the Haunted House into a maze, all the underground scenarios might join together to create a large scary scenario.

After three expansions, the Haunted House would morph into a Maze of Terror. It had been expanded twice already, and the third time was not that far away. Chen Ge looked down the other two scenarios. Inside the Mu Yang High School, the sealed classroom’s door was pushed open. A mannequin head peeked out as if to see whether Chen Ge had already left or not. When it saw Chen Ge, it rolled back into the classroom and closed the door.

Those students sure are naughty. I'll need to have them memorize the worker's rules later. Chen Ge returned to the surface and headed to the props room. He ransacked the place and finally found the reward at the corner—Seamstress' Wedding Dress. The tattered wedding dress was red as blood. It was possessed by a hatred-filled spirit. If one leaned close enough, one might even hear the weeping of a woman. If the visitors saw this, they would be so angry. Chen Ge had not even placed the thing that they were supposed to look for into the scenario. The happiness in finding it after looking for a long time is the real fun of the game.

He wrapped the wedding dress inside a black cloth. Chen Ge entered the changing room. This was the unique construct that he had obtained after the Haunted House's second expansion. None of the visitors had tried it before. Chen Ge selected one of the less conspicuous outfits and put on some make-up. "This is not bad. I look normal from afar, but upon closer inspection, it's quite scary."

Chen Ge entered Coffin Village again. He used the black phone to inspect the hidden tunnels and pathways inside the village and took out the comic. When the ghost stories society was battling the Zhu woman, Chen Ge had made use of the opportunity to collect a few ghosts into the comic. After a whole night of 'education', the lingering spirits had been reformed.

"I've told you it's a good decision to follow me. This is the new home I've arranged for all of you. The whole village is yours. You can feed on the visitors' fear and screams, but remember one thing, you cannot harm the visitors and no physical contact, understood?"

Chen Ge walked through Coffin Village and tossed out the ghosts as he went. "The completion rate for the mission is only seven percent, which means the scariest thing at this scenario hasn't arrived. Thankfully, I remembered to carry some ghosts from the village itself."

Looking at the village that came back to 'life', Chen Ge flashed a satisfied smile. "Even though it is quite harsh and demanding, all the sacrifice is worth it to give the visitors the best experience."

Chen Ge felt like he was the kind that worked in the background. If he revealed all the effort he had done, the visitors would be so touched.

...

Amid creepy music and a heavy atmosphere, when the eight visitors reached the end of the path, what they saw stunned them—rows of old houses, intertwining streets, fluttering paper money, and the white paper lanterns giving off pale light hanging at the door.

Chapter 347: There's No Need to Go Fast

"Such a real setting," the large man mumbled. "How did he do this?"

"Of course, he has to be talented to have opened a Haunted House. Furthermore, Ye Xiaoxin gave this place such a high review. This means this Haunted House has its positive points." The woman stood behind the yellow hair. She walked toward the other three visitors with a friendly smile.

...

"Are the three of you together?" The woman was good at socializing. Her tone and attitude were very friendly.

"No," the man with his arm in his pocket replied coldly before he walked away.

"Be careful, this is a three-star scenario!" The woman grabbed the thin man's sleeves. The man turned back to glare at her, and she quickly staggered back. "I just want to remind you."

"Sister Mao, just ignore him. When he is spooked until he wets his pants, he'll come back to us." The yellow hair stood between the man and the woman.

"It's alright. Since we're in the same group, we should help one another." The woman did not seem to mind the man's offensive behavior. She walked back to him. "My name is Cassie, but you can call me Sister Mao like the rest of them if you like."

The thin man thought about it and accepted her kindness. "The name's Bai Qiulin. My mood has been very awful lately, so I came to this Haunted House for stress release."

"Understood, a Haunted House is a place like that, right? To scream and release stress." Sister Mao nodded with understanding before she turned to the other two visitors. "Then how about the two of you?"

The man in black shirt looked smart, and he was very friendly. “My name is Zhou. I’m a real estate agent. I came with my girlfriend today...”

“Who’s your girlfriend?” The woman beside him smacked his arm. She did not have any make-up on, but she looked pretty.

“Well, it’s only a matter of time.” Mr. Zhou winked at the woman as he grabbed the woman’s hand. “This is my girlfriend, Duan Yue. She’s a high school English teacher. Normally, she has no break and has to tutor kids at night. It’s rare that we both have a day off, so I brought her here to relax.”

“You two sure are sweet.” Sister Mao smiled. There was a trace of resentment in her eyes, but she hid it very well. “Later, the three of you can follow along. This way, we’ll be able to be on the lookout for one another.”

“You sound very professionally. Are you all professional Haunted House visitors?” Mr. Zhou asked.

“I’m a Haunted House reviewer. I have tons of fans online, and these guys are members of my team.” Sister Mao introduced the people around her. The yellow hair was Huang Xing, the large man Ma Tian, and the other girl was Sister Mao’s assistant, Zhang Lan. Sister Mao didn’t introduce the last man, who looked older than the rest of them, in detail, but she called him Brother Wong.

Each of them had a different personality. The only reason they could work together was because they had Sister Mao as the mediator.

“You all are indeed professionals. Then today we’ll be depending on you.” Mr. Zhou was a people person as well. He continued to chat happily with Sister Mao like he could not see the fiery gaze Duan Yue was directing his way.

“Don’t worry, we’ve completed more than ten of such Haunted Houses already.” Huang Xing was the bravest and the rashest of the group, so he walked ahead.

“Come on. The online review for this place is very high. I want to see how good it is.” To make it convenient for recording, Sister Mao walked into the scenario with her phone on. A wind of unknown origin picked up the paper money from the floor. The white lanterns swayed as the pale light washed the street white.

“There are three main elements to a Haunted House’s design—story, setting, and atmosphere. For this setting, I can give him six points, but alas, without a story to go with it, it’s difficult for visitors to feel invested. The atmosphere is the worst; I don’t feel afraid at all. It’s such a waste of these realistic props,” Sister Mao said and the two men next to her nodded.

Only Zhang Lan kept turning back to look at Bai Qiulin. She felt something was wrong with this man. How come he keeps his left hand inside his pocket?

The eight of them squeezed together, and five of them were professional players. Naturally they were not afraid.

“The boss said there’s a time limit. The place is so big, why don’t we split into two groups?” Mr. Zhou thought about it and voiced his suggestion.

“Forty minutes is more than enough for us to clear this game. For a Haunted House, especially one that is open like this, it is crucial not to fall into their tempo.” The yellow hair looked experienced. “The two of you just follow behind me. To tell you the truth, I’ve always been brave. Even if a real ghost appears, I’ll fight them with my bare hands, much less Haunted House actors.”

“Impressive.” Mr. Zhou and Duan Yue followed behind the yellow hair. Sister Mao walked with the tall guy while Zhang Lan stood between Brother Wong and Bai Qiulin. She realized Bai Qiulin had many habits that were quite abnormal. For example, his neck was slightly twisted like it was sprained.

“What are you looking at?” Brother Wong glanced at Xiao Lan. He seemed to have his own reason to be there. He was not familiar with Sister Mao’s team members. It was the first time Zhang Lan had met Brother Wong. She also had no idea why he was tagging along. “It’s nothing. By the way, I’ll be following you later. Sister Mao told me that.”

The group walked ahead, and Bai Qiulin looked at their backs with a smile on his face. The pale light pulled their shadows long as they formally entered Coffin Village. When they stepped into Coffin Village, the white lanterns lining the street on both sides started to sway. The village turned darker like something was waking up.

CREAK...

Yellow hair pushed open the door to the first old home. The empty courtyard had nothing.

“That’s all?” He sounded disappointed. With Mr. Zhou and Duan Yue accompanying him, the three entered the inner room together. There was a black and white picture sitting on the altar. The person in the picture had their eyes gouged out. There was painting of a mountain spirit on the walls, and a coffin sat in the middle of the room.

“The decoration is simple; there’s nothing particularly scary.” The yellow hair turned around the room. He picked up the picture on the altar and started to study it. “Why did they gouge out the eyes? Is it hiding the clue to clear the scenario?”

He undid the frame and took out the picture. “The person looks like he’s crying?”

The man prepared to examine closer when Mr. Zhou’s voice came from behind him. “What are you looking at?”

“It’s nothing, just looking around. I like to clear all the stories inside a Haunted House—it’s more fun that way.”

“I feel like we shouldn’t be wandering about. The crucial thing is to find the wedding dress. What if we run out of time?” Mr. Zhou and Duan Yue walked over on tip-toe.

“Don’t worry, there is enough time.” The yellow hair flicked his hair back and raised two fingers. “We can finish this place in twenty minutes, but there’s no need to. It won’t be fun that way.”

He faced Mr. Zhou, so he did not notice the ghosts in the pictures that were all looking at his back.

“You’re right. Taking it slow is more fun.” Mr. Zhou silently moved the black and white picture away. The position of the man inside the picture had changed like he had moved one step forward.

Chapter 348: Something's Wrong

Reaching out to press the face of the man in the picture, Mr. Zhou agreed with the yellow hair. "Indeed, why should we be in such a hurry? It's rare that we have the chance to come in here, so we should make the most of it."

Mr. Zhou was actually talking to the spirit inside the picture, but yellow hair thought the man was talking to him, so he concurred. "That's right. That's the spirit you should have when you're inside a Haunted House! Come on, I'll bring you to go visit some other places. This Haunted House is not that scary; it's probably just a hoax online!"

...

Yellow hair led the two out of the old home. They searched through many homes before they reached the center of the village.

"The scenario is rather big. With our current speed, we might not be able to finish it in forty minutes. If we cannot find the wedding dress before forty minutes, it'll be such a shame," the large man told the rest. "I think we should split up. With this ancestral hall as the center, Sister Mao, Mr. Wong, and myself will go to the left, and the rest of you go to the right."

"Why should you be with Sister Mao? I think it's better if we switch places." The yellow hair was unhappy. In the end, it was Sister Mao who convinced him to let it go.

"Then it's decided." Ma Tian's group walked down the meandering road, leaving the rest in the middle of the village.

"We should plan this out as well. Xiao Lan, you go with the couple, and I'll stick with the other guest. This way, we can save time and hopefully find the wedding dress before them." Yellow hair took up the leadership role naturally.

"I don't think that's a good idea. We're already split. What if we run into danger?" Zhang Lan walked to stand beside the yellow hair, hoping he would change his mind.

“Listen to me, this Haunted House’s atmosphere is not bad, but the scares are horrible.” The insouciance in yellow hair’s tone made Zhang Lan anxious. She wanted to tell yellow hair, The visitor that you’re pairing yourself with is quite abnormal!

However, she did not want to say that before Bai Qiulin.

“It’ll be fine, let’s go.” Yellow hair extended his hand toward Bai Qiulin, wanting to shake his hand, but Bai Qiulin did not show any intention of pulling his hand out of his pocket—he just nodded.

“You sure are something else. Later, don’t come to me with tears, begging me to help you out.” Yellow hair was quite angered. He took back his hand and walked ahead on his own. Bai Qiulin trailed behind him and still kept his hand inside his pocket. Zhang Lan saw this clearly, and her painted brows creased. “Something is just not right.”

“By the way, I have some questions to ask you.” Zhang Lan pointed at Bai Qiulin, who walked away. “That man came together with you. When you were in the lines outside, did he do anything weird? Or something out of the ordinary?”

“When we were in the lines?” Mr. Zhou scratched his chin in thought. “When Boss Chen shouted that there was a special discount for visitation of this three-star scenario, we were closest to the entrance, so we were selected. I don’t have any special impression of the man. He’s probably just a normal visitor.”

“I hope so.” Zhang Lan was still worried. “Let me tell you something. There was one time when I accompanied Sister Mao to review a Haunted House, and a mental patient sneaked into it. He looked just like a normal person, but he acted up inside the Haunted House. You have no idea how scary it was.”

“Why don’t you tell me?” Mr. Zhou and Duan Yue were curious.

“He slathered himself with the fake blood inside the Haunted House and then grabbed the prop to assault the other visitors. The worst thing was initially the visitors thought he was an employee at the Haunted House. They were afraid, but they did not resist. This caused many injuries.” Zhang Lan still had nightmares of that experience.

“How could something like that even happen?” Mr. Zhou’s hand went to his lips. His action was quite exaggerated.

“That’s why I’m worried about Huang Xing. He might be hard to deal with, but he’s my companion.” By then, yellow hair and Bai Qiulin had already disappeared from their view.

“If I were you, I would be worried, too.” Mr. Zhou very naturally took up Duan Yue’s hand and turned to look at her with love. “If you went missing, I would look all over the world for you.”

Duan Yue’s reaction was cold. She only said one word. “Lies.”

“You two sure are a loving couple.” Zhang Lan laughed. She had just come to visit a Haunted House—she did not expect to be fed dog food. “Let’s start moving as well. The earlier we find the wedding dress, the sooner we have the upper hand.”

The mention of the mission made Zhang Lan turn serious. “I’m Sister Mao’s assistant. I investigated this Haunted House before we arrived. The information I’ve found is quite scary. The reviews from actual visitors are all above 8. Minus the trolls, all the reviews said this place is scary. We’ve reviewed many Haunted Houses before, and this is the first time we’ve seen something like this.”

“Meaning this Haunted House is very scary?” Mr. Zhou looked around him. “I don’t think it’s that scary so far, just a bit cold.”

“Don’t let your guard down. I suspect the boss is just biding his time.” Zhang Lan took out her phone to click open a page. “Look at the online review for the boss.”

Mr. Zhou and Duan Yue glanced at Zhang Lan’s phone and saw about ten anonymous reviews.

“The boss is insane! Like a serial killer, he discovered me but didn’t say anything, trailing behind me silently. The man followed me for ten minutes! If not for my friend who screamed, I really didn’t know there’s something behind me!”

“Don’t ask me why I’m an Anon, I still want to see tomorrow’s sunrise... The boss is too scary.”

“My friend asked why I brought extra underwear with me to a Haunted House. I say, if you want to prepare diapers, it’s also fine.”

Reading all the anonymous reviews, Mr. Zhou and Duan Yue's expressions changed. They had a new understanding of Chen Ge.

"Scary, right?" Zhang Lan pocketed her phone. "So, I say we better find the wedding dress as fast as we can and leave this place."

"Okay." Mr. Zhou arranged his emotions. "Then, what shall we do next?"

"I'm a little worried about Huang Xing. Let's go meet up with him first." Zhang Lan pointed toward the road that yellow hair had headed down earlier. Mr. Zhou and Duan Yue followed behind her.

By then, yellow hair and Bai Qiulin had reached the end of the street. They found a sedan at the corner.

"A bridal sedan?" Yellow hair was excited. "Looks like the wedding dress will be nearby! I've found the right place!"

He ignored Bai Qiulin and walked into the house where the sedan was parked alone. "There's white paper everywhere. Is this a Minghun?"

Yellow hair looked left and right but forgot to look behind him. The sedan that he had passed earlier started to move on its own.

After yellow hair entered the home, two children with painted faces poked their heads out from the sedan. Bai Qiulin acted like he did not see this creepy scene and walked past the sedan. The white lantern above the door swayed several times before they went out, throwing the home into darkness.

White celebratory posters were pasted on the wall, and yellow hair stood in the courtyard alone. "This place is larger than the others. Plenty of traps must be around here."

...

He might be reckless, but he was not dumb. The atmosphere in the home was slightly off—he had already noticed that.

"Huang Xing..." Someone was calling his name. It sounded ethereal and seemed to come from the inner room.

"Someone's calling me?" He tried to follow the voice, but it disappeared as if he had imagined it. "It should be some kind of surround sound system. I'm surprised such a dilapidated set design has high-end equipment."

Without him realizing, Huang Xing was nervous, and he pushed the door open carefully. White draperies covered the room. It was a wedding, but the place was decorated like a funeral. "It really is a Minghun, such an old, used theme."

"Huang Xing..."

Yellow hair talked to himself when that weird noise appeared again, and this time, he heard it clearly. "The voice is familiar!"

It was a strange feeling. It sounded like a familiar person who called his name, but he could not remember who it was. The old home, the paper money, the white decoration—there was no change to the surroundings, but Huang Xing felt like everything had shifted, like it had turned creepier. A draft picked up behind him to chill the back of his neck. He turned around instantly. “Who is it?”

“Why are you panicking? It’s just me.” Bai Qiulin had his hand in his pocket and started to look around the room.

Seeing a second visitor, Huang Xing sighed in relief. “Did you hear a woman’s voice earlier?”

“I don’t think so.” Bai Qiulin ‘studied’ the decorations, but he made sure to stay close to the door.

“But I did hear someone calling my name.” Yellow hair looked outside the door, and there were two children with blood red paint on their faces running through it. “Someone’s outside!”

Bai Qiulin also looked out the front door. There was only an empty street. “What are you talking about? Where are the people?”

“But they’re there! There were two kids with something painted on their faces.” Huang Xing tried his best to describe the features of the two kids.

“Do you think the Haunted House would employ children to scare people? If it was not mannequins, then you were definitely mistaken.” When Bai Qiulin turned away, the two children poked their heads through the front door again.

“No, I’m not mistaken!” This time, Huang Xing matched the gaze of the two children and ran out immediately. “Wait for me, I’ll catch them for you to see!”

Huang Xing rushed to the front door, but the two kids had disappeared. The street was empty other than the paper money and the creaking bridal sedan. “Where are they? I only took several seconds to run out here. Where can they disappear to?”

“Huang Xing...” Yellow hair shivered, and the woman’s voice came again. “Why does it sound like the voice is closer when I’m outside? It feels like she’s talking into my ear.”

He took out his phone to use the torch to find the hidden audio system, but when he turned the torch on, the woman’s voice picked up again.

“Huang Xing...”

This time, the voice was even closer, like it was trying to drill into his mind.

“This is cursed, too cursed.” Yellow hair had been to many Haunted Houses, and this was the first time he had run into something like this. “I cannot stay here alone. I need to find the wedding dress and meet up with Sister Mao.”

He turned back into the inner hall and discovered something even scarier—Bai Qiulin had disappeared! How could a live person disappear just like that!

“Bai Qiulin!” Yellow hair called the man’s name as he moved into the bedroom. The room was different from others. The bed and mattress were red in color, but it did not feel auspicious; if anything, it felt bloody. It was not paint but blood that dyed the fabric.

“This looks like the room of the bride. The wedding dress should be here, right?” Yellow hair walked forward, and he saw many red threads on the ground. They were particularly conspicuous in the room filled with paper money.

He walked over those red threads to the bed. The red pillows were tossed in a messy way, and there were needles, thread, and scissors left on the bed. However, there was no wedding dress. The place that should have had the wedding dress did not have it. Huang Xing gritted his teeth. “I knew it wouldn’t be so simple.”

He lifted up the mattress, and there was an obvious bloodstain. It looked real.

“Huang Xing, look down...” When he was focused on his search, the woman’s voice appeared in his mind without warning again. When a person was highly tense, they would be spooked by a tap on the shoulder, much less a voice in their head. Yellow hair almost fell to the ground, and he grabbed the edge of the bed to stop himself from falling.

He took a deep breath, and his fists tightened. “That wasn’t an audio system! It couldn’t be!”

He twisted his arms, and his heart raced. “That voice said something else. Yes! She said look down!”

Huang Xing looked on the ground, and he realized all the red threads led to the space underneath the bed. “Underneath the bed?”

His Adam’s apple moved as he slowly squatted down. He held the edge of the bed with one hand, and his other supported his weight on the ground as he lowered his head. His sight slowly lowered, and his senses were taut. He gritted his teeth, and just as his head was about to reach the ground, a hand suddenly reached out at him!

“F*ck!” Huang Xing collapsed to the ground. He crawled backwards with fear in his eyes. “That was a chopped hand! There was no arm, just a hand!”

He had not recovered from his shock when he knocked into something on his back. Turning back to look, yellow hair saw Bai Qiulin standing behind him. “Are you trying to kill me? Where have you been!”

“A chopped hand. It doesn’t feel like it was remote-controlled. It just poked out from underneath the bed.” Yellow hair wiped the cold sweat from his forehead, his calves still shaking. “We need to leave this place, come give me a hand.”

Huang Xing reached out to grab Bai Qiulin’s left hand, but he missed. Holding the empty sleeve in his hands, yellow hair’s face was blank. His brain could not process the information. “Where... where is your hand?”

His neck snapped like he had fallen headfirst from a tall building, and blood seeped from Bai Qiulin’s mouth and nose. He turned to look at his empty left sleeve, and a happy smile was on his face. “You’re right, where is my hand?”

His eyes bulging out of their sockets, yellow hair felt like he was about to faint!

“Have you seen my hand?” Bai Qiulin looked down at him when his neck snapped, and his head fell to the ground. “Where is my hand?”

...

...

Zhang Lan’s group, who were heading toward Huang Xing, heard the man’s scream that came from the corner. The scream pierced through their ear drums. Just what had the man been through to make him scream like that?

“This is bad!” Hearing that, Zhang Lan’s face changed. She told Mr. Zhou and Duan Yue, “Something happened to Huang Xing! I told you something is wrong with that Bai Qiulin!”

“Isn’t it normal to scream inside a Haunted House? It probably has nothing to do with Bai Qiulin,” Mr. Zhou said.

“If it was a prop, then he would scream continuously. There wouldn’t be a brief shout like this,” Zhang Lan analyzed as she walked forward.

“Understood.” Mr. Zhou remembered what Zhang Lan said. “So you’re saying that Bai Qiulin is a real mental patient?”

“Not necessarily.” Zhang Lan’s expression was serious. “Actually, I’ve been hiding something from you.”

She stopped moving and turned to Mr. Zhou and Duan Yue.

“According to internet rumors, this Haunted House is really haunted.”

“Haunted? You’re trying to say Bai Qiulin is a ghost?” Mr. Zhou and Duan Yue stopped together. “You’re kidding, right? Who would believe that in this day and age?”

"I also don't think so. When a person is past their fear threshold, other than fainting, they might see illusions," Duan Yue said that, but it was obvious that she was afraid, too. She held Mr. Zhou's hand, and she looked panicked.

"Regardless, this Haunted House is scary. The boss knows psychology. Even if there's no ghost, he can make the visitors feel like there is one." Zhang Lan slowed down to walk beside Mr. Zhou and Duan Yue. The three turned the corner and saw the sedan at the end of the street. The curtains were open.

"Huang Xing and Bai Qiulin have been here." Zhang Lan did not dare go into the old home alone. For support, she dragged Mr. Zhou and Duan Yue with her. When she pushed open the front door, they saw Bai Qiulin coming out from the inner room.

"Stand there and don't move!" Zhang Lan screamed. "Where is Huang Xing? Weren't you two together earlier?"

"How am I supposed to know? We got separated, and I also just rushed here when I heard his scream." Bai Qiulin had his hand inside his pocket, and he seemed impatient. He was offended by the interrogation.

"Then what did you find?" Zhang Lan was very cautious. She did not take a step toward Bai Qiulin.

"I've searched the house inside out, but I cannot find him," Bai Qiulin said and walked toward them.

"Don't come any closer!" Zhang Lan warned him again.

"Xiao Lan, we're all visitors. There's no reason to do this." Mr. Zhou tried to ease the tension.

"You don't understand. I've seen the review that said the boss once had his worker join the visitors to 'play' with them! The man's insane!" Zhang Lan pointed at Bai Qiulin. "Something must be wrong with this man! You have to believe me; the most dangerous threat is often just standing next to you!"

"You suspect I'm a Haunted House employee?" Bai Qiulin chuckled. "Have you lost your mind?"

"If not, why do you keep your left hand inside your pocket? Is it because it's painted, or is it holding some remote control?" Zhang Lan had the support of the two visitors, so she was not afraid. "If you dare take out your hand and there's nothing wrong with it, then I'll take back everything I've said."

Bai Qiulin narrowed his eyes. "You sure?"

"Yes! I'm sure! You're definitely not a normal visitor!" Zhang Lan sounded confident.

"Fine, as you wish." Bai Qiulin pulled out his left arm; it was only an empty sleeve. "Can't a disabled person visit the Haunted House? Must you tear open my wound again? Now are you satisfied?"

Zhang Lan was stunned. She really did not expect Bai Qiulin's left sleeve to have nothing.

"Xiao Lin, you've crossed the line this time." Mr. Zhou came forward to try to calm everyone down. He smiled apologetically at Bai Qiulin. "This girl doesn't mean anything bad. I understand what you're feeling—I've been through something similar."

"This is just a misunderstanding." Duan Yue tried to persuade Zhang Lan. "Stop being so suspicious. Isn't it the biggest taboo to scare yourself inside a Haunted House?"

"No, I still think something is wrong with him. The two of you, follow me. We'll investigate the house together. I suspect he's lying to us." With Zhang Lan leading the way, Mr. Zhou and Duan Yue walked into the inner room. The paper money flew into the air.

"Not in this room." Zhang Lan walked into the bedroom. "The mattress has been moved; someone has been in here before. That Bai Qiulin was indeed lying! Mr. Zhou, you go and keep an eye on him outside. Don't let him out of your sight."

"I'll need to inform Sister Mao about this." Zhang Lan took out her phone. She looked around the room before settling on the wooden bed, "The only place large enough to hide someone is under the bed."

The phone rang briefly before it was accepted by Sister Mao. "Xiao Lan, I was about to call you, what happened to Huang Xing? We could hear his scream from here. Did some accident happen?"

Zhang Lan squatted beside the bed. Her voice was urgent. "That Bai Qiulin is suspicious! Do you remember that mental patient that we ran into at the Haunted House overseas? I suspect either Bai Qiulin is an employee or a madman on a rampage!”

“Okay, I understand. Where are you now? We’ll meet up with you.”

“There’s a sedan outside this old home...” Zhang Lan looked below the bed, and multiple red threads intertwined forming a web of sorts. In the middle of the web was a man covered with a red wedding dress.

“Huang Xing?”

“What’s wrong? Xiao Lan, have you found Huang Xing?” Sister Mao asked on the phone. Zhang Lan was about to reply when a cold hand suddenly reached out from underneath the bed to grab at her!

Zhang Lan’s phone flew from her grasp. She wanted to go grab it when she noticed a person standing beside her. The man’s spine was twisted, his neck snapped, but his bloody face made Zhang Lan feel familiar.

“Bai Qiulin!” Zhang Lan was scared. She did not understand how Bai Qiulin walked into the room with Mr. Zhou and Duan Yue watching the door. She called out instinctually, “Mr. Zhou! Come help me!”

The chopped hand silently ended the call. Hearing Zhang Lan, Mr. Zhou and Duan Yue walked into the room. However, their looks had completely changed. All three ‘humans’ squeezed inside the room to give Zhang Lan triple the ‘joy’.

“Don’t be afraid, we won’t hurt you.”

“Xiao Lan? Say something! What’s happening over there?” Sister Mao screamed into the phone. However, there was no answer but the sound of chaos.

“Mr. Zhou! Come save me!” Xiao Lan screamed before the call got cut off. Sister Mao put down the phone with a worried expression. “Xiao Lan said Bai Qiulin is a crazy person? The five of them are together, Huang Xing has already been taken down, and now we’ve lost contact with Xiao Lan as well. What is happening over there?”

...

“Didn’t Xiao Lan call for Mr. Zhou to come save her at the last minute? Looks like Mr. Zhou and his wife are also victims. We should go find the couple, and then we’ll know for sure,” Ma Tian suggested. “But we need to hurry before Bai Qiulin harms them.”

“I don’t care about that Mr. Zhou and his wife, nor do I care about your teammates. I’ve paid my money, so you have to help me finish my mission.” The one who spoke was Brother Wong. He held his phone and kept recording everything, ignoring the rules of the Haunted House.

“You...” Ma Tian was about to say something when Sister Mao stopped him. “Brother Wong, the situation has changed. There appear to be employees from the Haunted House mixed in with the visitors. We need to clarify this first.”

“What kind of danger can happen in a Haunted House?” Brother Wong used his phone to record everything inside the Haunted House. Sister Mao knew that she would not be able to persuade Brother Wong, so she said, “In that case, why don’t you wait here? We’ll be back in a bit.”

“Before coming here, your group kept gloating, saying that going to a Haunted House is like returning home. Now we’re just halfway through, and you’re this panicked already? Looks like my money was spent at the wrong place.” Brother Wong’s identity was rather unique.

Sister Mao did not dare counter, so she nodded and said, “That is our fault. Brother Wong, just give us three minutes. If we cannot find Huang Xing and Xiao Lan, we’ll come back to get you.”

“Thank you, Brother Wong.” Sister Mao dragged Ma Tian out of the old home and said, “We’ll wait for you outside.”

Once they were out the door, Ma Tian could not help but grumble, “This Ol’ Wong really think we’re his bodyguards.”

“Just focus on our work.” Sister Mao patted Ma Tian’s hand lightly. “Calm down.”

“Sister Mao, actually, I’m curious—what is this man’s identity? It’s true that we did take his money, but that doesn’t mean we need to be so servile toward him; we don’t owe him anything.”

“He is one of the top brass at the futuristic theme park. He’s well connected in the business, so there’s no reason for us to offend him.” Sister Mao turned to look back into the house.

“In that case, why did he come to New Century Park personally? Why didn’t he just send a lackey?” Ma Tian was confused. He thought that the man’s actions were unreasonable.

“This is a matter between the two large theme parks; it’s none of our business.”

When Brother Wong came out, he had already pocketed his phone. “Let’s go.”

The three returned to the center of the village where they had separated from Huang Xing’s group.

“There’re so many houses. Where should we start looking?”

“On the phone, Xiao Lan said that she was inside a house with a sedan. We should follow the route that they used when they left.” The three were about to head down that way when footsteps echoed down the streets. A man and woman ran their way with fear on their faces.

“Mr. Zhou?” Ma Tian realized something and immediately went to meet up with them. Before he could say anything, he heard Mr. Zhou's urgent calls. "You have to go save Xiao Lan! That Bai Qiulin is a monster!"

Even from a far, Sister Mao and Ma Tian could hear the panic in Mr. Zhou's voice. "Monster?"

Mr. Zhou gasped for air as he held Duan Yue's hand. His eyes were filled with terror, and his hair was shaking from fear. "Huang Xing suggested that we split up so we could find the wedding dress faster. He went alone with Bai Qiulin, and the two of us stayed with Zhang Lan. It didn't take long for us to hear Huang Xing scream!"

Mr. Zhou's voice was shaking like he had just been through a traumatic event.

"We also heard Huang Xing's scream. What happened next?" Sister Mao urged him to continue.

"Zhang Lan had a suspicion that something was off about Bai Qiulin; she said there are internet rumors that this place is really haunted! This Bai Qiulin is either an employee, a madman, or an actual ghost." Mr. Zhou took a deep breath. "Initially, we didn't believe Zhang Lan, but what happened next was too weird."

"Tell us, what happened!"

"When the three of us arrived, we saw Bai Qiulin come out from one of the old houses. Xiao Lan got into an argument with him then." Mr. Zhou took out his left hand. "All of you still remember Bai Qiulin kept his left hand inside his pocket, right?"

"Xiao Lan thought he was an employee and believed his left hand that was hidden must be controlling the mechanism inside the Haunted House. However, when Bai Qiulin took out his left hand, all three of us were shocked!" Mr. Zhou's voice was agitated. He shook his hand a bit dramatically. "That Bai Qiulin has no left hand; the wound was clean, like it had been chopped off by a knife!"

Based on Mr. Zhou's description, Sister Mao's group was feeling unsettled already.

"The scarier thing happened later. Me and Duan Yue tried to persuade Xiao Lan to leave this man, but Xiao Lan insisted on going into the house. She believed that Huang Xing was inside the house somewhere."

“So, the three of you entered the house?”

“The place was big; Duan Yue and myself went to the bedroom on the right. Worried about Huang Xing’s safety, Xiao Lan entered the bedroom on the left alone. Less than one minute later, I heard Zhang Lan’s scream!” Mr. Zhou’s face was filled with guilt. “I rushed toward her, but when I arrived, she had already disappeared from the room.”

His fingers seemed to be shaking from fear. “Then we saw the scariest thing. That Bai Qiulin walked out from behind the bed carrying his broken hand. His face was twisted and his body broken, just... just like he had been in a car accident!”

Mr. Zhou was babbling. It was obvious that the man was traumatized.

“It was too scary...” Mr. Zhou seemed to be caught in the fear. How he looked made Sister Mao and Ma Tian worried as well.

“Then the five of us should stick together and go back to the house.” Ma Tian was the first one to calm down. “Mr. Zhou, you lead the way.”

After some hesitation, Mr. Zhou nodded. “It’s my fault for not looking after Zhang Lan. Alright, come with me.”

Chapter 352: It's Not the Worst Situation Yet

Mr. Zhou and Duan Yue walked in front, Ma Tian stayed in the middle, and Sister Mao accompanied Brother Wong at the back.

“Brother Wong, you have to stay close to me,” Sister Mao said softly. “This Haunted House has a very high review online; even the 50-cent army I hired barely managed to knock its review down. Therefore, there has to be something unique about it.”

...

“We’ve been here for about ten minutes already. We’ve not run into any actors or scary props. I wonder how this Haunted House operates. Do they just allow their visitors to wander about on their own?” Brother Wong used his phone to record everything along the way but did not find anything that was particularly scary. “The three-star scenario should be the most difficult and thus have the best design, but so far, the only thing I’m feeling is boredom.”

“His old Haunted House cannot rival the Haunted House that you’ve designed, but we still mustn’t let our guard down.” Sister Mao smiled and did not dare say anything against Brother Wong.

“Recently, New Century Park has been showing signs of recovering, and it is all thanks to this Haunted House, but I cannot understand how a Haunted House is going to revive an entire park.” Brother Wong walked slowly, so Sister Mao did not dare walk too fast.

The group was either worried about Zhang Lan and Huang Xing’s safety or concerned about something else, so they did not notice the doors of the houses on the side of the street creak open, nor did they notice the shadows that crossed the wall. In fact, none of them noticed the shadow that hung from the rooftop that trailed behind them. The good actor, Mr. Zhou, slowly led them into the grasp of the ghosts.

Funeral music appeared in their ears, and the white lanterns swayed, causing the light to flicker.

“Wait, something is not right!” Ma Tian signaled for them to stop. “The atmosphere is different from before; it feels like many pairs of eyes are staring at us.”

“In that case, we better get out of here first.” Mr. Zhou was even more of a scaredy cat than Ma Tian. “I really don’t want to go any further!”

“We haven’t found the wedding dress, and we’ve lost our teammates. The time limit is forty minutes, and we’re leaving in less than ten minutes? If this is heard by other people, how are we going to continue to survive as Haunted House reviewers?” Sister Mao took a step forward. “We’ll keep moving on. At the very least, we have to see what’s happening in front.”

After that, she turned to smile apologetically at Mr. Zhou. “Please continue to lead the way, but don’t worry, as long as you’re with us, you’ll be fine.”

After a little more persuasion, Mr. Zhou finally relented. “Then, we’d better get a move on. I’ll lead you to the place, and then we’ll leave on our own.”

He and Duan Yue picked up speed, and Ma Tian followed close behind. The paper money on the ground flew up into the air, and there was the sound of crying. There were children giggling, and the lanterns at the end of the street were moving on their own. They moved another few meters, and footsteps came from the other street. Mr. Zhou and Duan Yue acted like they did not hear anything and continued to move forward. Ma Tian followed without paying attention.

However, after they crossed the street, the funeral music sounded, and two men with their heads lowered, carrying a broken coffin between them, walked out from the other street. The coffin blocked the road. Sister Mao and Brother Wong were separated from the three by the coffin.

“This is?” They finally saw the Haunted House’s actors, but both Sister Mao and Brother Wong were unsettled. The two men were not wearing make-up, but how come they... looked just like dead people?

The air froze, and Sister Mao pulled on Brother Wong’s sleeves as she took a step back. She felt like she had knocked into something. She turned and saw a boy with a painted face smiling right at her. Before the fear in her heart exploded, Mr. Zhou, who was at the front of the group, suddenly screamed, “There he is! He killed Zhang Lan!”

In the middle of the courtyard stood Bai Qiulin with his spine broken and his face mangled. His body covered with blood, he ran at them waving his hand madly!

"I'm not a killer! I'm not a killer!" he screamed, but there was a hole on his throat, and his voice came out together with gushing blood. Mr. Zhou, who stood at the start of the group, turned and ran. Fear spread through the group. Ma Tian only saw Bai Qiulin's look before he also joined Mr. Zhou and ran. It was too scary! That was more than make-up; Bai Qiulin's head was almost falling off!

"Run!" Mr. Zhou cried out, but a coffin blocked their way. The two pallbearers seemed to hear their signal and let go of the coffin together before they reached for Sister Mao and Brother Wong.

BANG!

The coffin crashed to the ground, and the coffin lid slid off. A red set of graveclothes stood up on its own!

Brother Wong and Sister Mao could not get a good look at what was happening in front. She barely had the chance to recover from the fright given by the boy before the world changed. The dead people charged at them, and the graveclothes inside the coffin jumped out and walked toward them!

She was not a particularly courageous person. Normally, she depended on Ma Tian and Huang Xing. This sudden accident had spooked her too much. She grabbed Brother Wong, found the closest street, and ran down it.

"Sister Mao!" Ma Tian cried, but Sister Mao had already run away. The coffin sat between them, and the graveclothes now climbed back to stand on the coffin. Given this situation, the man did not dare get close to the coffin.

Without any options, he followed Mr. Zhou and Duan Yue and ran into another street. Human faces appeared on the walls. Ma Tian did not dare to stop; the bloodied Bai Qiulin was right behind him!

He really looks like he has killed someone!

When that thought flashed in his mind, Ma Tian's heart could not stop shaking. He had just come to visit a Haunted House; how come such an unfortunate thing happened to him?

“A madman hid inside a Haunted House and chopped off his own hand. This is insane!”

“Don’t run away! I’m not a killer! I swear!” Bai Qiulin’s voice came from behind him, and it was getting closer to Ma Tian. He did not dare turn back and run full speed ahead. His heart raced, and he made sure to stay close to Mr. Zhou. He soon reached his limit, and his speed slowed down. Mr. Zhou, who was in front, screamed at the top of his lungs at Ma Tian, “Quick! Don’t stop!”

After turning another corner, Mr. Zhou pushed open the door to one of the homes, and he waved at Ma Tian. “This way!”

Ma Tian followed Mr. Zhou into the room, but after closing the door, he started to regret it. “Mr. Zhou! This is a dead end!”

“My wife cannot run anymore! You want me to abandon her?” Mr. Zhou helped Duan Yue into the inner room. “We’ll hide here for now.”

The urgency of the moment made Ma Tian miss the change in Mr. Zhou’s reference toward Duan Yue, which had changed from girlfriend to wife. He followed them into the inner room. “But there’s no place to hide in here!”

“Come, we’ll hide inside the dresser!” Mr. Zhou pulled the bedroom dresser open, and the three crawled into it. The door closed. There were three people inside the small space, but Ma Tian did not feel warmth. If anything, it felt like he had fallen into an icy cave.

“Shush!” Mr. Zhou glared at Ma Tian. “I’ve closed the front door; the madman probably won’t know we’re hiding here.”

The moment he finished, the front door creaked open. The sound was close to shattering Ma Tian’s heart.

“How can the monster know we’re in here?” Mr. Zhou’s face was filled with terror, but he soon recovered. “He probably just came in here to take a look.”

This time, before he even finished, the door of the inner room was pushed open. Ma Tian’s heart went to his throat, and his breathing became uneven.

Zhou was like a fortune teller because Bai Qiulin was heard stepping into the bedroom and stopped before the dresser. Ma Tian's face blanched, and he held his breath from fear of being discovered.

"Don't be scared. Now is not the worst situation. At least there are three of us humans visitors facing one ghost." Mr. Zhou's voice changed. "But if there were three ghosts chasing one human visitor, then you should be afraid."

Hearing that, a thought crossed Ma Tian's mind. How did Mr. Zhou know there was a wooden dress in this bedroom?

Other houses did not have dressers, and this was the only exception!

An indescribable terror filled his head, and it made every hair on his body stand on end.

His calves weakened, and he felt like his energy was drained from his body. Ma Tian did not dare move his gaze as he felt the two visitors beside him changing. The footsteps got closer. He looked through the gap, and the teetering Bai Qiulin used his hand to press against the dresser door.

Just as Ma Tian thought Bai Qiulin would open the dresser, Bai Qiulin took out a key and took his time to lock the dresser!

...

Seeing this, Ma Tian understood everything before he fainted. "The three of you... are all ghosts!"

His scream echoed through Coffin Village, and Brother Wong as well as Sister Mao heard it as they raced down the street. "Ma Tian is the most stable of us all. To be able to make him scream like that, it must have been something really scary."

Sister Mao's heart fell. Five of them had entered, and in less than fifteen minutes, three of them had already disappeared. The scariest thing was, even now, she had no idea what had happened to her partners. Cold sweat ran down her forehead. She was different from Ye Xiaoxin. She was not that courageous a person, which was why she formed a Haunted House reviewer group.

"Your friends don't seem that reliable." Brother Wong was not that physically fit, so he stopped running after a while.

"It's this Haunted House that's too scary!" Sister Mao dropped her disguise. She stopped wasting energy to pretend to be cute. It was hard when her mind was filled with various scary images.

"Let's leave this place first. There's no need to sacrifice our lives for the sake of face."

"Agreed."

Sister Mao held Brother Wong as they returned to the center of the village. Looking at the branching paths, they were stunned.

“Which is the road that we took when we arrived?”

“Brother Wong, that’s not the problem! When we arrived, there weren’t so many paths!” Sister Mao felt like crying.

“Calm down, don’t forget what you do for a living.” Brother Wong took out his phone. “Thankfully, I took those pictures and videos.”

He looked through the files and found the road that looked rather similar to the one they had taken when they arrived. “Should be this one.”

The two walked down that road, but the further they walked, the more they felt it was not right.

“When we entered the village, it only took us several minutes to reach the center of the village. How come it feels like now we’re walking deeper into the village?” Sister Mao looked at Brother Wong’s phone. “Are we on the correct path?”

As time went on, the pure terror of Coffin Village slowly revealed itself. The white lanterns released a faded red light, and things started to change.

“We’re really on the wrong path?” Brother Wong compared the road to his video. The path really did look to the one on his phone initially, but the more they walked down it, the more different it became. “We should turn back to the village center and select another path.”

“That might not be such a good idea.” Sister Mao grabbed Brother Wong’s hand and led him into a nearby courtyard. They had just hidden themselves when children could be heard singing. Two boys with blood red mask ran past the front door. They looked to be seven or eight, and they sounded like innocent boys. However, put in this environment, it just felt creepy.

Sister Mao wanted to look outside but was stopped by Brother Wong. “Don’t do it! What if the two boys are hiding behind the door? If this place is as immoral as you said, they might do something like that.”

“Brother Wong, have you noticed the temperature dropping?”

“Not really, you’re probably too nervous.” Brother Wong was very careful. He used his phone to look around. “We should inspect this courtyard to make sure it’s safe.”

The white lanterns gave off a red light, and there was a strange smell in the air. The soil was moving, and the dead locust trees swayed lightly.

“Is this some kind of mechanism?” Brother Wong looked at the locust tree and used his hand to push it. He just wanted to see what kind of mechanism was responsible for moving it, but the locust tree fell with a slight push. “The material used for the prop sure is unreliable.”

The moment Brother Wong finished, Sister Mao pulled him back. “Brother Wong, look under the tree!”

There was a hole underneath the dead locust tree, and a body’s legs were poking out.

“What kind of design is this?” Brother Wong and Sister Mao did not expect something to be buried underneath the tree.

“The tree is just a normal locust tree; there’s no mechanism connected to it. Was it the legs that caused the tree to move? So, the mechanism is this body that is buried under the tree?” Brother Wong looked at the mannequin buried in the hole, and his curiosity to inspect it closer was silenced. He walked away from the hole. “This is such mad design.”

Sister Mao followed behind Brother Wong, holding his arm. “Should we enter the house?”

“Let me think.” Brother Wong gripped the phone, feeling afraid. The two stopped in the middle of the courtyard when they suddenly heard a splash, like a fish jumping out of the water. The surroundings had been so quiet that it was difficult for them to not notice this.

“The sound seems to have come from the water barrel.” Sister Mao hid behind Brother Wong. She seemed to have forgotten her identity as a Haunted House reviewer, and given the fact that her make-up had already been ruined, she just looked slightly better than a ghost.

“Come, let’s go take a look.” Brother Wong neared the water barrel, and even when he got closer, he could not spot anything weird; it just looked like a normal water receptacle. However, there was a white ball floating on the surface.

“I don’t remember anything floating on the water when we came in!” Brother Wong was confused. “Where did the ball come from?”

The light was too dim for him to see clearly. It was not until they were standing next to the water barrel that they heard something that sounded like bubbles.

“The ball is making bubbles in the water?” Brother Wong leaned forward and turned on the flashlight on his phone. He shone it at the water barrel. The light cut through the water and lit up the round ‘ball’.

Their mouths fell open. It was not a ball but a human head soaked in the water until it had become white!

With a splash, the ghost jumped out from the barrel. The sudden light from the phone seemed to give him plenty of displeasure. The bloated face rushed toward the two visitors. Brother Wong was so spooked that he turned and ran. However, he only took several steps before he tripped on something.

He looked at the ground, and the body that originally had its leg up now had its head upwards, poking through the soil!

The face smiled at him like it was trying to crawl out from the hole. Brother Wong crawled toward the front door like his life depended on it. But at this moment, the sound of children singing came from the front door.

“Little old mister, sitting before the funeral, his face stern. Adults and babies sat watching. The son’s legs were sore from kneeling.”

Chapter 354 - They Are the Ghosts!

Chapter 354: They Are the Ghosts!

The red door was pushed open, and the two boys bounded into the courtyard. They continued to sing their weird lullaby, and blood slid down their faces. When they got closer, Brother Wong realized that the red was not from paint but a mask that was carved into their faces.

“Don’t come any closer!” Brother Wong collapsed to the ground. His hands reached back, hoping to grab something to use as a shield. His fingertips touched something cold. He turned back to look, and the mannequin that had been half-buried in the ground earlier had crawled out and was resting beside him!

...

Brother Wong called for Sister Mao to help him, but Sister Mao was facing quite a big problem herself. The bloated ghost had climbed out of the water barrel, and water dripped to the ground, his swollen face staring at the two visitors inside the courtyard. A shrill female scream escaped her throat. Sister Mao was scared until she lost her rationality. She abandoned Brother Wong and raced out of the house like crazy.

The lanterns on the side of the street elicited a red light. The originally-creepy village changed in several minutes; it felt like she had arrived at hell!

Two boys ran out from the courtyard. The eerie lullaby filled her ears, and Sister Mao raced for her life. “Help!”

As a Haunted House reviewer, she was screaming for help inside a Haunted House—that was something Sister Mao had not expected before she arrived. Her speed slowed down, and the Sedan Kids caught up to her. Despair almost swallowed her whole. “How come this road is so unending? Someone come and help me!”

After turning the corner, Sister Mao saw the red graveclothes standing in the middle of the road. The clothes stood upright, and when it discovered Sister Mao, it chased after her without warning. Her throat was raw from screaming. Sister Mao focused on running.

Fortunately, the Lord rewards hard work.

At the end of the other street, there were several dim oil lamps. Even though the light was weak, they managed to chase the darkness away. “That should be the exit!”

Sister Mao tried her best to run toward the light, but as she ran, she realized that something was wrong. Those lights did not seem fixed to anything; they seemed to be moving on their own!

“The lights are floating in the air?”

With monster chasing behind her, Sister Mao did not have the time to consider these details. She ran another few meters before she saw the lights for what they were!

Pale faces floated behind the lights—each oil lamp was hanging from the mouth of a floating human head!

Sister Mao’s brain had gone into shutdown. Her body continued to move for several meters due to inertia. Just as she was about to charge into the group of Skull Lanterns, a hand reached out to grab her.

“Follow me!” the man said harshly. He pulled Sister Mao into one of the old homes and led her to jump through the window.

“Who are you?”

“Shush, it’s very dangerous here.” The voice was rather familiar, so Sister Mao allowed him to drag her for two streets. After they ran away from the monsters, they finally stopped. They hid behind the door, and Sister Mao turned to look at the man who saved her from certain death. Her gaze moved up, but when she saw that face, her face quivered. “Bai Qiulin?”

“Will you please quiet down?” Bai Qiulin hissed at her. “Why? Is it that surprising to see me?”

Sister Mao’s brain was a puddle, and she staggered back. “But Xiao Lan said on the phone...”

“It was me who hurt her, right?” Bai Qiulin said coldly. “You’ve all been tricked by the dirty things inside this Haunted House.”

“Dirty things?” Sister Mao looked at Bai Qiulin with suspicion. When the five of them had gone to find Zhang Lan earlier, the pallbearers had left the coffin in the middle of the road, splitting the group in two. At the time, Sister Mao’s attention had been focused on the pallbearers and the Sedan Kids, so she did not know what happened on the other side of the street.

“You might not believe what I have to say next, but it’s all true.” Bai Qiulin’s throaty voice made her uncomfortable. “The couple with you are ghosts!”

“You’re saying Mr. Zhou and Duan Yue are ghosts?” Sister Mao widened her eyes, having trouble believing it.

“This Haunted House has been in operation for many years already, and there have always been rumors of ghost hauntings.” Bai Qiulin’s pupils shook. “Several months ago, a couple decided to commit a suicide pact since their love wasn’t blessed by their families. The location was this Haunted House.”

“Initially, everything was fine, but slowly, more and more visitors had visions of that couple. It appears like their souls have stuck around the Haunted House after they died!” Bai Qiulin’s voice was scary. “Huang Xing was tricked by that couple. I wanted to save him, but I was too late.”

“But on the phone, Zhang Lan said you’re the one who harmed her, and she asked Mr. Zhou for help before the call was cut off...”

Before Sister Mao could finish, Bai Qiulin interrupted her. “You people are so dumb! Don’t you know how to use your brain when you receive her call? Why would the call be ended right after Zhang Lan called for Mr. Zhou’s help? Why didn’t they end the call earlier? They had to wait until Zhang Lan pointed me as the murderer first. Why is that?” The more Bai Qiulin argued, the louder he became. Sister Mao was led in circles by Bai Qiulin, and she started to buy his story.

“At the time, I just wanted to tell Zhang Lan everything. I purposely avoided the couple, but Zhang Lan misunderstood me, thinking I wanted to harm her.” Bai Qiulin’s expression was serious. “All I wanted to do was help, but my good intentions were taken advantage of by that ghost couple!”

Every time Bai Qiulin spoke, it heightened the terror in Sister Mao’s heart. Her conviction started to shake. “So, those two are the real ghosts.”

Before giving Sister Mao any chance to think, Bai Qiulin opened the front door. The two ran down the street, and when they reached the end of the street, two figures turned the corner and stood under the light of the red lantern.

Mr. Zhou and Duan Yue!

“Sister Mao?” Mr. Zhou was stunned, and his expression changed within seconds. With his finger pointing at Bai Qiulin, he pleaded, “Get away from him! You’re standing next to a ghost!”

The desperation in Mr. Zhou’s voice unsettled Sister Mao. Both parties said that the other was the ghost—who was she going to believe?

Her footsteps moved involuntarily forward. Sister Mao still believed Mr. Zhou a bit more.

“Don’t go! The ghost couple are lying to you.” Bai Qiulin stood where he was. His tone was sharp but shaking like he too was afraid. Hearing that, Sister Mao started to hesitate.

“Sister Mao, come over here!” Mr. Zhou screamed at the top of his lungs. Then he suddenly remembered something. “That madman ran out from the mental hospital! He chopped off his left hand! Tell him to show you his left arm!”

One side was a couple that committed suicide inside a Haunted House, the other was the convicted patient who chopped out his hand, and Sister Mao stood in the middle. She did not know who to trust. Who among them is lying? Who should I believe?

Chapter 355: They Fell Before I Did Anything

“Believe me, they are both ghosts. Don’t go over there!” Bai Qiulin moved one step forward. “Come with me before it’s too late!”

“Sister Mao, you have to think this through! He was around when the accidents happened to Zhang Lan and Huang Xing!” Mr. Zhou’s face was covered with fear. “Quickly come to us!”

...

Sister Mao was tormented by the opposing voices coming from both sides! This was more than just simple fear. Terror had seeped into her bones—just the thought of it sent chills up her spine. “Heaven on one side and hell on the other, one wrong step and everything’s over.”

She gritted his teeth and finally came to her decision. Perhaps because Mr. Zhou had said more words and was the friendlier party before all hell broke loose, Sister Mao chose to nudge toward Mr. Zhou and Duan Yue.

“You will regret this.” Bai Qiulin moved backward like he was ready to run. Seeing how determined Bai Qiulin was to leave, Sister Mao’s heart started to shake again. “If he wants to harm me, he wouldn’t leave like this. Am I really making the wrong choice?”

Sister Mao looked at Mr. Zhou and his wife, and she suddenly remembered that both Bai Qiulin and Mr. Zhou were there when accidents happened to Huang Xing and Xiao Lan, but when Ma Tian was caught, only Mr. Zhou and his wife were with him!

“I know the truth already!” Sister Mao was covered with cold sweat; it felt like she had just taken a jaunt around the gate of hell.

“Wait a minute!” Sister Mao ran to Bai Qiulin. “I’m going with you!”

“Now you choose to believe me?” Bai Qiulin did not turn around, and his voice was cold.

"I've always believed you!" Sister Mao tried to argue to regain Bai Qiulin's confidence.

Bai Qiulin slowed down but still did not turn around. "Aren't you afraid that I'm a crazy murderer?"

"Now is not the time for that; they'll catch up soon!" Sister Mao had tears in her eyes. "I really believe you. Please, take me to the exit. Earlier I must have been possessed by the ghosts—that's the only reason I hesitated."

"Possessed by the ghosts?" Bai Qiulin stopped. Sister Mao finally caught up to him, and he slowly turned around. His neck snapped, mouth and nose bleeding, Bai Qiulin had a twisted smile on his face. "Are you talking about a ghost like myself?"

Sister Mao forced out a scream from her sore throat. She had lost her soul, and her body turned to run toward Mr. Zhou. "Save me! Save me!"

Sister Mao rushed toward Mr. Zhou and Duan Yue, her mind completely blank.

"I told you he's a ghost, but you refused to listen. Come with us!" Mr. Zhou and Duan Yue led Sister Mao into an alley. They ran for a while before Sister Mao saw the end of the road—it was a wall!

"Wait, is this a dead end?" She turned to look at Mr. Zhou and Duan Yue beside her, and she lost the ability to speak.

"Of course, where else would dead people lead you but a dead end?" Mr. Zhou's black shirt started to leak with blood, forming floral patterns. Duan Yue was even scarier; her body split into blocks like she could shatter at any moment. "I only said Bai Qiulin was a ghost, but have I said that we aren't?"

Her eyes rolled backward, and Sister Mao felt it was a nice thing to faint.

...

Inspecting the make-up on his face, Chen Ge, who was waiting at the entrance of Coffin Village, finally entered the scenario. "It's time to add some pressure now that twenty minutes have passed."

Boss Chen decided to do this personally, but once he stepped into the village, several shadows crawled out and entered the comic. “What happened?”

He flipped open the comic, and Uncle Yan drew five spots on the black paper, signaling the five locations where the group had fainted. “It has already ended? All five of them got taken down already?”

Chen Ge ran into the nearest old home in Uncle Yan’s drawing. He first pulled out Zhang Lan and Huang Xing before finding the unconscious Ma Tian with foam on his lips. Then, at the end of the alley, he found Sister Mao, who had lost her fake eyelashes.

“But only twenty minutes have passed, right? What the f*ck happened?” When Chen Ge visited the old building, he did not think that the three ghosts were that scary, even though they were exceptional actors.

“The three of them definitely could manage a whole scenario on their own, but pretending to be visitors can’t be repeated too often. I’ll consider this a special experience for the first batch of visitors.” Putting away the comic, Chen Ge found the place where Brother Wong lied unconscious. Different from other visitors, the phone beside Brother Wong was still replaying the video. When he and Sister Mao were trying to escape, they had used the recording to find the way back. “Another content stealer.”

Initially, Chen Ge did not pay much attention, but after Director Luo put out the 200,000 reward, there had been people paying for information on his Haunted House online. The newer the information, the higher the price. However, there were not many who had the guts to enter a three-star scenario. After all, even if they earned the money, they had to be alive to enjoy it.

Picking up the phone, Chen Ge deleted the video. Just as he was ready to place the phone back in Brother Wong’s pocket, he noticed the many videos and pictures of a different theme park. The theme park’s design was futuristic, and in comparison, New Century Park was old and traditional.

“Isn’t this the futuristic theme park? Why would the man have the designs of a theme park on his phone?” Chen Ge glanced at Brother Wong. “Be it from age group or presence, this man is different from the other members of the reviewer group. He should be someone from the futuristic theme park!

“Looks like the Haunted House has gotten famous enough to attract the attention of competition. New Century Park was on its last legs—even Director Luo planned to close the place—but recently, due to the existence of the Haunted House, the theme park is experiencing its second wind. It's understandable for them to come to feel out the competition."

Chen Ge came to this conclusion after looking through a few more videos. "Good idea, but you started with a three-star scenario. You sure don't value your life."

Chen Ge took out his phone and aimed it at Brother Wong's screen. He took down everything that he could use in the future.

"Sister Mao hired a 50-cent army to bring the rating of the Haunted House down, and there are groups bringing up discussion of New Century Park online. Could the culprit be the people from the futuristic theme park?" Chen Ge knew fairly well that Jiujiang was only so big, so the two large theme parks would have to fight for visitors.

"Based on current situation, New Century Park is still on the losing end, but thankfully, there's one more month until the official opening of their park."

After Chen Ge removed all the pictures, he returned the phone to brother Wong and dragged him out of the scenario. "I'll need to report this to Director Luo. He probably also realized that someone has been trying to bring theme park down."

All five visitors had fainted, and Chen Ge could not haul all of them out at once. So, he could only drag Sister Mao and Zhang Lan out with him first. "They're so heavy. Looks like, in the future, I'll scare them until they're half-unconscious so that they can still walk out on their own."

When Uncle Xu saw Chen Ge come out dragging two women with him, his eyes twitched. He stopped selling tickets and ran over to help.

"Get the stretchers from the resting tent! Where is the doctor on standby? Go get the man! Just tell them there's another accident at the Haunted House. They know what to do!"

Uncle Xu and the workers helped Sister Mao and Zhang Lan get onto the stretcher. They were about to leave when Chen Ge suddenly grabbed Uncle Xu's shoulders.

“What is it?” Uncle Xu’s forehead was covered with sweat. He was in the hurry to send the visitors to the doctor.

“Three people fainted?” Uncle Xu’s expression fell; he was about to say something when he was stopped by Chen Ge.

“I mean, I need three more stretchers.”

Uncle Xu's hands shook, and he almost dropped Sister Mao. "Three more stretchers? But only five visitors entered the scenario!"

Not only Uncle Xu, but all the nearby visitors took a step back.

...

"I also didn't expect Haunted House reviewers to be so easily scared." Chen Ge shrugged helplessly. "Help me get the stretchers here and I'll go get the rest of the visitors."

After saying that, Chen Ge turned to walk into the Haunted House, leaving a group of visitors that were stunned.

"Five people entered, and all five fainted, meaning that the three-star scenario has a 100 percent chance of making people faint." The team who planned to challenge the Third Sick Hall stopped to have a discussion. Without refunding the ticket, they ran to the spot in the sunlight. They formed a circle and started to reassess the danger of challenging Third Sick Hall.

"Both the Third Sick Hall and Coffin Village are three-star scenarios, so I think we need to reconsider this." The one who spoke was Yang Chen, who had met Chen Ge before. This student from Jiujiang's Medical University seemed to be the core member of the team. "All the information on the Third Sick Hall was mostly rumors.

Apparently, they were claimed to be testimonies from visitors who had visited the Third Sick Hall themselves, but the authenticity can be challenged. I just asked an insurance company—there's no claim for accidents that happen inside the Haunted House.

"The risk is still too high, we haven't even cleared the two-star scenario perfectly, so I personally suggested that we finish the two-star scenario before we even consider three-star scenario."

"But someone has to take the first step. We stayed up late until three am to discuss this last night to come up with eleven emergency plans.

Are you willing to give up now that we're at the door?"

"Let's have a vote." Yang Chen raised his arm. "I don't agree that we should challenge a three-star scenario today."

"I support you." The group of thirteen formed a circle under the sun. They seemed like they were discussing something important, and the nearby visitors thought they were quite mysterious.

"Seven votes for no, two surrendered their votes, four yes. Majority wins, so I announce that we'll be giving up on this challenge for today!"

The team members returned to the resting tent to discuss the next course of action. Other people had no idea what they were up to, but they felt the group look rather impressive.

By then, the five visitors had been retrieved from the Haunted House. They were hauled onto the stretchers and sent to the medical room by the park workers. "The park workers are getting more and more professional. Last time, when Fei Youliang fainted, it took them more than half an hour to send him to the hospital. They're much faster now."

Chen Ge saw the fear on the other visitors' faces as they saw the workers walk away with the stretchers, so he consoled them. "Don't worry, our Haunted House come with full medical protection. We've already come to an agreement with a famed hospital, so you can visit without worry. It'll be fine."

Part of the visitors did feel better hearing that, but others were confused. Why would a Haunted House have an agreement with a hospital? These were not supposed to be places that were related!

After the promotion done by the five reviewers, many visitors who intended to visit a three-star scenarios all retreated, and the terror of three-star scenarios rose in their heart once more. That was probably human nature. Thing that they could not get, they wanted it the most; places that they could not go to, they were curious about it.

After making sure there were no visitors, Chen Ge returned to the Haunted House to look through the pictures on his phone. As he looked through them, his eyes turned serious.

...

Gu Feiyu and Xu Wan were each responsible for a one-star scenario, and the two-star scenario had the twenty or so mannequins. Only when visitors wanted to challenge three-star scenario would Chen Ge follow behind them to protect them from the shadows. The afternoon flew by. It was six pm, but there were still many visitors at the Haunted House.

In comparison to the service provided by the Haunted House, the ticket price was not expensive, so some of the visitors wanted to try out other scenarios after they finished one. This was one of the reasons the lines in front of the Haunted House had not reduced.

The Haunted House operated until 6.30 pm, and Chen Ge stopped selling tickets due to security concerns. After sending away the last batch of visitors, Xu Wan and Gu Feiyu strode out from their scenarios.

“Nice work today.” Chen Ge helped Xu Wan remove her make-up and called the two workers to join them in the dressing room. “We’ll have a short meeting. Starting with Xiao Gu, today, you’ve done a wonderful job. I didn’t receive any complaint from the visitors, meaning you have talent for this job.”

“It’s because I have a good boss who knows how to teach.” Xiao Gu removed the Doctor Skull-cracker’s outfit and placed it neatly back at the corner of the room.

“Playing a ghost for a long time inside a Haunted House may take a toll on your psyche, so stay away from oily food and depressing movies or drama. Let yourself get used to the environment first.”

“Yes, boss.”

“Okay, you can go now. If you come across any problem in your life, you can come to me. I hope you won’t treat the Haunted House only as a working space; this is also a home that you can come back to,” Chen Ge said flatly, but it was filled with warmth and strength.

Xiao Gu nodded heavily, feeling truly touched.

After Gu Feiyu left, Chen Ge started to remove his own make-up. “Xiao Wan, have you noticed any changes in the Haunted House recently?”

“No, but...” Xu Wan sat beside Chen Ge. “Boss, I feel the biggest change has happened to you.”

“Me?” Chen Ge turned to look at Xu Wan. “What kind of changes you’re talking about.”

“I can’t put my finger on it.” Xu Wan passed a make-up sponge to Chen Ge and sat quietly. “For some reason, I feel like you’re different from before.”

“Perhaps I’m getting older.” Chen Ge smiled as he continued to take off the make-up. He looked at himself in the mirror and suddenly said, “Xiao Wan, on the off chance that the Haunted House closes down, will you promise me one thing?”

“What is it?”

“I’ll tell you when the day comes.” Chen Ge let Xu Wan go, and he cleaned up the Haunted House. When he was done, it was seven pm. He locked the door to the Haunted House and headed for theme park’s office building. Due to the recent business at the park, Director Luo had moved into the place.

He knocked on the door and realized that Director Luo was skyping with someone. He was in formal wear and sounded like he was discussing something very important. After several minutes, the meeting stopped. Director Luo waved at Chen Ge. “Xiao Chen, are you here for those few visitors? I’ve handled that for you. Just be more careful in the future.”

“It’s about something else.” Chen Ge took out his own phone and showed Director Luo the pictures that he had taken.

Chapter 357 - Who Are You?

Chapter 357: Who Are You?

“Of the five who fainted, one of them participated in the design of the futuristic theme park.” Chen Ge closed the door and gave his phone to Director Luo. “After some comparison, it’s quite obvious that a third-generation theme park like our own is still lacking.”

Every picture featured a different scene that combined imagination and incredible settings. Director Luo gasped with surprise when he saw the pictures. Honestly, if he was given a choice, he would also visit the futuristic theme park.

...

“Did you knock them out after discovering this man’s real identity?” Director Luo asked without taking his eyes from the phone.

“That was just an accident.”

“I’m not trying to accuse you. In fact, I think you’ve done a great job. However, I’m worried you didn’t consider the consequences of your actions.” Director Luo put down the phone. “After all, every single picture in here can be considered business secrets.”

“Don’t worry, I took the picture on my phone, so there won’t be any data trace. Plus, I grabbed his phone through the protection of my sleeve, so even if he goes to the police, there will not be actual proof.” Chen Ge sounded like this was everyday stuff for him.

Director Zhou was silent. Since Chen Ge had even considered his fingerprints, what else could he say?

“Lately, there has been an online presence trying to slander the Haunted House by hiring people to leave fake reviews. Initially, I didn’t think too much of it until the appearance of this man.” Chen Ge moved the slideshow forward. “Look at these messages. They’re behind it.”

Director Luo nodded. “The futuristic theme park has several shareholders. I believe one of them realized our threat and thus come up with these underhanded tactics. Don't you worry about this, I'll take care of it. You just focus on building your Haunted House."

"Director Luo, there're a few more pictures. Perhaps due to popularity of our Haunted House, they decided to add their own Haunted House—the Authentic 4D Haunted House."

It was at this point that Director Luo's face shifted. "They also wanted to open a Haunted House?"

"That's right. They plan to build a Haunted House that combines virtual reality and true reality. I've seen the preview online; the visitors claim it was like living in a horror movie."

"How does it compare to your own Haunted House?" Chen Ge's Haunted House was New Century Park's main attraction, so if it lost by comparison, New Century Park had nothing to compete with.

"Those things are ultimately fake; mine is one hundred percent real." Chen Ge's Haunted House would never shy from comparison.

"I feel like you're hiding something behind your words, but never mind, just give it your all. I'll support you." Director Luo continued to flip through the pictures. When he saw the last one, his brows slightly creased, but they quickly relaxed. "You also took this picture from his phone?"

The picture was of a staff gathering. When Chen Ge took the picture, it had been for the benefit of his own employees. If they saw these faces, there was no need to hold back. "Yes, is there anything wrong with the picture?"

"Just saw an old friend." Director Luo returned the phone to Chen Ge. "As long as you have confidence in your Haunted House, there's no reason for us to be afraid of them. Don't need to worry about the visitor number because we have something they don't."

He stood up to look out the window at the park. "We shouldn't limit ourselves to Jiujiang. The uniqueness of your Haunted House will carry us forward. With enough promotion, everywhere that has access to the internet will have potential customers."

In terms of business management, Director Luo was much more experienced than Chen Ge. "They can shift according to the trend, but that doesn't mean that we have to stand still either. I have something for you to see.”

Director Luo turned the laptop around, signaling for Chen Ge to scan the QR code that appeared on-screen.

“What’s this?” After scanning, Chen Ge realized his phone had downloaded an app called Haunted House. After clicking on it, it provided a small description of each scenario with the number of visitors that had tried it, the pass rate, and the time limit.

“This is the app that I asked people to design for you.” Director Luo pulled out a wristband from the drawer. “Put this on.”

Chen Ge put on the band and paired it with the app. He opened the personal page, and it revealed his heartrate, blood pressure, and many more statistics.

“The data might not be a hundred percent accurate, but at least it will be able to fool many people. The real purpose of the wrist band is digital location. Each band has its own code, and if a visitor faints inside your Haunted House, you only need to click on the computer to find them.” Director Luo was probably afraid of how Chen Ge was going about doing things, so he stressed the importance of the digital location.

“The app can be used on its own or bound with the wrist band. How to operate it, I’ll discuss with Ol’ Xu. We’ll come to a decision within three days.”

This app that was designed for the haunted House had many uses. The visitors could use it to check the ranking and the latest clear rate. There were also previews for new scenarios and inside guides. This app was more like a community project for all Haunted House lovers.

“Director Luo, you’ve read my mind. I’ve thought about designing something like this for my Haunted House.” Chen Ge had big ambitions. The three-star scenario was just the beginning; his goal was to build the first terror-themed theme park in the country.

“In that case, I’ll give you that wrist band—the code is 000.” Director Luo smiled. Perhaps it was Chen Ge’s influence, but he had felt younger in spirit recently. Chen Ge left Director Luo’s office at eight pm. With Director Luo’s full support, he did not have anything to worry about.

The futuristic park will open in a month; I don’t have that much time left.

Chen Ge returned to the Haunted House to move the recorder, hammer, and comic into his backpack before calling Gao Ru Xue. He planned to meet Gao Ru Xue that night, and perhaps he might discover a clue related to Jiujiang Medical University's underground morgue. The phone rang for several seconds, but no one answered. Chen Ge hung up and tried again.

I did promise to meet her tonight; did something happen to her?

There was still no answer. Chen Ge called for the third time. If there was still no answer, he would call He San and Gao Ru Xue's father.

Did something really happen to her?

Chen Ge waited for nine seconds. Just as he wanted to give up, the call connected. He held his breath but did not say anything. He waited for the other person to speak first.

After one second, an unfamiliar female voice said, "Who are you?"

Chapter 358: Their Real Purpose

Chen Ge heard this female voice for the first time—it sounded almost the same age as Gao Ru Xue. The tone was laced with impatience and a very well-hidden resentment.

“I’m Gao Ru Xue’s friend. I wish to ask her out for dinner tonight,” Chen Ge said randomly. “Where is she?”

...

“She’s washing her hair. I’ll have her call you back later.”

If this was a normal date, then it’s understandable for Gao Ru Xue to prepare, but she was obviously in a panic, and asking me out is to resolve the issue with her roommate. Under this circumstances, with her personality, she wouldn’t have wasted time with her appearance. Chen Ge had a feeling something bad had happened to Gao Ru Xue.

Five minutes later, Gao Ru Xue’s call came. After picking up, the girl’s familiar voice said, “I’m preparing to leave now.”

The door closed, and she sounded like she was in the corridor. The amount of background noise had decreased. “Where shall we meet tonight?”

“Name a place, I’ll go there now.” Chen Ge relaxed slightly when he heard it was Gao Ru Xue’s voice. She sounded fine.

“Why don’t you come to our school? Come in from the western gate. It normally isn’t guarded. We’ll meet behind the old education block.” Gao Ru Xue seemed to have walked into the bathroom. “Come quick, I keep finding weird stuff about that two roommates.”

“What happened?”

“During school, Liu Xianxian collapsed on the table and slept for the whole afternoon.”

“She explored the underground building at night, so it’s normal for her to sleep in the day.” Chen Ge did not think there was any problem with that.

“If she was just sleeping, I wouldn’t have been so worried.” Gao Ru Xue lowered her voice, feeling very unsafe. “During the second class, my pen fell to the ground. Just as I bent down to pick it up, I accidentally saw that Liu Xianxian wasn’t actually sleeping; her eyes were wide open, staring at the mirror inside her drawer.”

“A mirror?”

“Yes, to be precise, she was looking at herself inside the mirror.” Gao Ru Xue reconstructed the situation for Chen Ge. “Her eyes were bloodshot like she hated the person in the mirror very much, but wasn’t it herself inside the mirror?”

“Your roommates sound like they are possessed. Why don’t you move back home for now?”

“Okay, but I’ll meet you at school first. I still have many things to inform you.”

After the call was ended, Chen Ge was about to leave when his phone rang again. This time, it was from Captain Yan. “Such a coincidence? At a time like this.”

Chen Ge accepted the call, and before he could say anything, he heard Captain Yan say, “Come to the police station now. I have something very important to tell you.”

“Now?”

“Yes! It’s very important!”

Captain Yan sounded very serious, so Chen Ge promised, “I’ll be there in a minute, but I have something else to do tonight. I cannot stay for long.”

“It won’t take too much of your time.”

After ending the call, Chen Ge called for a taxi to get to the police station. He called Gao Ru Xue on his way there, but this time, there was no answer.

Chen Ge reached that station at around 8 pm, and once he stepped through the door, he realized that the atmosphere was wrong. The officer on duty recognized Chen Ge and led him directly to Captain Yan's office. He pushed the door open, and other than Captain Yan, there were two other people in the room—Ol' Wei and Master Bai.

The door closed, and Captain Yan signaled for Chen Ge to take a seat. "Last night, the three of you entered the mountain to find the two kids, but when my men went into the mountains this morning, they followed your directions, but they could not find that village after searching for six hours."

"Last night, it was Master Bai who led the way. You will have to ask him about this." Coffin Village had been unlocked, and Chen Ge temporarily had no reason to return to the ghost village.

"My directions are correct." Master Bai leaned against the chair, feeling better after a good night's sleep. "I saw the pictures taken by the other officers. The route is correct; Coffin Village is just beyond that valley."

"But the problem is there is no village after crossing that valley." Captain Yan sat at the table. "What happened to the three of you last night?"

"I cannot remember clearly, but there is indeed a village," Ol' Wei said with his head lowered. He had done a good deed, but he looked so despondent.

"The children have been saved. There's no rush to find that village." Chen Ge stood to the side. He did not even sit because he wanted to leave as soon as possible.

"If it was just that, then we could have investigated slowly, but the issue is..." Captain Yan took out an evidence bag from his drawer; it had a gun inside it. "Ol' Wei's gun had a shot missing. According to ballistics, the gun was used last night, but Ol' Wei has no memory of it. Do you know what this means?"

Chen Ge shook his head. He understood it was Ol' Wei who fired the gun, but as for why he fired and what happened then, Chen Ge had no idea.

"Ol' Wei is an experienced officer; something must have been intense to make him shoot the gun! Did you guys encounter such danger last night?" Captain Yan kept his eyes on Chen Ge, waiting for him to answer.

Chen Ge glanced at Master Bai and said, "No."

Hearing him, Master Bai's tightened fists slowly relaxed.

"Then do you have any memory of Ol' Wei firing this gun?"

"I did hear the gunshot when I was at the village, but at the time, I wasn't with Ol' Wei and Master Bai."

"The gun is the most important to an officer; it cannot be touched by outsiders. Now, we can confirm the gun was shot once. Whether the shooter was Ol' Wei or not, this is serious business. If you have any clues, you have to tell us." Captain Yan looked at Ol' Wei, who had his face lowered, and sighed. "The doctor said that Ol' Wei is suffering from temporary memory loss due to trauma, but no matter what, I'll get to the bottom of this."

"Understood." Chen Ge nodded, and after some hesitation, he added, "Captain Yan, Jiujiang's Children's Home's Doctor Chen was also at the village. He had been following us. This might be related to him."

"A BOLO ¹ is out on the man. The result should be coming back soon."

As he said so, Captain Yan rummaged through the drawer, and seconds later, he took out a map with pictures pasted on it. "Actually, there's a second reason I called for you."

Chen Ge examined the map, and his pupils narrowed. There had been five eye-gauging cases around Jiujiang over the past two days, and if the crime scenes were all joined together, they aligned with New Century Park at the center!

"All the cases are surrounding my Haunted House? Is this some kind of ritual by the ghost stories society?"

Chapter 359 - The Phone

Chapter 359: The Phone

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge had run into two ghost stories society's members at Coffin Village. This meant that one last member remained in Jiujiang to toy with the police. Initially, Chen Ge thought the cases were related to Coffin Village, but it looked like the society's real target was him all along.

Zhang Ya and Xu Yin were both asleep, so the only Specter Chen Ge had left was the Lesser Red Specter Yan Danian, but technically speaking, Uncle Yan could only use support skills. The society realized my limit at Coffin Village. They now know that Zhang Ya is asleep; this situation is very bad for me.

Chen Ge looked at the map on the table silently. The situation was bad for him, but it was worse for the ghost stories society. Wu Fei had been killed by the ghost inside the door, but the black phone did not show that he had died. This was probably due to the detail where the ghost appeared to be quite excited after she picked up the black robes that Wu Fei wore.

After some consideration, Chen Ge suspected that Wu Fei had hidden a part of his consciousness on a scapegoat and then placed that scapegoat somewhere else. The female ghost was so happy after she found the black robe, which meant that the robe was hiding something important. If it was a scapegoat then, falling into the hands of that female ghost would be a fate worse than death for Wu Fei.

The society's plan at Coffin Village had failed completely, and they had lost a member. There were two members left. One of them was under great investigation by the police, and the other had gotten into a fierce fight with Doctor Chen at Coffin Village. Chen Ge knew that the days of the ghost stories society were numbered, but he was afraid that they might do something drastic when cornered. After all, these were crazies; they would do anything.

"Five murders surrounding New Century Park, this isn't an accident.

You might be their next target.” Captain Yan put the map aside. “We’ve found the killer and will capture him in about three days. During this time, you’d better not stay at the park at night.”

“Understood.” Chen Ge realized this was the real reason Captain Yan called him to the station—he wanted to protect him. Captain Yan asked Chen Ge some questions, and during that process, the captain kept releasing information on the cases consciously and subconsciously. Chen Ge remembered these details in his heart. Captain Yan allowed him to leave at 9 pm.

When he exited the station, Chen Ge took out his phone; there was no record of a call or message from Gao Ru Xue.

I’ve made her wait for so long, but she didn’t once call me. Did something happen to her?

Chen Ge felt like the Gao Ru Xue on the phone had acted rather weird. He hopped into the taxi and rushed to Jiujiang Medical University. Inside the cab, Chen Ge called Gao Ru Xue. Similar to before, there was no answer the first two times, and it connected on the third ring. “Sorry to keep you waiting.”

“I’m at the old education block. Come quick, my roommates are getting more and more abnormal.” Gao Ru Xue’s voice sounded urgent like she was running to find a place to hide.

“If you’re running into any danger, I advise you call the police immediately. The police will be able to do more for you than me.” Chen Ge urged the driver to drive faster.

“My worry is my roommates are being possessed. Do you think the police will believe that? My two roommates are not who they were.” Gao Ru Xue seemed to know many things, which was obvious from her tone.

“Put the police on speed dial and go somewhere crowded. I’ll be there in half an hour.”

After hanging up, Chen Ge grabbed the phone and started to think. Whenever I call Gao Ru Xue, it’ll be put through on the third ring. Also, on the phone, she was somewhere quiet. If she was in danger, why would she purposely go somewhere quiet?

Sitting inside the taxi, Chen Ge called Doctor Gao and He San.

...

At 9:30 pm, Gao Ru Xue looked at the self-study room that had become increasingly deserted, and she called Chen Ge one more time. "I'm sorry, but the number you're calling is currently busy..."

This was the twenty-third time that she had called Chen Ge, but every time the line was busy. Did something happen to him?

Gao Ru Xue borrowed her friend's phone to make the call, but there was still no answer, like the number was cursed.

"Last night, when the three shadows came in, I called everyone, and only Chen Ge's reply was different, but how come it has turned around completely today? Everyone else's number is fine, but only his is busy. Who is he on the phone with?" Gao Ru Xue was spacing out holding the phone when someone patted her on her shoulder.

"Xiao Xue, let's go. It's time to go back to the bedroom." Liu Xianxian called Gao Ru Xue to come with her. She looked just like normal, be it her mannerisms or actions; even her tone and habits were perfect. However, this was the thing that scared Gao Ru Xue the most. She knew for a fact that this was not her roommate.

"You can go first. I still want to stay back to study." Gao Ru Xue pocketed her phone and flipped through the book on the table.

"You look so distracted lately. You really have a new boyfriend, don't you?" Liu Xianxian sidled up to Gao Ru Xue, a familiar action—even the joke was similar to how the girl would do it normally. Her best friend sat beside her, but when Liu Xianxian neared Gao Ru Xue, her body froze involuntarily.

"Then, go back to the bedroom when you're done studying. I'll go back first." Liu Xianxian grabbed her book and left. When she disappeared from the room, Gao Ru Xue sighed in relief.

"I cannot stay at the bedroom tonight." Gao Ru Xue took out her phone to call Doctor Gao. "Dad, are you home tonight? I want to come home for the night."

"I'm still at the hospital. I'll probably reach home at 12. Why are you suddenly coming home?"

"My roommates have been acting strange recently. I'll tell you all about it when I reach home."

“Okay.” Gao Ru Xue grabbed her book and water bottle as she left the room. She saw Liu Xianxian and Ma Xin talking at the stairs. It looked like they were waiting for her. Avoiding them, Gao Ru Xue took the stairs at the other end of the corridor. She did not return to the bedroom but hailed a taxi to head home.

This is weird, how come only Chen Ge’s number is unavailable? Gao Ru Xue took out her phone and called Chen Ge for the twenty-fourth time.

“I’m sorry, but the number you’re calling is currently busy...”

Chapter 360: Open the Door

There's still no answer. Never mind, I'll leave school for now.

A weird feeling was crawling out of Gao Ru Xue's heart. She was very nervous and saw everything as suspicious. "Sir, will you drive faster? I'm in a hurry."

...

The enclosed space caused Gao Ru Xue's breath to come short. She rolled the window down, and the wind tussled her hair. There were crowds outside milling about the street, but she did not feel one bit comforted; she kept feeling like someone was watching her from somewhere.

"You're a student at Jiujiang's Medical University, right? Better not go out alone at night, it's rather chaotic lately." The driver held the steering wheel and said, "There have been quite a number of murders around the area recently, and the victims were found in poor state. I hear their eyes were all gouged out. I'm not trying to scare you, but before the killer is caught, you'd better stay in your school dormitory at night."

The driver probably meant well, but it sounded different to Gao Ru Xue's ears. She could not stop her mind from wandering. Murders? Multiple murders? Why would he ask me to go back to the dormitory? Is he the killer?

In Gao Ru Xue's eyes, the driver's normal face turned dark, and his every movement seemed to be hiding some sinister intention. Gao Ru Xue did not reply as she grabbed her phone and turned to look out the window. However, she would surreptitiously glance at the driver once in a while.

Twenty minutes later, the taxi arrived at Xi Xia Hu Residence. Doctor Gao had bought a home here two years ago. After paying the fare, Gao Ru Xue got out of the car quickly. It was about ten pm, and there were not that many people around the area. Xi Xia Hu Residence could be considered a silk-stocking district at Jiujiang. The environment was nice, and Xi Xia Lake was just next to it. However, the place was rather isolated from the city.

After entering the residential area, Gao Ru Xue moved forward with her head lowered. The streetlight released pale light, and she did not dare look into the forest to the side because the green looked rather creepy at night.

Damn, I left my book and water bottle in the taxi.

She had left in such a hurry that she had accidentally left her stuff in the taxi. The water bottle was fine, but she needed that textbook for her class. Thinking about that, Gao Ru Xue felt more agitated. The taxi had already left, so it was too late for her to go and grab it.

She glanced at the time on her phone. It was about ten pm, and the residential area was practically abandoned. However, the lights of the building faraway was still on, which gave Gao Ru Xue some semblance of comfort. Xi Xia Hu had its own garden. Crossing through it, Gao Ru Xue came to the third building. Her home was on the 13th floor of the third building.

It sure is quiet tonight.

After entering the corridor, Gao Ru Xue's exposed arms felt cold. She clapped, and after the voice-activated lights came on, she did not move forward. Compared to before, nothing seemed to have changed, but Gao Ru Xue just felt something was not right.

The words that the driver had told her inside the car kept flashing through her mind. Murder, eye-gouging, they were like a rope slowly tightened around her neck. Is that driver the killer?

His tone was extremely weird. The serial murders happened across town, which means that the killer had to be able to move around town quickly. They have to have access to easy transport, so it's not impossible for the killer to be a taxi driver. Did I just sit where a dead body once lay? Could the trunk be filled with bloodied murder weapons?

The more she thought about it, the more afraid she became. She would turn back to look every few steps, afraid that people might just appear behind her. She walked to the elevator and pressed the button. When the door opened, the voice-activated lights went out in unison. Darkness fell, and Gao Ru Xue's body froze. She saw a dark human shape walking out from the elevator!

Gao Ru Xue bumped into the man, and she realized he was wearing a raincoat. He did not apologize and strode quickly down the corridor. "A raincoat? But it's not raining."

The hood blocked the man's face from view. He was not tall, and the large raincoat covered his legs and shoes. The man left in a hurry, but Gao Ru Xue did not notice anything suspicious like blood on the raincoat.

Will it rain later tonight? Gao Ru Xue glanced at the weather forecast on her phone. There was a chance that it would rain later in the night. What a weird man.

Gao Ru Xue waited for the man to disappear around the corner before she got into the elevator. The lights were on in the corridor. She watched as the elevator doors closed, and an indescribable pressure surfaced. She felt like a hooked fish, having trouble even breathing.

Maybe I shouldn't take the elevator.

She reached out to stop the closing door and stepped out; she had a bad feeling standing inside the elevator. She opted for the stairs. She started to climb, but it felt like the stairs were never-ending. When she reached the sixth floor, she heard the door on the first floor open like someone else had entered the safety entrance.

Someone is following me?

The first thought that came into Gao Ru Xue's mind was the strange man in the raincoat. At the same time, the words by the driver also resurfaced.

Could the man be the serial killer? He just killed someone in his building?

Her face paled.

I've accidentally become one of the witnesses, so now he wanted to silence me?

Gao Ru Xue initially walked slowly so that she would not make too much noise, but with the pressure from fear, she started to run. I need to get back home as soon as possible!

Footsteps echoed from underneath her. It sounded like someone else was racing up the stairs as well!

The distance closed. Gao Ru Xue ran as fast as she could. Her home was on the 13th floor, and there was only a five-floor distance between them. She climbed to the 13th floor without catching her breath. Gao Ru Xue shoved the safety door open and staggered into the corridor. She rummaged through her pocket for the key. The echoes of the footsteps became clearer inside the stairwell; the man was just steps behind her!

Her fingers froze, and she had to try twice before she managed to push the key into the keyhole. She twisted the key to open the outer anti-theft door. The sound in the stairwell came closer; the person was probably only one floor away.

Quick!

Finally finding the key to the inner door, Gao Ru Xue pushed the key in, and the footsteps beside her ears turned into a running gait! The person had already reached the 13th floor!

The inner door was pushed open and Gao Ru Xue rushed in without closing the outer door. She turned to slam the door close. She leaned against the door and started gasping for air. "Finally, home."

She adjusted her breathing. Gao Ru Xue turned around and looked outside through the peephole. There was no one in the darkened corridor. All the room doors were locked, and only Gao Ru Xue's outer door was left half open.

He doesn't seem to have followed me.

Finally getting the chance to breathe, Gao Ru Xue turned on all the lights in the room without taking off her shoes. The light banished the darkness and relaxed her nervous tension.

...

The outer door is still open, but opening the inner door to close it is too dangerous. What if the person is hiding in a blind spot?

Closing the blinds, Gao Ru Xue picked up the fruit knife from the table. As a medical science student, she was familiar with the fatal spots on the human body. With the steel of the knife in her hand, she did not feel that nervous anymore. Sitting in the living room, Gao Ru Xue took out her phone to call Chen Ge. This was the twenty-fifth time that she had called Chen Ge's phone, and the line was still engaged.

Still busy? It's already ten pm. Gao Ru Xue looked at the messages on her phone. She tried many methods to contact Chen Ge, but there was no response.

Did something happen to him? The line is busy every time. No matter who he's calling, it wouldn't take that long to explain something, unless... Gao Ru Xue seemed to remember something. Unless he's on the phone with a ghost.

Gao Ru Xue understood the problem with her phone. The previous night, when her two roommates returned, they brought a 'friend' with them. At the time, she had used her phone to send other people SOS messages, and everyone's reply was 'look behind you'. Only Chen Ge's number was replying normally.

Last night, the shadow that lay behind me didn't seem able to change anything related to Chen Ge. It couldn't replace the messages from Chen Ge.

A thought crossed Gao Ru Xue's mind, and the phone slipped through her fingers and fell to the ground.

The ghost cannot change anything related to Chen Ge. It cannot mimic Chen Ge to give me a reply, so when I call Chen Ge, the number is constantly busy and cannot be connected.

In other words, during this period where I cannot contact Chen Ge, the thing is probably controlling my phone. If that is the case, when I used the phone to call my father earlier, the person who answered probably wasn't my actual father. It was the ghost pretending to be my father.

Cold sweat slid down Gao Ru Xue's face. She had purposely avoided her roommates and snuck home because she was afraid of an accident, but on the phone, she had told her 'father' that she would be staying at home for the night.

If her speculation was correct, the ghost already knew she was not at the dormitory but at her own home. Her eyes fixated on the phone on the ground; Gao Ru Xue did not dare to move. Suddenly, her body felt chilled.

Just as she was thinking, the screen of the phone lit up. Someone called her at a time like this. The phone vibrated on the cold floor. The sound unsettled her. After some hesitation, Gao Ru Xue bent down to pick it up. The caller was Doctor Gao!

Her finger danced between accepting and denying the call. Eventually, Gao Ru Xue chose to accept it.

"What's wrong? How come it took you so long to answer the call?" The familiar voice gave Gao Ru Xue a sense of security that she desperately needed at the time.

"My phone was on silent, so I didn't see it." Gao Ru Xue gave the reason that she had thought of earlier. She wanted to test out the person on the other end of the phone. When she wanted to ask something that would only be known between her and her father, the Doctor Gao on the phone said, "Don't go out now that you're home. It's been rather chaotic lately. I still have something to do at the hospital, so I'll be a bit late."

"Okay, I understand."

The call ended. The person on the other end of the phone seemed to know what she wanted to do and didn't give her the chance to ask any questions. It feels like something is observing my every move.

There was an urge in Gao Ru Xue's heart to grab the fruit knife to slash the phone screen. She took several deep breaths, and in the end, rationality won out. The phone is probably controlled by the ghost, and there's probably a murderer hiding outside the door. What should I do now?

This was the 13th floor, so it was impossible for her to escape through the window. She wanted to use the front door, but she could not be certain the murderer was not just beyond it. Even if the man had left, the corridor might not be safe.

If I use the phone to call the police, it might be the ghost that answers, and it might not be the police who come to save me. Maybe I should call out the window for help, but Xi Xia Hu has so few occupants. Never mind, this is the only method left I can try.

Gao Ru Xue walked to the window and pulled the curtain back to look out the window. It was only ten pm, but the residential area was completely dark. All the lights were off.

How could this be possible?

Only the streetlight reflecting off Xi Xia Lake gave off the little light.

Am I hallucinating?

Gao Ru Xue became more afraid. She initially wanted to cry for help, but something was obviously wrong with the residential area. The area was quiet, and a strange atmosphere was in the air.

Looking out the window, the strange feeling that Gao Ru Xue had felt inside the taxi returned. She felt as if everywhere was unsafe, like every corner was hiding some source of danger. She collected her gaze and turned to look at her neighbor's room. In her memory, her neighboring rooms were empty. The room on the left had its windows sealed shut, and the interior was empty. The room on the right had some dead potted plants on the windowsill.

Gao Ru Xue was rather disappointed. She looked upward to the right at the family on the 14th floor. At the edge of the window, there was a human face with the eyes gouged out looking back at her.

Gao Ru Xue staggered backward, and her back knocked into the cupboard.

A dead body? There's really a murder in this building? In the room just above me?

She grabbed the knife and used the point of the knife to lift the curtain up. She glanced at the room above her again, and the human face had disappeared. In its place was some laundry.

Did my eyes deceive me?

After some hesitation, Gao Ru Xue still picked up her phone to call the police. The police's reply was normal, but she just felt that something was not right.

Gao Ru Xue pulled on her hair. This feeling was similar to when she faced her roommate. The person was similar to how they were normally, but she just knew they were not them.

Everything is similar to normal, including father's voice, the police's answer, and the taxi driver, but how come I just feel like things are wrong? But what's wrong?

Gao Ru Xue called Chen Ge for the twenty-sixth time. The call was busy for two times before the synthetic voice replied. "I'm sorry, but the number you're calling is currently busy. Please try again after death... 1 "

Chapter 362: Where Are You?

Call again later?

Gao Ru Xue felt like she had heard incorrectly. The system voice did not sound like it had said that, but what else could it have said?

...

After hanging up, Gao Ru Xue looked at her pale face reflecting on the display. It was her own face, but it showed a different expression. I'm smiling?

Gao Ru Xue flung the phone to the sofa and stood in the middle of the empty room with her hands twisted together. Time ticked by, and Gao Ru Xue stood in that position by the window. She did not dare move, be it the bedroom or the bathroom, it just gave her an uncomfortable feeling.

The ghost also knows my location. Does this mean that my two roommates will be here soon?

Outside the window, the clouds were thick in the sky. There was no light at all, and it felt like it was about to rain. Father would normally be home by now.

Holding the knife, Gao Ru Xue glanced at the room above her. The laundry was still there. The tense nerves made her tired. She leaned against the window, and looking at the dark residential area outside, her heart started to race again.

The whole residential area was dark, and only her room had its lights on. She had switched them on due to fear. It was like walking through the jungle with a torch raised. The light would bring her a sense of security, but it also exposed her location. It's too obvious!

Just as Gao Ru Xue hesitated over turning off the light, she saw something flashed across the gate of the residential area. She turned to look, and Gao Ru Xue's heart raised. There was a foggy shape of a woman standing at the gate. It looked like her roommate. Why is she here?

Gao Ru Xue was fully focused on the gate when the phone left on the sofa rang!

The screen radiated a faded cold light, and the humming noise made her teeth chatter. She quickly ran to the sofa to pick up the phone. It was her roommate who was calling her.

Should I answer it or not? After some hesitation, Gao Ru Xue answered it. "Liu Xian?"

"It's already ten pm, why aren't you at the dormitory yet?" Liu Xianxian's voice came on the phone. "Where are you?"

"I'm outside. I don't think I'll be sleeping at the dormitory tonight."

"Be careful since you're alone! Lately, it's been dangerous around here. There's a mad killer going about killing people and gouging out their eyes." Liu Xianxian's voice sounded creepy.

"Okay, I know all that. If there's nothing else, I'll hang up now." Gao Ru Xue ended the call and ran back to the window with the phone. She looked at the gate, and the shadow had already disappeared. Did I imagine it?

Her eyes moved, and when she saw the area before her own apartment building, the color drained from her face. The shadow had moved to the entrance to her apartment building!

Was it the light that attracted it? Gao Ru Xue hid behind the curtain. Her body was ice-cold. Just as she thought about turning off the light again, the phone started to vibrate. She lowered her head to look. Again, it was still from Liu Xianxian. The two shadows were just downstairs, and this time, Gao Ru Xue would not answer the call no matter what.

She tossed the phone at the couch. She used the cushion to cover the phone, but the sound of vibration still made her panic. After ten seconds later, the call finally ended. Then, there was a message from Liu Xianxian. "The dormitory manager is asking about your location. The school rules have been quite tight recently, so you'd better come back to the dormitory."

Gao Ru Xue did not reply and switched the phone to silent. She had just changed the setting when the second message from Liu Xianxian came. “Xiao Xue, are you in some kind of trouble? Do you need me to come fetch you? Where are you now?”

The message on the phone looked normal—just her friends being worried of her safety. There did not seem to be any other meaning, but placed in Gao Ru Xue’s current situation, the meaning was completely different. There was a ghost standing at the entrance to her apartment building!

With trembling fingers, Gao Ru Xue turned the phone off. She pulled the curtain open a smidgen and saw that the shadow was still standing where it was. It’s that thing that’s calling me?

Gao Ru Xue kept her eyes on the shadow downstairs; she wanted to take a good look at who it was. She adjusted her position, and just as she was about to chance a glance, the phone in her palm, which was switched off, lit up again.

What’s happening?

As she stared at the phone, the messages from Liu Xianxian kept coming.

“Where are you? It’s very dangerous outside. Come back to school! Do you want us to come fetch you? Where are you?”

Gao Ru Xue did not reply, and Liu Xianxian sent about ten more messages before she stopped. Just as Gao Ru Xue thought it was finally over, the phone suddenly unlocked on its own and snapped a picture of Gao Ru Xue and the furniture beside her.

“So, you’re home! I’m coming to fetch you now!”

When the new message appeared, Gao Ru Xue’s scalp turned numb. She tried to switch the phone off with one hand as she glanced out the window. The shadow had disappeared. It felt like it had entered the building. The phone vibrated—a new message.

“I’m on the first floor.”

Gao Ru Xue looked outside the window. The third building was reflected on Xi Xia Lake, and the voice-activated lights on the first floor lit up.

“I’m now on the second floor.” Just as the second message was sent, the light on the second floor in the reflection of the lake came on. The thing was moving fast!

“I’m now on third floor!”

“I’m on 4th floor!”

“5th floor!”

“6th floor!”

The lights came up floor by floor. Gao Ru Xue gripped her hair. Reading the messages that appeared on screen, her eyes turned red. Her emotions were fraying.

“I’m on the 13th floor. Why has the anti-theft door to your home been left open?”

Footsteps echoed from the corridor; something was hurrying toward her! The sound from the outside and the message on the phone broke Gao Ru Xue. She used the fruit knife to stab repeatedly at the phone before smashing it at the ground. The phone cracked like everything had ended. All the lights in the corridor went off, and the residential area was swallowed by darkness again. There was silence in the corridor.

Did it leave?

Gao Ru Xue walked to the phone, and the broken display had one last message.

“I’m standing outside your door.”

BANG!

There was knocking at the door!

Initially, it was slow, but the force slowly picked up. Gao Ru Xue felt like the whole door was shaking; this was not something achievable with human strength.

The thing is here. It’s just outside the door!

The lights in the room flickered, and Gao Ru Xue’s expression twisted as the fear in her heart was brought to the surface. She stood beside the window, and her heart raced. There were only fear and terror in her eyes.

Pulling open the curtain, Gao Ru Xue pushed the window open. There was one last way she could escape this room. Gao Ru Xue's breath caught in her throat as she sat on the window of the 13th floor. Her hands grabbed the windowsill. Looking down, all the fear in her heart exploded at that moment.

Her body slowly leaned forward, and just as she was about to let go, the door was kicked open, and a man's voice appeared beside her ears.

“Xu Yin!”

Chapter 363 - I Knew from the Beginning

Chapter 363: I Knew from the Beginning

At 9:20 pm, Chen Ge's taxi arrived at Jiujiang's Medical University. After getting out, he realized that the university looked more dilapidated than he thought. "It's so quiet. It's not even 10, so why isn't there a student in sight?"

After paying the fare, Chen Ge took his backpack and entered the campus. When he passed the guardhouse, he glanced at the guard. The man did not stop him. I knew I don't look like a suspicious person.

There were many trees planted by the side of the road. The university cared about nature, but it was quite scary walking down the street alone.

...

Where is the old education block? All the buildings here look quite old.

Chen Ge called Gao Ru Xue again. "I've reached your campus. Where shall we meet?"

"Keep walking from the southern gate. You'll eventually come across an old building that's sealed. That's the old education block, hurry." Gao Ru Xue's voice was low like she did not want to be heard. "My roommates know I'm here. I can sense them following me. They've probably discovered me."

"I advise you call the police immediately. Where are you now?"

"Behind the education block. I gotta hang up; I can see them!" The call was ended by Gao Ru Xue.

Influenced by her tone, Chen Ge shivered involuntarily. He raised his head to look at the sky. It felt like it was going to rain soon. The sky looked dark. When he entered the gate, he could see some people, but as he entered the campus, the population slowly decreased to zero. Has there always been such an isolated place at the campus?

Chen Ge took out his phone to do some investigation. He realized that Jiujiang Medical School was the old campus. The school moved to a new site, leaving the forensic science department and a few other more unique specializations back at the old campus. No wonder there were so few people around.

The last side quest for School of Afterlife is at this place? Chen Ge was not thinking of accepting this quest. At Coffin Village, he had Xu Yin's help. Now he only had Uncle Yan. If he challenged a three-star scenario, it was simply asking for trouble.

"Once something goes wrong, we'll retreat instantly." Chen Ge placed the comic inside his pocket. "Uncle Yan's third power should be the key to why he's called a Lesser Red Specter. After I'm done with this, I should focus on fulfilling his dream."

The black phone gave Yan Danian a very good review, meaning that in spite of his appearance, the uncle had great potential. Chen Ge had wandered into the campus and arrived at the location Gao Ru Xue specified.

Two buildings sat in the dark, and there was a lock on the door. Standing at the entrance, the dark windows looked like eyes.

"I'm here," Chen Ge said into the phone.

"There's a storage room at the corner of the first floor, come get me! They're looking for me!" Gao Ru Xue kept her voice lowered, but the nervousness and terror was obvious. A weird emotion appeared within Chen Ge. He frowned slightly. He did not spot anything out of place, but something was not right.

Is it because I'm worried about Gao Ru Xue's safety? Chen Ge did not hang up the phone. He reached out to pull on the lock. It broke. Pushing the door open, Chen Ge stepped in. There was no trace of light inside the building, and the closed classroom doors looked rather scary.

Ever since leaving Mu Yang High School and Western Jiujiang's Private Academy, I've not come across any scary classrooms again, but I started to panic after stepping into this place. Is it because something scary is hiding here? Could this be related to the mission at the underground morgue? Chen Ge stopped at the door and placed his phone next to his ears to facilitate communication with Gao Ru Xue.

"The corner of the first floor. You have to be careful, my two roommates..." Gao Ru Xue suddenly stopped talking. There was the sound of a door opening from the other end of the phone. The sound moved closer to Gao Ru Xue, and it caused Chen Ge's heart to race like he was experiencing the terror himself.

The corner of the first floor? Or should I go downstairs? Chen Ge did not move, but the tape recorder in his backpack turned on itself to create white noise. "Xu Yin?"

Xu Yin finally gave Chen Ge some response after sleeping for one whole night and day after the adventure at Coffin Village. Normally, Xu Yin would only appear after Chen Ge turned on the recorder, but this time, he found Chen Ge on his own. "The breakthrough has been successful?"

Baleful Specters that were below Red Specter normally would not leave their item of possession. Their movement was limited.

"Is Xu Yin trying to tell me something?" There was a muddled voice. Chen Ge tried to listen for a long time before he understood Xu Yin's meaning. The sound on the phone kept approaching, and it sounded dangerous. Technically speaking, Chen Ge should have been influenced to be nervous, anxious, but he hugged the recorder with an unknown smile on his face. Fear did not have the chance to appear before it was overwhelmed by joy. For Chen Ge, there was nothing better than the news of Xu Yin's recovery.

"Chen Ge! Come quick! They've discovered me!" Gao Ru Xue screamed on the phone. She had already been discovered, so she screamed loudly for help. Footsteps came from the phone, but weirdly enough, the building was quiet.

Chen Ge took a deep breath after shoving the recorder into his pocket. He put on a serious expression and shouted into the phone, "Just hang on a little longer! I'll be there in a minute!"

He took out the hammer, ran to the corner of the stairs, and kicked down the door that was not locked. There was no light on the first floor, but with the aid of his Yin Yang Vision, Chen Ge saw three shadows running on the other side of the corridor. "Gao Ru Xue!"

Chen Ge ran forward with the hammer. While he was running, he felt his body temperature drop, and a cold presence surrounded him. However, out of his trust in Xu Yin, he pressed forward. When he chased the shadows until the stairs that led to the second floor underground, Xu Yin warned him to stay put.

There's some problem with this floor? Chen Ge stopped moving and started to move back. Several seconds later, something scary happened.

Just at the corner, three shadows covered in blood poked their heads out! The three of them were working together, and they had been waiting for Chen Ge!

Chen Ge looked ahead. "Almost ran into your trap. Let me guess, your real trap is just ahead?"

The three shadows walked out from the corner and made the corridor turned colder. Their movement was slightly awkward like they were dead people.

"Your guess is correct, but you've missed the perfect opportunity to save your life." The voice came from the phone. It was filled with venom and resentment.

"You're not Gao Ru Xue?" Chen Ge placed the phone beside his ears but did not show much fear.

"Isn't it too late for you to discover that now?" Gao Ru Xue's voice turned shrill and sharp.

"Actually, when you called me this morning at 6 am, I knew you're not Gao Ru Xue." Chen Ge looked relaxed. "At the time, I called He San first, asking him why he called me. Not long after he hung up, you called. You told me other than my number, all the other numbers cannot be reached. However, I checked my phone history, and between 1 am to 3 am, both you and He San contacted me!

"If you were telling the truth, how did He San find out about this?

"Therefore, the answer is simple—it was you all along! You tried to trick me last night, but my phone wasn't in the service area. You couldn't reach me no matter what, so the plan had to be delayed to tonight!

"There's also one very important point. If you really did experience something this scary, you would have asked to meet me in the morning, but not only did you not do that, you even asked for me to meet you at night!

"I've been curious, why did you insist on meeting at night? It was since then that I was eighty percent certain you're not Gao Ru Xue!"

With a smile, Chen Ge pressed the play button on the recorder. “I knew I’ve been talking to a ghost from the very beginning. I played along with your trick because I’ve been looking for you as well!”

Chapter 364 - Missing a Heart

Chapter 364: Missing a Heart

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

With the sound of white noise, an extremely cold presence radiated from Chen Ge. The blood dripped, and in the dark, a dark red arm grabbed Chen Ge's phone. The blood vessels grew to envelope the machine, and the Gao Ru Xue on the phone screamed from sheer pain.

"Is it painful?" The familiar voice echoed beside Chen Ge's ear, and the red Xu Yin walked out from the shadows. Without the order from Chen Ge, Xu Yin rushed at the three shadows down the corridor. His voice seemed to possess a powerful spell; whenever he spoke, the three shadows would pause, like their minds were seriously affected. Is this the new power Xu Yin gained after becoming a Red Specter? His voice can affect other ghosts?

...

Chen Ge held the cold phone. After the phone was cleaned by Xu Yin, Chen Ge escaped the influence of the phone. The world in his eyes returned to normal, and the fear in his heart gradually calmed down. Looking at the phone in his hand, Chen Ge started to get worried about the safety of that phone spirit. It wouldn't die just like that, right? Xu Yin is good, but he's too reckless. This phone spirit can heighten the fear in people's heart and even take over their phone, isn't that the perfect addition to my Haunted House?

There were going to be more people who would be like that Brother Wong. There were guides and pictures of the Haunted House's low-level scenarios online. Even though visitors were not allowed to use cameras inside the Haunted House, many of them still refused to listen. Chen Ge was one person; he had no time nor the right to stop these visitors. But with the aid of the phone spirit, things would be a lot easier.

It should still be alive. Even though they were enemy, Chen Ge worried about the phone spirit. He gave himself a like for his kindness. People like myself who are so kind to others will often ignore themselves. That is not good. Perhaps I should learn to be more selfish.

The result of the battle in the corridor was obvious. However, the scene was rather bloody. Chen Ge looked at Xu Yin tearing the ghosts apart coldly as he thought about something else. The phone spirit purposely led me here but didn't set a powerful trap. Looks like the society's real concern is the door at the Haunted House. They didn't want to kill me, but of course, that could be because their power has been greatly decreased, and they didn't have that many people left to spare.

Five murders surrounded New Century Park—the society's target had been the door at the haunted House since the very beginning. They seem to be planning some kind of special ritual. Luring me away is because they're afraid I might disrupt their ritual?

Chen Ge was not sure about anything else, but he had full faith in his ability to create chaos. The thing that they don't want to let me see, I'll have to see it.

Chen Ge called Xu Yin's name as he prepared to return to New Century Park. He called several times, but Xu Yin showed no response. After swallowing the three ghosts, Xu Yin stood at the corner of the stairs like he was in confrontation with something. Wounds started to form on his body.

Once he got near, Chen Ge also realized something was wrong.

The underground first floor and second floor were separated by a steel door, but the lock on the door was forced open. Cold wind kept coming from underground, and there were several wet footprints on the stairs. Squatting down, Chen Ge used his finger to touch the stain before sniffing it.

"Formalin?" Chen Ge had no idea how many floors there were in total, and he did not want to create trouble for himself. "Xu Yin, let's go."

There was something underground that made Xu Yin feel threatened. This was not good news for Chen Ge. He called several times before Xu Yin turned. When he faced Chen Ge, his expression was more relaxed, and he did not seem to be in as much pain as before. This was the first time Chen Ge had seen Xu Yin closely after he transformed into Red Specter.

Blood oozed from his wounds to knit together with the bloody shirt. However, one thing that confused Chen Ge was that the blood seemed to move away from the spot where Xu Yin's heart would sit. The shirt had a conspicuous spot around his heart that was not dyed red.

“Why is there a lack of change around the heart?” Chen Ge looked at Xu Yin. He inspected the black phone, but there was no change to Xu Yin’s tab. Chen Ge could not even tell whether Xu Yin counted as Red Specter or not.

“This is different from Zhang Ya. When she first appeared, she was already in a full red costume. Is there a second trigger to becoming a Red Specter?” Chen Ge tried to communicate with Xu Yin, but the man was even more confused than Chen Ge.

“Could it be related to the door? The society only used several days to make Xiong Qing into a Red Specter. Can only the black blood found behind the door make a ghost into Red Specter? Then how did Zhang Ya become a Red Specter?”

Chen Ge realized he still knew too little about that world. After Xu Yin returned to the tape, he ran out of the building. The coldness surrounding his body had dissipated. Chen Ge took out his phone to call Gao Ru Xue. His phone had returned to normal, but Gao Ru Xue’s number was still busy.

“The society used Gao Ru Xue’s name to lure me to the campus, so they definitely wouldn’t let Gao Ru Xue meet up with me.” The phone spirit could affect people’s emotions. Worried about Gao Ru Xue’s safety, Chen Ge called Doctor Gao directly. Without the influence of the phone spirit, Chen Ge managed to successfully reach the real Doctor Gao. He told him what might happen to Gao Ru Xue.

When he heard his daughter might have been targeted by a group of mad killers, Doctor Gao dropped everything. He called the police and the school. The counsellors found Gao Ru Xue’s roommates, but they had no idea where she was either. They said that Gao Ru Xue had looked disturbed that day, and it might be related to a new boyfriend.

At about 10 pm, one of the guards provided some valuable information. About half an hour ago, a kind-hearted taxi driver came to the school gate to return a water bottle and a textbook with Gao Ru Xue’s name. The driver said that the girl left in such a hurry that she forgot her bottle and book. He had no idea which block she stayed in, so he could only return to the school and hope that the guard would return the girl her stuff.

The driver’s kindness revealed an important detail—Gao Ru Xue was home. Chen Ge got the address from Doctor Gao, and he quickly called a taxi to get to Xi Xia Hu. The area was nice but rather isolated.

After getting out of the car, Chen Ge kept the phone on to communicate with Doctor Gao as he ran to the building where Gao Ru Xue stayed.

Chapter 365: Raincoat

At 10 pm, Chen Ge arrived at the block where Doctor Gao's family stayed. Looking up, he saw one of the windows had their light on, like all the lights in the home had been switched on. Should be that room.

The windows were closed, and there was a woman standing behind the curtain. She looked nervous and kept opening the curtains to look downstairs. "Gao Ru Xue?"

...

The girl also saw Chen Ge, but she did not show joy or surprise but a face filled with fear like she just saw something scary.

Looks like she's still under the phone spirit's influence.

When someone reached the threshold of fear, they would faint—that was the human body's inherent protective system. However, the fear created by the phone spirit was different. The fear came in levels to slowly tormented the victim, pushing them slowly toward the edge of mental breakdown. Under such circumstances, the victim might be pushed to do something extremely irrational.

"Don't do anything stupid!" Chen Ge rushed into the corridor and pushed on the elevator button, but the elevator stopped at the 13th floor and refused to budge. Given no other choice, he had to use the stairs. After completing so many missions, compared to logic and bravery, the biggest improvement to his body was his physical condition.

He activated the recorder and grabbed the hammer. He was not afraid of disturbing the other tenants and charged upstairs.

He moved fast!

The voice-activated light came on for each floor as Chen Ge ran to the 13th floor. There was only one anti-theft door that was open on the quiet corridor. "Found it!"

Chen Ge rushed to the door and called Gao Ru Xue's name. There was no reply coming from within, but he heard Gao Ru Xue's moan of pain and something being smashed. The girl that was normally calm and collected was like a madwoman. Chen Ge did not dare waste any more time. He used the hammer to smash the inner door open.

The blood vessels on the groove moved, and Chen Ge had no idea how many times he smashed at the door before the lock was smashed away. Chen Ge rushed into the room, and the first thing he saw was Gao Ru Xue leaning out the window.

The scarier thing was that there was a very thin boy sitting on Gao Ru Xue's head. He hugged her head and used his body to cover her ears, his hands clamped over her eyes.

"Xu Yin!" Chen Ge's shout echoed through many floors, and all the light in the room was extinguished in that moment. Air seemed to freeze as a bloody shadow charged at Gao Ru Xue!

The boy on top of Gao Ru Xue's head showed extreme fear when he saw Xu Yin and released his grasp without hesitation and disappeared. Gao Ru Xue, who returned normal, had not recovered when he saw a Red Specter with blood dripping charging at her. She wanted to scream, but there was no voice in her throat. Her arms weakened, and her body fell backward.

"Hold onto me!" The familiar voice appeared again. Gao Ru Xue's pupils started to focus. The red banshee that she had seen earlier had disappeared, and only Chen Ge was grabbing her arm. The lights went off, and staring at the man in the dark, Gao Ru Xue's mind started to collect its thought.

With one leg on the windowsill, Chen Ge tried his best to pull Gao Ru Xue up. Looking at the shocked Gao Ru Xue, Chen Ge's heart was also racing. "Thankfully, the outside door was left open. If that door was locked, I wouldn't have been able to get in so quickly."

Collapsing to the ground, Chen Ge was still worried about Gao Ru Xue. He dragged her to the sofa. "You're fine now. Get some rest, I'll go call Doctor Gao."

Ten minutes later, the lights in the room came on, and there were footsteps coming from the corridor. Chen Ge raised his head to see Doctor Gao, who looked different from his normal image. His usual confidence and maturity were gone. Gasping for air, his eyes were filled with concern.

“Xiao Xue.” Kneeling by the sofa, Doctor Gao grabbed Gao Ru Xue’s hands, and the girl finally showed her vulnerable side. Silently putting the hammer back into his backpack, Chen Ge picked up the phone that Gao Ru Xue had dropped and walked out the door alone.

It was not over yet. He had to get that phone spirit no matter what!

Specters that are not Red Specter cannot expose themselves too long outside in the world; they have to attach themselves to something. That phone spirit won’t have gotten far.

Chen Ge did not chase blindly. His mind was clear. When I entered building, the elevator did not budge from the thirteenth floor. At the time, the phone spirit was on Gao Ru Xue’s head, suppressing her senses, so the one inside the elevator has to be another person or a ghost.

Someone was controlling the phone spirit, and said person should have been the one stopping the elevator from moving.

If the plan was to lure Gao Ru Xue away, there was no need to do this because he has no reason to kill Gao Ru Xue. After the plan failed, the best solution is to escape—doing more than that will only expose himself. So, why did he change the plan to kill Gao Ru Xue?

There were many different answers in Chen Ge’s mind, but there was only one that was most possible—Gao Ru Xue had accidentally seen the killer. To not let any witnesses survive, the person changed his intention to kill Gao Ru Xue.

The person behind the phone spirit lured me out of New Century Park and then lured Gao Ru Xue home. The culprit should be from the ghost stories society. Chen Ge leaned against the wall and looked out the window. All the clues started to line up. After tonight, they should only be the only member left.

Chen Ge returned to the room and had Doctor Gao pull up the surveillance of the thirteenth floor. He squatted down beside the sofa and asked, after Doctor Gao left, “Did you run into anyone weird on the way home?”

“Weird people?” Gao Ru Xue thought about it. “The driver who drove me home was weird. He kept telling me about those murders.”

“Who else other than him?” Gao Ru Xue had been influenced by the phone spirit, so she would have thought the worst of everyone.

After some thought, Gao Ru Xue suddenly said, "When I wanted to take the elevator earlier, someone wearing an extra-large raincoat was leaving the elevator. I bumped into him."

"Raincoat?" Chen Ge was interested. "Did you managed to see his face?"

"No, the person was completely hidden inside the raincoat." Gao Ru Xue hesitated before saying, "After he left the elevator, for some reason, I felt fearful of the elevator. I was afraid I might get trapped inside, so I took the stairs, but when I reached the sixth floor, the safety door on the first floor was pushed open, and someone began to chase me."

"I was so scared that when I got home that I forgot to close the anti-theft door." Gao Ru Xue was still shaking, thinking about what happened then.

"Your choice was correct. The person trailing you had malicious intent." The phone spirit amplified the fear in Gao Ru Xue's heart to cause her to experience various illusions. No matter the situation, she would imagine it in the worst scenario, but that might have been the reason she was saved. ten minutes later, Chen Ge received the call from Doctor Gao, calling him to the building's surveillance room.

...

Chen Ge was worried about leaving Gao Ru Xue alone in the room in her current state, so he carried her in his arms as he moved downstairs. They entered the surveillance room where Doctor Gao and two security guards were stationed before the computers.

"Any discoveries?"

"Take a look at this." Doctor Gao had the guard replay the footage, and they saw something hair-raising. After Gao Ru Xue entered the safety door, a person wearing a large dark-colored raincoat followed behind her. He tailed Gao Ru Xue closely like her shadow.

In the next screen, Gao Ru Xue had already arrived on the 13th floor. She raced to her home and searched for the house key with her hands shaking. Even through the screen, one could sense her fear. The man in raincoat slowly crept up on her. When he appeared on the 13th floor, Gao Ru Xue was still fiddling with the door.

He picked up speed, and during that process, the wind blew the sleeve off. It could be seen clearly on the screen that he was holding a uniquely-shaped metal device that was covered in blood.

The distance between the two closed. When there was less than ten meters between them, Gao Ru Xue finally got the inner door open and ran into the room. The door was slammed shut, and the corridor became quiet again.

However, the man in the raincoat did not leave. He stopped at the door to Gao Ru Xue's room and slowly squatted down, hiding in the blind spot. If Gao Ru Xue thought the man had left and opened the door, the consequences would have been unimaginable. The time continued to move, but the screen felt like it had stopped. The killer kept himself frozen beside the door.

"Could this man be the culprit behind those eye-gauging cases? Is the sharp device in his sleeve the murder weapon?" When they were looking at the video, the surveillance room door was pushed open and in walked two policemen.

"We're from the station precinct. I'm sorry, but where is Doctor Gao?" Chen Ge was familiar with the man who asked the question. It was Lee Zheng, whom he had met at Fang Hwa Apartments, one of Captain Yan's trusted officers.

When Chen Ge recognized Lee Zheng so did Lee Zheng recognize Chen Ge. The next question out of Lee Zheng's lips was... "Has there been another murder?"

"Almost." Chen Ge did not think he would run into Lee Zheng, and he was surprised Lee Zheng seemed to know Doctor Gao quite well.

"If not for Chen Ge's help, my daughter would have been the victim." Doctor Gao was still coming down from his emotions. His daughter had almost died; anyone would need some time to process that worry.

Lee Zheng walked to the computer, and when he saw the person in the video, his expression changed. He immediately took out his phone to call a number. "Captain Yan! The suspect for the eye-gouging cases has been spotted at Xi Xia Hu residential area! It is similar to how the suspect was captured in other videos; the killer is wearing a dark-colored raincoat!"

After making the report, Lee Zheng asked for everyone's cooperation and to stay in the room. Ten minutes later, Captain Yan arrived with his men. After asking about the situation, he had the perimeter surrounded. "Don't worry, we have pinpointed the general location of the killer, there's no way he'll be escaping tonight!"

The commotion was much larger than Chen Ge had expected. With police cars and hounds, all the streets were sealed. It was obvious that this time the police had given it their all.

“The video shows that the suspect has left the third building in the last twenty minutes. Without the aid of a runaway car, the suspect should still be around the area.” Captain Yan marked down several points on the map on his phone and sent it to the officers’ phones. “Listen to me, comb the area inch by inch! Even if she’s buried three feet underground, we’ll find her tonight!”

With Captain Yan’s order, the officers started to move like a well-oiled machine. After Captain Yan finished his order, Chen Ge sidled up to the man. “Captain Yan, the killer is completely covered inside the raincoat, and none of you have seen him before. Will he be able to escape by just walking out the perimeter?”

“Even though we have not seen her face, it doesn’t mean that we cannot recognize her.” Captain Yan followed the movement of the teams closely and explained to Chen Ge, “This killer is cruel and cunning. Her targets are totally random, and there is no rhyme or reason. This is an incredibly hard case for the investigation team, but the most cunning fox will eventually fall to a better hunter. She thought she had committed the perfect crime, but she’s made some mistakes because she was in too much of a hurry to get the job done.

“We’ve pulled out more than one hundred cameras from the five crime scenes, and through digital reconstruction and the hair follicle and skin particles that we’ve collected at the crime scene, our criminal profiler has come up with this painting.”

Captain Yan pointed at his phone, and on the screen was an average-sized woman that was impossibly gorgeous.

“Not only a woman, an impossibly beautiful woman.” The walkie-talkie made a noise, and Captain Yan turned away from Chen Ge to focus on his work. What Captain Yan said repeated itself in Chen Ge’s mind; he had a good idea who the real killer was now.

She was related to the ghost stories society, was incredibly beautiful, and had a mental illness; there was only one woman who fit the criteria—Third Sick Hall’s Patient No. 6, Han Bao’er!

There was a comment on her patient’s report—Just how harsh must God be to make a woman as beautiful as this?

Other than Wang Shenglong, this woman was the last patient at Third Sick Hall. After removing her, the completion rate would go over ninety percent, and Chen Ge would get the hidden reward!

It should be her. Chen Ge moved back silently. The real reason for gouging out the eyes should be related to the door at my Haunted House. This means that Han Bao'er is a member of the society. As long as she is captured or removed, the society will only have one member left.

After confirming the identity of Han Bao'er, another detail could be confirmed.

No. 10 was taller than Han Bao'er and a man, so No. 10 isn't Han Bao'er! If this is true, then that familiar No. 10 should be the chairperson!

In less than one week, Chen Ge had used his own method of elimination to discover the chairperson.

Quite a good hider, but it's useless before me. After Han Bao'er is captured, it's your turn next!

Chapter 367 - The Rag Doll Before the Door

Chapter 367: The Rag Doll Before the Door

A dangerous glow appeared in Chen Ge's eyes. Since the chairperson gave him a sense of familiarity, it was all the more reason for him to expose the man. The five killings look like they're part of a ritual. The society has spent so long preparing this, so they should have started the moment after luring me out from the Haunted House.

The ghost stories society was afraid that Chen Ge might ruin the ceremony, and Cheng Ge was worried about his life. After all, at the time, Xu Yin had not awakened yet. He could only use those Specters that looked scary but were not at all harmful. But things had changed; Xu Yin had awakened. Even though his condition was a bit weird, he did raise Chen Ge's combat ability.

...

With the cooperation between Xu Yin and Yan Danian, they might stop the opponent's Red Specter. Then I will have the chance to stop the person behind all this.

Thinking about this, Chen Ge walked over to Captain Yan. "Captain Yan, I have an emergency back at the Haunted House."

"You'd better stay put until the killer is apprehended. Don't forget, you're one of their primary targets." Captain Yan did not agree to let Chen Ge go. He talked into the talkie-walkie, busy with the teams.

Returning to the chair, Chen Ge's eyes swept Captain Yan and the two officers in the room. Since he first met Captain Yan, he had never suspected this policeman that was filled with a sense of justice, but this time, his conviction swayed.

Two hours ago, it was Captain Yan who had personally called Chen Ge to come to the station. His reason was flawless, and he did sound like he wanted to protect Chen Ge, but the timing was too coincidental. It was about the time the society went to his Haunted House.

Looking further back, when the society wanted to snatch the door at Coffin Village, their preparation was so complete. They knew both Jiang Ling and Coffin Village very well, but where did they get that information?

Coffin Village was well hidden within the mountains, separated from the world. Those escaped villagers in Lin Guan Village had rarely communicated with the outside world as well. That was until half a year ago, when Jiang Ling's parents were poisoned, and this isolated village came under the police's radar. Captain Yan was also part of the investigation team then.

It was Captain Yan who entered Coffin Village, and it was his men that took care of Jiang Ling—that was undeniable truth. When Chen Ge saved Gu Feiyu at Fang Hwa Apartments, Captain Yan had also been there. It was Captain Yan who followed up on the cases from the Third Sick Hall. Now that he thought about it, there were reasons to suspect Captain Yan. Of course, these were merely suspicions. From how Chen Ge saw it, Captain Yan had no reason to do all this; it could just be a coincidence.

After Han Bao'er gets captured tonight, the society will only have the chairperson left.

Chen Ge made sure that Captain Yan was not looking at him when he sneaked out from the room and took a taxi back to New Century Park. Chen Ge arrived at the park at around 11 pm, and once he got out, he knew that something was wrong. There was a very light smell in the air. The stench was similar to the stench at the Third Sick Hall and Hai Ming Apartments but much lighter.

"It's that smell again." Chen Ge had noticed this smell when he first arrived at Hai Ming Apartments. At the time, he had asked Doctor Gao about it and realized that only he could notice this very weird smell. After greeting the park guard, Chen Ge entered the premises.

The more he walked through the park, the more he felt something was wrong. The attractions looked normal, but they looked suddenly old to Chen Ge, like they were covered in a layer of dust. Pressing the play button on the recorder, Chen Ge took out the hammer from his backpack as he approached his Haunted House.

The park was rather creepy at night, and Chen Ge moved slowly. This is weird. Could it be that the last member of the society hasn't left yet?

When he was thirty meters away from the Haunted House, the bushes nearby suddenly moved. Chen Ge narrowed his eyes and readied the hammer. Several seconds later, the leaves were pushed back, and a white cat poked out its small head. Its multi-colored eyes were obvious in the dark. When it saw Chen Ge, it jumped out and climbed onto Chen Ge's shoulders, feeling this was the safest place.

At least help the Haunted House when I'm away. All you do is flee.

Chen Ge touched the white cat's head. The cat looked spooked. Chen Ge continued to move forward until he reached the gate.

The lock is untouched, so the person probably didn't go through the front door.

He walked around the Haunted House and stopped at the toilet's window. Due to the incident with the mirror monster, the room had been sealed off, but now the window was open again.

He's here for that blood 'door'.

Chen Ge pulled the window opened and placed the cat on the windowsill. Seeing that the cat showed no response, Chen Ge jumped into the room.

Someone has moved the stuff in here.

The mop and brooms that should have been standing at the corner were on the ground, and the newly replaced toilet door was broken down. There were cracks on the mirror in the toilet, and the wooden boards on the toilet cubicle had all been removed.

Zhang Ya is sleeping inside my shadow, and Xu Yin has been with me. Other than them, who in this Haunted House can rival the people from the ghost stories society?

The chairperson would definitely have a Red Specter, and Chen Ge did not think that he had anyone at the Haunted House who could beat a Red Specter.

Did I miss something?

Chen Ge turned on the light in the toilet. He cleared away the trash and finally found something after removing all the boards. In front of the cubicle door sat a tattered rag doll.

It's her?

This scene was quite familiar. When Chen Ge did the Nightmare

Mission for the first time, it was also this rag doll that had lain before the mirror to stop the mirror monster from coming out. He picked up the rag doll. After his parents' disappearance, the police had only managed to find two things, the black phone and this rag doll that Chen Ge made when he was a child.

After completing the third Nightmare Mission, Chen Ge had confirmed the rag doll's identity. It was a soul that protected the Haunted House and New Century Park; she was Director Luo's daughter.

The rag doll had many wounds on its body. There was a gash about the size of a finger on the back, and the cotton inside had been roughly pulled out. Chen Ge pushed the cotton back into the body and placed the rag doll on the counter.

After doing all that, Chen Ge turned to look at the cubicle door. The rag doll had blocked the way, so this meant that the society had not been successful. Their target was this door, but from its appearance, nothing had changed with this blood door.

Chen Ge was still worried. He pulled the door open, and when he did, he noticed a faded smell of blood in the air. He lowered his head to look. There was a painting of a weird Specter behind the door. It gnashed its teeth and was carrying many torture devices. The strangest thing was that the creature had ten eyes, and all of them seemed to be looking at Chen Ge.

Chapter 368 - The Pen Spirit's Will

Chapter 368: The Pen Spirit's Will

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

An evil Specter?

When he saw the drawing, this was the term that appeared in Chen Ge's mind.

...

Why would the society draw an evil Specter behind the door? What is the meaning of this?

It was very quiet inside the Haunted House, and being stared at by ten eyes, even with Chen Ge's experience, he still felt uncomfortable.

There have been five murders near New Century Park, and all the victims' eyes have been gouged out. The monster here has ten eyes; could this be a coincidence?

Chen Ge slowly squatted down and used his finger tip to touch the board. The drawing had not been painted on the door but was more like inside the door. Chen Ge could not feel anything with his fingers.

Before departing for Coffin Village, Captain Yan told me some things about the case. All the victims were sinners, including thieves, robbers, and fugitives. Sinners are used for the ceremony, and the Specter is carrying multiple torture devices; it does symbolize punishment. The weirdest thing is that the drawing is facing inside, meaning it's facing the world behind the door.

Chen Ge scratched his head but could not understand the society's aim.

I should come back to look at midnight.

Chen Ge closed the door, and to prevent an accident from happening, he picked up the wooden boards and used them to seal up the cubicle again. After dealing with all that, Chen Ge picked up the torn rag doll and the white cat and walked to the props room. He switched the light on to find the needle and thread to repair the rag doll.

There were few males who knew needlework, but Chen Ge was an exception. When the Haunted House had not been making much money, most of the outfits had been handmade by Chen Ge. After poking his fingers several times, Chen Ge had become quite proficient at the job.

My parents were nicer to you than me when we were small. If they saw you in this state, they would be devastated.

Chen Ge patiently sealed up the wound on the rag doll's back. The rag doll might have looked rough and simple, but Chen Ge knew it was hiding a beautiful and pure soul. When he was half-way through, Chen Ge realized that there was a long and thin red nail hiding in the doll's sleeve, one that would not be discovered if one did not look closer.

Wait, isn't this the nail I brought back from the Third Sick Hall?

During that trial mission, Chen Ge had found many letters inside the dresser in a room. The dresser had not been touched in all those years, and the four corners were sealed up by these long nails. At the time, Chen Ge had thought that they were useful to stop the ghosts, so when he returned to grab his hammer, he had pulled the nails out and brought them back to the Haunted House.

There is a blood stain on the nail, perhaps it's from the killer. Tomorrow, I should call someone to test this.

Chen Ge pocketed the nail and continued his work. Time slowly passed, and the bored white cat started to play with the ball of thread. Eventually, its body was tangled up in the thread, and it started playing with it in the room. Chen Ge ignored the cat and focused on fixing the cuts on the doll.

There were two conspicuous cuts on the doll's body, one old and one new. The new wound had been left behind by the ghost stories society, and the old wound was across its neck, almost chopping the doll's head off. Touching the wound on the neck, Chen Ge thought back to an event that happened many years ago.

After making the rag doll, Chen Ge's parents had told him to keep the doll with him no matter where he went. Chen Ge had refused because it looked weird for a boy to go everywhere carrying a doll, but he did not get into an argument with his family over this.

Since he had lived at a Haunted House since he was young, Chen Ge had greater courage than most and had a more vibrant curiosity. His parents never limited him but only barred him from going to the eastern side of Jiujiang.

Chen Ge could not understand his parents' rule until that one time when the school arranged a trip for everyone to go the dam at the eastern side of Jiujiang to play. Initially, everything had been fine. At around three to four pm, Chen Ge had seen someone waving at him. The person had felt familiar and was calling his name. Chen Ge had told the teacher this, and with the teacher's accompaniment, they had walked down that small path.

He could see a red house at the end of the road, and there were kids playing weird games around the house. He could not remember anything beyond that. When he woke up by the side of the street with his fainted teacher, he had the wounded rag doll in his arms.

"It should be you who have saved me then too." Chen Ge touched the wound on the rag doll's neck, and now he understood many things. "Before now, you've been protecting me, but from now on, I shall be protecting all of you."

He placed the rag doll inside his pocket. Chen Ge grabbed the hammer and went to inspect all the scenarios.

Xiaoxiao's family was inside the Murder by Midnight scenario. They were not hurt. He pulled off the wooden boards and entered the Mu Yang High School scenario. Twenty-four mannequins sat quietly in the sealed classroom—none of them was missing. They looked just like real mannequins. He moved forward, and when he entered the female dormitory, the Pen Spirit, who was wrapped up by tape, gave Chen Ge a surprise.

There was a sentence on the piece of paper.

"The killer is carrying a dead body on his back and he calls her his wife! Help me take care of Wang Xin and avenge me!"

Chen Ge was surprised when he saw the 'will' left by the Pen Spirit. "You sure are a kind person. Even at a time like this, you still care about that friend of yours."

Chen Ge sighed in relief when he picked up the ballpoint pen and realized that the Pen Spirit was safe. He had a Pen Spirit that knew how to pen her own will; the chairperson definitely would not expect something like that.

The person is carrying a body, so it's confirmed that the person who intruded into my Haunted House is No. 10. He called the body on his back his wife. That is a crucial clue.

After inspecting all the scenarios, probably due to the limited time, the chairperson did not ruin the Haunted House. His main target was still the door inside the first-floor toilet. Realizing that the Haunted House was untouched, Chen Ge felt relieved. He returned to the toilet with all of his equipment, waiting for time to go by.

The door inside the Haunted House was a treasure for the society, but it was worthless for Chen Ge. He knew too little about the world behind the door. He guarded the door until 11:59 pm.

The white cat that was playing suddenly rushed into the toilet while gnashing its jaw. Chen Ge also felt the changes in the room. Just as the door was about to open, all the souls in the Haunted House reacted.

Chen Ge gripped the hammer and had his finger over the recorder, ready to call Xu Yin for help.

The seconds ticked by.

When it was midnight. The drawing that was inside the door appeared on the other side of the door. All ten eyes came to life. They did not look like drawing but ten actual eyes that could move.

As time continued to move, blood vessels appeared on the door, and the monster's expression turned twisted. The vessels crawled all over the monster. When they passed through the eyes, they would turn blood red, and that continued until the tenth eye. But no matter how long the blood vessels curled around the last eye, they could not dye it red.

Chen Ge got closer, and he realized that this last eye had been poked blind by something sharp.

Chapter 369 - I'm Also a Member of the Society

Chapter 369: I'm Also a Member of the Society

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

There's a long nail in the rag doll's sleeve, so she should be the one who did this.

The last eyeball was not dyed red, and the ghost stories society's ritual had been interrupted. It could not be considered successful, but it did not fail completely either. The blood vessels entered the Specter's body, making it more authentic, like it could jump out of the door at any moment.

...

After thirty seconds, there was a weird sound coming from inside the door. It sounded like a ball bouncing on the ground.

“A human skull?”

Chen Ge summoned Xu Yin and guarded the door with the hammer. If he had not just boarded up the cubicle, he could have been fighting the thing then. The sound came closer until it rammed into the door, causing the cubicle to shake slightly.

When the monster knocked into the door, nine eyes of the Specter painted on the door opened wide. A boy's scream escaped the door, and the bouncing ball quickly retreated. The sound disappeared, and the one minute ended. The Specter did not escape from the door. It appeared like it was forever stuck inside the door due to the one eye that had been poked blind. The blood door returned to normal like nothing ever happened.

The monster behind the door screamed loudly when it touched the door. The voice was filled with pain and terror. Looks like this Specter painted by the society is not to be messed with.

The drawing disappeared alongside the blood, but the memory was still fresh in Chen Ge's mind.

The Specter has the eyes of five sinners and carries tons of torture devices.

It looks scary and can force dark spirits away. How come it feel like a door guardian? Normal families will put up pictures of door guardians during New Year to protect the family. Is this the same purpose for the ghost stories society?

At Coffin Village, Wu Fei had once said that the door at Chen Ge's Haunted House was probably unoccupied. At the time, No. 10's reaction had been huge, like an unoccupied 'door' was extremely rare.

A weird painting to control a 'door'? That's too unrealistic, but the key to becoming the owner of a door should be inside the door.

Now that he thought about it, Chen Ge suspected that the painting was a way to protect the door. The door was the connection between the two worlds. To explore the world behind the door, first one had to guarantee the door's safety. That way, one could retreat instantly in case of danger.

To protect the door from outsiders, that should be one of the purposes of this painting. I'll need time to discover its other uses.

To ensure that the painting would not influence the daily operation of the Haunted House, Chen Ge used Xu Yin and Yan Danian to try it out. Neither of them reacted in any special way.

I still worry about this, I should come back at midnight tomorrow.

Chen Ge's initial attitude toward the door was to avoid it and seal it up, but after Zhang Ya charged into the door at the Third Sick Hall, his attitude toward the door had slowly changed.

If there's a chance, I should go look behind this door. Chen Ge then recalled Xu Yin and turned to look at his shadow. When Zhang Ya awakens, I should try to take a spin behind the door.

It was already midnight, but Chen Ge did not feel tired at all. He tried to sleep but could not. His mind was still on that phone spirit. He felt like it would be immensely helpful to have that spirit as a Haunted House employee. Letting it die alongside the society was such a waste.

Normal people tried their best to avoid Specters and ghosts, but Chen Ge was the complete opposite.

The phone spirit belongs to the ghost stories society, and technically speaking, I'm also a member. Even though they didn't admit it, that's not important.

Chen Ge suddenly realized this as the society was almost crumbling. The society had more than one door and had been hiding in the shadows of the city for so many years, so they should have collected many goodies. Taking this one step further, even if they did not leave behind anything physical, just the information they had on ghosts would be extremely beneficial to Chen Ge.

This is such a wealth of treasure!

The society, including its chairperson, would all be captured soon. As the sub member of the society, Chen Ge felt like it was time for him to step up. Carrying his bag, Chen Ge dragged the hammer back to Mu Yang High School. He entered the female dormitory and found the Pen Spirit.

“Don’t worry, I’m here. No one can hurt you.”

After consoling the Pen Spirit, Chen Ge used her power to determine Han Bao’er’s location. The successful rate of Pen Spirit’s prediction was fifty percent, and the prediction could not be beyond her power. These conditions made her ability rather weak.

However, that day, perhaps instigated by outside influence, after Chen Ge asked the question, she wrote down a very detailed address on the paper.

“Xi Xia Hu’s third building 23rd floor? The killer herself is a tenant at Xi Xia Hu?”

This was an important detail, and Chen Ge memorized the address on the paper. He took out his phone to call Captain Yan, but after a moment’s hesitation, he put the phone away.

Locking the Haunted House, Chen Ge left New Century Park.

If she has a Red Specter, then we’ll retreat and ask the police for help; if she only has normal ghosts, we’ll capture her alive and suck all the ghosts she has into the comic to be trained.

Chen Ge was hiding in the dark and had the element of surprise thanks to the Pen Spirit. Combined that with Xu Yin and Yan Danian, he had every advantage. The taxi arrived at Xi Xia Hu; the roadblock was still ongoing. To prevent the hammer in his bag from being confiscated, Chen Ge got out early.

The killer can be handed over to the police, but I need that phone spirit.

Chen Ge returned to the surveillance room. Captain Yan and his men had already left. Weirdly enough, Captain Yan did not ask about Chen Ge's location. It was unclear whether he was too busy or it had already become a habit.

After a long search, Chen Ge finally found Lee Zheng. He told him about the Pen Spirit's prediction and attached that with a long list of speculation. Lee Zheng listened to him with a frown. Chen Ge's analysis was completely unreliable. If this had been someone else, he would have asked them to leave.

However, Lee Zheng did not disregard Chen Ge's input. After all, the man was special and had a brilliant case clearing record. He seemed to be the kryptonite of sinners.

After some communication, Lee Zheng found the information for all the tenants on the 23rd floor, and with the accompaniment of the owner, they went up to said floor.

Chapter 370 - The Sickest Beauty

[2 in 1]

Chapter 370: The Sickest Beauty [2 in 1]

“When Gao Ru Xue wanted to take the elevator, she ran into the person wearing the raincoat leaving the building. That should be just a coincidence.”

The police’s investigation pressured this person in the raincoat greatly. Chen Ge tried to envision this from her perspective, and he believed that the killer should be trying to escape Xi Xia Hu to find a new hiding spot.

“For now, that cannot be confirmed. There’s also the possibility that the killer was tailing Gao Ru Xue.” Lee Zheng look at the camera inside the elevator. “We once suspected that the killer is a resident here because some of the cameras within the residential area were maliciously destroyed three days ago, and three days ago was exactly when the first murder was committed.”

...

After he said that, Lee Zheng glanced at Chen Ge with suspicion. The police had gathered many clues and pieces of information before they came to the suspicion that the killer might be a tenant at Xi Xia Hu, but Chen Ge had managed that alone without the aid of a team. Not only had he pinpointed Xi Xia Hu, he had even managed to provide the floor that the killer was staying at.

Honestly, if Lee Zheng was not familiar with Chen Ge, he would have suspected that Chen Ge was related to these murders. Exiting the elevator, the owner provided Chen Ge and Lee Zheng all the basic information of all the tenants on 23rd floor. Han Bao’er’s name was not on the list, and based on the owner’s memory, there were not any particular beautiful tenants on the 23rd floor.

“Chen Ge, could you be mistaken?”

When the police arrived at Xi Xia Hu, the first thing they did was seal up the third building, and they had investigated most of the tenants. Chen Ge honestly was not that convinced about the Pen Spirit’s prediction. After all, she only had a fifty percent chance to be correct.

After giving it some thought, Chen Ge turned around to ask the owner, “Are there any surveillance cameras on the 23rd floor?”

“The cameras above the 15th floor have been broken for a long time, and there’s hasn’t been free time for us to call people in to come fix them. The main reason though is because we’ve tried fixing them before, but weirdly enough, they kept getting destroyed. In the end, the management kinda left them be after a while.” The owner spoke very carefully. After all, this was their mistake. “Our residential area has three groups of patrolling guards, and there has been no record of incidents happening here.”

“None in the past doesn’t mean none in the future.” Chen Ge did not plan to argue with the owner. “Are you familiar with the tenants on the 23rd floor? Are there any suspicious tenants here?”

“Then have you received complaints like weird noises coming out from a certain room at night? Or some horrible, pungent smell?” Chen Ge fired off so many questions that Lee Zheng could not find an opening to chime in.

The owner thought about it and looked down at one of the doors at the end of the corridor. “We did receive a call from the tenant once. However, it was not to lodge a report but to ask for help.”

“Ask for help?” Both Chen Ge and Lee Zheng stopped moving.

“There’s a family on the 23rd floor that has serious domestic abuse issues, but we never once received a call from the principal parties. Normally, it’s the neighbors who called us when they couldn’t bear it any longer.” The owner led Chen Ge and Lee Zheng to the door at the end of the corridor. “This is it.”

According to the tenant list, the tenant staying there was a man by the name of Qiu Meng. He was an employed physical trainer at an established gym. “The person you’re looking for is not him. Qiu Meng is almost 1.9 meters tall. I’ve glanced at the person wearing the raincoat in the camera—at most, that person is 1.7 meters. They are definitely not the same person.”

“Open the door. We’ll take a look first before we come to a decision.” At a time like this, Chen Ge would not let go of any suspicion.

The owner seemed to be afraid of Qiu Ming. He knocked on the door rather unwillingly. “Is anyone in? We’re from the management.”

The room was very quiet. There was no reply.

Chen Ge touched Lee Zheng’s shoulder. “This family might be problematic. Why don’t you call your people? If they won’t open the door willingly, we’ll just knock it down.”

“That’s easier for you to say. Without any evidence, we have no right to trespass onto private property.” Lee Zheng thought about it and added, “At least we need permission from Captain Yan.”

While they were conversing, they suddenly heard footsteps coming from inside the room. Moments later, the door was pulled open, and a large, handsome man stood at the door. He had blurry, red eyes. He yawned. It looked like he had not had a good night’s sleep in days already.

“How can I help you?”

The owner forced a smile on his face and said rather abashedly, “A killer seems to have hidden himself inside our residential area, so the police would like to ask you some questions.”

“Ask me questions?” The man was confused. He slowly woke up. When he saw the police uniform that Lee Zheng was wearing, his gaze shifted slightly. “I’ve been sleeping at home. I don’t know anything.”

“Can we come in?” Chen Ge’s sense was very sensitive. When the door opened, he could sense the faded scent of blood in the air. Qiu Meng glanced at Chen Ge. He was uncooperative and refused to let strangers into his home.

“This is my ID. Please provide your cooperation.” After Lee Zheng showed his ID, he pulled out his walkie-talkie before Qiu Ming and called for the rest of the members to gather at the 23rd floor of the third building. Knowing he could not escape from this, Qiu Meng pulled the anti-theft door open. “Come in, sorry for the mess.”

The table in the living room was overturned, and things were strewn everywhere. The vase was shattered, and a few fresh roses lay pitifully on the floor. They had been stepped on—the petals were pulverized.

Domestic abuse? Chen Ge was the first one to step into the living room. When he saw this scene, that was the first thought that appeared in his mind.

“Ask if you have any question.” Qiu Ming’s face was dark. He hated allowing outsiders into his home. It felt like his secrets were all exposed.

“Where were you from 8 pm to midnight last night?”

“At home, playing on the computer.”

“Can someone collaborate that?”

“Why do I need that? I’m not a murderer. You’ve got the wrong guy!” Qiu Meng roared. He was a feisty character. Even facing the police, he could not stop himself from exploding.

“I’ll repeat that. Who can collaborate that for you?” Lee Zheng seemed to change into a different person. In terms of height and size, he was no match for Qiu Meng, but he gave the feeling that if this was a fight, he could apprehend Qiu Meng in a few moves.

“I reached home around 7:30 pm. I had dinner and started playing my game.” Qiu Meng surrendered in the end, and he opened his computer. “I’m also a livestream host, teaching people how to train their muscles, but today, I didn’t feel like giving people advice, so I streamed myself playing some games.”

The replay of the livestream proved that Qiu Meng was not lying. From eight to twelve, he was playing on the computer.

“Then why do you seem so hostile tonight?” Lee Zheng did not let go off any details that escaped from Qiu Meng’s lips.

“I had an argument with my girlfriend.”

“Yes.”

“Why did you hit her? At what time did you hit her?”

“Do you really need to know that?” Qiu Meng seemed like he was at his limit, and he was going to explode any time soon. “At around 10 pm, I suppose. I was livestreaming at the time, and the camera was left open. If you don’t believe me, you can check the replay.”

The time Qiu Meng mentioned was the time the raincoat person was squatting outside Gao Ru Xue’s room, waiting to ambush her. If Qiu Meng was telling the truth, then he and his girlfriend were both innocent. Lee Zheng used Qiu Meng's computer to find that particular moment.

Qiu Meng was parked before the computer until 10 pm, and his girlfriend's voice was caught by the computer. They had an argument over something small, and then Qiu Meng left the camera. There was the sound of vase being shattered and the table overturned. Then it was followed by the sound of curses and cries.

"I know I did wrong, but sometimes I just cannot control myself." The way Qiu Meng tried to brush it off as something insignificant made people mad.

"No matter what, using violence on an innocent person is a violation of someone's dignity. You need to understand that causing damage through domestic abuse is punishable by law." Lee Zheng stood up and told the owner, "If this happens again in the future, you have to take it seriously. Ignoring it will only cause him to commit a bigger mistake in the future."

"Understood."

Lee Zheng turned back with concern on his face. "Where is your girlfriend now? I wish to take a look at her injuries."

"She's inside the bedroom. She has locked the door, so I cannot get in." Qiu Meng leaned against the sofa and showed no signs of getting up.

"You should have spare key to the bedroom, right? Use it to open the door."

"Are police officers that free? Didn't you say you have a killer to catch? I'll handle the problem at my own home." Qiu Meng's brows were creased together, and veins popped up on his arm.

"It is because I am a police officer that I cannot leave this be." Lee Zheng stared at Qiu Meng and pointed at the door. "Open it."

He was adamant, and Qiu Meng knew that he could not get out of this that easily, so he stood up to rummage through the dresser for the spare key. He used it to open the bedroom door. Different from the chaotic living room, things were neat and tidy inside the bedroom. It was unclear whether it had been cleaned up or the place had not been touched earlier.

A woman's sobbing could be heard coming from inside the room. It was soft, like she did not dare cry too loudly.

"We cannot tolerate domestic abuse. If you need help, you can find the local woman's organization or just call the police." Lee Zheng looked at the woman who lay in bed facing away from him. He could not see anything wrong from her back. However, his years of investigative experience told him that something was wrong. He walked around the bed to attempt to look at the woman's face.

The team's profiler had come up with the killer's appearance. There were several properties to the killer; she was not strong and was very beautiful. She appeared kind and would easily make others feel comfortable in her presence. Lee Zheng remembered these details. Just as he was about to have a look at the woman's lowered face, his phone suddenly rang.

He took out his phone to answer it. Lee Zheng discovered that it was from Captain Yan. Captain Yan said that they had discovered the killer for the eye-gouging case, and he wanted Lee Zheng to bring his men as backup. Receiving the order, Lee Zheng glanced hurriedly at the woman on the bed. The woman's hair covered half of her face, so he had no idea what she really looked like. Having implicit trust in Captain Yan, he left the woman with a few more words before he walked out of the bedroom.

"The killer has been captured. Chen Ge, let's go now!" Lee Zheng headed out the front door but was stopped by Chen Ge at the last minute.

"There's no need to leave in such a hurry, this man looks like he is lying to us."

When Lee Zheng almost caught a glimpse of the woman's face, he had received the call from Captain Yan. From how Chen Ge saw it, that was definitely abnormal. A bigger anomaly was that Captain Yan would normally use the walkie-talkie to communicate at the crime scene, so why did Captain Yan use his phone to contact Lee Zheng this time?

"Come look at this broken vase." Chen Ge pointed at the shattered pieces on the ground. "If the vase was accidentally knocked from the cupboard or it rolled from the cupboard, then the pieces should have been lying around the cupboard. But take a look at the spray pattern of these pieces. The distance between them is as far as one meter. In other words, this vase didn't fall on its own; someone raise it up and smash it on the ground."

Lee Zheng inspected the evidence and realized that Chen Ge was right. The evidence did suggest that the man was lying to them.

"When you entered the bedroom earlier, I made use of the chance to also glance into the room. The bedroom was clean and tidy, and there wasn't even a water stain on the ground. This is completely different from the living room. I'm wondering, how did a man that lost his cool manage to contain his destruction within the living room?" Chen Ge looked around the house. "The kitchen and toilet are untouched as well. Only the living room is in this messy state, and the mess is very contained. So, this looks like it is purposely made to look this way."

He pulled on Lee Zheng to take a step back. "An innocent husband and wife, why do they need to create the illusion of domestic abuse? Are they hiding something? Also, the alibi provided by the man earlier—in the whole livestream video, only he appeared in the video. We did not see a trace of his girlfriend, so I now suspect that video is also problematic."

Now that Chen Ge brought that up, Lee Zheng also found the man and woman to be quite suspicious. He told the owner to leave the room to get help from the officers while he worked together with Chen Ge to surround Qiu Meng from both sides. While Chen Ge began his hypothesis, Qiu Meng showed a face that said that he was wrong and complained that he was framed, but near the end, he chose the method of silent admission instead.

"Don't waste your energy on resistance, stand up now!"

Facing both Lee Zheng and Chen Ge, Qiu Meng lowered his head. He was silent for a very long time before he seemed to come to a decision. "Those five murders with the gouging eyes, I'm the one who committed all of them. I will surrender myself and go with you."

"You're admitting that you are the murderer?" Lee Zheng shared a look with Chen Ge. Both of them understood in that instant that the man was trying to shoulder the blame for his girlfriend.

"Stand up and don't move!" Lee Zheng took out the walkie-talkie to prepare to report to Captain Yan when his phone started to ring again. He took it out to take a look and was surprised to find it was a call from Captain Yan.

“Hello? Captain Yan! I’ve spotted the suspect! Requesting back-up!”

After Lee Zheng finished, the Captain Yan on the phone only said three simple words.

“Look behind you.”

Due to his training, Lee Zheng did what he was told. The woman inside the bedroom earlier had walked to stand behind him, and children that looked scrawny and malnourished climbed on top of Lee Zheng’s body. The curious part was that Lee Zheng did not seem to notice the children. His eyes stared into the woman’s dark pupils like he was hypnotized.

“I did not have any intention of killing you, but you insisted on courting death.” The woman’s voice sounded coarse and rough. It belied her advanced age, but if anyone took a glance at her face, they definitely would have had their breath taken away.

The beauty was not something that could be described with words. It was mixed with both sickness and madness, just like the brightest rose that bloomed in a lonely cemetery. It fed on the nutrients of death and blossomed into a beauty that would strike at one’s soul.

Chapter 371 - Han Bao'er

Chapter 371: Han Bao'er

This was the first time Chen Ge had met a woman with such unnatural beauty. Her figure and appearance were flawless, and that was the scariest thing. Chen Ge was reminded of Han Bao'er's patient file—this Patient No. 6 suffered from Body Dysmorphic Disorder. She tended to exaggerate the flaws of her body and would never be satisfied, thus taking drastic measures to fix them.

According to the record, this perfect woman before him had once tried to chop off her finger because the nails on both hands were not symmetrical. She had the most perfect appearance, but her heart was twisted beyond recognition. Instead of saying that she was a beautiful woman, it was more accurate to describe her as a monster who had the most beautiful human skin.

Since her appearance, the atmosphere in the room changed, and all the lights were switched off. In the dark, malnourished children climbed out from behind her, and they were all connected to her through faded red lines.

...

"These are your ghosts?" Chen Ge took a step back. He scanned the room, and after realizing there was no Red Specter, his heart relaxed. "There are so many of them. It must have been hard trying to rear so many young ghosts."

"They were once my children, and only I can make them listen to me." This sentence from Han Bao'er seemed to mean a lot to her. Her eyes that looked at the ghost kids on the floor and on Lee Zheng were filled with pain.

"Children?" Chen Ge looked at these ghosts, and a few of them looked rather similar to Han Bao'er. He seemed to understand something, and a wave of disgust washed over him. "Looks like you're quite sick."

"Of course. If I wasn't sick, why would I stay with these dirty things, and why would I talk to you guys that are filled with that disgusting stench?" Han Bao'er used her nail to claw at her arm to form even-looking wounds. Blood dripped out, and it looked beautiful in all the wrong ways. "I hate dirty things, but the world itself is dirty. The only solution I have is to use these dirty things to ruin this dirty world."

The blood fell, and the red lines between her and the ghosts became more obvious.

"I have no idea what you've been through, so I have no right to critique your decision. Perhaps you have your own reasons for doing these things, but that doesn't mean you're correct." Chen Ge pressed the play button on the recorder and grabbed the handle of the hammer. "The members of this ghost stories society are all insane. You chose to treat yourself to alleviate the pain in your heart, but the choice of method is wrong."

"Treatment method?" Han Bao'er moved the red lines in her grasp.

"Life has been unfair to you, but it's time to let go."

"You sure sound calm, but I'm sure you must be very afraid. You're only pretending to be calm, waiting for the police to come save you, right?" Han Bao'er thought she had seen through Chen Ge's ploy, so she did not waste time discussing this with Chen Ge. She ordered her ghosts to rush at him. At the same time, Qiu Meng picked up the fruit knife on the coffee table, but he knew not to get close to Han Bao'er. Like a slave, he moved to the other side of the room.

"Other than the ghost on the police officer's shoulder, you can do whatever you want to the others." Chen Ge leaned against the wall. He had nowhere to run, but he did not look afraid. He talked to the air like he was mad.

The ghost children crawled on the ground. There were many of them, and they moved fast. When they had almost surrounded Chen Ge, a blood red shadow appeared and slammed the children into wisps of smoke with one stomp. Xu Yin appeared with his arms lowered. His wounds were dripping with blood, dying his shirt red.

"A Red Specter? Isn't your Red Specter hibernating?" The lines between Han Bao'er and the children started to tremble. Her children were afraid. That fear channeled into her body, and she blurted that out without thinking.

"Looks like you recognized me a long time ago." Chen Ge was quite surprised. After all, this was his first time meeting Han Bao'er. Then again, there were only two people left in the society, so the chairperson would definitely inform Han Bao'er of Chen Ge.

“You’ve had two Red Specters with you all this time?” The blood lines that Han Bao’er controlled shook even harder, like the ghost children were trying to escape.

“Yes, I never did say I only have one Red Specter.” Chen Ge let Xu Yin deal with Han Bao’er while he took out the hammer from his backpack. “This small space is quite limiting to such a big hammer. Oh well, so be it.”

Chen Ge did not dare let his guard down while facing a fitness trainer that was much larger than he was. Flipping through the comic, he summoned the English Teacher, the real estate agent, and the gambler.

The battle shifted in a second. Qiu Ming gripped the fruit knife the size of a palm, and he asked in a shaking voice, “Who are you?”

“I’m just the boss of a Haunted House.” Chen Ge glanced at the corridor. “We have no time to waste. We need to settle this before the police arrive.”

Chen Ge and the three ghosts attacked at once. It did not take long for the man to scream for mercy and the sound of bone snapping. There were sounds of other doors opening; it sounded like concerned neighbors. Chen Ge ran to the door, and with Qiu Meng watching on with despair, Chen Ge locked the door. “Now, no one is coming to save you before the police arrive.”

Chen Ge used Yan Danian’s power to drag the phone spirit into the comic and allowed Xu Yin to do whatever he wanted. Xu Yin no longer needed to feed on normal ghosts. He followed Chen Ge’s order and massacred the group of ghost children. The ghost children were connected to Han Bao’er, so whenever one died, a baby handprint would appear on her body.

Even through the distance, Chen Ge could feel the heavy resentment in those handprints. The person Han Bao’er’s children hated the most in the world was her.

“They are your children, so you shouldn’t have weighed them down with your own misfortune.”

Chen Ge looked at Han Bao’er and realized that beauty was indeed a sin at times. In this world, there were many places where sunlight could not reach and places where selfishness and ugliness fester. Chen Ge did not know why Han Bao’er snapped mentally, but he knew that every mental patient had their own sorry and painful past. It was also due to that past that they used even crazier and crueler methods to seek salvation.

The baby handprints on Han Bao'er's body increased; the dead ghost babies seemed to want to drag their mother down into hell with them. The blood lines snapped one by one. When the last ghost child was vanquished by Xu Yin, Han Bao'er finally collapsed. Tiny baby handprints surfaced on her flawless face.

Han Bao'er suffered from Body Dysmorphic Disorder and would not allow any flaw to appear on her body. When the baby handprints surfaced on her skin, she scratched at them wildly and screamed in throes of madness, trying her best to yank the handprints from her skin. Unfortunately, even after she fainted, the handprints still stuck to her body like birthmarks.

The blood slid down her perfect skin onto the floor. The wounded Han Bao'er lay in the middle of the room with scratches all over her body. When Han Bao'er lost consciousness, so did Lee Zheng, who was controlled earlier. At the same time, the black phone vibrated, but Chen Ge did not have time to look. He needed to deal with the other culprit before the police arrived.

Qiu Meng, who had both of his arms broken, was like a lamb waiting to be slaughtered. He was stronger than Chen Ge, but he did not have practical survival knowledge like Chen Ge did.

"What else do you have to say?" Chen Ge looked at Qiu Meng, and he felt a headache. If only Zhang Ya was there, then she could turn the man's soul into a doll, and that would not expose Chen Ge. The war had been won. The incapacitated Qiu Meng looked at the collapsed Han Bao'er, and the emotions in his eyes were complicated.

"She was ultimately the victim. If you knew what she has been through, you'd understand the meaning behind her every word."

"Then, tell me, what has she been through?" Chen Ge was still curious about this person known as Han Bao'er.

"She lived with her mother when she was young. She was just like those kids crawling on the ground, attached to that venomous woman. She was a living person, but to her mother, she was nothing more than merchandise. Beauty became a sin; it brought indescribable despair. It was the world that was wrong, and she just wanted to fight back when she was cornered.”

The sound of footsteps entered the room from the outside corridor; the police were coming. Chen Ge did not have time to waste. He tried to communicate with Xu Yin to ask whether there was a way to knock Qiu Meng out and erase his memory of the night without taking his life. Xu Yin misunderstood Chen Ge. He had his hands on Qiu Meng's head, and the wounds on his arms opened. Red blood soaked into Qiu Meng's body.

The man's eyes were dyed red. Just as Chen Ge thought Qiu Meng's eyes were about to explode, the color disappeared from his eyes, and he fainted. Xu Yin seemed to have stolen something from Qiu Meng's mind, and the heart that he was missing recovered a slight hue of red.

The key to becoming a Red Specter is related to living humans? What is it that Xu Yin's heart is missing?

The door was knocked down, and Chen Ge knew that the police had arrived. He recalled all the ghosts. Then, he chose the most comfortable spot to 'faint' on and started to figure out how to deal with the upcoming interrogation.

“Quick, we have injured personnel! Call the ambulance!” Police officers' voices echoed in his ears. When Chen Ge felt his body move, he peeled his eyes open slightly and realized that Team 1's officers had all arrived. He felt weirdly comforted.

Han Bao'er and Qiu Meng had fainted, and it was unknown when Lee Zheng would wake up. To avoid unnecessary trouble, Chen Ge chose to act unconscious. The lack of rest for the past few days caused Chen Ge to fall asleep inside the ambulance that ferried him to the hospital.

At the hospital, the doctor inspected Chen Ge and Lee Zheng's bodies. They were both fine, but Han Bao'er and Qiu Meng were sent to the ICU. Lying in bed, Chen Ge still remembered to silently set an alarm for himself before he fell back to sleep.

At 7 am, the alarm rang, and Chen Ge stretched lazily. He had not had such a good sleep in a long time. He pulled the sheet back and looked around. Lee Zheng had already left, so he was alone in the room.

Lee Zheng was hypnotized by Hao Bao'er last night, so he shouldn't remember what happened after then. Chen Ge stood up and inspected the backpack that was left on the bedside table. The recorder and comic were in there, but the hammer had disappeared. He put on his clothes hurriedly and ran out of the room.

“You’re awake?” Standing guard at the door was Ol’ Wei, who had accompanied him to Coffin Village. “The killer’s identity has been confirmed, and Lee Zheng has given you all the credit. You’ll probably appear on television again in a few days.”

“Given me all the credit?” Chen Ge smiled. “Then I have to ask, is there a reward to solving this case?”

“At the very least, you’re a business owner, but all you can think of is the money. Can honor be measured by money?” Ol’ Wei felt Chen Ge’s way of thinking was a problem. “Come with me. Captain Yan is waiting for us downstairs in the ICU. He has some questions for you.”

Chen Ge followed Ol’ Wei down the stairs, and from a far, they saw a room that had officers standing at the door. After getting their permission, Ol’ Wei told Chen Ge to enter the room. The atmosphere was not right, but Chen Ge did not think anything would happen to him in broad daylight.

He pushed the door opened, and there was only one bed in the room. Qiu Meng was lying in bed with a respirator. The doctor explained the situation to Captain Yan. They had tried their best, but they could not resuscitate Qiu Meng. When Captain Yan saw Chen Ge, he had the doctor leave the room before closing the door.

“Captain Yan, Ol’ Wei said you’re looking for me?” Chen Ge glanced Qiu Meng on the bed. His head, both arms and a leg were wrapped in bandages. The man looked pitiable.

“This is yours, right?” Captain Yan dragged out a scary-looking hammer from the nearby cupboard. It had a police seal on it.

“It might look scary, but it’s just a small prop I use at my Haunted House.”

“A small prop?” Captain Yan needed to use both hands to steady the hammer. “We have checked the wounds on Qiu Meng’s body. He suffered from torn muscles and shattered bones. Without immediate medical attention, he would be lying in bed for the rest of his life.”

“He attacked me first—you can ask Lee Zheng that—I was just trying to defend myself.” The way Chen Ge did not seem to be sorry about anything made Captain Yan feel helpless.

“I know that, but sometimes I hope you’d try something more rational like calling me when you have a clue and waiting for back-up.” Captain Yan pulled the seal from the hammer. “Now both the killer and the accomplice are unconscious. We cannot get any testimony, so people with malicious intent can turn this around on you.”

He returned the hammer to Chen Ge and whispered, “Hide this inside your bag, and make sure it’s not discovered when you leave. I don’t care where you get this thing, but it’s a banned item, so try not to bring it with you in the future.”

“Understood.”

“Go talk to Ol’ Wei and Lee Zheng. They still need your complete statement.”

After leaving the sick room, Chen Ge mulled over every word Captain Yan said, and he could not connect Captain Yan to the chairperson of the society.

Perhaps I’m mistaken.

Chapter 373 - Third Special Visitor

Chapter 373: Third Special Visitor

Chen Ge reached into the side compartment of the bag. There was a sealed bag wrapped up in oil paper. Good, it hasn't been touched.

The bag contained the bloodied nail used by the rag doll the night before. Replacing the bag, Chen Ge was led by Ol' Wei to write his statement before he left.

...

He rushed back to New Century Park and prepared for a new day of work. Opening the gate, Chen Ge helped Xu Wan and Xiao Gu with their make-up and had Uncle Xu sell the tickets. There were workers assigned by Director Luo to help maintain order. Chen Ge wandered around the Haunted House and realized that he had nothing else to do.

Xiao Gu was getting into the groove, and Xu Wan herself was an experienced employee. With Chen Ge's guidance, the twenty-four mannequins became better at their job. They knew the rules of the Haunted House, and when they accidentally caused the visitors to faint, afraid that Chen Ge might get mad, they would try to resuscitate the visitors.

In any case, things were slowly moving upward, and now all Chen Ge needed to do was manage the general environment. Sitting where the visitors were required to sign the disclaimer, Chen Ge took out the black phone.

After Han Bao'er fainted, the black phone had vibrated like a new message had been accepted. Chen Ge had not been able to read through the message at the time, so he waited until now.

"The completion rate for Third Sick Hall is over ninety percent! Congratulations, Specter's Favored, for acquiring the hidden item for this Trial Mission—Third Sick Hall's Patient List!

"Third Sick Hall's Patient List (100 Malice Point): I don't understand why I became like this; all I ever did was try to be human.”

Looking at the message, Chen Ge was slightly disappointed. He had thought that the hidden item for the Third Sick Hall would be Men Nan’s main persona, but it seemed that he had overestimated everything. Pocketing the black phone, Chen Ge went to the prop room and found several yellowed patient records inside the wooden box.

The curious thing was that only five of them had a black and white photo. Wang Shenglong, Men Nan’s mother, Wu Fei, the Devil, and Xiong Qing did not come with the photo. Only those who are confirmed dead will have photo attached?

Wang Shenglong was still alive, Men Nan’s mother was guarding Men Nan’s second persona, Wu Fei had been taken away by the well ghost at Coffin Village, the Devil had been made into a doll by Zhang Ya, and Xiong Qing had turned into a Red Specter with the society’s help. Other than these five, the rest of the patients had their own black and white photos.

Chen Ge examined the photos and realized that each photo seemed to be trapping a twisted soul. Some of them were crying, others were laughing, some stared at Chen Ge silently, and others contained the desire to destroy the world.

The lingering spirit of the dead patients concentrated on their patient’s list?

The memory of their life made it so that their spirit would not have the release of eternal sleep. When they were alive, they were the best hosts for monsters behind the door, but after they died, they became special Specters with unlimited potential.

Chen Ge touched the patient list, and a chill radiated from the pictures. The hidden item for Third Sick Hall should be the souls of these ten patients.

Chen Ge did not know whether that was a good reward or not. These ten spirits had great potential; with their help, Chen Ge could even rebuild the ghost stories society. However, there were two sides to everything. All ten of these patients were completely mad, and every one of them was extremely dangerous, so making them submit would be very difficult.

The most dangerous presence at the Third Sick Hall is actually these ten patients. Now that all ten of their spirits have returned to me, in a bit, I should be able to complete a fully-operating three-star scenario!

There was a hidden mission attached to the Third Sick Hall—demolishing the ghost stories society. After completing that mission, Chen Ge would see the real terror of a three-star scenario for himself.

The complete Third Sick Hall should include the ten crazed patients, the mad doctors, or something even scarier.

Leaving the visitors in the hands of these ten patients, just thinking about it made Chen Ge scared.

When I did the Trial Mission, I only ran into a few of them. If I return all the patients, the visitors might really need mental treatment after this.

Putting the patients' list away, Chen Ge had a new understanding of a three-star scenario.

Temporarily, three-star scenarios are enough to hold the interest of the visitors. Before Zhang Ya awakens, there's no need to rush to unlock that four-star scenario.

After exiting the prop room, Chen Ge sent more batches of visitors into the Haunted House. Hearing their screams and the way they shook as they exited the Haunted House, Chen Ge felt satisfied. The visitors swore to not come again, but they also were curious enough to ask others what the other scenarios were like. Whenever this happened, Chen Ge would wander over to introduce the selling points of the other scenarios, telling them since they had already paid the park's ticket price, why not try everything? Life should not have any regrets.

Some would buy what Chen Ge had to say and start to line up again. Of course, there were visitors who were so spooked that they started to run when they saw Chen Ge coming toward them.

The sound of 'joy' reverberated above the Haunted House, giving new life to New Century Park. Lunchtime came, but the number of visitors had not decreased. Xu Yan and Xiao Gu went for their lunch break while Chen Ge joined Uncle Xu to sell tickets.

"Uncle Xu, what happened to the few people who were sent to the hospital a few days ago?" Chen Ge worried about this because he was afraid it might affect the park.

"Director Luo has helped you cover it. Just stop creating trouble in the future. It's a key time for theme park, and we cannot afford to tumble over these small mistakes."

"Understood." Chen Ge wanted to say something more when the black phone in his pocket vibrated. He walked to somewhere with the sun and switched on the screen.

"The effect of Midnight Ticket Counter has been triggered! The third special visitor has appeared! Please make use of this opportunity; the results will be different based on your choices!"

A special visitor at a time like this? Chen Ge looked down the long line, and he frowned. This is one of the bad things about having too many customers—how am I supposed to identify the special visitor?

He aimed his phone at the visitors lining up. This way even if he failed to find said visitor today, he could slowly examine the lines to see which visitor was acting strange.

"What are you doing taking pictures? Quickly lead the visitors into the Haunted House," Uncle Xu urged. When Chen Ge was taking picture, a group of five young people bought tickets.

"Follow me." Chen Ge led the way. The five seemed to know him because they kept whispering among themselves behind his back.

Chapter 374: The Girl Who Doesn't Know Fear

Chen Ge's Haunted House had become quite famous in Jiujiang, and a bunch of videos about it could be found online. In fact, some of the visitors had photoshopped Chen Ge holding the hammer as an emoji, so from how he saw it, it was quite normal for him to be recognized. "Which scenario are you guys going to challenge?"

"We've cleared all the one-star scenarios, so we plan to challenge Mu Yang High School today." It was a girl who spoke. She looked normal but very tall. She had a nasally voice, and based on the lines on her palm, she seemed to be a basketball player.

...

"Two-star scenarios are much scarier than one-star scenarios. I hope you're prepared." Chen Ge waved at them. "Come this way, please sign the disclaimer first."

Chen Ge handed the forms to the group. He stood to the side, thinking they were normal visitors. However, when he saw the name of one of the girls, he realized that he was wrong.

Liu Xianxian? Isn't that Gao Ru Xue's roommate? Chen Ge looked at the other disclaimers and saw the name written by the tall girl—Ma Yin. The chance of having two names repeated was rare. What were they doing at the Haunted House?

Chen Ge had just received the hint from the black phone when Liu Xianxian and Ma Yin entered the Haunted House, so Chen Ge paid full attention. He sidled to the group of young people and asked casually, "Are you students from Jiujiang's Medical University?"

Once he said that, all five of them raised their heads. They looked nervous like they had been targeted by a bad person.

"How did you know that?" Liu Xianxian was closest to Chen Ge. She wore a faded perfume.

"I not only know you're students from Jiujiang's Medical University, I know you are facing some inner problems, so you come to the Haunted House to release stress," Chen Ge said randomly, but it sounded quite reasonable to the group of youngsters. "Three guys and two girls coming to visit together, but the two girls stick close together, not glancing once at the guys. I believe your hearts are already taken and are troubled over this thing in your heart."

Chen Ge's word hit Liu Xianxian's heart. Her lips fell open with surprise. "The online comments say you're proficient at psychology. I didn't believe it at first, but it looks like I was wrong."

When Liu Xianxian agreed to Chen Ge's hypothesis, the three boys looked rather disappointed. Probably due to curiosity, Liu Xianxian asked Chen Ge, "Boss, do you think I should be together with that man or not?"

Chen Ge hesitated and remembered the information that was revealed when he conversed with the phone spirit. After some time, he shook his head and said, "I can only guess what you're thinking from your emotions and actions; I've not met the man you like before, so I cannot give you an answer. But if you believe me, why don't you bring me to go meet that person? I definitely will give you a satisfactory reply."

"Really?" Liu Xianxian was desperate to know whether the man really liked her or not, so she was considering Chen Ge's offer.

"Liu Xian, the boss is just joking with you. Do you really believe him?" Ma Yin put her hand on Liu Xianxian's shoulder—the two seemed close.

"I'm not kidding. Jiujiang's Medical University's students are my local customers, and that's why I'm trying to help. Do you see me offering to help other visitors?" Chen Ge felt like, between Liu Xianxian and Ma Yin, one of them was possibly the special visitor, and that was why he said those things.

Seeing the wavering conviction in her roommate, Ma Yin sighed. "Well, as long as you're happy."

"There's nothing to lose from trying it out." Liu Xianxian exchanged phone numbers with Chen Ge. "Boss, my friend is a straight shooter—that's how she is. Don't mind her."

Chen Ge pocketed his phone and glanced at Ma Yin. "Straight shooter?"

From how I see it, the trouble in your roommate's heart might not be smaller than yours."

"Do you really think you're a psychologist? What kind of trouble am I facing?" Ma Yin rolled her eyes and took her arm back from Liu Xianxian's shoulders.

Chen Ge looked into Ma Yin's eyes, and after five seconds, he told her, "Big sister?"

It was quiet inside the Haunted House, so even though Chen Ge was not loud, everyone present could hear what he said. Ma Yin, who had remained calm until then, widened her eyes after she heard those two words. Her heart skipped a beat, and her body froze.

"Ma Yin!" Liu Xianxian shook Ma Yin's shoulders. Several breaths later, Ma Yin seemed to wake up from her dream, and she shook Liu Xianxian's arm away. "What's wrong with you? Ma Yin!"

Suddenly realizing something, Ma Yin calmed down immediately. She ignored Chen Ge and pushed the disclaimer on the table forward. "It's nothing. I was indeed thinking about my big sister earlier. I was just surprised boss managed the guess, gave me quite a shock."

"Then, shall we leave? You look so pale."

"You're making too big a deal out of this." Ma Yin smiled apologetically at Chen Ge. "We've signed the disclaimer. Let's begin the experience."

"I just made some random guess, don't think too much of it." Chen Ge picked up the disclaimers and led the way forward. "Mu Yang High School is underground, come with me."

Pulling up the wooden board, Chen Ge watched the batch of visitors enter the scenario. "Have fun."

Closing the boards, the smile on Chen Ge's face slowly disappeared. "Ma Yin's reaction was too weird when she heard the words big sister. Could she be my third special visitor?"

Liu Xianxian was a possible candidate as well, but in comparison, Ma Yin gave Chen Ge a stranger feeling. Entering the surveillance room, Chen Ge followed the students' progress in Mu Yang High School, focusing on Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian. The five were quite brave, and they knew the layout well—they had probably read the guide before they arrived.

As they went down the corridor, the five soon arrived at the sealed classroom. When they passed by, the mannequins in the room turned in unison. The three boys and Ma Yin were spooked, but Liu Xianxian was laughing. “Why is she laughing? Is this funny?”

Inside the creepy environment, being stared at by a group of mannequins, a normal person should have felt scared. Chen Ge had his hand under his chin. Initially, he thought Ma Yin was the special visitor, but seeing how Liu Xianxian acted inside the Haunted House, his opinion changed.

“Is it because it’s not scary enough?”

Chen Ge opened the list of background music and entered Black Friday and Wedding Dress into the playlist.

The five stopped outside the sealed classroom. None of the boys dared go in. In the end, Liu Xianxian told them something, and all five of them entered the classroom together.

Chapter 375 - The Missing Wife

Cutting to the camera inside the classroom, Chen Ge made a discovery. Liu Xianxian was not without fear, but the way she showed it was different from normal. When she walked past two mannequins, one of the heads fell off. The other four were scared, but Liu Xianxian, who was closest to the human head, maintained her composure. With a smile on her face, she bent down to pick up the mannequin head and put it back. Chen Ge paused the video and studied the smile on Liu Xianxian's face when she picked up the mannequin head.

Her smile looks forced. Whenever she smiles, the angle of her smile looks as if it has been trained. When a person is scared, isn't it normal to show a scared expression? Why did she train herself to smile?

...

Overcoming fear and facing fear with a smile were two different concepts. What Liu Xianxian was doing confused Chen Ge as well.

The body is shaking, but the face is smiling. Is the girl suffering from some kind of psychological issue?

Chen Ge thought back to the first two special visitors that the Haunted House had welcomed—Fan Yu and Men Nan. When they first arrived, they had also shown weird reactions.

The video continued to play. The five had already exited the sealed classroom. They had been walking for some time when a few mannequins tumbled out of the sealed classroom like they were blown by the window. There was nothing interesting to see after that. Chen Ge paid special attention to Liu Xianxian, and the more he studied her, the more he felt she was acting abnormally.

For example, when they were at the male dormitory in Western Jiujiang's Private Academy, the hanging mannequin suddenly jumped out from the bedroom and chased after the group. The other four screamed for help and ran at their top speed, but Liu Xianxian stood where she was with her body shaking. The smile stayed on her face, but tears were in her eyes. It was clear that she was afraid. Her chest rose unevenly, and it looked like she would faint at any moment.

Of course, the hanging man would not really hurt her. It jumped to stand before her before falling into her chest. The dead man's face looked up at her. Finally, Liu Xianxian lost her composure, and she screamed a series of apologies. However, Chen Ge had no clue who she was apologizing to.

Chen Ge did not dare stay inside the surveillance room any longer. His Haunted House had just sent five visitors to the hospital yesterday. If another visitor fainted on his watch, it would be hard to explain. Pulling the wooden boards back, Chen Ge ran into the scenario. When he arrived, the other four students had already dragged Liu Xianxian out. They screamed at the camera for help, choosing to give up the tour.

"Don't be afraid. I've been following you on the camera. If there's an accident, I'll come to save you." Chen Ge was friendly. He arrived less than a minute after the accident.

"Boss, will anything happen to Liu Xianxian?" Ma Yin was worried.

"Hard to say for now." Chen Ge looked at Liu Xianxian, who was calming down. Her facial muscles twitched. Even at a time like this, she did not forget to smile. "Actually, I'm curious; why didn't she run when she saw something scary but stood there dumbly?"

"I don't really know. She has acted similarly at the dormitory, but it was nothing serious." Ma Yin held Liu Xianxian as they moved to the exit.

"Something similar happened before?"

"Yes, Liu Xian was very afraid of bugs, but one day, that fear disappeared. I even saw her use her bare hands to catch those bugs before."

"It just happened miraculously one fine day?" Chen Ge was now certain that something must have happened to Liu Xianxian at school. However, he understood not to push it. "We have a professional doctor here at the park. Let's bring her to him."

Chen Ge personally led Liu Xianxian to the medical room. He wanted to take this chance to communicate with Liu Xianxian, to find out some information, but he was needed at the Haunted House, so he could not leave. He waited until 6 pm, but there was no message on the black phone, and Chen Ge started to suspect that he had got the wrong person. Neither of them was the special visitor?

He busied himself until 6:30 pm. Chen Ge closed the door and cleaned the toilet before he exited the park. He hopped into the taxi and sent Inspector Lee a message, telling him that he had something important to tell him and that it had to be done in secret.

Inspector Lee's reply came very fast, and he asked to meet Chen Ge at the Purple Briars Park next to Western Jiujiang's police station. At 7:10 pm, Chen Ge found Inspector Lee at one of the alcoves.

"Chen Ge, why are you acting so mysteriously? Why did you call me?" Inspector Lee lit a cigarette and leaned against the column.

"I need you to analyze something for me." Chen Ge took out the seal bag from his backpack. "There's an iron nail inside this. There's a blood stain on the tip of the nail. Don't the police have a DNA databank? Can you help me check if the blood stain matches anyone?"

Inspector Lee accepted the bag, but he did not make any promises. "Was this left behind by the killer?"

Chen Ge nodded.

"Then, why didn't you send this to the police station? Why did you sneak this to me in private?" Inspector Lee snuffed out the cigarette and puffed out the smoke. He looked at Chen Ge with interest. "You suspect the killer is a police officer?"

Chen Ge did not deny it. "Uncle San Bao, this thing is too complicated. I don't have the answer myself."

"You only create problems for me." Inspector Lee shoved the bag inside his pocket. "The results will be back by tomorrow night."

"Thank you."

"No need. It's what the police should do."

Inspector Lee turned to leave. Chen Ge called a cab to return to New Century Park. When he was inside the car, his phone rang.

Liu Xianxian? Chen Ge accepted the call. "Hello? Are you feeling better?"

“Yes.”

“Why are you calling?”

“It’s like this.” Liu Xianxian sounded rather flustered. “Can you come to Jiujiang’s Medical University tonight? I’ve asked the man out. I’m not sure whether he likes me or not, so I want you to give me your opinion.”

Chen Ge did not expect that Liu Xianxian would really call him about this. After some consideration, Chen Ge said, “Okay, I’ll be there in a bit.”

After he agreed to Liu Xianxian’s request, the black phone in his other pocket vibrated. He took out the phone and saw the new message.

“The third special visitor has left. You’ve successfully unlocked the mission information! Unlocked Hidden Trial Mission—The Missing Wife!”

Chapter 376 - Perhaps he Doesn't Like Me

Chapter 376: Perhaps he Doesn't Like Me

...

“Do you wish to accept this mission? Warning: Trial Missions are only available for twenty-four hours. If they are not accepted within these twenty-four hours, the scenario will never be unlocked.”

Naturally, Chen Ge accepted it. Since this was just a one-star mission, he didn't think it would that difficult. I only need to find Liu Xianxian? There's no other requirement?

Chen Ge had a feeling that the sentence had another meaning, but temporarily, he had no idea what. After hanging up, Chen Ge returned to New Century Park to grab all of his equipment before rushing to Jiujiang Medical University. At 7:40 pm, Chen Ge arrived at his destination and found Liu Xianxian at a nearby teahouse.

“Why are you here?” Chen Ge was curious. The things there were expensive, and Liu Xianxian did not look like she was much of a tea-drinker.

“He prefers a quiet place.” Liu Xianxian was embarrassed. She had put quite some effort into her appearance, but she looked rather pale. “I've booked the private room for you next door, you can hide in there.”

Chen Ge moved to oblige. From his vantage point, he could look clearly into the room next door. Then it was a long wait. Liu Xianxian asked to meet the man at 8 pm. Combining the time Liu Xianxian waited for Chen Ge, she had been waiting for at least half an hour already.

She checked her appearance again and again as she looked out the window carefully. She was both fearful and excited. The man did not show at 8 pm. She took out her phone to call the man, but when she found the man's name on the contact list, she hesitated. "Did something happen to him?"

Liu Xianxian was completely different from when she was with her friends. She asked the waitress for a cup of water. She picked the cup up but, worried that it might ruin her lipstick, she put it down again. She wanted to show the man her best. The man still had not arrived at 8:20 pm. Liu Xianxian looked at the food on the table, but she had no appetite.

She held her phone, and after some hesitance, she finally called the man's number. The call rang, but no one answered.

"Something must have happened to him." Liu Xianxian looked out the window. The crowd was starting to thin because it was getting late. She waited until 9 pm, and he was still a no-show.

"Let's stop waiting, he won't be coming tonight." Chen Ge walked out from the room. "From how he treats you, it looks like he doesn't care about you that much."

"Let's wait a little longer." Liu Xianxian waited until the teahouse closed, but the man did not show up. They left the teahouse together, Liu Xianxian looking quite devastated. Due to the mission by the black phone, Chen Ge stuck close to Liu Xianxian. "Can you tell me the story between the both of you? Perhaps I can give you some advice."

Liu Xianxian shook her head, but it was uncertain whether she did not want to share the story or had something that she could not say.

"If you don't tell me anything, how am I supposed to help? If you hold something within your heart for too long, it might 'decay'. Now you need someone to talk to. Your roommates are a close part of your life—you walk in the same circle—so telling them might affect your friendship, but I'm different. I'm an outsider who has no interaction with your life; you don't need to worry about me interrupting your normal life."

Chen Ge kept trying to loosen Liu Xianxian's lips, and Liu Xianxian was slowly convinced. The stuff in her heart was piling up so high that she had trouble breathing.

"Say it out loud, you'll feel much better." Chen Ge sounded like the boy next door, very warm and friendly.

She paused in thought, and after one last struggle, Liu Xianxian began. "I was brought up by my mother, and I've never seen my father. Sometimes, I wonder what my father looks like. Perhaps due to that, when I first saw him, there was a very special feeling."

"With or without the romantic feeling, I just feel safe around him." Liu Xianxian looked up at the streetlight, the soft light falling on her pained expression. "I was like a child lost in the field, finding a hunter with a torch and a gun."

"That's quite an interesting analogy, what happened next?"

"He is much older than I am and has all the good qualities of a mature man. In my eyes, he is a perfect man, and I cannot prevent my heart from falling in love. However, as our interaction increased, I realized that he is rather different from normal men."

Liu Xianxian's eyes were wavering. "Liking someone means knowing everything about him. I heard from his close family that his wife died in a car accident seven years ago. It was because I found out about that news that I started to pursue him. Initially, he rejected me, but with my tireless approach, the distance between us closed. It was also at the time that I found out the biggest secret about him."

Liu Xianxian paused for a long time before she continued. "He is under the impression that his wife is still alive. There are two sets of everything at his home, and he sometimes talks to the air like his wife is standing there."

"That's an obvious sign of trauma."

When Liu Xianxian heard Chen Ge's assessment, she shook her head with hesitation. "I don't think he's sick. He just loves his wife too much."

"Your mind is muddled from love—that's why you're coming up with all these reasons for him. If you really have his interests at heart, you should bring him to a psychologist."

"You'll understand what I mean when you see him. I'm not lying to you." Liu Xianxian saw the number on her phone, and she thanked Chen Ge. "Thank you for everything today. I'll deal with this myself. I hope that you'll keep this to yourself."

"Of course, you have my word." Seeing Liu Xianxian's back, the smile on Chen Ge's face slowly disappeared. He caught a deep hint of despair when she spoke; he had heard the same trace of despair when he interacted with members of the ghost stories society.

“The man Liu Xianxian likes thinks his dead wife is still alive. This is similar to No. 10. In the Pen Spirit’s ‘will’, she overheard No. 10 calling the body on his back his wife.”

Chen Ge was increasingly curious about Liu Xianxian. While no one was watching, he carried his backpack and sneaked into Jiujiang Medical University.

Chapter 377 - Big Sister's Video

Chapter 377: Big Sister's Video

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Liu Xianxian was despondent because her date did not show, so she did not notice Chen Ge, who was trailing her.

She's going back to the dormitory. What should I do? Wait outside the dormitory?

...

Chen Ge looked around the female dormitory. Even though there were good hiding spots, if he was discovered there, he would definitely be handed over to the police. He looked on as Liu Xianxian entered the dormitory and disappeared up the stairs.

I cannot follow her any longer, but if I leave just like that, the Trial Mission will definitely fail.

Caught in a conundrum, he headed in the direction of the abandoned education block.

Based on the phone spirit's description, Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian leave the bedroom at 1 am every night; it shouldn't be any different tonight. I only need to find a place to wait for them to show up. The abandoned building won't have any people coming at night, and the guards don't normally patrol there.

Chen Ge very easily found the abandoned education block. He climbed to the second floor and kept his eyes on the road. I feel like such a Peeping Tom, but no one will probably suspect there's someone inside this abandoned building.

Leaning against the wall, Chen Ge took out his phone to play. I should have brought the white cat with me. Guarding this place alone is quite boring.

He googled his own Haunted House online, reading through the latest comments and articles before logging into the video sharing app. He was surprised at how busy his inbox was. He clicked it open and was shocked to see so many of them urging him to update the comic. Of ten comments, about half of them had to do with the horror comic. Uncle Yan, you're going to be huge!

After Chen Ge posted Yan Danian's comic on the website, he had stopped following it. He was surprised to find the comic had more than 10,000 comments. Many commenters thought that Chen Ge was the artist and praised him for his talent. Beyond the streams and videos, he was such a good comic artist. They praised him for being a genius.

Thankfully, I didn't upload everything at once last time. Chen Ge clicked through his phone. He had saved Yan Danian's comic into a collection called Ghost Tenants, and he had only uploaded the first part. He opened the inbox and glanced through it, but he could not find any comic website or publisher contacting him.

Looks like the influence is not big enough, but Uncle Yan should be happy knowing so many people like his work.

Chen Ge was reminded of Uncle Yan's disappointed face. He was so sad that even ghosts did not have the heart to bully him. He took out the comic from his pocket and called Uncle Yan's name softly.

Perhaps because Chen Ge had been calling Yan Danian when he was in throes of danger, it had completely ruined the man's hope for life. Chen Ge called the man about ten times, but the middle-aged man that faced the wall refused to turn around.

"Uncle Yan, look at the number of people who enjoyed your work! 10,000 comments, all asking for updates! They're all your fans!" Chen Ge swiped the comments before the comic page, and for the first time, the expression on Yan Danian's face shifted. He was shocked. He did not even imagine there would come a day when his work would get so popular.

"Uncle Yan, don't get too ahead of yourself. This is just a beginning. In the future, you'll gather more fans, and countless publishers will come to you. Your comic might even have the chance to be adapted into a cartoon or movie."

Chen Ge did not know how the business worked, but he tried his best to create a hopeful blueprint for Yan Danian to lay the groundwork for what he was going to say next. "It was the correct choice to follow me. I've told you before, I'll help you fulfil your dream."

In the corridor on the abandoned education block, Chen Ge held the phone and talked about dreams and the future to a comic. As his only listener, Yan Danian believed Chen Ge. He sat in the corner of the comic with his fists gripped tight like he was holding the hope of the future in them.

With Yan Danian watching, Chen Ge uploaded the second part for Ghost Tenants and added at the bottom—Joint production of Western Jiujiang's House of Horrors.

Seeing the comments that rolled in, Yan Danian was even more excited than Chen Ge.

Based on this development, Uncle Yan's third power should be unlocked soon.

Yan Danian was categorized by the black phone as a Lesser Red Specter, but his first two power were support-based, so Chen Ge was anticipating his third power. He arranged the comic pages that the Ghost Tenants would use in the future, and without him realizing it, it was 1 am, and the campus was very silent.

“Are Liu Xianxian and Ma Yin not planning to come out today? Were they influenced by Gao Ru Xue's incident?” Chen Ge was rather bored waiting alone inside the building. He looked down the dark corridor and hoped that some ghost would come down it to quench his boredom.

At 1:48 am, there was finally some movement from the female dormitory. The old dormitory's front door was slowly pushed open, and the two girls walked out.

...

Ma Yin gently slid the dormitory's door shut. They looked around and made sure no one was watching before running past the surveillance camera. The two sneaked into the nearby lane and headed for the abandoned education block.

“We only have the north-eastern side of the warehouse that we haven't searched. We'll definitely find that statue tonight.” Ma Yin looked at how sad Liu Xianxian was, but she did not know how to console her. “Then we'll find all our answers.”

With puffy eyes, Liu Xianxian looked at the phone in her hands and sighed with uncertainty. “But we’ve been looking for so many days already. I’m beginning to think that the statue isn’t even real.”

“It has to be real. In the video that my big sister left before she disappeared, there was a description on that statue.” Ma Yin took out her phone and clicked open one of the videos. The video was only thirteen seconds long, but the shot image was quite scary.

The video had probably been shot in secret. The angle was weird; the camera seemed to have been placed under the bed, and the screen was aimed at the room outside.

There was a swinging rope in the middle of the room like someone was planning to hang themselves. There was blood on the floor, and a bloodied bedsheet dangled by the edge of the bed.

There was no dead body captured on the screen, but there was the edge of a bloodied bedsheet squeezed through the dresser door. Facing the bed was a western sculpture, and there were plenty of unfinished sculptures on the table.

The video soon reached its end. The screen shook slightly, and at the last second, the camera turned to the window. At the windowsill, there was a woman with unnatural skin color poking out half of her head, looking into the room.

The screen went dark, and the video ended.

Chapter 378 - Someone Has Been Here

Chapter 378: Someone Has Been Here

“This is the last video my sister sent me before she disappeared. I’ve been searching for this room, paying close attention to any clues in the video. Finally, my hard work was rewarded. I was randomly scrolling through the university forum when I came across a ghost story thread about our school. One of the stories was about a weeping statue.

“According to legend, as long as we can find this statue before midnight, it could help us diagnose the authenticity of any statement. If it is true, it’ll cry tears of blood, and if it’s fake, something scary will happen.”

Ma Yin found the screenshots of said thread on her phone. There was an attached picture of the statue at the end of the thread, and the statue looked similar to the sculpture captured in her sister’s video. It was a western sculpture of a western man. It was larger than a normal person, and he looked ugly. There was a sentence carved into the base—Deceit is the most beautiful, but truths are often the ugliest.

...

“I private messaged the OP to know how he managed to get the picture, but he didn’t reply. Then, I contacted that person through the teachers. He said that he took the picture at an abandoned warehouse. He thought that the statue matched the story he was telling, so he attached it to the post. Ever since the movement of the campus several years ago, no one has been to this warehouse. If he was telling the truth, then the statue must still be inside that warehouse.”

Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian were close friends who shared everything. Once Ma Yin trusted someone, she would share her every secret.

“Let’s hope we can find it this time. I really want to know the answer.”

The two girls jumped over the blockade and sneaked into the abandoned building.

“Every time we come here, it feels weird, like there’s someone here other than us.” Since they were afraid light might attract the attention of the security, Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian did not switch on the flashlight on their phones. They touched the wall and slowly walked down the corridor.

“It’s quite a waste to keep this building abandoned. I wonder why the school doesn’t rent this place out,” Ma Yin mumbled to herself. She was actually quite scared, but she did not dare show that before Liu Xianxian. She treated Liu Xianxian as her best friend. When they moved forward, she kept Liu Xianxian behind her to protect her.

The physically smaller Liu Xianxian followed behind Ma Yin. After entering the education block, she also started to feel nervous. “Xiao Yin, after we’ve been here several times, I reached out to the graduated seniors to ask about it. They said there’s a reason this place is abandoned, and it’s related to the move of the other courses to a new campus.”

“What kind of reason?” Ma Yin was tall and much stronger than normal girls, but that did not mean she was braver.

“It seems to be related to cadavers. This block was sealed up because it was too close to the laboratory block.” Liu Xianxian looked out the window. There was a strange phenomenon at Jiujiang Medical University at 2 am. If the campus was separated into four directions—north, south, east, west—the north, south, and east sides of the campus had some lights, but the west side was completely dark.

“According to legend, the largest underground morgue in Jiujiang is within the western side of our school. Wasn’t there a tradition to turn off the lights after midnight? It is because, since the cadavers were tired in the morning, they needed to rest at night. Do you believe something like that?” Liu Xianxian’s voice was weird, and she looked extremely pale that night.

“That is rather weird.”

“There are more weird things about this school. Do you remember what the counselling instructor said when we first registered? Do not go to the western part of the campus after midnight. People asked him why, but he stammered a nonsensical reason. After asking the seniors, there was a student who went out at night and saw someone waving at him. He walked into the western part of the campus at night and saw a cadaver that was ruined inside the lab.” The more Liu Xianxian continued, the darker her face became. “There are many similar stories, and I cannot tell which are real and which are fake anymore.”

“Liu Xian, we’ve been searching for several nights already; we cannot give up now.” For Ma Yin, Liu Xianxian was her only partner. If Liu Xianxian retreated, she would need to look for the statue related to her sister’s disappearance alone.

“I know, I just feel dumb for having this insistence.” Liu Xianxian took out her phone and had the urge to delete someone’s number from the contact list. They walked to the corner and down the stairs to first floor underground. They turned on their flashlights after making sure that no one was following them.

“This place suddenly feels so cold.” The cold draft caressed Ma Yin’s hair, and she squeezed to stand beside Liu Xianxian. “There’s no ventilation in this place, so I have no idea where the draft comes from.”

Their shoulders leaned together, and Ma Yin suddenly realized that Liu Xianxian’s body was very cold, like it was frozen.

“Liu Xian, why are you so cold?”

“Nervous.”

“Don’t worry, I’m here with you. No matter what happens, I’ll stay by your side.”

They moved down the corridor and did not stop to turn into the rooms on the side but headed straight for the stairs to go down to second floor underground. There were some stains on the stairs. It looked dirty, like someone had dragged something up or down the stairs.

“Seems like someone has been here before us.” Ma Yin looked at the water stain on the ground and sniffed at the residual scent in the air. As a medical student, she was familiar with this smell. “It’s formalin.”

“Formalin is not allowed to be taken out of the lab. How can it be here?” Liu Xianxian knew the usage of formalin—it was to preserve the cadavers. “The underground here is connected to the western side of the campus. Did someone really sneak into the underground morgue? Earlier this year, I heard that someone has been stealing the cadavers to sell on the black market.”

“That shouldn’t be the case. Even if the person can move the cadavers out of the morgue, how would they transport them out of the school? There is surveillance everywhere.” Ma Yin tried to console Liu Xianxian. “Don’t read too much into this. There are people who come to maintain the underground morgue once in a while; this is probably their doing.”

“In that case, they wouldn’t have come through this building but used the front door. I still think something is wrong.” Even though she said so, Liu Xianxian went down the stairs faster than Ma Yin. She held onto the wall and raised the flashlight when she reached the bottom of the stairs.

The path split in two. There was a sign on the wall. The right path led to a normal storeroom while the left led to the underground morgue. The water stains on the ground became more obvious, and they were all on the left path.

Chapter 379: Envy

The corridor was long, and the walls on both sides were painted white. Every few meters was a rusted steel door, and aged police tape was sealed off each of the doors. “We’ve been here several times already, but we never did notice that this is a corridor used to transport cadavers.”

Some medical schools had pathways specifically used to transport cadavers. This type of special pathway was usually underground, and the floor would be flat to ease transportation. The other obvious feature was the layer of white paint on the walls. Other than that, there was not any special decoration.

...

“Let’s stop wasting time standing here. Let’s get to the storeroom.” Liu Xianxian pulled on Ma Yin’s arm and led her down the right corridor. The left led to the underground morgue, and the right was a normal storeroom where various abandoned equipment had been left. The two walked down the corridor for some time when Ma Yin heard footsteps coming from behind them. She stopped and used the flashlight on the camera to shine behind her.

“Xiao Yin, what’s wrong?”

“Someone seems to be following us.” Ma Yin was not sure herself because when she tried to focus on the noise, the footsteps disappeared again.

“You must be mistaken.” Liu Xianxian forced an unnatural smile. Facing fear with a smile, that had become her habit.

“Let’s get into the storeroom first. There’s nowhere to hide in this corridor.” Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian increased in speed until they reached the first turn in the corridor. There was a scratched wooden door. The lock was seriously broken, and there were various black scratches on the door. The most curious thing was that someone had carved the word ‘Paradise’ on the door.

“This is weird. Before we left, I remember us closing the door.” The door was half-open like someone had gone in while they were away.

“Be careful.” Ma Yin placed both of her hands on the wooden door to push it open. She stopped at the door and did not rush in. The girl might appear that way, but she was more careful than she looked. She used her phone to scan every corner in the room, but there was nothing out of the ordinary.

“This time, we should stick together instead of separating.” Ma Yin took care of Liu Xianxian, walking in front. The block had been sealed up for quite some time already, so logically speaking, the place should have been deserted. Yet, weirdly enough, there was little dust. It was as if someone still went there to clean the place every so often.

Most of the abandoned equipment for Jiujiang Medical University was placed there, including almost every manner of thing imaginable. There were many vials on the racks, and some of them had viscous red liquid inside, like they were preserved human organ.

There were many similar things. If this was a normal person, they would have turned around and left immediately, but as medical students, Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian did not think any of that was scary.

Along the rows of racks, the stuff inside was messier. There were abandoned fire extinguishers, broken photocopiers and computers, and unused tables and chairs piled up in the corner. There were reports stuck inside the drawers, and broken gym equipment sat on the chairs. Further into the storeroom, there were drama costumes abandoned by the drama society, canvases given up by the arts society, and a lot of other junk. When the university moved campus, most of the junk had been deposited down there.

“I’ve asked the people at the new campus. Before the move, a few of the societies left the more difficult to deal with pieces for the school to deal with. To save money, the school left them in this underground storeroom.” Ma Yin walked ahead and used her phone to search amid the mountain of rubbish. “The only society that I can think of that would have any use for statue and sculpture is the arts society, so we should focus on this section tonight.”

After taking a few more steps, Ma Yin realized that Liu Xianxian was still standing where she was. “What’s wrong with you?”

“Look at that.” Liu Xianxian pointed at computer that sat in the corner. The plug for the monitor was plugged inside the socket.

“When we were here the last time, I was afraid that the plug might cause a short-circuit, so I removed the plug, but now the plug is still inside the socket.”

“Looks like someone has indeed been in here. Could it be a thief?”

“Why would a thief purposely come here to use the computer? Furthermore, this is an abandoned model. I don’t think it can be operated anymore.” Liu Xianxian pressed the power button, and to her surprise, the computer powered on. The screen shone a cold light, but the image froze, like it could not process beyond that.

“Just ignore it, we should focus on our search. Even if someone did sneak in, it won’t affect our progress.” Ma Yin turned to focus on the corner where most of the arts and crafts stuff sat. She moved some of the amateur paintings aside to look for the statue. Liu Xianxian stood where she was, staring at the monitor. It was unclear whether it was a flicker in the system or the shadows, but she could swear that she saw the shape of a human on screen. She leaned in closer to take the look, and the person’s face became increasingly clearer. It looked like a bald man, and his face was twice the size of a normal person’s.

“Okay.” Liu Xianxian removed the plug and walked to help Ma Yin with the canvas. The two worked together to move all the canvases out of the way, and beyond all of that was a wooden cupboard.

“There should be something inside this cupboard,” Ma Yin said as she moved to open the door. However, when her finger touched the door, she immediately jerked back.

“What’s wrong?”

“There’s something on the surface.” Ma Yin rubbed her fingers and gave it a sniff. “Why is there formalin on the door handle?”

The formalin on the stairs outside could be explained as an accidental splash, but what about the cupboard behind the canvases? That was too weird.

“Could there be a cadaver hiding inside this cupboard?” Ma Yin’s heart raced, and her breathing became uneven. She took in a deep breath before edging the door open. She looked inside the gap, and there were no bodies inside the cupboard, just several paintings.

Ma Yin sighed in relief as she took the paintings out. However, when she saw the content of one of the paintings, her heart squeezed again.

The painting style was rather derivative. It was a painting of medical students operating on the cadaver, but the weirdest thing was that the drawing was painted from the cadaver's perspective.

Lying inside the cold storage, looking at the tightly-covered medical students, the scalpel in his hands, and then at the cadaver's own body.

There was an emotion that was running through the painting. It was an envy of life, an envy of that supple skin, those movable joints, the things that he had lost. He wished that he could have that instead of lying on the slab, unable to do anything as the students cut open his body.

“The painter is quite creative, painting this from the perspective of the cadaver.” Ma Yin looked at the painting in her hands. She was influenced by the emotions elicited by the painting, and she did not feel so good.

“It’s quite weird, don’t you think? Painting from the cadaver’s perspective, as if it’s a living person... it looks off.” Liu Xianxian glanced at it once before she lost interest. “I have a feeling this painting is for the dead. Perhaps the painter is the cadaver.”

...

“Stop joking.” Ma Yin put the painting aside. When she prepared to pick up the second painting, her finger accidentally brushed against the canvas, and it felt wet, “It still hasn’t dried?”

She stood where she was with her mind blank. “The painting feels like it just been painted. There has to have been someone else in this storeroom recently, but why would they paint in here? And why paint such a weird topic?”

Ma Yin thought about what Liu Xianxian said before they entered the building. A student saw someone waving at him when he passed by the western section of the campus, and following the shadow, he discovered a seriously ruined cadaver.

Could the painter really be the cadaver? A scary thought appeared in her mind. Ma Yin could not stop herself as she staggered backward. She wanted to stay away from the cupboard, but she was curious about the other painting. Eventually, curiosity won over fear. Ma Yin walked to the cupboard and took out the second painting.

It was an oil painting, and the colors used in the painting were quite depressing. A gray sky, a black crow poking at a startling white body, and a decaying arm poking through the ground.

Such a depressing view of the world, there’s no color at all.

Ma Yin turned to the third painting. It was a painting of a young girl holding an apple. This painting was completely different from the other two. The girl was wearing a cute, vibrant outfit, standing under the neon lights. The apple in her hands was a burst of red. From the background to the character, it was filled with brightness and color, but the painting still gave one an uncomfortable feeling.

The reason was the main character. The little girl was completely different from the rest of the painting. Her exposed skin showed an unnatural gray-ashy color. She held the apple in her hand, wanting to give it a bite, but she knew, even if she did, she would not know the taste of apple. There was a simple desire on the girl's face; she wanted to know the taste of apple.

Putting down the third painting, Ma Yin looked at the last painting. It was a realistic painting, and it had a dead person as its subject. A normal person might have been uncomfortable, but Ma Yin was unaffected. After her first autopsy class, she understood something. A dead person was categorically different from a living one. A dead person was no different from a cold machine, comprised of complicated parts, but it was a machine that could not run again.

The man in the painting looked at his body, probably wondering whether he could still be called human. After staring at the human portrait in the painting for a long time, Ma Yin suddenly remembered something. She took out her phone and clicked open the video that her sister had sent her before her disappearance. When the video reached twelve-second mark, she pressed pause.

The camera was aimed at the window. A woman was hanging on the windowsill, exposing half of her face. Comparing the face to the painting, Ma Yin suddenly realized that the color of the woman's skin was similar to all the human characters in the paintings!

What's going on? One is real since it's captured on film, but the other is fake because they were painted.

Her arm shook involuntarily. She had a feeling that the woman in the video and the people in the paintings were all looking at her. She put the paintings back into the cupboard and closed it—only then did the feeling disappear.

The main characters of the paintings are all cadavers, so in that case, the woman climbing on the window is also a cadaver? But how could a cadaver climb onto the windowsill?

When the video stopped, the woman by the window was staring at the person behind the camera. Through the screen, Ma Yin felt like the woman was staring at her.

There was a complicated emotion in her eyes—that is not something possible for cadaver.

Ma Yin closed the video. She was quite afraid staring at the woman.

My sister's disappearance has to do with this woman and these few paintings are my clues.

With her hand on the cupboard door, Ma Yin touched the sticky substance, and she was confused. There is residual formalin on the door, and the paintings are painted from the perspective of the cadaver. Sis disappeared after she saw something similar to a dead body, did the cadavers really come back to life?

“Xiao Yin!” Liu Xianxian’s voice came from behind her. This cowardly girl sounded like she had walked deeper into the storeroom alone.

“Where are you?” Ma Yin could only hear Liu Xianxian’s voice, but she could not see her. There was too much trash in the storeroom blocking her view.

“Xiao Yin!” Liu Xianxian called again. Ma Yin, who had been spooked by the paintings and the video, was cautious. She picked up a broken chair lying to the side and walked toward the sound of the voice. Walking through the racks, she saw a straight shadow standing in an inconspicuous corner of the room.

“Liu Xian?” Ma Yin held the chair with one hand as she raised her phone. Before the light hit the shadow, she felt someone touch her shoulder. “Who is it?”

Her arm moved, and Ma Yin swung the chair behind her. Just as the chair was about to hit the person, she saw who it was and forced herself to stop. The chair brushed against the person and knocked into the rack, creating a loud bang.

She pulled back her arm. Liu Xianxian was also scared because she did not think Ma Yin would react so violently. “Xiao Yin, what’s wrong with you tonight?”

Putting down the chair, Ma Yin took in a deep breath. “What’s wrong with me? Were you trying to scare me to death by tapping on my shoulder like that?”

“But we’ve been here several times already. There’s nothing to be afraid of.” Liu Xianxian thought she saw a twisted expression on Ma Yin’s face for that moment.

“This time’s different. Now I can be sure someone has been in here before us!” Ma Yin was suddenly reminded of something. She aimed her phone at the corner!

“Xiao Yin, stop scaring me. Who is here other than us?” Liu Xianxian stood behind Ma Yin. “Even if someone was here, he must have left already.”

“No, he’s still here. I just saw him with my own eyes!” Ma Yin could not have imagined that, while they were searching through the storeroom, there was another person in there with them. “We have to leave immediately. I have a very bad feeling.”

Ma Yin picked up the chair from the floor and tried to persuade Liu Xianxian to leave.

“No, we cannot go now.” Liu Xianxian stood her ground as she held onto Ma Yin’s arm. “I just came back from the other side of the storeroom. I found the statue.”

Chapter 381 - The Weeping Statue

Chapter 381: The Weeping Statue

At this most dangerous moment, Liu Xianxian found the statue they were looking for. This should have been a happy occasion, but Ma Yin found it so difficult to smile. She was certain that there was a third person hiding in the storeroom—maybe he was hiding in a corner, watching them at that very moment. Should they leave or take a risk?

“No, I still think it’s too dangerous. Since we know where the statue is now, we can come back tomorrow. There’s no need to rush this.” Ma Yin tried to convince her best friend. “Listen to me, we need to leave.”

...

“Two questions won’t take that much time.” Liu Xianxian was stubborn. The man that she loved had become a thorn in her heart. Releasing her grasp on Ma Yin, Liu Xianxian walked deeper into the storeroom alone. “It’ll end soon. In a few minutes, I’ll know the real answer.”

She sounded like she was possessed.

“Liu Xianxian!” Ma Yin was agitated. She wanted to leave, but she could not abandon Liu Xianxian. Her two hands holding the chair, she gave chase after Liu Xianxian.

The two girls reached the last rack that was on the left side of the storeroom. Liu Xianxian pointed at the gap between the rack and the wall. “The wall behind that rack is hollowed out, and the statue is just behind it.”

Ma Yin leaned on the rack and shone the light into the gap. There was an ugly face that looked back at her. When the light hit the statue, the eyes of the statue seemed to blink.

“There’s only one statue inside this storeroom, so this has to be it.” Liu Xianxian grabbed the edge of the rack. “What are you doing standing there? We’ve finally found the thing we’ve been looking for so long—why aren’t you helping?”

"I feel like there's a reason someone purposely hid the statue behind the rack." Ma Yin looked at the statue, and for some reason, it felt familiar to her. The two of them moved the rack aside, and a faint smell drifted out.

"What is that smell? It seems to come from the statue. It smells like... decomposition?"

"Why would a statue smell like decomposition?" Liu Xianxian walked to the statue with her phone, and the light hit the statue fully. It was a sculpture of a mature male. It was larger than a normal man, and it was well-built. However, the face was distorted, so ugly that people would not look at it directly. Very rarely would a sculptor do something like this, unless there was a special meaning.

"The words at the base and the face, it's the same as the statue in your video." Liu Xianxian looked at this statue, and her fingers shivered. She had finally found the solution to the question that had been bothering her for so long.

The hollowed-out alcove was only one meter wide, and the statue was placed at the very back. He looked like a devil with his arms open, ready to welcome the lost lambs. Standing before statue, the smell intensified, but Liu Xianxian did not seem to smell it. She put her hands together and lowered her head silently.

"In my heart..."

"Wait a minute!" Ma Yin interrupted Liu Xianxian. "You'd better think about this carefully before you ask the question. According to the legend, this statue can verify the validity of any statement. If the statement is true, it will shed blood tears, but if it's fake, then something scary will happen."

"I know." Liu Xianxian was closed to any advice. She took another step and told the statue softly, "The man inside my heart, he also likes me, yes?"

Inside the darkened storeroom, the girl asked the question inside her heart, and she turned to focus on the statue's eyes with anticipation. If the statue wept, then she was right. Liu Xianxian started to get nervous; she could even hear her own heartbeat.

One second, two second...

Half a minute went by, and nothing happened. The statue did not cry, and nothing scary happened.

“The legend’s fake?” Liu Xianxian leaned weakly against the wall like her energy had been sucked out of her body. Her hope morphed into a bubble and was popped. Ma Yin stood behind Liu Xianxian—she seemed to have expected this result. Often, people did something not to wish for any result, but it was because of that drive of hope. Ma Yin patted Liu Xianxian’s shoulder lightly, but she did not know how to best console her roommate.

“I’m fine.” The trained smile appeared on Liu Xianxian’s face. “This statue once appeared in your sister’s video. You have to go and check whether there’s any clue regarding her disappearance. I’ll be fine.”

Ma Yin nodded. She took out her phone to pause the video where the statue was on screen. “The statue in the video is completely identical to this statue. I only need to find out who this statue’s original owner is, and I’ll be able to find the killer.”

She recorded the statue on her phone, not letting go of any details. The camera moved from the statue’s chest to its cheeks. The sense of familiarity in Ma Yin’s heart increased like she had done something like this before.

“Have I forgotten something?” After recording everything, Ma Yin put her phone away. “The legend involving the statue is fake, but at least the appearance of this statue has proven something—the video that my sister sent me is real.”

She stared at the statue before her. Looking at that ugly face, an urge blossomed in her heart. She reached out to touch the statue’s icy skin, and Ma Yin asked the question that had been troubling her. “My big sister is dead, isn’t she?”

Disappeared and dead were two different things. Even after so many years, Ma Yin still had some hope in her heart.

After two seconds, Ma Yin shook her head. “The legend is fake, so why am I doing this? It’s just a story to trick children, and we’ve fallen for it.”

She was talking to herself, but when she finished, the stench in the air grew, and the light from the phone twisted. The originally silent storeroom started to echo with a pounding sound like something was knocking into the racks.

Ma Yin sensed the change in the air, and she prepared to leave when Liu Xianxian yelled, "Xiao Yin! Look at his eyes!"

"His eyes?" Ma Yin understood it immediately and turned to look at the statue's eyes. Two lines of blood were flowing down the statue's eyes. The blood was thick and red, forming a great contrast to the plaster-white skin.

"The statue cried?"

Ma Yin stood where she was, and soon, she was covered by fear. "The statue will cry when it's a truth, but when Liu Xianxian asked her question earlier, it didn't respond."

The light was distorted even more, and the pounding sound became more consistent.

Ma Yin looked at the blood tear on the statue's face, and a weird emotion formed in her heart. It was fear and familiarity, like she had been through this before.

"We cannot stay here any longer. We have to leave now!"

...

Liu Xianxian was completely unmoved by the urgency in Ma Yin's voice. Her slender arms curved inwards to hug her shoulders like she was suddenly feeling very cold.

"So, he really doesn't love me. I've been reading too much into this." Liu Xianxian's emotions were unravelling, and she started to cry, talking to the air. "Since he doesn't love me, then why did he give me hope? Why did he torture me?"

Ma Yin shook Liu Xianxian. "We can talk about this outside. It's not safe here."

She was about one head taller than Liu Xianxian, and she was also stronger. She forced Liu Xianxian out from behind the rack. When the two of them turned, the statue at the inner most part of the storeroom elicited the sound of teeth grinding. The tears of blood kept falling like the statue was about to come to life at any moment.

Unlike when they entered, a weird change was happening to the storeroom. The racks moved to form a maze, and the trash blocked the road, making it difficult for them to exit.

"Didn't we move the canvases to the side of the wall? Why are they still blocking the path?" Ma Yin needed to take care of Liu Xianxian, who was in the middle of a breakdown, and tried to mow their way out. She moved the heavy canvasses aside, her heart screaming, Faster, faster!

The pounding sound entered her ears. It sounded like it came from a particular corner of the storeroom. Ma Yin's forehead was covered with sweat; she had never been so fearful in her life.

After moving several canvases, she moved forward and realized that the tables and chairs that were stacked up in the corner earlier had been moved to sit in the middle of their escape route.

"Did the chairs come alive? Who could have moved so many of them in such a short amount of time without making a noise?" Ma Yin dragged Liu Xianxian forward. She did not have the time to move the tables and chairs one by one anymore. "Follow me, we're jumping over these things!"

Liu Xianxian had also noticed the differences. Even though she was devastated, she did not want to drag her roommate down with her. The two girls climbed over the teetering tables and chairs. When they reached the highest spot, Ma Yin saw that the monitor, which had been turned off, was on again. The monitor was rather obvious in the dark storeroom.

Who turned the computer on? The person that I saw earlier?

The thought had just appeared in her mind when the shape of a human face appeared on screen. It was a bald man with a bloated face.

At the same time, the photocopier beside it started to operate on its own. Paper shot out from the chute, and there was a human face printed on each page. The paper flew out, and the human face became clearer. Without any hesitation, Ma Yin jumped down from the table. The room was completely dark, and she could not see anything without the light from her phone.

"Quick! This way!" Ma Yin took out her phone to provide Liu Xianxian with some lighting. Liu Xianxian aimed for a spot that had no trash, and when she was prepared to jump, something touched Ma Yin on her back. Ma Yin jumped and immediately turned her phone around. At the same time, Liu Xianxian jumped.

The spot that was originally empty suddenly had an extra chair that only had three legs. Liu Xianxian's left leg stepped on the edge of the chair. She screamed as she fell to the ground. Her arms were bruised, and she sprained her leg.

Ma Yin just turned around when Liu Xianxian screamed behind her. She felt like she was losing her mind.

“Come, I’ll carry you!” Ma Yin had just picked Liu Xianxian up when she felt something touch her back. This time, she was prepared. Her fist tightened as she turned back. She missed, and she lowered her head to look. She then realized it was the paper from the photocopier that had hit her.

She shone her phone on it, and there was a faded human face on the paper. His face was bloated and ugly. His hair and brows seemed to have fallen off due to extended period of submersion in a certain type of liquid. He looked like a rubber ball.

“Why would such a thing come out from the photocopier?” She had Liu Xianxian climb onto her back and powered forward. The face on the paper became clearer, and Ma Yin ran past the monitor. When she passed the photocopier, the paper slowed down, and she turned subconsciously to the scanner on the photocopier. In the faded light of the scanner, there was a bald man smiling at her!

Her breathing became slow as Ma Yin forced herself to run faster. She was already scared, and she still needed to carry Liu Xianxian. Her energy quickly drained. She only ran for a short distance before her legs felt like lead.

“Xiao Yin! Put me down!”

“I’m fine.” The two girls continued to move forward. The closer they were to the door, the louder the pounding sound.

“Will something block the door?” Fear curled around Ma Yin’s heart. Various ghost stories related to cadavers and underground morgues flooded her mind, and the color drained from her face. “Impossible! That is all fake.”

She ran at the door. At first, it was just a pounding sound from the door. Then there was a pounding sound from under the rack. Finally, the pounding sound came from everywhere.

“What is making that noise?” Ma Yin’s face was white. She did not dare stay. She ran through the racks to get to the door. The wooden door’s lock was broken, so it could not be locked, but the pounding sound now came from the door.

Just as Ma Yin hesitated whether to go out, one of the lockers beside the rack was shoved open. Following the pounding sound, something dripping wet, hairless with the shape of a human, landed on the ground and slithered toward them like a snake!

“Be careful!” Liu Xianxian screamed. Ma Yin decided to run out the door—staying in the storeroom meant death. At least out the door, she had a chance of getting to the surface.

“Hold onto me!” Ma Yin shoved the door open, and she saw something like a human bouncing on the ground. The pounding sound was its head knocking against the door “Run!” Liu Xianxian screamed. Ma Yin carried her and ran back the way they came. However, as they turned the corner, something even more despairing happened.

Standing in the corridor was a man. His face was shrouded in darkness, but she could see the half-a-meter-long murder weapon he was holding in his arms!

Chapter 383 - I'm Not a Bad Guy

There was a shadow holding a creepy-looking hammer standing in the dark corridor that seemed to lead right to hell. The man blocked the only way out—he was the manifestation of despair itself. Ma Yin did not have much energy left in her body. Her footsteps slowed down, and the color disappeared from her eyes as she looked down the corridor with helplessness. Compared to this man who held the murder weapon, it was obvious that the weird thing that slithered on the floor behind them was easier to deal with.

She did not dare move forward. Her legs weakened, and fear drained the energy from her body.

...

“What should we do?” Ma Yin asked for Liu Xianxian’s opinion. At this moment, they only had each other.

“The underground passage is complicated and connects to the various labs at the western side of the campus. Should we just run backward? If we’re lucky, we might find a way out, but it’s more likely that we’ll get trapped inside the tunnels.” Liu Xianxian bit on her lips and made the second decision. “The other choice is to rush forward. If the man tries to attack you, toss me at him. I’ll try my best to stop him, and you run as fast as you can to go and find the teacher and the security.”

“No, I won’t do that.”

“My ankle is sprained, so I cannot run. It’s that, or both of us are going to die here!” Various newspaper headlines that stated how a young girl was found dead in her campus flashed across her mind, and even though she tried to stop them, the tears kept on falling.

“Die here...” Ma Yin was reminded of the few paintings that she had seen inside the cupboard. The paintings made her feel fear and terror. Ma Yin nodded as she made this painful decision. “I will run at the top of my speed and find someone to come save you.”

"I'll wait for you." When they finished their discussion, the monsters had been catching up to them. The man who blocked the corridor had noticed them as well. The half-a-meter-long murder weapon twirled in the air, and the man walked toward them.

The smell of blood crept through the underground corridor, and there was a red shadow flickering beside the man. Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian were trapped by threats coming from both ends. The two girls moved toward the man as they had planned, but they only took several steps when Ma Yin was unable to move anymore, and on her back, Liu Xianxian was as pale as a sheet of paper.

Blood vessels seemed to crawl over the man before them, and perhaps due to fear, Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian heard the sound of blood dripping in their ears. That introduced a change to their plan. Ma Yin's bodily instinct told her to slow down, her brain giving her signal to tell her to stay away from the man. Liu Xianxian's heart was filled with regret. When she was really facing death, she found out how cowardly she was. With tears falling down her cheeks, she grabbed Ma Yin's shoulders. "Should we try going deeper into the underground morgue? Perhaps we might be able to find other exits?"

Before Ma Yin could answer, the man's speed suddenly increased. She screamed, and before her mind came to a decision, her legs carried her away from the man. It was too scary!

Turning back the corner, there were several fish or snake-like humanoid monsters in the corridor. They were quite happy when they saw Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian return on their own, but their smile soon disappeared. The smell of blood in the corridor overwhelmed the smell of formalin, and the blood vessels crept along the wall like spider web.

What were those things?

The sound of footsteps echoed down the hall. With the Red Specter following behind him, Chen Ge ran to the girls with the hammer. "Don't be afraid! I'm here to save you!"

However, no one stopped because he said that. Including the monsters, everyone ran deeper down the corridor. Looking at Liu Xianxian and Ma Yin running along the monsters down the corridor, Chen Ge's lips twitched. "What is the meaning of this?"

The corridors would get even more crisscrossed down the line. Afraid that Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian might get lost in the tunnels, he picked up his speed again. “Stop running!”

Ma Yin was carrying Liu Xianxian, so her energy was exhausted after a short distance of running. Noticing the man catching up to them, she experienced the sting of despair so acutely for the first time in her life. It was exactly as depicted in that painting. The decayed hand reached for the sky, but it could never touch it.

“Xianxian, I cannot run anymore.” Ma Yin did not know what kind of tone she was using when she said that sentence. She turned to look at Liu Xianxian, who was crying. She gripped her fists trying to fight the man behind them, but when she turned around and met his gaze, she understood how fragile her courage was before this man. She stopped moving like she had surrendered.

The smell of blood intensified. The blood vessels that crept on the wall became more numerous as the despairing shadow got closer to them. Ma Yin closed her eyes; she did not want to watch her own demise.

The footsteps approached them in mere seconds. The imagined pain and assault did not appear, but when the footsteps stopped beside them, they could not help but scream. Even after their screams, the pain did not appear. Just as they thought this was going to be a cruel game of cat and mouse, they opened their eyes to realize that the man had already wandered away.

He waved that unknown weapon in his arms and ran down the corridor. With wet tears still in their eyes, Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian watched Chen Ge run away from them, and it felt like they had been given a second chance at life.

“Let’s go!” The two had not completely lost their sensibility. They supported each other and staggered down the corridor. Chen Ge was chasing the retreating monsters when he turned back to see the escaping girls. He hesitated and decided to give up on the monsters.

If I continue to chase after them, I might accidentally trigger the Trial Mission at the underground morgue. Since Zhang Ya hasn’t awakened, I’d better be more careful.

Chen Ge stopped moving. There was another reason he made this decision—the underground tunnels were complicated, so it was very disadvantageous to him.

Looks like I need to make more preparation. At the very least, I need a map of the underground morgue.

Chen Ge put the hammer away and continued to walk backward. The two girls shook violently when they saw him coming their way. They wanted to run but could not. Recalling Xu Yin into the tape, Chen Ge stood in the dark corridor so that the girls could not see his face clearly. “Don’t be afraid, I’m here to save you.”

He was quite a bright person, but since he had spent so much time with Specters, it had introduced a contradictory element to his presence.

Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian did not dare move. In fact, Liu Xianxian almost fainted from fear.

“Even though it would take a long for anyone to discover your bodies and there is enough time to deal with the evidence and clues, don’t worry, I would never do something like that.” Chen Ge held the hammer with both of his hands. “Actually, I only have a few questions to ask you. I hope that you can answer honestly.”

The two girls squeezed together with their backs against the wall, and they kept nodding to Chen Ge's every word.

"Don't worry, just answer honestly to my questions." Chen Ge waved the hammer in his hand. "I will not hurt you, provided that you do not purposely lie to me."

...

"Please just ask your questions. We promise to tell you everything we know." Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian had pale faces. Their bodies kept shaking, causing their words to stutter.

"What are your names? What is the number of your dormitory, and who is your counselor?" Chen Ge started with known information to test if they would lie to him. The two girls provided honest answers. Whether Chen Ge asked or not, they told him everything.

"Sounds like you two are just normal students, so why are you here so late at night?"

"There is a campus legend about a statue. As long as you can find it before midnight, you can ask it a question." Ma Yin told Chen Ge the reason that she and Liu Xianxian were there. To prove their innocence, she even took out her phone to show Chen Ge the video.

This was the first time Chen Ge had seen the video left behind before Ma Yin's sister disappeared. The victim had shot the video from underneath the bed. There seemed to have been a recent tragedy in the house because there was blood everywhere. The video was only thirteen seconds long, and the frame froze on the woman by the window at the last second.

"My sister's disappearance should have everything to do with this woman with a skin disease." Ma Yin offered her opinion in a soft voice.

“Don’t rush to any conclusions. The victim is recording from under the bed—the bed sheet is rumpled, and a bloodied sheet can be seen peeping out from the dresser door. Obviously, a murder just took place in this room. In other words, other than the person holding the camera, there was a second victim.” Chen Ge looked through the video again. “There is a noose hanging in the middle of the room, giving the impression that someone committed suicide by hanging. However, there is no stool on the ground, so could it be that this is just as set-up created by the killer? Even though the room is a mess, weirdly enough, the sculptures on the shelf are all untouched, and the statue is not wounded. The bedroom is possibly not the first crime scene.”

A murderer analyzed the situation logically while holding the camera. This unsettled Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian. They did not know what kind of emotion they should be showing.

“The woman by the window is definitely suspicious. From the muscles on her arms and the point she grabs to the window, her feet should be supported by something. If the wall outside the window didn’t have a protruding spot for her to put her feet on, then the other explanation is that this room is on the ground floor.” Chen Ge stared at the woman’s face in the video. “Of course, that is provided this woman is not a ghost.”

“Ghost?”

“Look at the woman’s skin color for yourself. Does she look like a normal person to you?” Chen Ge returned to phone to Ma Yin.

“In that case, this woman has to be the killer!” Ma Yin felt some energy returning to her.

“Do you have some kind of misunderstanding about ghosts? Not all ghost would harm people for no reason. Look at the woman’s eyes closely; she has no malicious intent. Furthermore, if she was the real killer, why would she stay at the window after committing the crime?”

Ma Yin did not know how to answer that—this was the first time she had met someone who would come to a ghost’s defense. Her palms became sweaty as the thought entered her mind. Could this man be a ghost, too?

Chen Ge could feel the fear from Ma Yin, but he had no idea which sentence of his had spooked her. “Okay, that’s all the question I have.

Now take me to go see that statue.”

“The statue is inside the storeroom, but it’s not s-safe in there,” Ma Yin stammered. “It’s haunted.”

“What kind of ghost is haunting it?” Chen Ge asked the first question that came to his mind, but it stumped both Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian.

How should we answer this? Ma Yin’s forehead was covered with cold sweat. When a normal person heard that a place was haunted, even though they might not be afraid, they would be suspicious. What kind of question is this man asking? How many kinds of ghost are there?

“I’m not really sure.” Her voice shaking, Ma Yin felt like the tears were about to fall from her eyes.

“Bring me to go take a look.”

There was power in Chen Ge’s voice that ensured his command was not denied. Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian did not think about running. They supported each other as they staggered step by step to the storeroom door.

“Paradise?” Chen Ge saw the words that were painted unevenly on the door. “Why is the abandoned storeroom called paradise? Does it have relaxation and entertainment facilities?”

Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian shook their heads. They did not understand it either.

“This place is rather interesting.” Chen Ge squatted down to examine the claw marks on the door. He placed his finger over the groove; it fitted perfectly. “These should have been gouged out by human hands.”

This observation made the claw marks even creepier.

“The number of the monsters is higher than I thought.” Chen Ge pushed the door open and led the way. “Where is the statue you mentioned?”

“Behind the rack at the back of the storeroom.” Then Ma Yin softly reminded him, “The computer and photocopier are weird. When we were in here earlier, they activated on their own.”

“The photocopier you say?” Ma Yin successfully piqued Chen Ge’s interest, and he ran to the photocopier. The tables and chairs blocked the way, and the white papers that covered the floor was printed with the face of a man.

“Such an ugly mug, but it is creative to hide inside a photocopier.” Chen Ge looked at the photocopier that had stopped working. He pushed the plug into the socket and switched the monitor on.

Weirdly enough, he tried the power button many times, but the computer refused to switch on. “What’s going on?”

Both of the girls were shocked as well, and they started to plead, “We’re not lying to you. There is a ghost inside this photocopier. I saw it myself!”

Ma Yin pulled the photocopier’s lid open, but there was nothing underneath it. “Where did it go to? It was just here earlier!”

“I know you aren’t lying to me. It’s probably run away already.” Chen Ge moved the tables and chairs away. He smashed those that were too tangled, and a path was cleared.

The two girls followed behind Chen Ge. Seeing the hammer in his hand, they had zero intention of trying to escape.

The three walked to the alcove behind the rack, and Chen Ge finally saw that ugly statue.

“This is the weeping statue?”

“Yes, he can verify the authenticity of a statement. If the statement is true, he will bleed tears of blood. We tried it earlier, and it’s real.”

Chen Ge nodded. He did not quite get the theory behind this statue, but that was not an issue because if he did not know the answer, he could just ask the question.

With his hand on the hammer, Chen Ge walked up to the statue. He looked at the statue's eyes and asked his first question.

"You can verify the validity of my every sentence, yes?" Chen Ge's question was not that difficult because he did not plan to make an enemy of the statue. He waited for half a minute, but the statue did not react.

...

"What's going on? Why didn't he cry?" Chen Ge turned to look at Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian. When the two girls saw him turn around, they shivered involuntarily.

"That's impossible! We've tried it earlier; the statue is real." They were underground, and the only source of lightning they had with them came from the phone. Ma Yin wanted to take a closer look at the statue, so she raised the phone that she had in her hand. However, just as the light hit the statue, she immediately put her hand down like she had realized something.

She urgently apologized to Chen Ge. "I understand your rules. I didn't see your face, and I don't know what you look like. I didn't see anything! We will not speak a word of what happened here to anyone!"

Her gaze focused on that creepy-looking murder weapon, and Ma Yin wished to throw her phone away. Now that she had been taken hostage, she was worried that they would be silenced for knowing too much.

Inside the basement at 2 am, first they ran into ghost, and then they were chased by monsters that looked like bald fishes and finally this murderer. A series of mental collapses had hollowed out Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian's minds. Their minds were completely blank—they just wanted to return to the surface as soon as possible.

“Afraid that you might get killed?” Chen Ge said to himself. “I cannot say your worry is not unfounded.”

Hearing that, the two girls almost cried. “It’s alright, I won’t blame this on the two of you.”

Chen Ge turned back to the statue. With his Yin Yang Vision, he could see the blood stain around the statue’s eyes. “Was my question to difficult?”

When he was studying the statue, Liu Xianxian, who stood behind Ma Yin, slowly calmed down. Listening to Chen Ge’s voice, she felt it sounded very familiar, similar to someone in her memory.

“Impossible, why would he be here at 2 am? I should be mistaken.”

Chen Ge ignored the two girls and walked around the statue, dragging the hammer. “A stench is coming out from inside the statue, I do wish to break it open to take a look.”

He moved to stand before the statue again. “This time, I’ll try a simpler question. I hope you’ll give it much consideration before giving the answer.”

Chen Ge pressed the play button on the recorder and picked up the hammer. “Do you think I can smash you into pieces in under a minute? If you don’t, then I would love to give it a try.”

White noise came out from Chen Ge’s backpack, and several seconds later, two lines of blood escaped the statue’s eyes.

“Looks like the legend is real.” Chen Ge laughed satisfactorily. Listening to his laugh, the two girls behind him shivered. They looked at the statue in the dark corner, and for some reason, they felt pity for it.

The Pen Spirit can predict the future, but it is only fifty percent accurate. This statue can verify the authenticity of every word. If I combine their powers, doesn’t that mean I will have a one hundred percent accurate prediction every time?

Chen Ge started to have ideas for this statue.

I don’t think it’s possible for me to carry this thing out alone. Asking two girls to help me is quite unreasonable. I suppose there’s nothing I can do for now.

The blood tears slid down the statue's face, making it look quite pitiful. It only stopped crying when Chen Ge turned off the recorder.

I suppose I won't walk away empty-handed tonight. Chen Ge turned to ask the girls, "Is there a limitation to number of questions I can ask in that legend?"

"Amount of question?" Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian thought that Chen Ge was going to leave already, but who would have thought he would ask something like that? "I don't think so."

"No limitation?" Chen Ge felt rejuvenated. The statue had been placed in the storeroom for such a long time, so he must be familiar with this place. Chen Ge put the hammer away and very gently helped wipe the tears on the statue's face away.

"Okay, now I will ask you the second question." Chen Ge looked at the statue's ugly face. "The monsters that hid in this room earlier came from the underground morgue, yes?"

Several seconds later, blood red tears came from the statue's eyes.

"Very good, third question, there are people or monsters scarier than me in the underground morgue, yes?" The blood tear did not stop. The scene made the two girls close their eyes.

"Fourth question: someone is secretly helping the monsters in the morgue, yes?" The statue's tears had dried, but his survival instinct forced him to push out some tears.

"Looks like my previous speculation was not wrong. This underground morgue is complicated." Chen Ge realized that the statue was reaching its limits, so he asked the last question. "This is the last and most important question, so you'd better consider it carefully. The chairperson of the ghost stories society is Captain Yan from the police department, yes?"

The term 'ghost stories society' seemed to have a special meaning to the statue. When it heard these four words, the stench disappeared instantly like the soul on the statue had escaped.

"You cannot say? Could the society be the one who placed the statue here? Is the underground morgue also related to the society?" Chen Ge leaned close to the statue. His finger brushed across the statue's eyes, and there was one last blood tear drop that was oozing out.

“Looks like Captain Yan is really unrelated to the society.” Chen Ge touched the statue’s head, “Thank you for your help, but I have to remind you, none of the members of the society are sane; it’s dangerous if you follow them. Why not go toward the light? I’ll protect you in the future.”

The statue did not show any response, and Chen Ge did not force it. He pushed the statue and placed it horizontally on the ground. He looked from underneath the base—the statue was hollow.

“The Pen Spirit can predict the future because it is possessed by a spirit. This statue has a similar ability, so it is probably related to a ghost as well.” Chen Ge reached his hand into the statue. “The space is very big. I thought the statue would be hiding a body, but I’m mistaken. But something must be different about this statue since it can be possessed by a spirit. There might not be a body inside it now, but it doesn’t mean that it wasn’t hiding a body before this.”

Chen Ge talked to himself, not caring about how the others with him felt. Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian were greatly panicked. They thought the man was finding a suitable spot to abandon their bodies.

“Anyway, the result is not bad for tonight. Let’s leave for now.” Chen Ge stood up and picked the statue back up. “The statue says that there is something scarier than me in the underground morgue. Based on my current ability, it is probably not enough to deal with that three-star trial mission.”

The three-star Trial Mission at Jiujiang Medical University would be a hard place to navigate without a map, so Chen Ge knew that he had to be careful. “I’ll need to leave the statue here for now. Perhaps I should try to communicate with the school first. After all, if I need to complete the underground morgue mission, the school will be involved somehow.”

The underground morgue was the last side mission that led to the four-star School of the Afterlife, so Chen Ge could not afford to be too cautious. A three-star trial mission is already so scary—a four-star mission would have been unimaginable, much less the five-star mission.

...

The black phone had its own system of categorizing the scary scenarios, but Chen Ge still had not grasped the standard of measurement yet.

His mind filled with thoughts of other things, he walked back to the two girls, holding the hammer. Without his Yin Yang Vision, he would not have been able to see the girls in the dark.

“Come on, I’ll walk you out.” Chen Ge seemed to change into a different person as his tone softened. “In the future, try not to wander off into strange places. If I didn’t arrive in time, who knows what would have happened.”

The two girls had pained expressions on their faces. The man had almost killed the statue from their campus ghost story, and he had the audacity to say the place was dangerous.

“Don’t be afraid. I was acting so harshly earlier because this place is too creepy. If you’d shown any trace of fear or retreat, you’d be targeted by the monsters.” Chen Ge held the hammer in one hand. “Actually, in real life, I’m a gentle and kind person.”

“Gentle and kind?”

“Yes, of course.” Chen Ge’s voice was now filled with warmth. Unlike earlier, there was a sense of familiarity that arose in the hearts of Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian. It felt like they had heard this voice somewhere before.

“Come on, it’s time to leave.” Chen Ge walked ahead. When he passed the computer and photocopier, he gave them another try. After making sure that the computer could not be activated, he gave up.

The three exited the storeroom, and when they closed the wooden door, Chen Ge heard coming from down the corridor, something that sounded like a bubble bursting, like many things were bouncing on the ground.

“What is that sound?” Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian heard that as well.

“Doesn’t this corridor lead to the underground morgue?” Even with the Yin Yang Vision, Chen Ge could not see what was happening.

“Don’t know, but it should extend to the underground basement of the western part of campus. That section was sealed up several years ago.” Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian’s eyes twitched violently like something seriously bad was about to happen.

At the end of the corridor, the sound of bouncing became more rapid, and it was mixed with the weird sound of a beast breathing. There was no ventilation underground, but they could feel the presence of a draft, covering their nostrils with the smell of formalin.

“Run, it’s not safe to stay here!” Chen Ge grabbed the hammer and yelled at the girls, ” Run! ”

Before Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian realized what had happened, Chen Ge had already turned around and charged forward.

“Is something chasing after us?” Liu Xianxian’s ankle was sprained. She wanted to move fast, but her body did not allow it.

“Come, I’ll carry you.” Ma Yin’s own physique had not recovered. After picking up Liu Xianxian, she slowed down. The sound of bouncing came close, causing their hair to stand on end. They did not dare imagine the thing that made that sound.

“Put her down!” Chen Ge’s voice came from the front. Ma Yin wanted to say no, but before she could say anything, she saw Chen Ge pull Liu Xianxian off her back and onto his own. Then he continued running. “Follow me!”

Ma Yin felt rejuvenated by hope seeing this, and she tried her best to keep up to Chen Ge. Chen Ge had an average build, and he did not look that muscular, but his explosive power and persistence was not worse than a trained athlete. They rushed forward.

When they ran out of the underground second floor, Ma Yin felt like fainting already, but Chen Ge showed no sign of slowing down. “Keep it up, this place is very dangerous!”

Chen Ge rarely put himself in a dangerous situation that he could not handle. When the underground morgue gave out that sound, the recorder activated on its own, and Xu Yin kept giving him a warning. To be able to make Xu Yin do that, the enemy had to be at least a Red Specter, which was why Chen Ge chose to run immediately.

The end of the corridor was a three-star scenario, and Chen Ge had never underestimated three-star scenarios. The Third Sick Hall aside, whether it be the well ghost in Coffin Village or Zhang Ya at Western Jiujiang’s Private Academy, they were the most powerful existences among Red Specters—one Xu Yin would not be able to rival their power.

When they arrived at first underground floor, Ma Yin did not have much energy left in her. It was Chen Ge who dragged both of them out from the underground. After leaving the stairs, Chen Ge kicked the front door open and dropped Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian on the grass. He was also exhausted.

Of the three, only Liu Xianxian was not that tired. She looked at Chen Ge’s face in the dark, and that sense of familiarity heightened. She gathered her courage and took out her phone to shine on Chen Ge.

“Boss Chen?” She gasped. Even though she had suspected that earlier, it was still quite unbelievable.

“After you that surprised? I thought you realized that earlier,” Chen Ge said and provided the reason that he had thought of earlier. “When you came to my Haunted House this morning, I noticed that the two of you were hiding some secrets. I was worried about you two, so I’ve been following you.”

Ma Yin had other questions, but she was interrupted by Chen Ge. "Don't need to thank me. You're my guests, and since I noticed it, I couldn't just let it be."

He silently moved the hammer inside the backpack. "I don't have anything to ask for. The reason I'm doing is so that I can sleep at night. If you really feel like repaying me, then bring more friends to come visit my Haunted House."

Chen Ge's image increased tremendously in the girls' hearts. Even though Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian still had many questions, there was one thing they could not deny—it was Chen Ge who had saved them that night.

"Thank you."

"Quickly return to your bedroom. It won't be good if you're discovered wandering around the campus at 3 or 4 am." Chen Ge glanced at his own shadow. "We can continue this discussion in the morning."

Chen Ge sent the two girls away, and he prepared to return to New Century Park. He turned around to glance one last time at the old education block. He wanted to say something like When Zhang Ya wakes up, I'll return, but to his surprise, the door that he had kicked earlier had been opened again.

Something came out? Why didn't I notice it?

Chen Ge looked around him before turning to look in the direction that the two girls had left. His pupils narrowed, and he saw a third woman following behind the two girls.

Then the three of them entered the female dormitory together.

How long has there been a third one?

Chen Ge was startled before he ran toward the female dormitory. The woman who trailed behind Liu Xianxian and Ma Yin seemed to notice him as well as she turned around to glance at Chen Ge. The ashy skin spoke of death, and her eyes were filled with complicated emotions.

...

Wait, that face?

The woman who followed behind Liu Xianxian and Ma Yin was the woman who appeared in Ma Yin's video!

The facial features and the emotions filling her gaze were all the same. Chen Ge did not dare waste time and charged forward.

"Be careful!" he screamed, but Liu Xianxian and Ma Yin did not seem to hear him. The woman placed her hand on Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian's shoulders. She leaned into the space between them and whispered something into their ears. Due to the distance, Chen Ge could not hear her clearly, but he did see the girls' bodies turn stiff and the focus in their eyes swaying. They eventually closed their eyes, but their bodies kept moving like they were sleep-walking.

"Ma Yin! Liu Xianxian!" Perhaps Chen Ge's shout had its effect because the two girls slowed down, and the expression slightly changed like they were caught in a nightmare. They were also struggling, but the result was different from what Chen Ge anticipated. The two girls did not wake up, but after moving for a few more steps, they fainted and collapsed to the ground.

The woman who trailed behind them turned to look at Chen Ge. She held his gaze as she pointed toward her heart. She made a weird sign before turning to disappear inside the female dormitory. The woman disappeared in the blink of an eye. Chen Ge managed to catch that there was a hole in her clothes near her shoulder like it had been shot through by a bullet.

“Why did she point at her heart? Was that a threat? Was she trying to warn me?” Chen Ge ran to the female dormitory and slammed on the window. In reality, his scream earlier had already awakened the dormitory manager.

“Someone fainted! Just outside the dormitory front door! Help!”

A man banged loudly on the window at the entrance of a female student’s dormitory at 3 to 4 am. The manager, who was an auntie, did not dare come out on her own. She picked up the phone to call the security and the school admin.

...

A glass of warm water that had gone cold was placed on the table. Chen Ge glanced at the clock on the wall—it was already 5:40 am. The light filtered down on him. He placed both of his hands on the table and looked at the seven people who sat across from him calmly.

There included police officers, school security, and teachers at the university.

“I have told you many times, I am not a prevent, and it was not me who made the two girls faint. You can doubt me, but please remember everything that I am saying now. When the two girls wake up, I want you to personally apologize to me.”

“Chen Ge, of course, we believe that you are innocent, or else Captain Yan would not have personally assigned me to watch over this case.” Lee Zheng had dark circles under his eyes. They had just parted about ten hours ago, and ten hours later, they met up again in a different environment. Looking at Chen Ge, Lee Zheng felt like he was looking at one of his colleagues.

“The two girls came to visit my Haunted House yesterday morning. I realized that they were seriously troubled by something, and after I asked them, I found out the taller girl’s elder sister has gone missing, and it has been troubling her for a very long time.” Chen Ge placed his hand over his heart. “Perhaps you might think my action is very weird—why would I help them if I am not related to them? But I want to tell me, my parents also had a mysterious disappearance half a year ago, and since I understand what she is going through, I have the urge to help her!”

Chen Ge's voice echoed in the office, and it sounded quite convincing.

"Two girls fainted in front of the female dormitory at around 3 am. We have looked through the surveillance video. At the time, you were the only one who was following them. If you are not the culprit, then who could it be?" The person who spoke was a man in his thirties who dressed fashionably. He normally stayed at the staff dormitory, so when the news exploded, he was one of the first to come over.

"I don't know. It could be anyone, including you." Chen Ge did not show any intention to back down, and he would take on anyone who dared challenge him. "The fainting of two girls might not appear to be that serious, but there is a bigger case behind it."

There was a chilliness in Chen Ge's eyes. Other than the few police officers, the other people felt unsettled in their heart.

"I've already told you, the two girls came to find me at my Haunted House. The girl called Ma Yin... her sister has disappeared, and she studied so hard to enter Jiujiang Medical University to find her missing sister because her sister was once a student here..." Chen Ge told the school how Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian had been sneaking out of their dormitory every night lately to find the statue that was part of the campus legend.

"Most of the urban legends are fake, but a small portion of them are based on real events. However, after being tossed around as rumors, it was exaggerated to an impossible proportion." Chen Ge took a sip of the water. He sounded calm, but his brain was turning fast, trying to come up with a way to distract everyone's attention.

"You mean, the story of the weeping statue is real?" Lee Zheng was comparatively familiar with Chen Ge, and at the very least, he knew that Chen Ge would not create stories.

"There is a video on Ma Yin's phone that was sent to her before her sister's disappearance. The weeping statue in the underground storeroom showed up in the video. As long as we can find the owner of the statue, I'm sure we can use that as a clue to look for her sister's killer!" Chen Ge cupped his hands over the glass, and veins were popping on the back of his hands.

Not everyone in the room bought his story. They were there because they were told there was a pervert who was caught trailing female students. They definitely did not expect that to lead to a murder case.

“We’ve found the video that you mention.” Lee Zheng’s expression was weird. “The video wasn’t taken on Ma Yin’s phone. A few years ago, when Ma Yin’s sister disappeared, her parents came to the police station to seek our help. At the time, they also provided that video, and after analysis by our technicians, we found that the video wasn’t sent by Ma Yin’s sister; it was shot by Ma Yin herself.”

“Ma Yin was the person who shot the video?” Things were different from what Chen Ge expected.

“Indeed, to be precise, when Ma Yin’s elder sister disappeared, she was together with Ma Yin, but Ma Yin cannot remember what happened that day.” Lee Zheng flipped through his phone. “We still have the case files with us. A few years ago, her parents regularly came to check up on the progress, but they gave up recently.” Lee Zheng sighed softly. “When Ma Yin’s sister disappeared, Ma Yin hadn’t even enrolled in university yet, but now she is about to graduate.”

“No wonder she is so desperate to find her sister.” After Chen Ge heard what Lee Zheng had to say, he was not feeling so well. He turned the cup in his hand, and he was suddenly reminded of something. “The video is shot from the first-person view. Obviously, there had been a murder in the house, and when I first saw the video, I managed to confirm the presence of a second victim. Since it has been revealed that the video was not sent to her from her sister’s phone and shot by Ma Yin herself, the one who shot everything under the bed was Ma Yin! The other victim was most likely her sister!

“The murderer was inside the house, so how did she manage to survive the ordeal? In the last second of the video, she saw the woman hanging on the windowsill. Is it possible that it was this strange woman who saved her?

“She had lost the memory for an entire day. Could that be the doing of this strange woman as well? She didn’t want Ma Yin to remember certain things.”

At this point, Chen Ge stood up from the chair. “Have Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian woken up? Quick go and check up on the two of them. I suspect they might have forgotten the things that happened last night!”

The woman who entered the female dormitory with Liu Xianxian and Ma Yin earlier was similar to the woman who leaned on the windowsill several years ago. A few years ago, she managed to make

Ma Yin lose her memory, so there was no reason she would not do the same thing several years later.

“Calm down, I will call the doctor down.” Lee Zheng dialed a number on his phone. “Doctor Zhang, have the two girls awakened? Is it okay if we go and talk to them?”

The not-so-optimistic voice of the doctor came through the phone. “They have already woken up, and they’re physically fine. However, they seemed to have suffered some kind of trauma, so their mental state is not that stable.”

“Okay, we’ll be there in a bit.” Lee Zheng and the other officer led the way. The security guard at the campus and the male lecturer flanked Chen Ge on both sides. They did not seem like they trusted Chen Ge that much. The group entered the infirmary together. Liu Xianxian and Ma Yin were lying in bed, and their faces were pale.

“Are you feeling better? I have a few questions that I need to ask you two about last night.” Lee Zheng moved a chair over and sat down beside the beds. He saw both Liu Xianxian and Ma Yin shake their heads at the same time.

“Last night, we were in our bedroom, but for some reason, we ended up in the corridor. We cannot remember anything that happened in between.”

“Please try to remember. Last night, the three of us went into the underground morgue together. In the end, it was me who saved both of you!” Chen Ge squeezed his way to the side of the bed. He was pulled back by the security and the doctor; they were afraid that Chen Ge might scare the girls. But it was weird—the pale-faced Liu Xianxian and Ma Yin felt much calmer when they saw Chen Ge. It was as if this man gave them a sense of security.

“I cannot remember what happened last night, but I cannot sense any malicious intent from him.” Ma Yin touched her head. “I feel like I’ve forgotten something very important.”

Liu Xianxian had a deeper impression of Chen Ge compared to Ma Yin, perhaps because Chen Ge had carried her and run for quite a distance. Now, even though part of her memory was missing, staring at Chen Ge, she knew instinctually that this man was a good person, someone reliable. “Last night, he helped me and Ma Yin. I cannot tell what happened exactly, but I am sure that without his help, Ma Yin and myself would have been in serious danger.”

Liu Xianxian sounded so sure and confident when she said that. She even smiled and added a thank you to Chen Ge.

“Last night, you say.” Chen Ge narrowed his eyes. The memory loss of these two girls had to do with that woman with ashy skin. He remembered seeing the woman lean into Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian’s ears to say something before they started to look like they were sleep-walking.

The ability to eclipse a part of someone’s memory, I’ve seen this ability before. Chen Ge thought about it internally. Looking at Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian, Chen Ge was reminded of a different person—the police officer who was retiring, Ol’ Wei. When Ol’ Wei entered Coffin Village with Chen Ge, he seemed to have a run-in with No. 10 from the ghost stories society, and then part of his memory disappeared as well.

Ol’ Wei’s condition is similar to Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian! Does this mean he has also run into the woman with ashy skin? The Zhu lady said that No. 10 had a dead body on his back; could that dead body be this woman with ashy skin?

When Chen Ge asked the statue in the underground storeroom about the ghost stories society, the soul inside the statue had disappeared instantly. Therefore, the underground morgue was probably related to the ghost stories society as well.

The ghost stories society’s chairperson should have access to more than one door. One of the doors is the blood door at the Third Sick Hall, so could the other door be the door in the underground morgue? Chen Ge was shocked by the thought that surfaced in his mind. He felt like he was getting close to uncovering the real identity of the society’s chairperson!

No. 10 should be very familiar with Jiujiang Medical University.

Familiarity with Jiujiang Medical University, seen him wearing the Doctor Skull-cracker’s mask at least once, and participated in many cases where Chen Ge was involved... At this point, a name suddenly popped up in Chen Ge’s mind.

He Feng!

When Murder by Midnight was first introduced, He San had come to visit with a few other students from Jiujiang Medical University, and the eldest and tallest among them was He Feng. At the time, Chen Ge had been impressed by this young man’s ability to stay calm under duress and even exchanged numbers with him. Chen Ge had planned to invite the man to join him as he expanded his empire.

Could it really be him? Chen Ge was still deep in thought when the eyes of Liu Xianxian, who was in bed, suddenly reddened. She was looking at someone among the group. Following the direction of her gaze, Chen Ge realized that the clean-looking man had his eyes jumping all over the place. He was trying his best to remain unaffected. Looks like this is the man Liu Xianxian was in love with.

Perhaps beauty is indeed in the eye of the beholder.

The perfect man in Liu Xianxian's eyes had zero advantages in Chen Ge's eyes other than his passable fashion sense.

The black phone hasn't announced that the one-star mission is complete. Looks like I need to be cautious of this man.

Ma Yin and Liu Xianxian became Chen Ge character witnesses. They both said that Chen Ge was a kind person, and with the testimony from Lee Zheng, the incident was thus settled. When the sun rose, Lee Zheng brought the campus security into the underground morgue to remove the statue.

Then, they connected the school admin at the new campus, and the investigation to check who left the statue inside the underground morgue began. Things were taken out of Chen Ge's hands. While no one was noticing, he picked up his backpack and prepared to slip away from the campus. As he waited for a taxi to arrive, he suddenly saw the man whom Liu Xianxian had a crush on also trying to run away from the scene.

Now should be the time the school is busiest, but he is not staying behind to help, so where is he rushing to? Chen Ge hid inside the convenience store, and after the man got into the car, Chen Ge also hailed one of his own to follow after the man.

The taxi drove for about ten minutes before stopping at Fang Hwa Apartments.

According to Lee Zheng, the man has a permanent residence at the staff dormitory, so what is he doing at Fang Hwa Apartments?

Chen Ge did not have a good impression of Fang Hwa Apartments. He got out of the taxi and silently tailed the man.

Chapter 388: The Three Actors

The man that Liu Xianxian had a crush on was very alert. Thankfully, this was not the first time Chen Ge had needed to tail someone, and it was due to his experience that he was not exposed. His apartment is in Fang Hwa? This place is not that far from Jiujiang Medical University, and the bus comes pretty often. In that case, why did he ask for a staff residence at the school?

Chen Ge did not dare get too close. He watched as the man entered the third building. It's the third building again. This cannot be a coincidence.

...

After enough time had passed, Chen Ge also entered the building. He was familiar with the building's layout. He pretended to be a tenant and very naturally head for the safety door. He was halfway through and realized that there was no one waiting for the elevator.

The man didn't take the elevator? Chen Ge held his breath as he entered the safety passage. There were no footsteps echoing down the stairs either. Right then, there was the sound of door opening on the first floor.

He's living on the first floor itself. Chen Ge stood in the half-open door and leaned out to look down the corridor.

Room 3004.

He remembered the room number before slinking over it to stick his ear to the door.

The man's voice on the phone filtered out from inside the room. "Brother-in-law? The school has not been safe recently. Things keep happening at night. Do you mind if I stay at your place for a while? Don't worry, I will not mess up the place. I will not touch a thing of yours or sister's. I know how important this place is to you. I know, I understand. I promise to not enter your study! Will not touch anything!”

After the call ended, the man's tone changed immediately. “Do you really think I want to be here? Such a pretender. Do you think I really want your charity?”

Outside the room, one could hear the man rummaging through the room. He appeared mature and confident, but a completely different soul was occupying his body. After a bit more grumbling, the man continued to ransack the room. The sound of doors and drawers being pulled open echoed endlessly.

“That room has been rearranged, so the layout is different from before. No one should be able to tell the difference. I need to check it again.” The man moved inside the room, and he had no idea his monologue was audible to Chen Ge.

One of the rooms has been rearranged? Why would he conduct an investigation at a time like this?

The man's actions were weird. Chen Ge initially thought that he was a weirdo and did not relate him to the murder, but with every sentence that escaped the man's lips, his suspicion of the man continued to grow.

After a few more minutes, the man seemed to have gotten all the necessary tools and entered the room. Due to the distance, Chen Ge could not hear anything. He remembered the room number and exited the building to walk to the window. He squatted down and crawled to the window of room 3004. Chen Ge glanced into the room. The man had a toolbox in his hands, and the look on his face as he stared at the bed in the room was quite scary.

“When I first stepped into this room, I felt it was cold. Even after so many years, I still cannot forget about it.” When the man focused on the bed, Chen Ge clicked open the camera on his phone and silently recorded the layout of the room. The room had many partitions, making it feel smaller and more cramped than it was.

There is no table or bookshelf, and the mattress is also different from the one in Ma Yin's video, but the location of the bed hasn't changed. Peeking through this window allows me to have a clear view of stuff under the bed.

The furniture inside the room had been changed, and the interior had been transformed due to the partitions. On first glance, it was indeed different from the room in Ma Yin's video. However, he missed a very important element—the window.

The man had not seen Ma Yin's video. He only knew that Ma Yin had captured a video from inside the room, but he had no idea about its exact content. Based on the layout of the room and the man's words, Chen Ge was fifty percent certain that this man, who Liu Xianxian had a crush on, was related to Ma Yin's sister's disappearance. His hand went to the hammer inside the backpack, and he was itching for action.

No, the sun is still out. It's too inconvenient to do things like that in broad daylight.

It was almost the beginning of the working day. There were many people in the residential area. If Chen Ge injured the man, he would definitely scream. If a crowd gathered, Chen Ge would really have no way to explain himself.

He works at Jiujiang Medical University, and so many things happened at the campus last night. He must have a lot of things to do, so he wouldn't dare stay too long at home. He'll be leaving soon. I'll take my chances then.

Chen Ge took out the comic to attempt to negotiate with the ghosts inside it. However, probably it was daytime, only one of them answered his call.

So heartless?

In the end, it was Yan Danian who helped Chen Ge convince the other three ghosts. Chen Ge could sense a trace of liveliness in Yan Danian that was absent before this.

After summoning the gambler, Ol' Zhou, and the English teacher, Chen Ge told them his plan. He needed them to 'accidentally' steal the key. The three ghosts were doing this for the first time, and it was a challenge for them too.

Several minutes later, as Chen Ge expected, the man exited Room 3004. He put on the confident smile. His clothes had no wrinkles, and his shoes were shined.

It's time to move.

Perhaps because the light in the room was stronger, the three ghosts could only stay in physical form for twenty or thirty seconds, so Chen Ge only had one chance. When the man was about several meters away from the safety door, Chen Ge put all three of them out at the same time.

The very moment he did that, before he even realized what was happening, Ol' Zhou already landed a punch on Bai Qiulin's face. "You dare to cheat with my wife! You f*cker!"

Then, he started tussling with Bai Qiulin. Their fight was dragged out of the safety passage and knocked into the man.

"Stop fighting!" Duan Yue screamed as she ran out to try to stop the fight. Everything happened so suddenly that even Chen Ge himself was stunned, much less the man. The three tossed and turned, and the man was pushed against the wall. The argument was so intense that he did not dare interrupt them. At a time like this, he just wanted to escape.

After about fifteen seconds, Bai Qiulin swung Ol' Zhou's hands away, and he ran into the safety door.

"I will definitely kill you today!"

Ol' Zhou and Duan Yue chased after him. The three completed the mission in about twenty-three seconds.

Holding the key in his hand, Chen Ge felt the event was quite surreal.

"My God, what just happened?"

Chapter 389 - The Owner

Chapter 389: The Owner

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The man cursed under his breath, patted down his clothes, and made sure his shoes were sparkly clean before leaving. He did not notice the lack of a key in his pocket. After the man had been gone for several minutes, Chen Ge used his key to enter Room 3004.

If this was someone else in this situation, they would have been cautious and tense, worried that the owner might return because, after all, the man was a suspected murderer. However, Chen Ge did not have that worry. The last murderer that had set his sight on him was still in the ICU with two arms and one leg broken.

...

“As long as I have good intentions in my heart, there is nothing to be scared about.”

Chen Ge looked at the opened drawers and cupboards, but he did not venture to randomly touch the stuff in the room. Instead, he walked into the bedroom and placed the phone down under the bed. He tweaked the phone until the camera angle was similar to the video on Ma Yin’s phone.

“Even though partitions have been added to the room, they did not change the location of the window.” Chen Ge tapped the partition lightly and memorized the layout of the room. “This man is very suspicious.”

Chen Ge stood in the middle of the room, thinking about the comments that Liu Xianxian had made about the man.

“After we left the teahouse, Liu Xianxian told me that this man is different from other men out there. He had all the good points of a mature man, but there was one thing weird about him—he thinks that his wife, who died in a car accident a few years ago, is still alive. The man packages himself as an emotional and trusting person, but reality does not seem that way. From how I see it, the man hasn’t even married, and this room is not even his; it’s his brother-in-law’s.”

People in the throes of romance would lose their rationality, and Liu Xianxian was a naive girl, so Chen Ge suspected that she had been conned by this man.

“Perhaps Ma Yin’s sister was conned by the man as well.” Chen Ge came up with various possibilities. “When she discovered the man’s real identity, they had an argument, and the man accidentally killed Ma Yin’s sister.”

He wanted to call Liu Xianxian to ask for more details, but he was afraid that the girl might act rashly and do something unnecessary. To prevent himself from being exposed, Chen Ge eventually decided against that.

“The man’s maturity and confidence are a facade. Internally, he is a very self-abasing person. Based on the conversation he had with his brother-in-law, it is obvious that he hates his brother-in-law. Perhaps the brother-in-law is the source of his self-abasement.” Chen Ge was suddenly interested in this brother-in-law. “On the phone earlier, the brother-in-law forbade him from entering the study. This means that there is probably something important inside. Perhaps I can use that to figure out the brother-in-law’s identity.”

Chen Ge entered the study. The study was twice the size of the bedroom. Two bookshelves were stocked with various types of books, and there was a study table near the window.

“The man’s brother-in-law appears to be a heavy reader.” The man had an eclectic collection from philosophy to art, from modern medicine to study of the occult. Chen Ge did not touch the books on the shelves because, for a real book lover, they would know the exact position of each book, and Chen Ge was afraid of leaving a trace. He opened the dresser to take a look; it was very tidy inside. Chen Ge walked to the table and pulled open the drawer. It had two laptops of the same model.

“Why are there two laptops, and why are they kept inside the drawer?” He took them out and placed them on the table. He pressed the power buttons. One of them opened like normal, but the other one had a password lock. “They serve different purposes?”

Chen Ge got even more interested in the owner. “Since the laptop is locked, there must be something important sorted in this.”

Chen Ge clicked open a random folder on the desktop, and when he did, he was shocked. The folder contained more than one hundred pictures and about twenty videos. Most importantly, all of the media was related to Chen Ge's Haunted House! The pictures covered all the scenarios, including Coffin Village!

"The only visitors who have visited Coffin Village are Sister Mao's group, so where did these pictures come from?" Chen Ge did not feel so good. He looked at the time stamp, and they matched the day of Sister Mao's visit. In other words, the owner of this house had taken the pictures from Sister Mao's group after they visited the Haunted House in the morning.

"But they were sent directly to the hospital after their visit. Does this mean the owner is someone working at the hospital?"

The more Chen Ge scrolled through the media files, the more unsettled he became. All the pictures and videos were time-stamped. He clicked open the earliest video. It was shot about one month ago at exactly the time he unlocked Murder by Midnight!

The video was blurry, and a few students' voices could be heard in the recording.

"That is He San and his friends' voices!" Chen Ge immediately thought back to the scene at the time. He had just unlocked Murder by Midnight when the students from Jiujiang Medical University came to create problems for him, to take revenge for Gao Ru Xue.

At the time, one of the students planned to take a video inside the Haunted House and shared it online. Chen Ge had mixed himself into the group of students. There should only have been seven people, so he had become the eighth one.

The video was shaking badly. When the cameraman realized there was an additional person caught on video, he dropped the phone out of fear. The camera was facing up, and it caught Xu Wan walking over from the other side of the corridor wearing Doctor Skull-cracker's outfit. The video froze on Xu Wan's face. She was wearing the scary mask that was sewn together from many human faces.

The video itself had no problem, but the timing and location was too weird.

"When I arrived at the ghost stories society for the first time, No. 10 recognized me immediately because he had seen the mask on my face."

Initially Chen Ge thought No. 10 was definitely one of his customers, but after watching this video, he realized that things might not have been that simple.

“No. 10 is someone I know in real life, but that person might not have visited the Haunted House personally.”

When the group from Jiujiang Medical University first came, it was He Feng who led the group. Chen Ge suspected the young man to a certain degree, but be it from the aspect of age and presence, Chen Ge did not think He Feng was No. 10.

“The chairperson should be someone else.” Chen Ge stared at the computer screen. “Why is this place’s real owner so interested in my Haunted House? On top of that, why did he purchase a house in Fang Hwa Apartment’s third building?”

The top floor of the building was the headquarters for the ghost stories society. The owner was familiar with Chen Ge’s Haunted House and lived in this building. Chen Ge’s conclusion was the real owner should be the last survivor of the society.

He desperately needed to know the owner’s real identity. He clicked open the other folders to find for more clues.

Chapter 390: Xiaoxiao's Special Power

The cursor clicked on the other files on the desktop. Most of them were in English, and Chen Ge could barely understand it. He opened the comic to summon the English teacher, but ghosts seemed to receive plenty of damage when they appeared in places where sunlight could hit them directly. Chen Ge looked at how fragile Duan Yue was and did not force her. Without any other solution, Chen Ge took out his phone to snap all the information. Chen Ge exited the camera app and called Inspector Lee.

“Uncle San Bao, I have a favor to ask.”

...

“Is it about the blood test result on the nail? I’ll go help you rush it in the afternoon.” Inspector Lee sounded like he was outside and not at the police station.

“No, I want you to help me investigate the owner of Room 3004 at Fang Hwa Apartments.”

“Why do you want to do that?”

“Okay, I will try my best.”

After hanging up, Chen Ge thought back to everything that he had touched in the room. He cleaned up his fingerprints and left Room 3004. He called a taxi to get back to New Century Park—a new day had begun.

The one-star mission triggered by the Special Visitor, Liu Xianxian, had not been completed. Technically speaking, Chen Ge had already followed the black phone’s requirement to find Liu Xianxian, but he did not receive the message that the mission had been completed. I probably need to help her solve the issue in her heart.

The mission would not be that difficult. The man that she loved might be a murderer, so if Chen Ge could prove that, Liu Xianxian should know what to do. After all, one of the man's victims was her best friend's older sister.

With his employees getting more familiar with the work, Chen Ge became freer. Since he had nothing to do, he called Lee Zheng during his lunch break to ask for an update on the case. In reality, he was more concerned about that statue. He wanted to sneak that statue to his Haunted House.

Lee Zheng was at the new campus, interviewing people. No one had any recollection of that statue. It felt as if the statue had walked to the underground storeroom itself. The case ended up in a standstill. Chen Ge gave Lee Zheng a hint, asking him to pay close attention to the man Liu Xianxian had a crush on.

There was no accident that business day. One thing worth noting was that some people had started to challenge the three-star scenario. This group had probably heard about how Coffin Village had caused five people to faint, so they very naturally avoided that scenario and targeted the Third Sick Hall.

They were so confident before they entered, but they all surrendered before they were even halfway through. However, this did raise an alarm in Chen Ge. As more visitors started to challenge the three-star scenarios, eventually, the scenario would be cleared.

I should pace myself. The most crucial thing is to deal with the ghost stories society and complete Third Sick Hall's hidden mission.

Sitting inside the room, Chen Ge took out his comic. He had Yan Danian and the other ghosts try to communicate the phone spirit. He allowed them to use any method to convince the phone spirit that it was such a wonderful and blissful thing to work for Chen Ge's Haunted House.

Time slowly passed. Chen Ge's phone suddenly rang at 4 pm. He thought that it was Inspector Lee calling him with an update, but when he glanced at the caller ID, it was an unfamiliar number.

"Why would a stranger call me?" Chen Ge accepted the call and placed the phone beside his ear.

"I'm sorry, but is this Mr. Chen?"

“Yes, it’s me.” It was the first time Chen Ge had heard the voice on the other side of the phone, and it was laced with sadness.

“Are you the one who helped solve the case at Ping An Apartments?”

“Yes.”

“Do you have time now? The old gentleman’s condition is deteriorating. I’m afraid he won’t be able to stay with us any longer.” Hearing that, Chen Ge was stunned. “Hello? Are you there? Can you please come over? The old gentleman stated his wish to see you in person.”

“I’ll be there in a minute.” Chen Ge took out his phone to call Xu Wan and Gu Feiyu, who were working. He told them that they should close up after the current visitors left. They were not going to accept any more visitors.

He ran into the staff breakroom, holding the phone. Pushing the door open, he saw Xiaoxiao hugging the white cat’s tail. They looked at one another like they were in some sort of fight. In the end, it was the white cat who surrendered. It allowed Xiaoxiao to hug its tail as much as she wanted. It revealed a haughty expression like it did not want to lower itself to a girl’s standard.

Xiaoxiao snuggled herself face into the white cat’s body. Smothered by the puffy white fur, she felt it was quite interesting.

“Xiaoxiao...” Chen Ge stood at the door and silently shoved the phone into his pocket. He walked to the bed and picked Xiaoxiao up. “Let’s go pay your grandpa a visit.”

This time, Chen Ge did not place her inside his pocket but held her in his cupped palm. Xiaoxiao seemed to sense something as she looked at Chen Ge with a strange expression. Closing the door, Chen Ge charged out of the Haunted House.

“Uncle Xu, we’re closing early today. Please help me console the visitors. When Xu Wan comes out, please remind her to close the gate before she leaves.” Chen Ge ran toward the park exit.

“You’re closing at 4 pm? Where are you going?” Uncle Xu was completely caught by surprise. The visitors standing in lines were nervous, too, especially the few who were at the front of the line.

“Boss, how can you do business like this? The closing hour is 7 pm, but it's only 4 pm now!"

"I didn't have the chance to line up last time! This time, it's finally my turn. Can't we discuss this?"

"This is so rude!"

The visitors berated him. Chen Ge was surrounded in the middle, and in his arms, Xiaoxiao were shivering with fear. Chen Ge used his hand to caress Xiaoxiao's head, and he turned to tell the visitors, "This is my Haunted House's responsibility. If you have bought the ticket but haven't entered the scenario, then I'll compensate double the price."

Chen Ge turned to glance at Uncle Xu. "Uncle Xu, please help me record who needs compensation, I'll pay later."

"You can leave if you have an emergency, but we still have Xu Wan and Gu Feiyu. Couldn't we just let them carry on until you return?" Uncle Xu was confused. "Initially, only you and Xu Wan managed the place, and everything was fine, right?"

"It's different. Safety first. I don't want to risk it." Chen Ge's tone brooked no argument. "Just do what I ask."

Chen Ge did not hesitate and carried Xiaoxiao as he squeezed through the crowd. Perhaps because there were so many people, Xiaoxiao curled up in Chen Ge's embrace like she was afraid.

"It'll be fine, I'm here."

Chen Ge touched Xiaoxiao's face and called for a taxi to get to the hospital.

Chen Ge arrived at 4:30 pm. He called the doctor and rushed up the stairs.

When he pushed open the door to the second-floor corridor, two familiar faces walked toward him—Doctor Gao and Ol' Wei.

“Chen Ge?” Ol’ Wei and Doctor Gao said in unison. Neither of them had expected to run into Chen Ge here.

“I’m here to see the old man from Ping An Apartments. Excuse me, where is Room 269?” Chen Ge spoke quickly. It was not the time to chat.

...

“Come with me, I’ll take you there.” Doctor Gao seemed to be very familiar with the place. He led Chen Ge down the corridor, and Ol’ Wei followed. After double checking the number of the room, Chen Ge glanced into the room through the door’s window. Two nurses and a doctor were standing beside the bed. They seemed to be communicating with the old man. The old man’s condition was bad. He had his eyes closed, and his lips moved, but no one seemed to understand what he was saying.

Chen Ge knocked the door before entering. One of the nurses recognized him and whispered something to the doctor. The doctor nodded and signaled for the nurses to leave the room.

“Mr. Chen, I called you here today because of two things.”

“How is the elder doing? Didn’t he seem like he was recovering when I left last time?”

The doctor sighed softly and walked to stand beside Chen Ge. He kept his voice low to prevent the old man from hearing him. “We have tried our best. His physical condition was not good to begin with, and he suffered under the hands of the non-professional, trapped in his apartment for so many years. It is a miracle that he survived for so long. He held onto life because he wanted to find the killer that murdered his son.”

Chen Ge looked at the old man lying in bed who could not even open his eyes, and his mind was blank.

“Life hasn’t been fair to this old gentleman. His apartment is a haunted property, so it is hard for it to get sold. A few years ago, the government wanted to level the place to build a villa. They promised to give him compensation if he moved, but he refused no matter what. They tried all kinds of tactics, including cut off the electricity and water, but he refused to budge.

“Finally, when the workmen came to the door, the elder sat in the middle of the road with his wheelchair. He said that if the house got torn down, the clues to the murder would be gone, and the killer would never be caught.

“I cannot imagine how he managed to survive all these years. He’s malnourished and is down with many different diseases, but he held on for five years until the case was solved.”

At this point, even the doctor was overwhelmed with emotion. Since Chen Ge did not pick up the thread of conversation, he continued.

“We called you over because we want to respect his final wishes. This case is the only thing that kept him alive. You have fulfilled his wish, so he is thankful to you from the bottom of his heart.” The doctor gave Chen Ge a phone number. “This is number for the public notary office. He split all of his assets, including that apartment, into four parts.

“One will be donated to missing children funds; one will be donated to Jiujiang’s law enforcement; one is the reward for you for completing his dying wish; the last one is also for you, but the content stated is he wished you would take good care of his granddaughter. If it’s okay with you, please contact the people from the public notary office as soon as possible.”

“I have a question.” Chen Ge finally spoke. “Why are we talking about his will when the person is still alive? You should try your best. Don’t give up until the last moment.”

The doctor wanted to say something, but Chen Ge stopped him. “Do you mind if I have a private moment with the elder?”

Chen Ge did not show greed from the sudden windfall—this was different from what the doctor expected. He told Chen Ge several words and walked away. The room door closed. Chen Ge sat on one side of the bed and placed Xiaoxiao on the old man’s shoulder. There were sound of weeping in the room, but it was soft and unclear. Chen Ge held the old man’s hand—it was skin and bone. Holding it, it felt like he was holding a dried branch buried in snow.

“Sir, Xiaoxiao is still here. You’re her only family.” Chen Ge did not know whether the old man could hear him or not. He saw the old man’s mouth move as it made some incoherent noises like he was trying to say something.

He had many things that he wanted to tell Xiaoxiao—he probably did not want to leave just like that either. The door was pushed open lightly, and Doctor Gao walked into the room. He made a hand sign at Chen Ge and sat down on the other side of the bed. The long fingers massaged the old man’s shoulders and neck, and the man slowly relaxed.

“Let’s go out for now. We mustn’t give him too much stimulus at a time like this. He should rest.” Doctor Gao was similar to how he was when Chen Ge first met him—mature and kind, like he could handle everything.

Chen Ge looked at Xiaoxiao, who was leaning next to the old man’s shoulder, and he shook his head. Yin Xiaoxiao was the first baleful Specter that he found when he got the black phone. She was very unique and not at all scary. After so long, Chen Ge had gotten used to her presence, treating her as part of his family. “I wish to stay to accompany them a little longer.”

“Them?” Doctor Gao glanced at the old man and the rag doll in bed before patting Chen Ge on his shoulder. “It’s okay to be sad, but don’t forget to lift your head up to look at the sky.”

“Why?”

“Because that is life.” Doctor Gao walked out the room. “A few year ago, my wife got into a car accident. I also thought about ending my life then, but due to Xiao Xue, I understood something. Giving up on life means leaving the guilt of ‘not doing enough’ to those that really love you.”

“Your wife?”

“Yes, the love of my life.”

Doctor Gao walked out the door. After the door closed, Chen Ge sat beside the bed, thinking about what Doctor Gao said. His hand did not let go of the old man’s hand. He looked at the rag doll and the old man.

Actually, the fact that there are ghosts in the world is not so bad. At least there's a chance to make up for regrets.

The old man's condition was worsening, but with Xiaoxiao's company, he slowly calmed before falling asleep. The black phone in his pocket vibrated. Chen Ge took it out several minutes later. He had received a new message. He clicked it open and realized that the affection level Xiaoxiao had for him had increased to Partners for Life.

Partners for life? Does that mean...

Chen Ge placed his finger under the old man's nose. He sat back down after feeling the old man's breath. He continued to look through the phone. After the increase in affection level, there was an additional sentence to Xiaoxiao's tab.

“Soul Comfort: Can comfort other Specters and cleanse their soul.”

After putting away the black phone, Chen Ge finally understood why the old man would be able to fall asleep easily whenever Xiaoxiao came to accompany him.

It was not only because Xiaoxiao was his granddaughter—it was also because Xiaoxiao had the power to calm and warm souls.

Releasing his grasp on the old man's hand, Chen Ge straightened out the bedsheet for him and walked out of the room. Doctor Gao and Ol' Wei were waiting outside. When they saw Chen Ge, they walked forward. "Is the old gentleman asleep?"

"Yes." Chen Ge looked at the two, and his gaze lingered longer on Doctor Gao. "Why are the two of you here?"

...

"It's still about that memory loss." Ol' Wei sounded frustrated. "Ever since our return from the village, I've been receiving therapy from Doctor Gao to try to bring the memory back."

"Doctor Gao is helping you with the memory loss?"

"He's the best psychiatrist at Jiujiang, and he's familiar with criminal psychology. We've worked with him several times already." Ol' Wei seemed familiar with Doctor Gao. "However, before this, I was bringing others to come see him. Who knew the day would come when I'm the one who needs treatment?"

Chen Ge's expression did not change. He was thinking about something else. The night before last at Xi Xia Hu, when Lee Zheng entered the surveillance room, he had also acted like he was familiar with Doctor Gao. The doctor's ability to mix well with the police should have been due to more than his personal charm—it probably had to do with the fact that he had helped the law enforcement with cases before.

"Ol' Wei's problem is more serious, so he needs medication during his sessions. Even though I have the right to prescribe, the normal drugs that I have wouldn't have much of an effect on Ol' Wei," Doctor Gao said before leaving with Ol' Wei.

Watching them walk away, Chen Ge leaned against the wall, and his gaze became complicated.

Just in the room earlier, he pushed open the 'door' after mentioning he loves his wife. Hopefully, I'm overthinking.

He sat at the door for about ten minutes before the doctor and nurses returned to check up on the old man. The old man's condition did not improve, but he looked much better, and he was quietly asleep. Chen Ge picked up Xiaoxiao and stood beside the bed.

"Mr. Chen, if you have time, please come visit the patient more often in the future. Whenever you arrive, the patient's condition stabilizes."

"No problem," Chen Ge promised.

"I thank you on the gentleman's behalf. Honestly, I've worked here for ten years already, and this is the first time that I've seen someone help a stranger to such an extent without the promise of inheritance." The doctor smiled at Chen Ge. "It's rare to find people like you in today's society."

Chen Ge walked out from the room with the doctor. Then he was reminded of something. "Doctor, did Western Jiujiang's New Century Park send over several patients a few days ago? I hear they were scared until they fainted inside a Haunted House?"

"Yes, that is true. Why are you asking about that?" The doctor was surprised.

"Which sickbay are they in? I wish to visit them."

"Okay." The doctor hesitated. "They are on the fourth floor. Our president is familiar with the director of the park, so he specially set up a room to place the visitors who fainted. After that, he even set up a special emergency care unit to respond to the accidents that might occur at that theme park."

The doctor led Chen Ge to the fourth floor, and he grumbled softly, "I don't understand these people. If they are so easily scared, why did they insist on visiting a Haunted House?"

"What if it's not that they're too cowardly but it's the Haunted House that's too scary?" Chen Ge smiled and did not elaborate.

When they reached the fourth floor, Chen Ge glanced at the surveillance camera. There was a camera in the corridor that would capture the whole corridor.

“It’s room 437. Please don’t enter the room. The few patients are still quite weak, and they need the rest.” The doctor left after reminding Chen Ge. Chen Ge walked past the room. He did not dare look through the window for fear of scaring the patients inside.

There were videos from the Coffin Village scenario on the laptop in Room 3004. The only visitors who have visited that scenario are these few. Meaning, while they were hospitalized, someone came to steal the video footage from them.

Looking at the camera, Chen Ge called Lee Zheng.

“Chen Ge, why did you call?”

“Have you found the statue’s owner?”

“The man that you pointed out for me is definitely suspicious.” Lee Zheng was still thankful toward Chen Ge. After all, the man had given him a hint that restarted the progress of his investigation.

“Don’t let him run away, but there’s another favor that I need to ask of you.” Chen Ge mentioned that he needed Lee Zheng to use his name to get the footage from a surveillance camera in a hospital. Of course, Chen Ge did that in a roundabout way. Lee Zheng denied it initially, but when he heard it was related to the murder, and thinking about Chen Ge’s track record, he agreed.

With the accompaniment of a member of staff, they entered the security room. Chen Ge checked the footage for when Sister Mao’s group was sent to the hospital. They arrived at the hospital around noon and were given rest until 3 to 4 pm when the visitors woke up one by one.

However, their mental state was still very unstable. The staff could not imagine what they had been through to be in a state like this. At 5 pm, the second batch of doctors arrived. The staff explained that this batch of doctors were there to help with psychological counseling.

Chen Ge nodded slightly. He kept his gaze on the video, his eyes following a man on screen. As he expected, that afternoon, Doctor Gao had been to the sickbay!

Exiting the security room, Chen Ge had a feeling that was hard to describe. Things shouldn’t be that simple. I cannot come to any conclusions rashly. I should at least wait for the result to come from Inspector Lee first.

Reminded of that, Chen Ge called Inspector Lee again to ask about the blood result. Inspector Lee's answer surprised him. The technicians had found two samples on the nail. One of them came from a victim of the eye-gouging case, and the other was not available to the law enforcement, meaning that the other person had no crime record.

Chen Ge chatted with Inspector Lee for a few more minutes. He had Inspector Lee keep the blood samples and results before hanging up. When he left the hospital, it was already dark. Chen Ge bought some food from roadside stalls before calling a taxi to get back to New Century Park.

The park was already close. Xiao Gu and Xu Wan waited for him at the door with their make-up off.

"No accidents today, I hope." Chen Ge looked at the Haunted House and could not help but worry.

"We've paid back all the unused tickets, and since the park has encountered this issue before, the visitors are quite understanding." Xu Yin studied Chen Ge. "I'm actually more worried about you. You look like you need a good rest."

"I'm fine." Hearing that everything had been handled perfectly, Chen Ge sighed. However, this also made him realize a weakness to his Haunted House.

Xu Wan and Gu Feiyu could handle the one-star scenarios, but normal people could not handle three and two-star scenarios. Therefore, he was required to stay at the Haunted House when it was in operation.

Looks like my Haunted House needs a managerial-type ghost who can help me watch over the business when I'm not around.

Chapter 393 - Just the Talent I Need

Chapter 393: Just the Talent I Need

Seeing how quiet Chen Ge was, Xu Wan thought that he was not feeling well, so she added as consolation, “You have been taking care of everything on your own, and you don’t tell us anything. Don’t forget, we’re your employees, and we’ll stick with you.”

Xiao Gu also walked over to say, “Yes, boss. Even though I don’t know much and haven’t been to a good school or anything, if you need any help, I’ll do it without any question.”

...

“Why are you two suddenly becoming so sentimental?” Chen Ge recovered, and his expression softened. “The profits of our Haunted House are slowly rising, and our reputation is slowly growing beyond the confine of Jiujiang. Perhaps, in the near future, we will have foreigners among our visitors. The future is filled with hope, so just focus on your work, and there’s no need to worry about anything else.”

After letting Xu Wan and Xiao Gu go home, Chen Ge walked into the Haunted House. He walked around the underground scenarios. All the ghosts were where they should have been—there had been no incidents.

“Everyone is doing their job, but this is not a permanent solution.” Chen Ge walked into Mu Yang High School. “To be able to control all the ghosts inside the Haunted House, the Specter will have to be powerful. Zhang Ya and Xu Yin fit this criteria, but neither of them know anything about management. If they were given this post, war would surely happen.”

Xu Yin had not really gotten out from his emotional turmoil. Even with Chen Ge’s order, he would probably think that as long as the person did not die, everything else would be fine. With regards to Zhang Ya... even Chen Ge was afraid of that. If she was given the managerial job, it would be a miracle to see the visitors walk out from the Haunted House with their lives intact.

Stopping at the entrance to the sealed classroom, Chen Ge looked at the mannequins, and a suitable candidate appeared in his mind. “When I was doing the Trial Mission for Mu Yang High School, other than the students, there was a large older gentleman inside the sealed classroom. He was standing on the podium, and he even smiled at me.

“Before it was Mu Yang High School, the place was an orphanage. So, that old man should be Mu Yang High School’s first principal. He gave so many children a home when he was alive and even used his money to build Mu Yang High School, so he should be a good man.”

Chen Ge’s eyes scanned the mannequins and the classroom, and they were all shaking. Chen Ge did not know what he had done wrong, but the occupants in the classroom looked like they had been grabbed by fear.

“The old principal is kind and is familiar with the twenty-four mannequins. Most importantly, he has managed a school before, so he should have plenty of managerial experience.” Chen Ge held his chin. “Isn’t this the type of talent I’m looking back? Looks like I will have to return to Mu Yang High School. No matter what, I have to hire that old principal.”

There were probably other secrets surrounding that old man, but with Xu Yin and Yan Danian helping him, Chen Ge was not worried. He had a faded smile on his face, and he turned to look at the mannequins. “It won’t be long before you all get a warm reunion with your principal.”

Hearing that, the mannequins appeared to be even more scared.

Then, Chen Ge inspected Third Sick Hall and Coffin Village. When he entered, all the ghosts avoided him. After making sure that there were no problems, Chen Ge walked out from the underground parking lot. He looked at the wooden planks and thought, When I have time, I should set up a steel door—that way, the visitors won’t be able to escape whenever they feel like it.

Returning to staff breakroom, Chen Ge placed Xiaoxiao on the bed. Xiaoxiao’s power seemed to drain her a lot. Following the hospital visit, Xiaoxiao had not tried to communicate with Chen Ge—it was like she was just a normal doll.

Calming and cleansing souls. Xiaoxiao’s power might be incredibly useful in the future. Chen Ge lay down beside Xiaoxiao, and after a while, the white cat jumped down from the table to squeeze between them. It seemed to realize how fragile Xiaoxiao was. It used its tail to curl around Xiaoxiao and allowed her to lean against its body.

When the white cat first arrived at my Haunted House, it was very feral. It's probably because of Xiaoxiao that the cat was tamed. Thinking of it that way, Xiaoxiao is quite amazing.

Before this, Chen Ge had only considered Xiaoxiao as a pillow or a lucky charm. If not for the rise in affection level, he would not have noticed Xiaoxiao's special power. Taking out the black phone, Chen Ge glanced at Xiaoxiao's profile page. Other than the special power, Xiaoxiao had nothing else.

In the future, when I go hunting with Xu Yin, I should ask him to leave some food left for Xiaoxiao and the Pen Spirit. Perhaps they might bring me more surprise.

Looking through the phone, Chen Ge realized that he had gathered enough screams for two more spin at the Wheel of Misfortune. Chen Ge was tempted to use both spins. Perhaps this was the gambler's mentality—the next round would be the lucky one.

Calm down, I mustn't rush ahead. If I gain two more Specters, my title will upgrade. Now I already run into ghosts everywhere I go. If I level up further, those things will probably actively seek me out.

Chen Ge put the phone away to remove the thought from his mind. Winning Zhang Ya's love letter was a three in one thousand chance. Then does that mean there's a ghost stronger and rarer than Zhang Ya in the wheel? Like one with one in one thousand odds?

Chen Ge realized that he was going down a dangerous path, and he quickly stopped himself. He stretched lazily. He had not slept in over twenty-four hours, and his body had reached its limit.

Glancing at the time, it was only 8 pm. He set an alarm for 11:55 pm and prepared to go to sleep.

Tonight, I need to pay the toilet another visit. Hopefully, everything will be fine.

...

The alarm rang, and Chen Ge woke up to a room of darkness. Night had fallen. Putting on his jacket, he walked to the toilet with the backpack.

Three more minutes.

Chen Ge pressed the play button on the recorder and held the hammer in his hands.

Time ticked by, and when midnight arrived, the drawing of a ghost appeared on the door. Blood curled around its body, and the eyes slowly opened. The one minute passed really fast. The ghost's last eye still did not open, but compared to before, the eye that was poked blind seemed to have healed slightly.

It's recovering?

The drawing slowly disappeared, and the toilet returned to normal.

The drawing was left behind by the ghost stories society's chairperson. The best solution that I can think of is to demolish the society and leave no prisoners.

Chen Ge returned to staff breakroom to prepare to go back to sleep, but as he scrolled through the black phone, he accidentally discovered a blood red mission amid his refreshed daily missions.

He stopped and stared at the phone for a long time.

A Nightmare daily mission has returned after so long. Is my luck finally changing?

Chapter 394 - Nightmare Mission

Chapter 394:Nightmare Mission

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The reward from Nightmare Missions would improve his physical conditions directly. The previous rewards from Nightmare Missions included the Mortician's Make-up, Yin Yang Vision, and the Dollmaker's Talent. Unfortunately, the three Nightmare Missions were technically part of the beginner's stage. After clearing them, the chance of getting a Nightmare Mission in the daily missions became randomized. Chen Ge would check the daily missions every night, and this was the first time that he had come across a Nightmare Mission since completing the first three.

The black phone said that Nightmare Missions are extremely rare, so I shouldn't missed out on it.

...

Standing in the corridor, Chen Ge looked at the mission detail.

"Nightmare Missing: They said, at the end of the tunnel, another you is buried.

"Warning! Nightmare missions are extremely dangerous. Please choose carefully!"

Before accepting the mission, the hint was just a single sentence. Chen Ge read it several times, but the meaning did not become clearer to him.

Tunnel? The first previous Nightmare Missions were conducted inside the Haunted House, but it feels like I'll need to go outside for this third mission.

The first three Nightmare Missions were technically arranged by the black phone, meaning that, starting from this mission, the real Nightmare Missions began.

I have the help of Xu Yin and many other employees. If the Nightmare Mission's difficulty is similar to before, then I have nothing to worry about.

That was correct, but reading the blood red words on his phone, Chen Ge could not help but worry. When he first got the black phone, the few Nightmare Missions had almost killed him, so one could not blame him for being careful.

After thinking about it, Chen Ge still chose to accept it. The reward of a Nightmare Mission was something that other missions could not give him. Ghost helpers were important, but Chen Ge knew that he had to improve his own physical condition too. After accepting the Nightmare Mission, the complete mission message appeared. Chen Ge only read few sentences before his expression started to change.

“Mission requirement: At 2:44 am, enter a tunnel that is at least forty-four meters long. Walk forty-four steps and call your own name forty-four times. After that, mission will be completed.

“Warning: This mission is unique. If you do not complete the mission within a certain time, the mission will never reappear.

“Warning: For the duration of this mission, you will not be allowed to take any ghosts or items away from the Castle of Nightmares, or else you’ll never get the mission reward!”

Chen Ge’s eyes focused on the last part of the message. I cannot take any ghosts and items with me? This I’ll need to consider.

Without that last limitation, the mission would not have been that difficult for Chen Ge. Too caught up in the limitation of the mission, Chen Ge did not pay attention to how the black phone referred to his Haunted House. He thought about it and finally decided to give it a try.

With no risk, there’s no reward. The reward of Nightmare Mission is too important. As I come into contact with more ghosts, my body temperature keeps decreasing; the granny at Coffin Village has reminded me of that. Perhaps I should be paying more attention to my body.

Nightmare Missions rarely came, and Chen Ge did not want to give it up.

Since I cannot bring any ghosts and items, I cannot count on neither Xu Yin and Yan Danian.

Chen Ge looked around, and only the white cat fit the mission requirement.

I have a feeling it won't be of much use, but at least it can accompany me.

After selecting the white cat, Chen Ge turned to look at his shadow.

Zhang Ya is still sleeping in my shadow. If the black phone counts her, then the mission will definitely know.

Chen Ge had no way to telling whether the black phone considered Zhang Ya as breaking the rules or not, but it was also because Zhang Ya was hibernating in his shadow that Chen Ge felt okay to accept this mission.

I need to give it a try; the reward is too important for me.

Chen Ge took out his phone to look for nearby tunnels on the internet. The Nightmare Mission would start at 2:44 am, so he had to find a tunnel that fit the criteria but was not far away.

Jiujiang has many tunnels but few that fit the requirements.

Chen Ge looked on the internet for a long time, and he discovered something very weird. Of the entire Jiujiang, there was only one tunnel that fit the requirement demanded by the black phone. It was the White Dragon Cave Tunnel on the eastern side of Jiujiang. The other tunnels were either too far away or too short.

The eastern side of Jiujiang...

Due to his childhood experience, Chen Ge did not like that part of Jiujiang, and his parents had warned him from going to that area alone when he was young.

White Dragon Cave Tunnel, that sounds familiar like I have heard of it from the news before.

Chen Ge did not look so good. He searched the tunnel online, and several news articles instantly appeared. Ever since construction for the tunnel began fifteen years ago, there had been endless accidents, and many of them had a mysterious or supernatural element. More than one driver said that when they passed by late at night, a woman would wave at them by the side of the road.

If they did not stop, the woman would chase after them. The woman would be slow, but the distance between them would close until the woman was running beside them. If they stopped, it was even worse. The woman would sit at the back, and the car would get into an accident inside the tunnel.

The waving woman was just one of the many urban legends about the place. Some drivers said that they would see a car cutting past them, and when they turned to look, the car would be driverless. When they exited the tunnel, the car would already have disappeared.

There were many similar incidents and many accidents, so the tunnel had been closed five years ago. Even so, that did not stop the legend from continuing. When people passed the tunnel at night, they could hear people crying for help, and some saw a woman standing inside the tunnel, waving at them, asking them to enter the tunnel.

Chen Ge read all the articles, be it news or stories. This place is more dangerous than I thought!

Holding the phone, Chen Ge started to hesitate. The reward would be beneficial for him, but equally, he would only be able to rely on himself to complete the mission.

The black phone has always been fair; the effort and reward are equal.

Chen Ge soon came to a decision. He grabbed the white cat that was hiding under the pillow and placed it on his shoulder.

“Tonight, we’re going to somewhere exciting.”

Chapter 395 - Please Reconsider

Chapter 395: Please Reconsider

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The white cat blinked several times at Chen Ge and allowed the man to carry it in his arms. It did not seem to understand what was really happening. This time, Chen Ge did not even bring his backpack. He left the Haunted House with just some spare change.

“When I was small, my parents refused to let me go to the eastern part of Jiujiang alone. Thinking back, there should be something very dangerous hiding there. My parents knew about their presence, so these things might know stuff about my parents as well.

...

“The people who know you best are not your friends but your enemies. Perhaps I can get more clues about my parents from these presences.” Chen Ge looked at the hint on the black phone. “Walking through the tunnel will allow me to witness the secret that I have forgotten. This Nightmare Mission might be able to give me a critical hint.”

Every Nightmare Mission was very important to Chen Ge, not only because Nightmare Missions could improve his physical body, but most importantly, the Nightmare Missions seemed to be related to his parents’ disappearance. Chen Ge left New Century Park, carrying the cat. He waited by the roadside for a long time before a taxi stopped for him.

“Boss, bring me to White Dragon Cave Tunnel please.” Chen Ge pulled the door open and climbed in.

“White Dragon Cave?” The driver turned to look at Chen Ge with a shocked expression. “Why are you going to that place so late at night?”

“I’m collaborating with a friend to shoot something there.” Chen Ge placed the white cat on his legs and took out his phone. “Please go, I’m in a hurry.”

“You need to reconsider this. That place is not safe. A few years ago, one of my colleagues ran into an accident there.” The driver still did not start the car. Based on his tone, it sounded like he was unwilling to go there.

“What are you talking about? It’s fine. Just drive me to somewhere close then. I’ll walk there myself.” Chen Ge did not want to push the driver. It was because he had considered this that he left early.

“Why are you so stubborn? It is not the first or second time that accidents have been reported at White Dragon Cave. Just look for it online and think this over.” The driver finally moved the car forward. “When the tunnel was still operating, us taxi drivers didn’t dare go to that place at night. We would rather take the long way. We were not trying to cheat the passengers; that place is simply too cursed.”

Chen Ge thought the driver was quite a friendly man, so he started to chat with him. “Can you tell me more about what happened to your colleague? I’m more curious about that.”

“The man was the stingy type, the one who would trick foreigners. On the day of his accident, after he dropped his passenger off, he took the White Dragon Cave tunnel because he wanted to save time. It was around 2:30 am then.

“At the time, he was still talking on the walkie-talkie. While he was chatting with us, there was suddenly a female voice coming from his end. We thought that he had just taken on a passenger, so we did not think much of it.

“But then we noticed that something was off. The man did not seem to realize that there was another person in his car and kept gloating about how much he had made that day from tricking his passengers. I was listening at the time. I used the walkie-talkie to remind him of this, but there was no reply for a very long time.

“The next day, when I reported to the company in the afternoon, we received the news that all of the drivers have to attend a safety class, and after some asking around, we realized that the man had died in a car accident inside that tunnel.

“At the time, his car had been the only one inside the tunnel, and his car was found to have no issues. However, weirdly enough, the accident happened. He was stuck inside the twisted driver’s seat for a whole night, and in the end, they had to use a saw to cut his body out.

“According to investigation, the reason for his accident was fatigue, but the few of us who communicated with him knew very well that before his accident, he sounded very excited; he was not at all tired.”

After hearing the driver’s story, Chen Ge voiced his thought. “You mentioned all of you heard a female voice on the walkie-talkie, so technically speaking, that woman should be the murderer.”

“That’s right. Another person got into his car, but he did not realize it. If that is not cursed, what is?” The driver gripped the steering wheel. “I’m not trying to scare you; I’m giving you sincere advice. When you are close to the tunnel, if someone weird calls your name, do not get close to it.”

The taxi moved slowly, and on the journey, Chen Ge chatted a lot with the driver. The buildings by the roadside became fewer, and the light disappeared. The place looked abandoned.

“Are we not there yet?” Chen Ge opened the map on his phone. It said that they were close to the destination.

“White Dragon Cave has been sealed for some years now, so we need to take a detour if we want to get there.” The taxi continued to drive down the road. Ten minutes later, the driver slowed down.

“We’re here?”

“No, look at that thing on the road, what is it?” The driver did not dare to stop, but he pointed ahead. With his Yin Yang Vision, Chen Ge saw something that looked like a man lying in the middle of the road about seventy meters in front of them.

“Is that a man?”

The driver moved the steering wheel, and when the taxi was about thirty meters away, the thing that lay in the middle of the road suddenly crawled away. It was fast, and it disappeared after charging into the bushes like it had never been there.

“What the hell was that?” The driver was obviously spooked.

“I don’t know.” Chen Ge was not lying. The thing looked similar to a person and was wearing a tattered shirt, but the face was blurry.

“You still want to continue?” The driver was afraid. “Shall we just turn back?”

“How far is it from White Dragon Cave?” Chen Ge had never had a habit of forcing people. “If it’s close, then I’ll just walk there from here.”

“You sure are brave.” The driver cracked his frozen knuckles. He continued to drive for another few more minutes before parking the car before a junction. “See that road blocked by tree branches? Just keep walking down that road.”

“Are you sure you want to do this? Not many cars will pass this place at night. After I leave, you’ll probably need to spend a whole night here.” The driver looked at the road ahead, and he subconsciously lowered his voice like he was afraid that he might wake something up.

“Don’t worry.” Chen Ge felt like the man was quite nice, so after exchanging numbers with the man, he hugged the white cat and left. Climbing over the branches, Chen Ge walked down the road alone. The surroundings were very quiet, like there was no living creature in the woods.

“Something is not right.” Chen Ge completely ignored the resentment in the white cat’s eyes and proceeded toward the end of the road.

There were residual dust and pebbles on the ground, and everywhere he turned, there were broken tree branches. The rusted safety rails by the road were twisted from the multiple car collisions. This road seemed to have seen many accidents in the past.

Chapter 396 - Tunnel

Chapter 396: Tunnel

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

It's now 2 am sharp; I still have forty-four minutes left. Chen Ge followed the trail and felt like he was not that far away from that tunnel. The trees by the road swayed, and the leaves rustled. The white cat in his embrace was getting increasingly uneasy, and its claws stuck into Chen Ge's clothes.

Looks like the white cat has already sensed something. Chen Ge patted the animal's head. You were so feral before this. How come you're so easily scared nowadays?

...

The white cat looked at Chen Ge with complicated emotions in its eyes. It would probably have had a hard time explaining itself as well.

I cannot bring any ghosts or items from inside the Haunted House on a Nightmare Mission, but the white cat has perfectly avoided all these limitations. It is not a ghost, and it once chased a ghost to run away from it. Looks like I'll need to focus on training it in the future. Chen Ge started to make plans for the white cat. The ghost stories society's blood was prepared for a Red Specter, but even after it consumed it, nothing happened. After I dealt with the chairperson, I should take over the 24th floor at Fang Hwa Apartments. Hopefully, something would come from it.

Holding the white cat, Chen Ge was thankful that he had the thought to save the cat back then. This won't be my last Nightmare Mission. In the future, the white cat should have more uses.

The white cat gripped Chen Ge's clothes tightly as if it was heavily reliant on Chen Ge as well and felt connected to the man. I suppose good things come to good people.

One man and one cat travelled alone on the abandoned road. From afar, the picture was quite charming. The night breeze moved the tree branches, and the shadows danced on the road. After another twenty minutes of walking, the temperature suddenly dropped. The wind howled in their ears, and a strange smell rushed at them. “We’ve arrived.”

Chen Ge slowly raised his head to look at the tunnel that cut through the mountain, and his pupils narrowed. The tunnel was dark, and he could not see the end. The wind lifted the edge of his shirt, and Chen Ge suddenly shivered. The chill was not the type that could be felt on his skin—it was the kind that originated from his skull and traveled to every inch of his body.

I haven’t felt this in a long time already.

Before the six-meter-tall tunnel that was more than ten meters wide, the man looked so small. He looked into the darkness, and it felt like the thing inside the darkness was also looking back at him.

Without the accompaniment of his employees, Chen Ge was reminded of his first Nightmare Mission. He stood there and took a deep breath.

No wonder this is called a Nightmare Mission!

The tunnel was definitely longer than forty-four meters. Chen Ge took out his phone and shone it into the dark. There were various scratch marks and strange markings on the wall. The road itself was rather flat, but there were animal bodies strewn all over it.

There is still some time until the mission starts. Chen Ge stomped his feet and tapped his cheeks lightly. Calm down, don’t panic.

He looked onto the video sharing app, sharing a few pictures and updated his status. Generally, he was saying that he would post a video later tonight and told everyone to be ready.

The replies from the people online did help to disperse the fear in Chen Ge’s heart. He leaned against the stone wall of the tunnel and did not forget to do a promotion for his Haunted House.

At 2 am, someone ran to a haunted tunnel to update their status—that was something rare. People soon flocked to Chen Ge’s page, and it reached a point where the admin private messaged Chen Ge, begging him not to do such a dangerous thing in the future. They worried about his safety. After replying to some of the comments, Chen Ge exited the app at 2:43 am. He did not care much about the people’s comments; he was there just for the mission. He stood back at the mouth of the tunnel.

“It’s time to start.” Clicking open the video recording function on his phone, Chen Ge placed the white cat on his shoulder. When the time on the phone turned from forty-three to forty-four, he started to walk into the tunnel. It was much darker inside, and it felt like he was wading into a sea of darkness. Entering the tunnel, Chen Ge’s body was enveloped by chilliness until it became difficult for him to breathe.

“Chen Ge, Chen Ge...”

Whenever he took a step, Chen Ge would call out his name. This way, when he took the 44th step, it would also be the time when the mission ended. Chen Ge moved further and further away from the entrance. The light behind him faded until everything was swallowed up by darkness.

The phone was like a flickering light in the dark, and Chen Ge was like a lost ship at the sea. The only thing he could do was focus on completing that forty-four steps. The deeper he went into the tunnel, the greater the pressure he felt. His brain screamed in alarm, telling him to leave immediately.

Cold sweat drenched his forehead, and his voice echoed within the tunnel. The echoes were so consistent that he had a hard time telling which of those originated from his lips. When he made the 15th step, the white cat in his arms suddenly perked its ears up, and its multi-colored eyes stared at the side of the tunnel.

Some noise came from the deeper part of the tunnel. It sounded like footsteps mixed with cries for help. Something is coming.

In the dark, something that felt like a giant spider moved above him. Small specks of dust fell on Chen Ge’s body, and his back was wet with sweat. He resisted the urge to look up and continued marching forward. The thing above his head did not move, and to make matters worse, footsteps of a second individual appeared behind him.

The footsteps sounded uneven, like the body was twisted and it could not walk with a normal gait. Chen Ge maintained his speed. The footsteps slowly closed the distance until they were only one meter behind him.

“Chen Ge...”

After he said his name, a green vein popped on the back of his palm, but he did not turn back.

When he took the 26th step, the white cat seemed to have finally gotten a good look at the thing in the dark, and it hugged Chen Ge's arm tightly. Standing not far from Chen Ge was a woman in red dress. Her head was lowered, and she looked like a madwoman. Her hair was a mess, and it hid her face. She stood on one side of the tunnel, several meters in front of Chen Ge.

Chen Ge ignored the white cat's attempt to rustle his shirt. He also saw that woman, the woman that populated so many legends regarding this tunnel.

His calves numbed, and his palms filled with sweat. Chen Ge tried to not make his eyes move toward the woman. He kept his gaze fixed on the darkness ahead. When he walked past the woman, out the corner of his eyes, he saw the woman suddenly move.

Like she was asking for help, she raised her arm to wave at Chen Ge!

A chill ran up his spine to his brain. Chen Ge's mind was flooded with the stories related to this woman. The drivers that did not save her would be haunted by her until they left the tunnel, and those who responded to her would be caught in an accident inside the tunnel.

In that case, it was better if he just ignored her.

Even though Chen Ge had found so many weird legends about White Dragon Cave tunnel online, most of them had mentioned this waving woman. They described this woman as a scary spirit, and most who encountered her experienced a horrible ending.

Chen Ge was caught in a not-so-good situation; there was a spider-like shadow moving above him, there were echoing footsteps about one meter behind him, and the woman in a red dress was waving at him not far away in front of him. Under such circumstances, he was experiencing an impossible pressure.

...

Moving forward, Chen Ge continued calling out his name. He calculated the number of steps in his mind, and he slowly walked past the waving woman. He ignored her, and there was no shift in his expression, like he had not even noticed her.

Different from Chen Ge's calmness, the white cat in his arms kept groaning softly, like it was reminding Chen Ge to stop walking into the tunnel. When he made the 30th step, Chen Ge turned his head slightly to look beside him.

The woman who kept her head lowered did not give up. She leaned against the left side of the tunnel and followed him. They moved down the tunnel together. Technically speaking, they each walked their own path, so they should not have been interfering with one another, but Chen Ge felt the distance between them decreasing.

The reason a spirit lingers in this world is because of resentment—just what happened to her before she died? Why would she attack those who wanted to save her? Was she killed by a driver who offered her a ride?

As that thought entered his mind, Chen Ge turned to look at the woman. She was wearing a normal looking red dress, and her legs were covered with cuts and bruises. She was only wearing one white sandal—the other one apparently missing. The skin that was exposed was stuck with pins from some plants.

A Red Specter? Chen Ge was not sure of his speculation. I'm just doing a daily quest. There shouldn't be a Red Specter.

With the title of Specter's Favored, Chen Ge was not really sure of that. I'll just ignore her for now and finish the forty-four steps first. If anything happens, I'll just run.

This tunnel had been abandoned for years already. However, due to Chen Ge's entry, the things inside started to awaken. Pairs of eyes stared at him from the dark. Repeating the same motion made Chen Ge feel like his legs were frozen, and it took great effort to move each step.

"Chen Ge." His voice was low, but somehow, there was an echo. It sounded like there was another Chen Ge standing at the end of the tunnel, calling his name back to him.

That should be the 34th call. Chen Ge kept the number in his mind, and he prepared to call for the 35th time.

Chen Ge raised his foot, and before he opened his lips, a woman's voice appeared in his ear. It was unclear, and it seemed to come from the female ghost!

Freezing on the spot, Chen Ge glanced at the left side of the tunnel from the corner of his eyes. The tussled hair blocked her face, and the woman studied Chen Ge through the curtain of her hair. Her eyes were hidden under the hair like two dark holes. The lips that were bruised opened and closed. It seemed like a wooden pipe had been shoved down the woman's throat because her voice was special, and each time she spoke, it sounded like she was puffing out air. What is she saying?

Chen Ge's tempo was disrupted. He lowered his foot, and when he was about to speak, the woman once again made another noise. This time Chen Ge heard it clearly, the woman was calling his name. "Chen Ge..."

His forehead was covered in cold sweat. If this was just a normal ghost, he would not have been so afraid, but this could be a Red Specter. Chen Ge ignored the woman and continued to move forward. He could sense more things congregating in the darkness. He was like a person dropped into the sea, where many creatures hid in the dark. His heart raced, and Chen Ge did not slow down. His last shred of rationality told him that the black phone would not send him on a mission that he could not survive. Nightmare Missions were hard, but there had to be a way to survive them.

There have been so many car accidents inside this tunnel, so there must be many spirits here. However, other than this woman, none of the other ghosts have shown themselves. This is very weird. Chen Ge glanced at the woman, and as those drivers on the internet said, the woman was slowly catching up to him. According to the drivers, the woman would eventually show up beside the car window, her face stuck to the glass. I'm not in a car, so if I continue to ignore her, will she stick herself to my face?

Chen Ge started to miss the hammer as he wiped the sweat from his palms. The woman slowly moved toward Chen Ge. She maintained the same speed as Chen Ge. When Chen Ge increased in speed, she did too, and when Chen Ge stopped, she stood at the wall, looking at Chen Ge silently. A few more steps, and it'll be over. However, the problem is... how do I leave?

When he first entered the tunnel, Chen Ge could feel the chilliness coming from within. Just ten meters into the tunnel, he had been covered by that chilliness, the flashlight in his hand giving him no sense of security.

The way back is already blocked, and I still have no idea what is following behind me. If I turn around, I might see something scarier.

Rubble occasionally fell from above his head. The large shadow that looked like a spider stretched its limbs. It moved with Chen Ge like it had picked Chen Ge as its prey.

Have Nightmare Missions always been so difficult?

Without any outside help, facing several Specters at once was too difficult for Chen Ge. Have I missed out on something important?

He put his focus back on the woman. He studied her closely, and when he paid attention, the woman's head suddenly crumbled inwards like it had been hit by something blunt and hard. The whole face was misshapen, and her eyes were poking out. Chen Ge resisted the urge to scream and forced himself to ignore the woman, taking the 40th step.

Only four steps left. The woman's body was still changing. Chen Ge did not turn to look, but the sounds kept drilling into his ears. If it is just a simple car accident, she wouldn't have ended up like this. Something horrible must have happened to her.

Chen Ge's hands were shaking, and the pressure mounted.

"I'm here, save me." The woman's voice turned uglier, and the distance between them narrowed. "I'm here, just beside you, I'm here!"

The woman asked Chen Ge for help, but Chen Ge did not dare extend his aid. Helping her would be bad, but not helping her would be worse.

Both choices would lead to danger, and while this rarely happened, Chen Ge was stuck. The woman's cries for help became louder, but weirdly enough, her voice did not echo in the tunnel—it was as if only Chen Ge could hear her voice. Those who saved you died in the tunnel, and as for those who didn't, while they might not have ended up on the news, I doubt they have good ending.

After taking a deep breath, Chen Ge decided to ignore this woman for now. He wanted to finish the nightmare mission first. When he made the 41th step, the sound of howling wind seemed to decrease, but it was unclear whether it was due to the ghosts that had congregated around Chen Ge or something else. The light from his phone started to twist, and the surroundings had become darker.

...

Chen Ge called out his name.

The woman on the left side of the tunnel was getting closer, and many other ghosts were before his eyes. Chen Ge kept his eyes on the end of the tunnel and made his 42nd step. Just as his foot landed on the ground, the flashlight on his phone went out.

It happened without warning, and no matter how hard Chen Ge tried to reopen it, the phone remained dead. The night fell to swamp Chen Ge, and even with the Yin Yang Vision, he could only see two to three meters further than a normal person. Without any light to guide him, Chen Ge stood where he was, afraid to move recklessly.

Suspended in perfect darkness, one's five senses would be eclipsed, and without any guidance, it was easy to get lost. He was afraid that he might trip and lose his sense of direction. If he got lost inside the tunnel, that was the end. He might end up wandering deeper into the tunnel instead of walking out.

The surroundings quieted down, and so did the woman in the red dress. However, the feeling was not good. He knew that ghosts surrounded him, but he could not see them. Chen Ge's breathing became difficult, and pressure came from all sides. I cannot stay here any longer.

Lifting his leg, Chen Ge made the 43rd step. The tunnel became even quieter, like all the ghosts had disappeared, and weirdly enough, there was a light coming from inside the tunnel. It was soft and unclear.

Is that the exit?

The light did not stop. It kept moving, like someone holding a lantern. Chen Ge did not lose his composure—he focused fully on that light. It felt like something was pushing down on his body, and he felt compressed. As the light wandered closer, the pressure on his body increased.

One last step. I'll make this step and see what happens!

He felt like his body was about to be torn apart. He picked up his foot and was ready to make the 44th step. The light neared, and the figure hidden behind the light also became clearer. Chen Ge's left leg hung in midair. His pupils narrowed, and he could not believe his eyes.

That is...

It was a boy behind the light. He was carrying a school bag, and the bag was half-opened to reveal a roughly-made rag doll. Someone was holding the boy's left hand, and his right hand was holding a phone. The phone was an old model, the kind that did not have an integrated flashlight function. He could only rely on the weak light of the display to slowly move forward step by step. The boy had a serious expression like he was looking for something.

His hand was lifted upward, so obviously, he was there with an adult. Probably because he had been holding the phone, he was tired. He put down his arm and moved another few steps before he stopped before Chen Ge. The boy did not seem to notice anyone before him, and he focused his gaze on the endless darkness.

The adult next to him seemed to converse with him, probably advising him to give up, but the boy did not agree and kept his eyes on the darkness. The boy seemed to have felt something. He raised his head and aimed the phone directly before him. Inside the dark tunnel, the light, so weak that it could be ignored, helped connect the gazes of the two people.

Chen Ge stood on the other end of the tunnel like a statue, and his eyes stared at the boy's face. The boy was him from the past!

His arms shaking, Chen Ge had a hard time describing it.

I once saw a red house on the eastern side of Jiujiang, and there were many children playing around the house. Then I fainted. When I woke up, I was already inside a car. As for what happened in between, even now, my memory is a blank.

Chen Ge looked at the boy, and the boy looked at him.

Under the faded light of the phone, the boy opened his lips. Chen Ge could not hear him clearly, but from the movement of the lips, the boy seemed to say—Found it!

The boy probably had other things to say, but the adult beside him did not give him the chance to continue. Chen Ge could see the boy's neck starting to twist, as if the adult who accompanied him into the tunnel was strangling the boy's neck. His body turned cold, and Chen Ge gasped greedily for air. He wanted to stop the adult, and he moved his leg, making the 44th step!

He stepped on air, and his body started to fall. Then, it felt like his soul was knocked out of his body, and it was sucked into something. The light started to drift away. He wanted to hold onto something, but no one was able to help him. An indescribable sense of despair suffocated his heart, and he slowly closed his eyes.

However, just as his eyes were about to close, a red shadow appeared at the end of the light. Blood covered everything, and the person was like a red sun. She banished the enveloping darkness, and everything in sight became blood red.

“Zhang Ya?”

There was a pain on the back of his arm, and Chen Ge's eyes flew open. His clothes were drenched in sweat, and Chen Ge's phone came back on. He was still standing inside the tunnel.

I saw myself from about a decade ago? That was the thing I've forgotten? Chen Ge's heart was chilled. So, someone has been trying to kill me since then.

In his memory, there was nothing about this killer, and none of the people around him had been sent into jail. This meant that this person who wanted to kill him was probably still in his social circle.

Now, I can only confirm that person is in the eastern part of Jiujiang. The problem is not big. There's still time to even things out. Chen Ge looked at the spot where the pain had originated. The white cat had bitten his skin until it bled. "Thankfully, I brought you with me."

Chen Ge touched the white cat's head, but he wanted to thank Zhang Ya even more. As he turned his head to look at his shadow, he suddenly realized that the woman in a red dress was standing just beside him.

Her body broken and her head caved in, she looked at Chen Ge and repeated her plea. "I'm here, help me. I'm here..."

"I almost forgot about you." Chen Ge could no longer avoid her since she was so close. He gritted his teeth, glanced at his shadow, and turned to face the woman. "How do you want me to help you?"

The woman's head was caved inward, her body was mangled, and her face was misshapen; one could barely make out the shape of a human. Even for Chen Ge, who had grown up with the props inside a Haunted House, he found this hard to stomach.

Isn't this a bit too much?

...

The woman had suffered a horrible death, and Chen Ge resisted the urge to escape, standing where he was.

"Help me, I'm right here..." The woman waved her hand even though she was standing before Chen Ge. It was as if she was afraid that he could not see her.

The face neared, and Chen Ge's hair stood on end. He immediately answered, "You've been telling me you're here. Is it because, when you called for help before, those who passed by ignored you?"

When he said that, the woman slowed down, and her mangled lips pressed together. When Chen Ge saw the opportunity, he adopted the same tone that he used to converse with Xu Yin and Zhang Ya. "Don't worry, I'm not like those people."

Although he had no employees with him, Chen Ge was weirdly calm. He felt like he was slowly returning to his normal state.

"I can imagine the pain that you must have been through—every plea for help was a grasp for the very last hope; however, reality has injured you time and again." There was pity in Chen Ge's gaze, and he raised his head to look into the woman's eyes. "I know you have been waiting for someone to lend you a hand, and perhaps if someone had stepped forward, you'd have the hope to face life. I understand what you're doing, and I know what you're feeling. I don't ask that you trust me fully, but I ask that you give yourself a chance and me a chance."

Chen Ge reached out his hand. “They didn’t help you, but I will. They ignored you, but I won’t. They won’t save you, but I will!”

With a small step forward, he said, “This tunnel is dark and hiding many sorrowful histories, so how about I bring you out with me?”

When Chen Ge stepped forward, the woman subconsciously took a step back. A huge part of her head was missing, and only three quarters of her face remained. Her face forced out a weird expression. It was difficult to tell what she was trying to express. Perhaps she was also surprised by Chen Ge’s reaction; she had not come across someone like him, and she did not know how to react.

Staring at the woman’s face, Chen Ge asked in a serious tone, “How do you want me to help you?”

The woman’s waving hand gradually stopped. Using her almost falling head to look at Chen Ge, after a long time, she said, “I’m here. There’s an opening in my head, and blood drenched my eyes. I cannot see anything, help me.”

Blood oozed out of the giant cut on the woman’s head—it was gory to say the least. Chen Ge pulled a part of his shirt out, and with the woman watching curiously, he raised his hands. “I’ll help you stop the blood loss first, then I’ll bring you out with me.”

The woman’s pupils danced inside the protruding sockets, and she said, “My arms and shoulders were shattered on impact, help me.”

The woman seemed to be repeating what she had said at her moment of death. It sounded sad and heavy with despair.

“Left arm or right arm?” Chen Ge stared at her. The woman did not seem to have considered that question before. He moved slowly forward. “Then you can lean against me.”

Whenever Chen Ge spoke, the woman was stunned. This was the first time that she had heard this kind of heartwarming offer. The woman stood in the tunnel for a long time before the blood in her eyes slowly dispersed.

However, that only lasted for several seconds before she seemed to remember something very painful and resentment as well as venom leaked out of her eyes again. “The car ran over my legs, and I cannot move.”

“Carry me?” The woman’s eyes were filled with shocked. She did not expect Chen Ge to do this too. The resentment in her eyes slowly decreased, and she was fiddling with a decision in her mind. Chen Ge did not know if he should make use of this opportunity to run. He was familiar with the power of a Red Specter and knew that he would not have been able to escape.

While the woman was hesitating, Chen Ge turned around and slowly squatted down. “Come, I’ll carry you out of this tunnel.”

Seeing Chen Ge’s back, the woman was flustered. This was the first time that she had come across someone so kind.

“Carry me?”

“Yes.”

Chen Ge’s forehead and collar were drenched in cold sweat, and his fingers were trembling. However, he had great mental pressure resistance, and his voice was as calm as ever. “This tunnel is filled with painful memories. Staying here is a form of torture for you as well.”

Chen Ge suddenly felt a heavy mist of blood coming from his back. He turned to look, and the woman with twisted limbs and broken face was pressed against his face. The woman’s eyes were knitted with resentment, venom, and a trace of uncertainty. She was probably also wondering if she should kill Chen Ge. The pressure on his back increased, and Chen Ge’s body slowly became numb. His neck felt like it was roped by vines, and he knew that the woman still had not given up the idea of killing him.

“I know that you might not trust me and think I’m doing all this to lie to you, but that is not the truth. I’ve helped many souls in your condition, and that is probably why you can feel this trace of kindness from me.” Chen Ge sighed—he sounded tired. “I don’t ask for much for doing all this. I just want to help those in need.”

With a self-deprecating laugh, Chen Ge shook his head lightly, and helplessness filled his voice. “In my daily life, people often make fun of me for being so stupid to forgive my enemy and opponent. Why wouldn’t I believe in the darker side of reality and insist on seeing the good in people and in my heart? Perhaps I’m that type of idiot.”

The voice sounded sad, but in it, there was also a forgiveness that overcame all the misunderstandings. The resentment in the woman's eyes drastically reduced. With her hands on Chen Ge's shoulders, she tried to view this man from a different angle.

"Don't move and don't let go. Trust me, just this time, let me carry you out."

Chen Ge moved one step deeper into the tunnel and called his name. However, the light did not reappear. After confirming the mission had been completed, he turned around and carried the woman out the tunnel.

"I came here at night for no other reason than wanting to help you, so please, let's leave this tunnel together."

The slowly red disappeared as did the resentment in the woman's eyes. She felt her body getting lighter. Perhaps this was how it felt to be given salvation. If only I run into him when I was still alive.

The things that had happened to her at the time of her death appeared in her mind, and whenever that happened, the woman had the urge to destroy every living thing that she saw. She did not need to die that day, but no one had been willing to extend a helping hand, and that had led to the later tragedy.

...

A weird tone escaped from the throat, and the woman's body turned cold. Her bone structure was shifting, and it sounded like her body was falling apart. Chen Ge's spine was numb, and he knew that something scary was happening behind him, but he did not plan to put the woman down.

If possible, why don't I save her?

Carrying the poor woman, the other ghosts hiding in the dark did not dare come any closer. Even the large spider following Chen Ge gave up unwillingly. Following the rustling that came above him and the following of peddles, the large shadow that looked like a spider climbed deeper into the tunnel.

Just what kind of monsters are living here?

Treating the woman as a shield, Chen Ge carried her slowly out the tunnel. The white cat had already jumped ahead of Chen Ge. It would turn around to look at Chen Ge occasionally, the respect in its eyes seemingly saying, "You're really something else."

When he entered the tunnel, Chen Ge only took forty-four steps, but when he tried to leave, Chen Ge realized that the tunnel was exceptionally long. The woman's impression of him changed due to his words, but that did not mean that she had given up the murderous instinct. Chen Ge knew that the more he spoke, the greater the chance of him screwing up. Since he was not the type to waste time on words, he would use actual action to prove to the woman that he really wanted to save her. As he stepped toward the exit, the darkness was banished, and the air felt fresher.

The shape of the tunnel exit was getting closer. Wind blew in from the entrance, and the smell of blood became lighter. Starlight shone down on the woman's face, and her crumbled head and twisted body slowly returned to normal. The weight on his back slowly lightened. When he turned to look, Chen Ge saw the woman looking at the night sky.

Chen Ge tried to take another step, but when he tried to leave the tunnel, the woman on his back experienced a great change. Her head and limbs kept shattering as if her body would break into pieces should he move any further.

What's happening? Is she not allowed to leave the tunnel?

There were only two choices then. Put the woman down and run away before she recovered was the safest option. Based on the black phone, Chen Ge had already completed the Nightmare Mission, and Chen Ge would not be returning to this place until he had full confidence. The other option was to stand and wait until the woman's body recovered and then ask her for her opinion.

Chen Ge turned to look at the woman and took back his advancing step, standing at the mouth of the tunnel. Before him was the star-filled sky, and behind him was the dark tunnel that seemed to have no end.

Several seconds later, the woman gave up her struggle, and with the starlight shining down on her, she returned to her original state. The red coat hung on her misshapen body. Her eyes were bloodshot, and she slowly released her hands. "Alas, I no longer need anyone to come save me."

She climbed off Chen Ge's back and slowly retreated. Only by hiding inside the tunnel could she maintain her presence.

"Hey!" Chen Ge called at the woman. "I really want to help you."

The woman could be a great help, so Chen Ge arranged his emotions to come up with a speech that was quite sentimental. When the woman in the tunnel heard what he had to say, she smiled at Chen Ge before turning to jog back into the tunnel.

How come it feels like she is in a hurry to run away? Is she sealed inside the tunnel? The closer she is to the entrance, the bigger the exhaustion?

The tunnel was not as simple as it appeared—the presence of a Red Specter proved that. Under Chen Ge's gaze, the woman disappeared into the tunnel, and when he prepared to leave, he noticed the white cat was running away from him before finding a hiding spot a few meters away, shivering.

"It's okay. She has already left. At least we know each other now, so we will have more friends in the eastern part of the city in the future." Chen Ge walked toward the white cat, but that one step seemed to trigger some bad feeling in the cat. When it saw Chen Ge coming close, it immediately ran in the opposite direction.

Why is it acting this way? Chen Ge also noticed the problem. When the white cat saw the woman in the tunnel, it had not run off. This meant that there was something scarier than the woman around Chen Ge!

Taking a small breath, Chen Ge exited the tunnel cautiously. He did not sense any scary ghosts until he lowered his head to look down at his feet. He froze where he was like his body was struck by lightning. The place where the woman released her hold on Chen Ge was the place where Chen Ge's shadow fell, and someone had carved a few words in the ground. Each letter was filled with endless bloodlust and resentment. His legs shook involuntarily, and with trembling, pale lips, Chen Ge read out the few blood letters. "He is... mine!"

His breathing became difficult, and Chen Ge glanced at his shadow. He noticed his shadow's shape was changing like the person hiding in the shadow had sensed something and was forcing herself awake!

"Calm down, Zhang Ya! It's just a misunderstanding!" Chen Ge did not expect there to come a day where he would need to yell at his own shadow to explain his situation. However, teetering between life and death, Chen Ge did not have much choice. He made the correct choice, using his largest voice and the sincerest words to explain everything that happened. If anyone else saw him like this, they would think that he was crazy.

In the middle of the night, he ran to the tunnel to shout at his shadow.

Chen Ge did not hide anything, and when he provided the explanation, his shadow finally returned to normal. His back was soaked wet, and Chen Ge collapsed to the ground. He swiped the sweat from his forehead and sighed. That pressure is even greater than facing a Red Specter. Zhang Ya seems to have grown stronger.

He looked at the shadow who was recovering and whispered to himself, "It is not a good thing for Zhang Ya to keep hiding inside my shadow. If it stays like this, I will have no free..."

Before he finished, his shadow started to boil again!

The numbness crawled to his scalp, and Chen Ge bit on his tongue. His trembling hand held his forehead, and he chanted in a melancholic voice, "It is not a good thing for Zhang Ya to keep hiding inside my shadow. If it stays like this, my heart will feel very empty. If possible, I wish for her to move into my heart."

The boiling shadow calmed down instantly. The person in the shadow appeared like she did not expect to hear Chen Ge say that, and she disappeared like she could not deal with the shyness.

Chen Ge maintained his pose for a full minute before he dared look behind him. His shadow had returned to normal like everything that had happened earlier was a dream. Chen Ge did not let his guard down. He tried to call Zhang Ya for several times, and after confirming that she had gone back to sleep, his heart finally relaxed. He collapsed to the ground, completely drained.

The stars lit up the sky, and Chen Ge did not know what to think. After a while, the white cat came over, and it placed its furry paw on Chen Ge's forehead like it was trying to see whether Chen Ge had gotten a cold. "You sure run fast earlier. What about our pact?"

...

His heart was still racing. Chen Ge felt like he had used too much of his brain power that night, and he was suffering from a lack of oxygen. The white cat's multi-colored eyes were dancing with condescension as if it was saying, "If you have the capability, why don't you stand up and tell me that?"

He ruffled the cat's head and ignored the expression on its face. Lying on the ground, he pulled out the black phone to go through the message.

"Congratulations, Specter's Favored! You have completed the Nightmare Mission and gained the reward—Elementary Talent, Ghost Ear.

"Ghost Ear: Before you accept this talent, I hope you think about it because, from this moment onward, you will hear the voices from the other world."

The message was short. Chen Ge touched his ear after reading the text, but he did not feel any change. He closed his eyes and focused on his hearing. Somewhere deep inside the tunnel, someone was whispering, and something was running through the bushes. Even though they were several meters away, he could hear them clearly.

“Sounds like something is coming.” Chen Ge realized the thing crawling the bushes was coming close, and he used his Yin Yang Vision to look in the direction that the sound was coming from.

Around eight meters away, something that looked like a woman crawled out from the bushes. It was wearing a tattered jacket, and its head was lolling to the side. It was looking at Chen Ge from a confusing angle, and it appeared like it was trying to ambush Chen Ge. “It’s you!”

When Chen Ge had arrived in the taxi, he had seen something similar lying on the ground. When the car passed, the thing had quickly retreated into the bush. The monster did not expect Chen Ge’s ears to be so sensitive. It tried to ambush Chen Ge from behind, but it was still exposed. It gave up immediately and slithered away like there were no bones in its body.

“What the hell is that thing?” Chen Ge stood up from the ground. He was not sure if the thing that escaped was the same as the one that he had encountered earlier. “Their existence should be related to this tunnel.”

Patting away the dust on his clothes, Chen Ge decided to leave this place first. “After Zhang Ya awakens, I shall return here with all of my employees. Perhaps I might meet some friends with similar ideals. In that case, I will invite them to come join me at the Haunted House.”

Carrying the white car, Chen Ge walked back to the main road.

“You seem to have gotten heavier. Next time, if you need to bite me, try not to bite so hard. You see? I’m bleeding. Now I don’t even know whether I need to take a shot or not.”

Chen Ge walked down the road for thirty minutes, but he did not see any cars pass by. This place was too isolated. It was not until 4 am that a truck affiliated with a moving company passed by. The truck was heading toward Jiujiang City, and Chen Ge cried loudly for the driver to stop.

Thankfully, the driver was a nice person. He slowed down but did not open the door directly. He rolled down the window and studied Chen Ge cautiously.

“Boss, can you give me a lift? I wish to get to the city.”

While the driver was studying Chen Ge, Chen Ge was also studying the driver. The driver looked around forty, and his face was pale. He looked weak, and his eyes were rimmed with dark circles, probably because he had driven through the night.

“Why are you all alone at a place like this so late at night? And why are you hugging a cat?” The driver thought Chen Ge was suspicious. There was just something off about this man.

“I’m the proprietor for a Haunted House and a famed host online. I like to do supernatural series, and I’m here to look for inspiration for my Haunted House.” Chen Ge’s unique self-introduction surprised the man, and he did not respond for a long time.

“Look, this is my online profile and the reports on how I have assisted the Jiujiang law enforcement.” Chen Ge tossed his phone through the gap to the driver. The man looked through the articles before believing Chen Ge.

“This is a moving company truck. If you don’t mind, then you can crawl inside the cargo, and I’ll drive you back to the city.” The driver passed the phone back to Chen Ge.

“Thank you.” Chen Ge did not hesitate. He opened the door and jumped in. “Boss, you can drive now.”

“Remember to close the lock or else the stuff will tumble out.”

“Don’t worry.” After Chen Ge locked the door, the car started. Standing inside the back, his body swayed alongside the other stuff. He wanted to find something to sit on, so he turned his flashlight on. He discovered that the cargo had many ropes lying around. The ropes should be used the driver to tie down the furniture—they were normal—but Chen Ge notice that parts of the ropes were dyed with blood. He used his finger to touch them, and the blood had already dried.

“Boss, where are you coming from? How come you’re still working so late at night?” Based on the voice, one could not hear anything weird. It sounded like Chen Ge was just trying to make conversation.

“Don’t remind me. Yesterday, we ran into a very weird client. He paid us double to help him move at night,” the driver answered.

“Moving at night? We?” Chen Ge focused on the curiosities in the man’s reply almost instantly. “But boss, you’re the only one in the car. Where’s your colleague?”

“They’re still at the man’s house. The client is very generous. Every one of them was given a three hundred tip.” There was envy in the driver’s voice.

“Is this common for moving companies? To move at night?”

“It’s just to move furniture into the house. It’s very normal.” The driver did not think too much of it. If anything, he thought that Chen Ge was acting quite weird.

“Boss, I see that you’re a good man, and that’s why I’m telling you this.” Chen Ge snapped a few pictures of the ropes. “When you helped move the furniture, did you discover anything weird?”

“We’re there to lend our muscles; why would we care about such details?”

The car sped up, and the road became narrower. With no other questions, Chen Ge gave up his questioning and thought that he was perhaps overthinking things. When he planned to close his eyes to rest, his phone vibrated. It was a call from Lee Zheng.

“It’s probably some very important discovery.” Chen Ge answered the phone. “Captain Lee, how can I help you?”

“The coroner found epithelial cells of a missing person on the interior of the statue. A few years ago, someone used that statue to move a dead body!”

Chapter 402 - Patients, Doctors

[2 in 1]

Chapter 402: Patients, Doctors [2 in 1]

The police's discovery was similar to Chen Ge's previous speculation—the statue had been used as a transport mechanism. After getting Lee Zheng's reply, Chen Ge's mind cleared. "After the suspect killed the victims, he hid them inside the statue and then had someone move the statue into the underground storeroom. When no one was looking, he sneaked back into the storeroom to deal with the dead body. Then the body was dragged into the underground morgue, and the crime was completed without a trace."

Jiujiang Medical University was special because the area underneath the western part of the school was a morgue. Without wasting much energy and effort, one could take care of a dead body easily. "There shouldn't be anyone who would consider going to look for missing people inside the underground morgue, so reality proved that the culprit is a really smart person."

...

Chen Ge stated everything Lee Zheng had on his mind. Lee Zheng, on the other end of the phone, was silent for a while. "It is still unclear who the owner of the statue is, but the suspect pool is narrowing. After our detailed investigation, we can confirm that the statue does not belong to Jiujiang Medical University but appeared one day inside the Arts Society without warning."

"Sudden appearance?"

"We managed to find the man who was the chairperson at the time. He could remember how he felt when he entered the activity room and found a new statue. At the time, most of the members thought that it was a new purchase by the school, so they did not think much of it. Since the school campus was also moving soon, in the end, the thing was moved by several male students into the underground storeroom."

"This means that the killer was not a part of the moving process." Chen Ge thought about it. "The killer probably knew about the imminent campus movement and that those unusable items would be sent to the underground storage. In fact, he might even have been present then to silently insinuate things to his liking.”

“I was thinking the same. The killer can move in and out of the campus freely late at night and knew about all this information with regards to the university. So, chances are high that he is a student, a teacher, or some other staff at the university.” Someone was talking to Lee Zheng, so he replied the man before turning back to inform Chen Ge. “After our investigation, we have narrowed down our pool to four suspects.

“The first one is the male counselor that you told me about yesterday. His name is Liu Zhe, and he’s a popular figure at the school. He’s a sharp dresser and quite handsome, so you can imagine his popularity with the female students. However, as our investigation deepened, we found that the man is really not as he appears. He has not been to a reputable school, and the university was unable to provide a clear answer to how he managed to become a counselor. The only thing we found out is that the reason is related to his brother-in-law.

“The second suspect is the night security guard at the old campus—Zhang Li. The man is thirty-five years old this year, and he is a private person. The complete opposite from Liu Zhe, the students shy away from him, and for some reason, he is weirdly hated.

“The third suspect is an original member of the Arts Society and the only female of the four suspects. Her name is Zhang Sihan. She is Zhang Li’s little sister and had a tense relationship with Ma Yin’s sister. Before the sister’s disappearance, many people remember her having many ugly confrontations and arguments with Ma Yin’s sister.”

Lee Zheng stopped at this point, and Chen Ge was deeply intrigued. “The security guard, Zhang Li, has the ability and means to be the killer while Zhang Sihan has the motive and timing; however, neither of their lifestyles have any connection to a western sculpture. I still think the first suspect is the most likely killer. By the way, didn’t you say there are four suspects?”

“Actually, according to our investigation, the chance of the fourth suspect being the killer is the highest.” Lee Zheng sounded weird on the phone like he did not want to reveal the name of the fourth suspect. “You are familiar with this fourth person; it’s Doctor Gao.”

“Just as you said earlier, be it Zhang Li or Zhang Sihan, their lives have nothing to do with the statue. However, it is different for Doctor Gao.” Lee Zheng lowered his voice. “I first met Doctor Gao about five years ago. I was asked to go on a psychological assessment after using my gun to kill a criminal. During the two weeks of conversations, we became friends.” Chen Ge listened closely; he was surprised that Lee Zheng had known Doctor Gao for five years.

“To be honest, Doctor Gao can be considered the perfect man. In my eyes, he has no weaknesses. In fact, I can list the good points about him, and it would take all night.” Lee Zheng’s voice sounded depressed, and Chen Ge understood why the man had chosen this time to make this call. “I admired the man, but this does not mean that I won’t do my job. During my therapy sessions, I found out many things about him. This includes his hobby of collecting artwork—for instance, he likes to collect paintings by Van Gogh.”

“Being an art lover doesn’t make him a killer, or have you seen that statue before at Doctor Gao’s place?” Using the statue to hide and move the body looked like a brilliant plan, but when it was put into action, there were many loopholes. If Doctor Gao was the real killer, Chen Ge believed that he would have utilized a more perfect method to conduct the crime.

“I have not been to Doctor Gao’s home, but I do know that he appreciates artwork that has conflicting contrast, those that have stunning visual impact. I also know that the few nights before Ma Yin’s sister disappeared, Doctor Gao’s car was caught on camera around Jiujiang Medical University.” Lee Zheng sounded tired on the phone. “He knows the school inside out and managed to avoid all the surveillance. It was not until we broadened the scope of the search that we noticed his car showing up in the area around the school. We compared all the footage from the nearby cameras, and the final conclusion was, in that twenty-seven minutes where he disappeared from screen, he was actually inside the school.”

“Wait a minute, could there be someone who was driving his car? Using his car to conduct these crimes?”

“That is what I was about to say.” Lee Zheng’s tone slowly turned serious. “There might be two killers to this case.”

“Two killers?”

“Whether Doctor Gao is the killer or not, it is an undisputed truth that his car was inside the campus during that sensitive period of time, and there were only two people who could drive his car into the campus—one was Doctor Gao himself, and the other person was Liu Zhe.”

Lee Zheng’s words made Chen Ge’s eyes widen. “Wait, you’re telling me Liu Zhe’s brother-in-law is Doctor Gao?”

“Indeed! This was a crime committed by two people. The person who killed Ma Yin’s sister and wanted to move the dead body through the statue was Liu Zhe, and he should be the one who did all the dirty work.

“However, the man was dumb and exposed too many clues. If he committed the crime alone, it would have surfaced in a matter of days. However, weirdly enough, when we looked through the files on the case, all the clues that the police could come up with were silenced. It felt like an invisible hand was snuffing out these trails before the police could get their hands on them.” Lee Zheng sighed. “Liu Zhe would not be able to do something like that. I’ve been a police officer for almost a decade already, and in my mind, there is only one person who is capable of doing something like that—Doctor Gao.”

“But why would Doctor Gao do all these things to protect Liu Zhe, to help him cover up the crime?” Chen Ge voiced the biggest question that he had.

“Liu Zhe is the little brother of Doctor Gao’s wife and the only family she had that is still alive.” Lee Zheng seemed to know what Chen Ge was about to say, so he pointed it out first. “Doctor Gao’s wife died in a car accident about seven years ago. Asking him to take care of her family was her dying wish.”

Chen Ge was not Doctor Gao, and he did not understand that feeling, so he chose to be silent.

“Chen Ge, I know you are close to Doctor Gao, but I hope you will be rational at a time like this. I made this call because this is an order from Captain Yan. We suspect that Doctor Gao is involved in this somehow, but all the clues and trails have been cleaned up, and everything that we currently have is just a suspicion.”

“What do you want me to do?”

“Gao Ru Xue is Doctor Gao’s only daughter and the person he loves the most in the world. If we contact Gao Ru Xue without any warning and evidence, it would only tip off Doctor Gao. Only you can do that.” Lee Zheng stated the real intention of his call in a roundabout way. “Gao Ru Xue is an opening; you have saved her life once, so she will not be cautious around you. Therefore, we need you to approach Gao Ru Xue to find out more about her father.”

“Why me?” Chen Ge had always ‘volunteered’ to help the police. This time, he was requested by the law enforcement to help in a case, and that made him rather uncomfortable.

“Because you are the only available candidate.” Lee Zheng chatted some more with Chen Ge, but he did not force Chen Ge; he merely suggested it. After hanging up, Chen Ge sat in the dark truck, and his expression was complicated. If Liu Zhe’s brother-in-law was Doctor Gao, then the real owner of Room 3004 at Fang Hwa Apartments was Doctor Gao.

The laptop that contained all the information on his Haunted House was Doctor Gao’s, and the person who stole the video footage from his visitors was Doctor Gao. Chen Ge did not have the brain power to consider helping Lee Zheng because there was a bigger question occupying his mind. Is Doctor Gao really the chairperson of the ghost stories society?

His body moved along with the car; the road condition was not so great. Chen Ge took out his phone to check back the information that Doctor Gao had sent to him when he first went to the Third Sick Hall. At the time, he had known nothing of the Third Sick Hall and asked Doctor Gao for a list of patient records. Now that he thought about it, the records were definitely suspicious. The records were not accessible to anyone, but Doctor Gao produced them in minimal time.

Why would he help me back then? Chen Ge looked at the records and could not figure out Doctor Gao’s mind. Did he just think it was exciting, or did he want to use the Third Sick Hall as a test for me?

After Zhang Ya made short work of the Third Sick Hall, the communication between Doctor Gao and Chen Ge had drastically decreased. Before this, be it Men Nan or the Pen Spirit’s friend, it was Doctor Gao who had acted as the bridge.

This is what I know about No. 10: he has seen my Doctor Skull-cracker’s mask, is familiar with the movement of the police, has long fingers, is close to me, knows Jiujiang Medical University very well, and calls the dead body on his back his wife. Chen Ge realized that Doctor Gao fitted all the characteristics of No. 10 perfectly. He was not sure whether it was positive reinforcement or not, but when he thought about it, Chen Ge realized that No. 10 sounded a bit like Doctor Gao. The height and body shape of No. 10 in the black robe slowly overlapped with Doctor Gao.

Could it really be him? Chen Ge's fingers were intertwined together. He thought back on the visit he made with Doctor Gao to the home of Pen Spirit's friend. The friend had suffered from serious depression, and after Chen Ge brought the Pen Spirit over to help ease the guilt in her friend, Doctor Gao had thanked Chen Ge on the patient's behalf. The thank you came from his sincere heart, and even now, Chen Ge could still remember the words that Doctor Gao said. He really could not believe someone like that could be the chairperson of the ghost stories society.

Patients, doctors... However, as he thought about it, the basis for the founding of the ghost stories society was to help those special patients relieve their pain. They used extreme methods to heal themselves to seek salvation, to try to be normal people. However, the final result was that they sunk deeper and deeper into the depths of hell until they could not be called normal human beings anymore.

Was this all Doctor Gao's plan from the beginning? Chen Ge had heard from one of the members that they had once tried to save a person who was afraid of water by making her face the source of her fear. They had made her overcome it by personally drowning her father. The treatment method was inhumane and could never be accepted by the society, so it could only be carried out in the shadows of the city. Holding the phone, Chen Ge felt conflicted for the first time.

He could whack any of the patients from the Third Sick Hall with the hammer without hesitation, but he was not sure that he could do that to Doctor Gao. Whether it was when he was treating Men Nan or his other patients, Doctor Gao was flawless. If he was acting, he was a very good actor. However, it did not feel like he was. Chen Ge could sense that he really did want to help those people.

Human beings sure are complicated. Chen Ge leaned against the wall of the truck. Hugging the white cat in his embrace, he glanced out through the gap in the wall. It's almost dawn.

The truck drove for another hour, but it did not enter the city. The driver drove Chen Ge to the edge of town when he said that he had something urgent to attend to and had to go somewhere else. Chen Ge's mind was muddled by the phone call from Lee Zheng, so he did not think much of it. He thanked the man and got out of the truck.

As he watched the moving company's truck drive away, the cold breeze touched his face, and Chen Ge felt his mind brighten and clear. Something is wrong with this truck driver.

When he first got into the car, the truck had been shaking violently. This proved that the driver had not been using the flattened main road. In fact, it felt like he was driving them further away from civilization, using the small roads.

The change happened when he received the call from Lee Zheng. The truck driver probably heard the phone call between Chen Ge and the police, so he changed the direction and drove the truck back to the main road.

Was he trying to silence me? Did he change his mind after hearing my phone call with the police?

When Chen Ge was trying to figure out this issue, a taxi came from the road that the moving company's truck had disappeared down earlier.

Chen Ge waved his hand to stop the taxi. He climbed in. "Boss, drive me to Western Jiujiang's New Century Park please."

"Is the theme park open so early in the morning?"

"I'm one of the workers there." Chen Ge smiled. He pointed at the road that the taxi had come from. "When you came from that road, did you see the truck of a moving company? That driver..."

"Truck? There was no such thing. I was the only car on the road." The taxi driver was even more confused than Chen Ge.

"No truck?" Chen Ge touched the white cat's head. "Then who gave me the lift? But the white cat did not warn me."

Chapter 403: The Phone Spirit's Request

Chen Ge held the cat in his arm. He wondered if it was because the white cat had stopped caring about normal ghosts since it had seen too many powerful baleful specters. The white cat did not get Chen Ge's meaning. It moved its head as it struggled to escape from Chen Ge's grasp.

"Perhaps I haven't been paying any attention." The taxi driver thought about it. "I came over from the industrial area. There is a junction there. If the truck went east, then I would have missed it."

...

The driver was quite optimistic and did not think about the supernatural possibility.

The truck driver just drove me over from Eastern Jiujiang, so why would he drive back there after dropping me off? Chen Ge committed the driver's face to his memory. Did he feel unsettled after hearing my conversation with the police and go back to deal with some unsightly things?

Afraid that the white cat might ruin the taxi's cushion, Chen Ge hugged the white cat in his arms. "Boss, have there been any serious events in Eastern Jiujiang? Like murders and stuff?"

The driver glanced at Chen Ge through the rear-view mirror, and he looked panic. He had never seen a customer that started a conversation with a topic like this. "There hasn't been anything like that in Eastern Jiujiang, but Western Jiujiang has been quite unsafe lately. There have been a few serious cases in the past two months."

"Western Jiujiang?" Chen Ge felt that sounded weirdly familiar. "I think Western Jiujiang is still rather peaceful."

Since he could not get any more news from the driver, Chen Ge took out his phone and went online to search. As the driver had said, other than the articles on the Futuristic Theme Park, there was nothing big happening in Eastern Jiujiang.

The undercurrent flowing beneath this calm surface is rapid and dangerous. I'll need to investigate this further.

After shifting into a more comfortable position, Chen Ge opened the video recording software to inspect the video that he had recorded that night. He had begun recording before he entered the tunnel, and in the video, he was calling out his own name as he stepped into the tunnel.

Without any post-editing, the realistic video was already scarier than most scary movies. From Chen Ge's expression, it was clear that the man himself did not know what to expect, and the fear of the unknown was often most alluring to the viewers. After he walked ten steps, the light darkened, and the screen blurred.

From the video, one could hear the sound of another person's footsteps. However, Chen Ge was calm on camera. It created a great contrast to the flighty white cat. This was a unique viewing experience. The white cat scratched his clothes madly like it was trying to warn the man about the encroaching danger. However, as the main character, Chen Ge was unfazed. This was a common trope in scary movies, and if the viewers were pulled into Chen Ge's perspective, they would be worried for him.

As he walked deeper into the tunnel, the scare level heightened. In the video, Chen Ge seemed to have spotted something. His expression changed, and he kept turning his head to look in a particular direction. However, in the video, there was nothing there.

When he made the 42nd step, the light suddenly went off, and Chen Ge's yelp and the white cat's shrill hiss were all captured on camera. Several seconds later, the video returned to normal, but Chen Ge in the video looked like he was possessed. He talked to the air alone and finally bent down like he was trying to carry something on his back. The ending of the video was Chen Ge carrying that thing out of the tunnel.

"I have a feeling this is going to be another popular video." Looking at the video, Chen Ge felt nervous for himself, much less those viewers. Attaching the logo of his Haunted House, Chen Ge gave the video a good title and uploaded it on the app.

"Shocking! Unknown Man did WHAT inside a tunnel at 3 am?"

Once his video was released, all the fans that followed him would receive notification. It did not take long for his comments section to explode. Exploring a tunnel at 3 am was something intriguing, so most came to check it out due to curiosity. Early morning was when the app had the least traffic, and Chen Ge believed that the video would gain traction when morning came.

He updated the information about the Haunted House on his profile page to include the various promotions of theme park. When he was done with all that, he exited the app.

My videos and livestream can help me find popularity, and Yan Danian's serial comic will maintain that popularity. If this continues, I can even create a super terror theme park that has an online presence.

Chen Ge had confidence in his future. It would have been difficult to complete this alone, but thankfully, he had many good employees.

Be it Yan Danian, Pen Spirit, or even Ol' Zhou and Bai Qiulin, each of them had great potential.

When I have enough money, I can even shoot scary movies and dramas.

With the aid of his employees, Chen Ge would save plenty of money on special effects. His workers would need to play themselves.

I have too many good employees. I wonder who would take the center spot.

Chen Ge put this phone away. Employees like Yan Danian and Ol' Zhou were good employees for Chen Ge, so the more the better. Sitting inside the taxi, Chen Ge looked at Eastern Jiujiang and muttered, "I've explored almost all of Western Jiujiang. Perhaps I can find more valuable workers in Eastern Jiujiang."

Then he closed his eyes to rest. The driver gripped the steering wheel tightly. He glanced at Chen Ge through the rearview mirror. For some reason, he had a feeling that Eastern Jiujiang was going to get very busy soon.

"I have said something wrong..."

Chen Ge reached New Century Park at 5 am. He walked into the staff breakroom and fell asleep as soon as his head hit the pillow. However, he only slept for two hours before being shaken awake. The comic that he had left on the table was making plenty of noise. Yan Danian seemed to be looking for him.

Climbing up from bed, Chen Ge communicated with Yan Danian and realized that the phone spirit had been ‘persuaded’. He was willing to join Chen Ge, but he had one small request.

The phone spirit was very useful to Chen Ge, and he valued this ghost a lot. Chen Ge was afraid that the sun might hurt the phone spirit, so he walked into the underground scenario with the comic before he let the phone spirit out.

After being educated by the other ghosts inside the comic, the phone spirit saw the fault of his ways. He looked like he was just seven or eight. He had his head lowered and looked scared, like he was afraid of Chen Ge.

“I’m different from the ghost stories society. I’m someone who can be reasoned with.” Chen Ge looked at the boy. He was overly thin, and there was an old-fashioned telephone hanging around his neck. “Tell me, what is your wish? If it is not too unreasonable, I will help you fulfill it.”

Chapter 404 - I'm Sorry [2 in 1]

Chapter 404: I'm Sorry [2 in 1]

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The phone spirit looked at Chen Ge shyly and fearfully. He picked up the old phone around his neck with both of his hands. The display that was glowing weakly had ninety-nine unanswered calls, and every single one of them came from the same registered number—Mom.

Chen Ge felt like the phone spirit was not an evil spirit; he could not feel any vengeance or venom from him. If anything, the phone spirit felt like a boy who did not know anything.

...

“You want me to help you find your mom?” The phone spirit nodded. He raised his thin arms and waved them before Chen Ge, trying to tell him something. However, Chen Ge could not get what he was trying to communicate. The phone spirit then grabbed the phone around his neck and wrote a message to send to Chen Ge. His phone vibrated, and Chen Ge read the message that he had just received.

“My mom has been searching for you. I want you to use my phone to send a message to her. My phone is in Eastern Jiujiang’s Li Wan City.”

“Your wish is for me to send a phone message to your mother?” Chen Ge nodded. Each of the ghosts had their own story, and it was because of unfulfilled dreams that they remained in the human world. Chen Ge put the phone spirit back into the comic. He planned to help him fulfill his wish that day. The ghost stories society has wasted such a special spirit. Only I will be able to support him to his full potential.

The phone spirit would be immensely useful to Chen Ge’s Haunted House. If the phone spirit was willing to help him, the number of visitors using their phones to take pictures and videos inside the Haunted House would drastically decrease.

After taking a cold bath, Chen Ge changed into a set of clean clothes and then cleaned the Haunted House for a while. The theme park opened for business at 9 am. The sky was rather dim and cloudy, but that did not dampen the visitors’ passion. Compared to the previous few days, the number of visitors had increased a lot.

One-star scenarios had already lost their attraction to the returning customers. Most of the visitors had started to challenge the two-star scenarios, and the most experienced visitors were already challenging three-star scenarios. In just one morning, six to seven batches of visitors entered Coffin Village and Third Sick Hall. The visitors' adaptive skill toward the new scenarios was much greater than Chen Ge had expected.

Everyone had a threshold for fear inside their heart, and as they experienced more scary scenarios, the threshold would slowly increase, which created pressure for Chen Ge.

The reward for the Third Sick Hall's Trial Mission was the ten mental patients. If I really place them inside the Third Sick Hall, even without the other set-ups, I will be able to scare the visitors until they pee their pants. However, the key problem is that I cannot guarantee that the souls of these mental patients will listen to my command. They are mental patients after all.

To ensure the patients' safety, Chen Ge did not use the patient's list for the Third Sick Hall.

There is temporarily no better solution. When someone is close to beating the scenario, I'll just have to ask Ol' Zhou and his friends to go 'help' the group of visitors. Chen Ge's concern for the visitors' enjoyment was multi-faceted. While he was thinking about ways to scare the visitors, he was still concerned about their safety as well. Nowadays, it is certainly hard to do business.

Sitting inside the Haunted House, after Chen Ge sent the visitors in the underground scenario, he grabbed a chair and sat down to rest. His current biological clock was almost similar to Zhang Ya; his day was night, and night was day. He had tons of activities at night, and in the morning, he needed to find time to sleep. Taking out his phone, Chen Ge went online to look for information on Li Wan City. It was just a normal small town.

The phone spirit's phone is in Eastern Jiujiang, so he should have been haunting Eastern Jiujiang. How did he end up in the hands of the ghost stories society? Does this mean the society is also somehow related to Eastern Jiujiang? Chen Ge shook his head. He believed that the chance of that was very low.

After a whole day of working, the Haunted House only stopped operations at 6:30 pm. After Xu Wan and Gu Feiyu got off work, Chen Ge first gave Lee Zheng a call, asking how he was supposed to cooperate with them. The answer given by Lee Zheng was for him to not do anything for now and wait for their update. Since the police had said that, naturally, Chen Ge would not go and stir the pot.

He entered the staff breakroom to put the hammer and the tape recorder inside his backpack. After making sure that he had not forgotten anything, he exited the Haunted House, closed the door, and hailed a cab to get to Eastern Jiujiang.

Unlike the previous night, Chen Ge felt confident. He did not feel any trace of fear in his heart. If anything, he felt anticipatory and excited. Li Wan City was not that isolated; the taxi drove for thirty minutes before Chen Ge arrived at his destination.

During the journey over, it started to rain. The rain was not heavy, but Chen Ge did not have an umbrella with him. After paying the fare, Chen Ge rushed into a mobile operation center that was close by.

Seeing how curiously dressed Chen Ge was, the person behind the counter eyed him suspiciously and asked with caution, “Sir, how can I help you?”

“It’s okay. I’ll just be looking around on my own.” Chen Ge took out the comic and found a silent corner to communicate with the phone spirit. After a while, his phone received a new message from the phone spirit.

“Pu Ming Apartments’ top floor on Li Wan City’s East Street? Is this the address?” Chen Ge read the address on the phone and then turned to find that person who served him earlier. “I’m sorry, but how do I get to Pu Ming Apartments?”

“Just follow this street and walk straight until you see the oldest building.” The person was quite nice, and she thought that Chen Ge was an outsider who had just moved to the city and was looking for a place to rent. “East Street is rather unsafe, and the place is not clean. I suggest you find a place at West Street. Yes, the rent might be higher but not by much.”

“Thank you.” Chen Ge carried his backpack and ran to Pu Ming Apartments in the rain. After about ten minutes of light jogging, he finally found the apartment building that was described by the phone spirit. The building looked like it was well over thirty years old—it looked old and decrepit. “Is this the place?”

Chen Ge entered the building, and the place looked vacant. Most of the room doors had a thick layer of dust. He climbed all the way to the top. The door that led to the rooftop was locked. The lock was rusted until the keyhole was completely rusted shut.

Looks like this place has been abandoned for a long time already. Chen Ge took out the hammer from his backpack to smash the lock away. He pushed the door open. The rooftop was filled with garbage, and there was a row of potted plants by the wall. However, the plants inside were all already dead. The phone spirit's phone is here?

Chen Ge looked around the place before focusing his attention on the few water tanks. The water tanks looked like they had been used by the tenants to marinate cabbage. The tanks were all sealed, and a boulder was placed on top of them. Chen Ge inched closer to them with the hammer in hand. He moved the boulder away and opened the first water tank. The tank was empty; it had nothing inside.

Then, Chen Ge moved the boulder away from the second water tank. Before he even opened the tank, a weird smell drifted out from inside. He flipped open the lid, and when he looked in, Chen Ge's eyelids twitched.

There was a desiccated child that was as thin as a twig trapped inside the tank. His facial features were similar to the phone spirit's, and there was an old-fashioned phone hanging around his neck. Chen Ge stood beside the tank for a long time until his hair was slick from rain. "Found you."

He took out his phone to prepare to call the police when the phone spirit sent him a message. "Before calling the police, I wish to use my own phone to send my mom a message. She must be very worried."

"Must we use your phone?" Chen Ge did not know why the phone spirit stopped him from calling the police, but he respected the boy's decision. "Okay."

He did not want to ruin the crime scene. He snapped a few pictures of the water tank and removed the phone from the boy's body. After so many years, of course, the phone could not be operated anymore. He replaced the tank's lid and prepared to return after he completed the phone spirit's wish.

Putting away the hammer, Chen Ge ran downstairs to return to the mobile center where he had hidden from the rain. The rain became heavier, soaking his shirt.

“Sir, how can I help you again?” The person had just met Chen Ge, so she was surprised to see him return so soon.

“Can you help me charge this phone? Is there still charger for this model? If the phone cannot be used anymore, then please help me remove the sim card.” Chen Ge passed the phone to the woman. The woman looked at it, and her face scrunched up in difficulty. She rummaged through the counter but could not find a suitable charger. “Sir, your model is quite outdated already.”

“I haven’t used this phone for many years already. I understand the difficulty. If you cannot really turn the phone on, can you help me remove the sim card? I need to get the phone number.” Chen Ge understood the phone spirit’s thought. His mother had been looking for him, so he wanted to use his own phone to send his mother one last message.

“Hasn’t been used for many years?” The person shook her head. “But sir, if you haven’t paid the phone bill for more than three months, the number will automatically be deleted, so I believe your number has been deactivated already.”

“Deactivated?” Chen Ge stood beside the counter; his hand subconsciously went to grip the comic in his pocket.

“Wait, let me check for you.” The person was very patient and kind. She opened the casing and removed the sim card. She then copied the number on the card into the computer to pull out its information. Looking at the information that came on screen, the person was shocked. “Your card is still in operation.”

“Really? But didn’t you say the number would be deactivated after three months? The phone hasn’t been used for years already.” Chen Ge tried to glance at the screen. He also felt this was rather impossible.

“Yes, that’s if you haven’t paid for over three months. But since your number was activated seven years ago, every month, someone would come to pay the bill. Here is the payment record.” The screen showed all the payment records for the past seven years, and the latest transaction had happened the day before!

The woman looked at Chen Ge, and her face turned up into a smile. “Sir, even though you forgot about this number, someone did not. She held on for seven years—that is quite unbelievable on her part.”

“Thank you.” Chen Ge bought a new phone that could use the sim card from the woman and left the center. He slotted the card into the new phone. Looking at the dim sky, he walked into the nearby alley to summon the phone spirit.

“This is our deal.” Chen Ge passed the phone to the phone spirit. The small boy held the phone, and his body was shaking. The rain continued to pour. Chen Ge squatted down silently before the phone spirit and looked into his eyes as he asked, “How about I bring you to go meet her?”

The phone spirit shook his head. He held the phone but did not dare send the message. After a long time, he passed the phone back to Chen Ge.

“She is afraid that you will not be able to contact her after your number gets deactivated, so she goes to pay the phone bill monthly to keep your number activated. She has been waiting for you.” It was unknown whether it was Chen Ge’s words or not, but the phone spirit sent Chen Ge a message and disappeared.

Opening the message, it contained an address—thirty-seven Pu Yuan Road, Tong Tong Florist. Chen Ge did not stop to rest but called a taxi to drive him to the address given by the phone spirit.

At around 8 pm, Chen Ge reached thirty-seven Pu Yuan Road, and by then, it was pouring heavily. Chen Ge’s shirt was completely drenched. He leaned against the wall and studied the florist that was on the other side of the street. The shop was small, but the décor was comfortable and welcoming. When he walked toward it, he could even smell the flowers in the air.

He pushed open the glass door, and the wind chime jingled. A woman who looked about thirty was working on a flower arrangement. When she heard the wind chime, she stood up and quickly put the flower arrangement down.

Chen Ge studied the woman before him. She looked very normal. “Hi, I wish to buy a bouquet of carnations.”

“Is it for your mother? What type of carnations does she like?” The woman led Chen Ge deeper into the shop.

“I don’t quite know. How about you pick the ones that you think are pretty.”

“Okay, then you can come pick it up tomorrow morning. Or I can send you a picture, and if you’re satisfied, I can have it sent to you.”

“Okay.” Chen Ge looked around the shop and found a small wooden board on top of the cashier counter. There was a picture of a cute boy pasted on it. “Is that your son?”

The woman nodded, and the emotions in her eyes were complicated. “His name is Tong Tong. He disappeared around the shop about six years ago. The police suspect that he was kidnapped by human traffickers.”

“Human trafficker?” Chen Ge did not ask for the woman to elaborate. When she was spacing out, Chen Ge left the money for the bouquet on the counter. “I’m sure your boy is fine, perhaps he is thinking about you now.”

Chen Ge walked out the store, not wanting to disturb the woman anymore.

“What is it?” While Chen Ge was surprised, the woman came out from the shop with an umbrella. “It’s raining outside, take this and use it. You can return it to me tomorrow when you come to collect the bouquet.”

Chen Ge thanked the woman, but he did not accept the umbrella, striding right out of the florist. The sound of the wind chime was swallowed up by the rain. Chen Ge walked around the block before entering the café across from the florist. He picked a spot that was next to the window and summoned the phone spirit. “Talk to her. She has been waiting for you.”

Chen Ge passed the newly bought phone to the phone spirit. The little boy, who looked thin and vulnerable, held the phone in his two arms and stood beside the window, looking at the opposite street.

The lights in the florist went off, and the woman came out with her bag and the umbrella. Like usual, she locked the door and walked away.

Seeing her shadow disappear into the distance, the phone spirit finally picked up the phone. He thought about it for a long time and used his phone number to send a message to the woman.

“I’m sorry.”

Across the street, when the woman heard the message alert on her phone. She did not pay it any heed at first. She held the umbrella in one hand and pulled out the phone with another. However, when she saw the message on screen, her body seemed to freeze.

The umbrella fell from her hand, and she stood alone in the pouring rain with the phone in her hand.

Inside the café, the phone spirit leaned against the window, and the window reflected the tears that poured down his face.

The rain continued to pour, and the sight was blurred. Chen Ge sat across from the phone spirit and watched this silently. The phone spirit was one street away from his mother, but those several meters was the distance between two worlds, viewable but not touchable.

“Do you want me to bring you to meet her?” Chen Ge asked softly. The phone spirit shook his head quickly. He used his hand to wipe the tears from his face, but the tears just would not stop.

...

After a long time, he sent a message to Chen Ge. “Call the police, she has waited long enough.”

Through the window, the phone spirit looked at the woman who stood in the rain. His hand fell on the window lightly, and he said something before disappearing. The woman on the street seemed to have heard him because she turned toward the café as if subconsciously, but she could not see the person that she wanted to see.

After the woman left, Chen Ge walked out of the café. He looked at the city covered by rain, and his expression was complicated. He had been through many things lately; first it was Xiaoxiao and her grandfather, and now it was the phone spirit and his mother.

Some people had already departed, but the people living still missed them. Perhaps it was also because of this emotion that they had hope. Leaning against the wall, Chen Ge ignored the rain that fell on his body. He was contemplating a question that had been bothering him.

What exactly is a ghost?

After he gained the black phone, he had come across many different types of ghosts, but the more he encountered, the more confused he became. He glanced at Tong Tong florist, which had closed for the night, and walked into the alley with his phone.

“Captain Yan, I want to ask you for a favor. About seven years ago, a boy by the name of Tong Tong has disappeared in Eastern Jiujiang, the police suspected he was taken by human traffickers. Can you still find the file on that case?”

Captain Yan heard the unusual tone in Chen Ge’s voice, and he thought about it before replying, “The case was probably handled by Eastern Jiujiang’s police force; I’ll call them in a bit to ask.”

“Are you alright? You sound disturbed.”

“I’m fine.” After ten minutes, Captain Yan called Chen Ge again. “Found the case file. There was no suspect. The only information is that the car that captured Tong Tong was from Eastern Jiujiang’s Li Wan City. However, the police were unable to find Tong Tong there. They suspected that the culprit had already moved him elsewhere.”

“Did they investigate Pu Ming Apartments?”

“Pu Ming Apartments? Let me ask.” Captain Yan sent a message to the people at Eastern Jiujiang’s police station, and after a while, he replied, “They did, but they did not see the kid or hear any crying.”

“Employee?” Captain Yan could hear the ruthlessness in Chen Ge’s voice, something that he had not heard before. “Chen Ge, no matter what happened, don’t act recklessly!”

“I will not act recklessly; I’m just asking for justice.” After hanging up, Chen Ge got the rest of the information from the phone spirit. The human trafficker stayed at Pu Ming Apartments. After the police entered Li Wan City, he panicked. The child was crying, so afraid of being discovered, he killed Tong Tong and shoved the body and the phone into the water tank at the rooftop.

...

At 11:30 pm, Eastern Jiujiang’s police station received a call saying that someone had discovered the human trafficker responsible for the missing child several years ago. The caller even reconstructed the whole case for them, including the capturing, the killing, and the hiding of the body.

The police mobilized immediately. When they left the police station, they discovered a man lying unconscious by the front door. After comparing details, they realized with a shock, this man was the human trafficker!

The police hauled the man away, and Chen Ge left in the taxi. He had completed the phone spirit's wish. The phone spirit's affection toward Chen Ge had greatly increased, and Tong Tong's name appeared on the black phone as an employee of the Haunted House.

However, Chen Ge was not that happy. He had suggested to reveal certain information to Tong Tong's mother several times, but he had been denied every time. The boy did not want to stop his mother from moving on.

Chen Ge finally had a good night's sleep that night. The next day, sunlight shone into the room. He stretched and looked out the window. "It's finally a sunny day."

At 8:15 am, Xu Wan arrived at the Haunted House with breakfast. She looked like she had just woken up. Looking at Chen Ge, whose hair was cowlicked, she shook her head. "Boss, this is for you. Eat it while it's hot."

"Thank you." Chen Ge brushed his teeth and started munching on Xu Wan's breakfast offering.

At 8:25 am, Gu Feiyu rushed over from theme park entrance. He wore the new worker's tag that Uncle Xu had given him around his neck. He greeted everyone that he met. It seemed he loved this job a lot.

"Go and start the preparation, the visitors will be coming soon." Chen Ge personally helped them with the make-up and sent him into the scenarios.

There was still fifteen minutes to opening time when Director Luo came over with Uncle Xu. Accompanying them were several other park workers.

"Director Luo, why are you here?" Chen Ge had done quite a few things lately, giving Director Luo plenty of trouble.

“I came to give you something good.” Director Luo pointed at the workers, who were carrying several boxes. “Do you still remember the triangulation wristband and software app I told you about?”

Chen Ge nodded and then turned to look at the boxes. “The app is done?”

“It has passed the internal test; we can use them now.” Director Luo had the workers pull over a table and place the boxes on it. Many wristbands sat inside. “These one thousand wristbands can be given away for me. You can say it’s for the open beta test. In the future, the visitors will have to purchase the band on their own. The front of the box and the logo on the side has a QR code—they can download the app by scanning it directly. There’s a promotion going on: the first one thousand users can apply for a discount and enjoy a ninety percent discount when they come to visit next time.”

The workers were busy, and the people walked in and out of the resting hall. It looked like they were setting up some electronics.

“I’ll also help you acquire a bigger monitor that can show the progress of the visitors and a brief introduction to each scenario. The proposal for the multi-purpose hall has been approved, and work will start in three days.” Director Luo felt like he was playing a very serious game of chess. “I plan to remove attractions like the merry-go-round and some others, which should make it more convenient for you to expand in the future. Secondly, our current technical level is still a distance away from the futuristic park, so I plan to purchase a batch of new devices to try to narrow down this distance.”

He had not met the man for a few days, but Chen Ge realized that Director Luo suddenly had new confidence in New Century Park, and this confused him.

“Director Luo, you have to think about this closely. The distance between our New Century Park and the futuristic theme park in terms of technical power cannot be resolved by buying some new devices or attractions.” Chen Ge believed that Director Luo should have been more familiar with that than he was.

...

“Updating the attractions is to shorten the distance. The influence of your Haunted House is still growing, so the park mustn’t pull you back; we have to update accordingly.” Director Luo knew what Chen Ge was worried about. “The budget is already there. Don’t underestimate the power that the theme park has collected over the years.”

Before the workers, Director Luo always maintained his look of confidence like everything was within his control. Of all the people there, probably only Chen Ge really understood Director Luo’s difficulty. The theme park already had no money, and this new asset was probably something that Director Luo collected through his connections and channels with some sacrifices.

Updating the attractions and building the multi-purpose hall required a great amount of money, but since Director Luo had said that, Chen Ge would not counter him in front of the crowd. Everyone was working to save the theme park. The futuristic theme park in Eastern Jiujiang was opening in a few weeks, and this was the most crucial moment for New Century Park. Their morale could not be shaken at a time like this.

The park opened at 9 am, and Chen Ge’s Haunted House had become the park’s main attraction. Thus, he had the most visitors. In just a few minutes, a long line had formed in front of the Haunted House. The visitors realized the changes in front of the Haunted House, and many downloaded the app. Initially, they were merely curious, but they slowly realized that the app was quite interesting.

The visitors that came early in the morning were mostly the Haunted House's loyal fans. They had a shared interest, and after downloading the app, they started chatting on the forum.

"I, Ol' Zhang, have returned! This time, I will clear this one-star scenario!"

"First group to challenge three-star Coffin Village today! Bringing two girls with me!"

"Mu Yang High School looking for teammate, no heart problem and will not abandon teammates during crucial moment."

"Fighting for the dead, protecting the living! Communication thread for Jiujiang Medical School students!"

The forum quickly became rife with activity. The visitors were all very passionate—it felt like this one app had gathered everyone with the same interest, giving them a place to share their thoughts, thus cultivating loyalty in the fans of the Haunted House. As the visitors entered the Haunted House and the ranking on the big monitor changed, the visitors waiting also became more excited.

The points earned from clearing a three-star scenario was the highest, so the number of visitors wanting to attempt three-star scenarios increased. Chen Ge did not have time to rest; he kept moving between the few underground scenarios to prevent any accidents. He busied himself until noon when Director Luo came over again. After confirming the popularity of the app, he left with a satisfied smile.

Xu Wan and Gu Feiyu left for lunch, and Chen Ge left the underground at around 2 pm. He was rather tired from so many visitors. Most visitors just passed Mu Yang High School and directly moved to challenge Third Sick Hall or Coffin Village. This meant that the screams had not stopped from the underground.

Chen Ge ran back and forth between the few scenarios. He had just helped the visitors out from the Third Sick Hall when he heard the blood-curdling scream from Coffin Village. In the end, he had to ask help from Ol' Zhou's group. He did not need them to scare people but needed them as ushers to prevent the wandering visitors from running into accidents.

The moment they appeared, they were ready to do something big, but after strong persuasion from Chen Ge, they finally surrendered to his demand. Afraid that their faces might be recognized, Chen Ge ran to the changing room to pick out outfits that would cover up their faces before letting them go. Chen Ge sighed in relief with the help of the three ghosts.

No one cleared the three-star scenarios, and no visitors fainted from the scare—this was the best solution for Chen Ge so far. The few scenarios opened at the same time, and Chen Ge felt greatly pressured. He really needed a managerial ghost. “If I have nothing to do tonight, I should return to Mu Yang High School.”

Chen Ge sent off the last visitor at 6 pm. He called Xu Wan and Gu Feiyu, telling them to remove the make-up and leave work. After dealing with everything, Chen Ge returned to the staff breakroom and climbed into bed. “After a whole day of work, I don’t feel that tired. I wonder if my body is changing or if I’ve gotten used to this type of high-stress lifestyle?”

Just as Chen Ge was wondering what to do that night, his phone rang. He realized that it was a call from Lee Zheng.

“Do you need my help now?” Chen Ge was working with the police for the first time. He did not know what he was expected to do.

“Chen Ge, I have something to tell you.” Lee Zheng seemed to be at the office—the background was quiet. “Liu Zhe has just come to surrender.”

“Surrender?” Chen Ge sat up in bed. With Liu Zhe’s selfish personality, he would not do something like this.

“We suspect that Doctor Gao has realized something and decided to give up on Liu Zhe and push the blame onto him.”

“That’s impossible. That Liu Zhe has a lot of resentment toward Doctor Gao. If something really happened, he would have dragged Doctor Gao down with him.” Chen Ge managed the Haunted House and would come into contact with many people, so he was a good people reader.

“Let me finish. Even though Liu Zhe came to confess his crimes, his condition is very off. He looks very distracted like he is in a state of sleep-walking.” Lee Zheng also felt that something was off. “We are thinking along the line of hypnosis or mental suggestion, but Jiujiang doesn't have this type of expert, and we cannot do anything for now."

"Meaning the trail on Liu Zhe has gone completely cold?" Liu Zhe's condition was similar to Liu Xianxian and Ma Yin that day when they returned to their bedroom. Chen Ge believed that this was the doing of that ashy-skinned woman.

"Unfortunately, that is the case until he recovers." There was helplessness in Lee Zheng's voice. This time, their opponent had covered up everything, not giving them a chance. "Therefore, we hope you can gain contact with Gao Ru Xue silently and the actual details that we need you to get from her. I will send you an email tomorrow; this call is just a reminder."

"Of course, I understand." After receiving the black phone, Chen Ge had troubled the police many times, and now that they needed his help, of course, he would not reject it.

After getting the reply from Chen Ge, Lee Zheng sounded more relaxed. The man also could not understand why he would feel pressure whenever he talked to Chen Ge. "If there's nothing else, I shall hang up. Rest early."

Lee Zheng was about to hang up, Chen Ge said, "Wait a minute, I have a question."

...

"Yes?"

"When Liu Zhe surrendered, did he give up the location where he hid the body, and was the body found?"

"It is as we thought. Liu Zhe was university staff, so he used the convenience of his identity to have the students move the statue into the underground storeroom. He went there later at night to remove the body from inside the statue and transport it to the morgue." Lee Zheng's voice lowered like he remembered something traumatic.

"Meaning you have entered the underground morgue?" Chen Ge listened closely. The underground morgue was a three-star scenario and was the last mission to unlock the four-star scenario School of the Afterlife, so any information related to the underground morgue was crucial to him.

"I entered the morgue with the university staff this morning and found the body in morgue no. 5. We ran a DNA comparison, and she was indeed Ma Yin's missing sister."

When Lee Zheng said that, Chen Ge's black phone vibrated. He took it out and saw that there was a new message. He did not read it immediately but continued to question Lee Zheng. "Brother Zheng, can you tell me about the layout of the underground morgue? Or do you have the map?"

The underground had complicated terrain, and a map would be important. Lee Zheng was thirty so, it was not out of place for Chen Ge to refer to him as Brother Zheng. However, for some reason, when he heard that, the hair on the back of his head stood like something bad was about to happen. “We don’t have a map as we had the university staff with us, but I do know the rough layout. Why are you asking about this?”

“I’m just curious.” Chen Ge moved the topic around before Lee Zheng finally gave him the information he needed.

“The underground morgue at the university was the biggest underground morgue in Jiujiang, perhaps even in Northern China. It had been in use since the university started, so it had more than several decades of history already. When we entered, the staff told us not to wander off because the tracks were very confusing, but based on their function, they could be generally separated into three types.

“One was the white corridors that were used to transport the bodies, another was the unpainted corridors for people to walk, and the last type was painted red. The staff did not tell me what the red corridors were for, but he did remind us to not walk down the red corridors.” Lee Zheng’s words intrigued Chen Ge. He was hearing about these red corridors for the first time. “Could it be due to the influence of the ‘door?’”

“Nothing, please continue.”

“How big the underground morgue was, the staff were not clear. There were six morgues on the records, but after we entered the place, we only walked a third of the distance, and we had already passed three small morgues and two middle-sized morgues.” Lee Zheng sounded like he had something to do because he picked up his speed. “The largest morgues are deeper in, and I hear they are body pools. Meaning it’s a big pool filled with formalin, and the dead bodies are left soaking in the pool. When they are needed for experiments, they have to be hauled up to land. However, that was something used many years ago; they have been abandoned. Nowadays, they use freezers to store the bodies.”

Lee Zheng gave Chen Ge a brief introduction of the morgue, but it was not of much use to Chen Ge. The place was too complicated and without a guide, Chen Ge felt like it would be very dangerous if he entered alone.

“Brother Zheng, when you all were down there, did you hear any weird noises? Or did anything weird happened?” The underground morgue was similar to his own Haunted House’s underground parking lot—the ghosts could come up in the day because the place was hidden from the sunlight.

“Anything weird?” Lee Zheng paused to think. “Now that you mention it, there are a few. We were passing through the unpainted corridors for people, but when we passed a white corridor, we heard something that sounded like clapping at the end of the corridor.”

Chen Ge was interested. “Can you tell me in more detail?”

“It sounded like something was clapping at the other end of the corridor, but when we passed it, there was no one. However, there was this weird observation where the white corridors were cleaner than the unpainted corridors, like people still used them to this day.” Chen Ge took out a pen and paper to jot down all the details that Lee Zheng gave him.

“The second strange event was, when we passed Morgue No. 1, a member saw someone moving inside the morgue, but the morgue was locked, and we should have been the only ones underground at that time. We asked one of the staff, and he said that the member was probably too tired. The underground morgue was stuffy, so the member probably mistook a shadow for a person. He even consoled my member, saying that he would get used to it.

“The third strange event happened after we entered Morgue No. 5. When everyone was looking for the body described by Liu Zhe, the door suddenly closed on its own. It felt like someone close it from the outside, trying to lock us in.

“The last thing happened when we prepared to leave with the body. We exited Morgue No. 5 and retraced our steps, but the time it took us to leave was twice the time it took us to enter.” The fourth strange event confused Lee Zheng the most. Even now, he could not figure out why. “You might not believe me, but it was a strange feeling, like the corridors had been stretched.”

“You make it sound so scary.” Chen Ge looked at the paper and the details that he had jotted down.

“Not quite scary.” Lee Zheng seemed to hear something in Chen Ge’s voice, and he changed his tone. “Chen Ge that place is particularly dangerous. Don’t you come up with some weird thought.”

“What kind of weird thought could I have?” Chen Ge was speechless. “Do you think I’m that kind of person?”

“I’m just reminding you not to go there alone. I still have something to do, so I’ll hang up now.” Lee Zheng then ended the call. Chen Ge sat in the room alone. He realized that he had underestimated the danger of the underground morgue.

“Both Coffin Village and the Third Sick Hall were three-star scenarios, but the scariest presence of the place had been removed due to some reason, and I was lucky in that sense.”

When Chen Ge arrived at the Third Sick Hall, of the ten patients only three remained, and it was even luckier for Coffin Village; the strongest ghost had been in Jiang Ling’s body, and she had meant Chen Ge no harm.

“A full three-star scenario is still too dangerous for my current state.” Chen Ge turned to look at his shadow, and he felt conflicted.

Chapter 408 - Liu Zhe's Special Hobby

Chapter 408: Liu Zhe's Special Hobby [2 in 1]

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

If this three-star scenario had been at an open space, Chen Ge would not have been so conflicted. With the help of his workers, if he could not win the fight, at least he could have made a swift retreat. However, the problem was, the morgue was underground. If something happened, there was no place for him to run, and there was a high chance that he might be trapped down there.

Holding the pen and paper, Chen Ge made a quick assessment of the baleful Specters that he had on his side. "Technically speaking, my Haunted House can be considered a three-star scenario. I have many ghosts and most of them have special powers, but generally, their combat ability is very weak."

...

Eighty percent of the Haunted House's combat power came from Zhang Ya, fifteen percent was Xu Yin, and the last five percent was everyone else. "I have the power to force my way through other three-star scenarios, but I'll need to wait for Zhang Ya to wake up first."

Honestly, there were ways to make Zhang Ya wake up sooner—Chen Ge only needed to find other female ghosts to chat with. However, should Zhang Ya wake up from that provocation, he might be the one who died. Chen Ge lay in bed. He told himself that he probably should not rely on Zhang Ya so much, but it felt nice having someone to depend on.

"The other Specters at the Haunted House have potential to improve. Xu Yin's heart hasn't been dyed red yet, and he is just one step away from becoming a real Red Specter. This last step should be related to the door." Turning the pen in his hand, Chen Ge thought back to the door at the Third Sick Hall. "Should I go ask Men Nan's main persona? That boy is a door-pusher, so he should know plenty of information."

Chen Ge was subconsciously averse to the world behind the door, but he had already lost that choice a long time ago. "The chairperson of the ghost stories society has at least two Red Specters, Xiong Qing and his wife, so I have to be prepared to face two Red Specters at once.”

Chen Ge looked out the window at the darkening sky. “Since I have nothing to do tonight, I should pay the Third Sick Hall a visit.”

After packing his backpack, Chen Ge glanced at the black phone before he left. When Lee Zheng mentioned the missing person’s body had been found, the black phone vibrated, and Chen Ge had not read the new message. He clicked the message open.

“The Special Visitor’s Mission, The Missing Wife, has been completed. Specter’s Favored, congratulations for unlocking the scary scenario—Wife’s Room!

“Wife’s Room (One-star Scream Factor): I thought that he would marry me, but he shoved me inside the statue and placed me inside the morgue that could see no sun.”

The hidden mission for the special visitor Liu Xianxian had been completed, but there were many unanswered questions. For example, why would Liu Xianxian force herself to come into contact with these scary things? And why would she force herself to smile when she was fearful?

Chen Ge knew that Liu Xianxian was hiding something from him. The girl’s relationship with Liu Zhe was not simple, so he might be able to get some information on Liu Zhe from her. “Now that Liu Zhe is mentally unstable, I should focus my investigation on Liu Xianxian. The weird reactions that she has been showing should be related to Liu Zhe. This might be a useful opening.”

Carrying his backpack, Chen Ge stopped at the entrance to the Haunted House. After some thought, he changed his mind and hopped into a taxi to head to Western Jiujiang Medical University. When he arrived, Chen Ge walked into the campus like he usually did.

“Hey, what are you doing?” A tall and thin security guard stopped Chen Ge. The man looked like he was not in a good mood, and his expression was dark.

“Going to look for someone.” Chen Ge’s gaze scanned the tag that hung before the man’s chest. The man was one of the suspects that Lee Zheng had told Chen Ge about, Zhang Li. Before Liu Zhe surrendered, Lee Zheng had also suspected Zhang Li. On the night that Ma Yin’s sister disappeared, it was Zhang Li who had been on the night shift.

“The security at the campus is heavy lately, and outsiders are not allowed into the campus. You need to call that person out to meet you.” Zhang Li was not going to give Chen Ge any leeway—that was probably one of the reasons he was not popular among the students.

Chen Ge did not waste time arguing with Zhang Li. He called Liu Xianxian and told her to meet him at the campus entrance.

“Boss Chen, you want to talk to me?” Liu Xianxian had a good impression of Chen Ge. He was a nice person, friendly and passionate, and most importantly, he had saved her life once.

Chen Ge nodded and led them to the teahouse that they had met up at the previous time. He asked for a private room. After the door was closed, the room became very quiet.

After a moment’s silence, it was Chen Ge who spoke first. “How well do you know Liu Zhe?”

The mention of Liu Zhe’s name made Liu Xianxian’s face fall. The color seemed to seep from her eyes as she told Chen Ge of her story with Liu Zhe. Listening to Liu Xianxian’s description, Liu Zhe was a perfect man. He had no weakness, but his overwhelming memory of his wife was the reason he was so hesitant to accept a new romantic relationship.

After hearing what she had to say, Chen Ge looked at Liu Xianxian and asked his second question. “That day, when we were inside the underground storeroom, Ma Yin risked her life to protect you, and when it was at the most dangerous, she did not give up on you. Now, I’m asking you a question. One day, if both Ma Yin and Liu Zhe fell into the water and you could only save one, who would you save?”

It was a very clichéd question, but Chen Ge sounded very serious.

“I don’t know.” Liu Xianxian picked up the tea cup from the table. She was feeling uncomfortable from Chen Ge’s stare. It felt like Chen Ge’s eyes were like knives, puncturing her heart.

“Liu Zhe has just handed himself in to the police.” Chen Ge cut right into the main reason she was there. “The killer that murdered Ma Yin’s sister several years ago was him.”

The tea cup clattered to the ground, and the scalding tea splashed all over Liu Xianxian, but the girl seemed like she could not feel the pain. Her eyes widened as she stared blindly at Chen Ge. “This happened two hours ago, and Liu Zhe is in police custody.”

“Impossible!” Liu Xianxian sprung up from her seat. The man that she loved was the killer of her best friend’s sister—that was quite hard for her to accept. Seeing Liu Xianxian’s reaction, Chen Ge sighed in relief. He was afraid that Liu Xianxian would choose to help the man cover up the truth even though she knew Liu Zhe was the killer.

“Things have not reached the worst situation yet.” Chen Ge tried to make Liu Xianxian calm down and told her the whole process of how Liu Zhe committed the crime. Before the truth, all arguments and lies were powerless, and Liu Xianxian sat across from Chen Ge dumbly.

“Actually, I believe you should have noticed the various problems surrounding Liu Zhe, or else you would not have gone to search for that statue to ask whether the man still loved you or not.” Chen Ge gave Liu Xianxian some time to process the truth before he continued with his questions. “When you entered my Haunted House for the first time, I noticed that when you were facing scary things, even if you were really terrified, you would not hide from them. In fact, you would try your best to smile at them. Ma Yin said that this change happened to you in the second year of university. Is this change related to Liu Zhe as well?”

After a long time, Liu Xianxian nodded, and she told Chen Ge everything. “Actually, when I saw Liu Zhe for the first time, I already had a crush on him. He is a caring man and knows how to take good care of others. When I was with him, I was very happy and very satisfied.

“Everything was going fine until the night of the second semester of the second year. We had just come back from a movie and parted at the campus entrance. I was halfway back to the dormitory when I realized he left his glove in my purse. I ran back to find him but found out he did not return to the place he was staying but sneaked into the western part of campus.

“The way he looked so nervous was different from how he was usually. I was worried that he was caught in something bad, so I followed him quietly. The night was exceptionally dark, and I saw him sneak into the lab building that was supposed to be sealed. When I got closer, I heard him in the middle of a conversation with someone with terms like dead bodies and blood vessels being thrown around.

“I climbed onto the window to sneak a look, and that was a scene that I would not forget for the rest of my life. Liu Zhe was standing in front of a specimen box, talking to a human head that was encased in it. I never thought that the man I love could be a madman, and I almost screamed.

“I bit on my fingers to stop the scream from escaping. The plan was to sneak away unnoticed. Liu Zhe was facing away from me, so he did not notice me, but the human head inside the box seemed to have stopped me!

“The heavy eyelids that were supposed to be close moved open an inch, and without any outside force, the human head bounced against the glass lightly. Then Liu Zhe seemed to have understood something, and he turned to run out of the room. I knew then that I had been discovered. I tried my best to run out of the building, but I was still caught up by Liu Zhe.

“I was so scared, afraid that he might do something crazy like those mad people in movies. However, to my surprise, Liu Zhe stopped when he was about three to four meters behind me. Using a painful and hopeless tone, he told me his story.

“Seven years ago, after his wife’s car accident, he had become a different person. He swore he could sense the presence of those things, and he could even hear his wife calling his name every morning like she used to do.” Liu Xianxian looked at her hands that were red from the scalding tea, and her voice was raw. “I was touched by his loyalty. This type of man should not be judged by the world, so I promised to help him keep this secret.”

“He has taken advantage of your kindness. Based on my investigation, Liu Zhe has not been married, and what he told you was what happened to his brother-in-law.” Chen Ge pressed the service bell and had the server come over to help Liu Xianxian with her burned hands.

“I know, I realized some things after a while.” After the server left, Liu Xianxian continued her story. “After spending some more time with Liu Zhe, I started to notice some weird things about him, like he would enter the underground morgue every Wednesday.”

“Enter the underground morgue every Wednesday?” Chen Ge took a sip of the tea. Wednesdays were the day of the week when the ghost stories society would meet up.

“Yes, but no one knew what he was doing there. I tried to question him about it, but he would explode and get angry at me, saying that he did not want to do it either. He was forced; he was also a victim.” Liu Xianxian took out her phone and found a recording for Chen Ge to listen to. “I didn’t understand why he needed to get so angry so during one of our arguments, so I silently recorded it.”

Chen Ge put on the ear buds and listened to the recording for a while. Other than anger, there was also traces of nervousness and fear in Liu Zhe’s voice. He sounded like he was afraid of something. “Was there anything else curious about the man in his everyday life?”

Liu Xianxian thought about it. “Liu Zhe’s closet radiates this formalin smell, and whenever he cooks, the dishes have a similar smell. The stench seems to have seeped into his body, so he has made a habit of putting on heavy cologne before leaving the house.”

Liu Xianxian hesitated before she exposed something even scarier. “Liu Zhe is not a medical student, but there was a lot of research on autopsies and death study on his computer. His interests and hobbies are rather unique, or some would call it scary. It seems he is an adrenaline seeker. The more dangerous something is, the more excited he becomes.”

Her face forced a smile, and Liu Xianxian touched the corner of her upturned lips. “You are right in the sense that this is also because of him. He once told me that there are many scary presences in this world that are beyond human comprehension. However, if we turn to smile at them, they will not harm us.”

“Is that why you have been trying so hard to train yourself?”

“Liu Zhe has been very nice to me; he bought me many things and took good care of me. I lost my father when I was very young, and the feeling he gave me is very unique. Perhaps I was possessed at the time, but for his sake, I was willing to do anything.”

Chen Ge felt like he had found out everything he needed to on Liu Zhe, so he jumped over that topic. “How well do you know Liu Zhe’s brother-in-law?”

“Honestly, not much.” Liu Xianxian shook her head. “He would go far away from me whenever he answered his call. He seems to be afraid of his brother-in-law. Oh, right, there was one time when Liu Zhe had an argument with his brother-in-law. At the time, Liu Zhe practically begged the man with tears in his eyes, saying he did not want to go through those red corridors anymore.”

“Then what did his brother-in-law say?” The underground morgue’s corridors were separated into three types; Lee Zheng had told Chen Ge that before.

“His brother-in-law’s voice was low, so I couldn’t hear it clearly, but he seemed to be saying that everything would be fine if he did not make a sound after entering the red corridors.”

“So, one needs to be quiet inside the red corridors. Okay, I understand it now.” Chen Ge nodded. Liu Xianxian had inadvertently revealed some important information to him. He asked some more questions, and after making sure that he did not leave out any details, Chen Ge sent Liu Xianxian back to the university. Before they parted, he reminded her to stay in the dormitory if she had nothing else to do and to not go anywhere with few people.

Chen Ge called the taxi to drive him to the Third Sick Hall. Inside the taxi, Chen Ge keyed in all the information on his phone. He was preparing a guide to take down the underground morgue. Chen Ge arrived at the Third Sick Hall at around 11 pm. This time, he had the whole group of employees with him, so he was not afraid of a fight with Men Nan’s main persona.

After paying the fare, Chen Ge hopped over the wall and ran to the third building. The last time he was there was several weeks ago, but the place had not changed. Pulling off the seal on the door, Chen Ge pushed open the steel door and stood before the door to Room 3.

Back then, Men Nan’s main persona had said that whenever midnight struck, the blood door would open for a minute, and if Chen Ge wanted to find him, he could come at this time. Standing outside Room 3, as time ticked by, Chen Ge became increasingly nervous. This was the first time he would reach into the world behind the door actively.

His palms sweated, and his heart raced. Chen Ge stared at the door of Room 3. When the first blood vessel appeared, he pressed the play button on the recorder.

Blood leaked out from the edges, dying the whole door red. Chen Ge held the hammer in one hand and pushed the blood door open. The world before his eyes turned cloudy, and his body was enveloped by a red mist; it felt like he had walked into a viscous liquid. Waving the hammer, Chen Ge took a shallow breath, and the smell of blood sucked into his nostrils, making him slightly uncomfortable.

“Whenever I enter the world behind the door, I’m weirdly worried like something inside this world is calling me.” Chen Ge called out Xu Yin to follow behind him before he felt better. “The world behind the door should influence Red Specters somewhat. This place is filled with various negative emotions, stacked with human despair. The longer one stays here, the greater the resentment will become, making it more difficult to seek salvation.”

...

With Xu Yin’s company, Chen Ge felt confident. He pushed the doors to each room open, but he could not find Men Nan.

“Where did he go?” Chen Ge walked to the end of the corridor and saw the door that led to the electrotherapy room. “Last time I was here, this is where I met Men Nan.”

He pushed the door open. The cold bed was covered with various blood red equipment, and all the equipment’s circuit was connected to an old man’s head. Chen Ge glanced at it and realized that the man was familiar. The old man was the former director of the Third Sick Hall. He had escaped to the world behind the door with the patients to ambush Men Nan because he suffered from a terminal disease.

“How are you doing, old director?” Chen Ge walked over with a friendly smile like he had happened across an old friend. The old man looked much weaker and tired, but even in his condition, when he heard Chen Ge’s voice, his eyes flew open.

“You...” He saw Chen Ge and remembered the incredibly violent female Red Specter, and the words that he wanted to say got stuck in his throat.

“What’s wrong? What do you want to tell me?” Chen Ge sat down next to the old man’s skull, and his tone was light like he was visiting a neighbor. The old man glanced at Chen Ge, and his eyes turned like he was coming up with a plan. However, he soon saw Xu Yin, who walked out from behind Chen Ge.

“Another Red Specter?” The red eyes glared at the old man—the evil intention in Xu Yin’s eyes was on full display. It felt as if with a command from Chen Ge, the old man’s head would be torn into pieces.

Collecting his thoughts, the old man looked at the pair of bandits, and his voice sounded even weaker. “Why are you back here?”

“Where is Men Nan’s main persona? I have something to ask him.” Chen Ge was not worried about the old director’s trick. He might have plenty of dirty tricks, but in terms of power, he was no match for a Red Specter.

“He should be on the fourth floor now. The windows there have been broken, so he’s fixing them.” The man spoke quickly like he was trying to make Xu Yin and Chen Ge leave as soon as possible.

“You should know the consequence of lying to me.” Chen Ge believed that the chance of the old man lying was low, but he was a cautious man.

“Why would I lie to you?” The old man sighed. He had a feeling that Chen Ge was merely seeking a reason to annoy him.

“If you say so.” Chen Ge led Xu Yin out of the room and walked past the patients that filled up the corridor to the fourth floor. Once he exited the stairwell, Chen Ge noticed that something was wrong. The mist on the fourth floor was much thicker, and the smell of blood in the air was pungent.

“Has there been an accident? Have the people from the society been here?” Chen Ge pushed open the doors on both sides carefully. When he almost reached the end of the corridor, he saw a small figure walk out from one of the sick bays. The shirt that was dripping with blood was a great contrast to his babyish face. He was surrounded by the blood mist like he was the one that caused it.

“Chen Ge?” The mist gently dispersed, and when Men Nan raised his head and saw Chen Ge, he frowned. Honestly, he did not know why he frowned, but he knew that whenever he saw this man, trouble would not be faraway.

“I heard from the director that you’re here, so I came to see you.” Chen Ge glanced inside the room that Men Nan had just walked out from and saw the window in the room seem like it could not be closed.

“Just say whatever you want to.” Men Nan might have looked like a child, but his IQ was beyond normal. He was a genius, but he had grown up inside a mental hospital, so his worldview was different from others.

“You’re being too aloof now.” Chen Ge led Xu Yin to walk toward Men Nan. “You do not have much family in Jiujiang, and I can be considered your only friend, so isn’t it normal for me to come visit you?”

Stopping beside the boy, Chen Ge squatted down to put himself at Men Nan’s eye level.

“We’re not friends. I have no friend and don’t need one.” Men Nan took steps back like he was cautious of Chen Ge. “You came to find me because of that Specter behind you, right? He’s missing a heart before he can become a Red Specter. You don’t know how to do that, so you came to ask me.”

Before Chen Ge said anything, Men Nan had already guessed everything. Men Nan took another few more steps back to maintain a safe distance from Chen Ge. “There exists a small set of normal Specters that have the potential to become Red Specters. Such ghosts normally have a great resentment at time of death and are highly aggressive. They are very murderous or in other words, extremely dangerous, uncontrollable maniac.”

“But aren’t you a Red Specter, too? How come I feel like that description doesn’t fit you?” Chen Ge looked at Men Nan, who had sidled away from him like he was afraid of him.

“I was talking about ghosts like him who have the potential to become Red Specters. People like myself who pushed open the ‘door’ will naturally turn into a Red Specter after death.” Men Nan let slipped a great secret.

"I didn't know that. Then doesn't that mean each door represents a Red Specter?" Chen Ge stood up. He had a feeling that he would be able to get a lot of useful information from Men Nan that night.

"I don't know how doors are formed, but I can be sure every door has at least one Red Specter behind it." Men Nan glanced at Xu Yin. "For people like him who are about to become a Red Specter, there are only two methods. Make him become the owner of a door or feed him a fully-established Red Specter."

"Isn't that too difficult?" Chen Ge shook his head; both methods were too hard. He had a door at his Haunted House, but he did not know anything about the world behind it and did not dare explore it.

Eating a Red Specter was even harder. Other than the story, he only knew three Red Specters at Jiujiang—the female well inside the well at Coffin Village, the woman at the tunnel, and Men Nan.

Each Specter was more malicious than the one before it. Men Nan looked the weakest, but the boy was the cleverest. Even the reason he told Chen Ge this information now could be a test.

Chapter 410 - The Spectre's Heart

Chapter 410: The Spectre's Heart

“Are there any other methods? The only spot that has not been dyed red for Xu Yin is his heart, so I’m sure this is a unique situation, right?”

When Chen Ge was speaking, Men Nan had been staring at him. After confirming Chen Ge did not have the intention to murder him, his expression softened a lot.

...

“There are indeed other methods, but compared to these two methods, it is more troublesome.” Men Nan only reached the top of Chen Ge’s knees, but he did not sound much different from an adult. “Normal Specters need to attach themselves to something to ensure that they will not dissipate as time goes by; however, Red Specters do not have this concern. The reason is because a Red Specter has a heart.”

“Heart?”

“Or the ghost’s equivalent of a heart.” Men Nan sighed. “Or anger, or vengeance, or resentment, when a certain emotion reaches its maximum, it will become a Specter’s heart. This heart will aid them in leaving the object of possession and enable them to exist in the physical world. The baleful Specter behind you has consumed enough ghosts, but he has not found his ‘heart’. If he can find that ‘heart’, then he can easily become a Red Specter.”

He glanced at Xu Yin, and the young face was filled with confusion. “The Specter you have is mixed with different kinds of emotions. There is despair, pain, regret, and a desire that I cannot understand. It is rare for a ghost to have so many intertwining emotions, and that should be the reason he is not yet a Red Specter.”

Hearing Men Nan say that, Chen Ge realized that Xu Yin was indeed different from other Specters. He listened to his order fully and did not ask for anything in return. At Fang Hwa Apartments, Xu Yin almost sacrificed himself to stop the society’s Red Specter. Chen Ge wondered, why would Xu Yin be so committed? Just because he had once saved him?

It appeared like Xu Yin was forcing himself to believe everything that Chen Ge said; he trusted Chen Ge unconditionally like he was trying to prove a point. Chen Ge could still remember the first time he saw Xu Yin. At the time, he had just been slightly stronger than a normal ghost, and he could not even defeat the thin monster from the society. However, even when he was at his weakest, as long as Chen Ge gave the order, he would follow it without considering the consequences like he was seeking death.

“The greater the pain, the stronger he becomes. Perhaps I’ve been underestimating Xu Yin.” Chen Ge felt like he had a need to have a chat with Xu Yin, but not there. Men Nan’s main persona was very clever. Before he joined the Haunted House, Chen Ge did not want to reveal too many trump cards to the boy.

“The simpler the emotions, the easier one can become a Red Specter. Similarly, when a negative emotion has reached its full potential, one can become a door-pusher.” Men Nan felt like he has said a lot that night, so he waved at Chen Ge. “I still have something else to do, so I won’t be walking you out. See you again.”

“It’s not often that I come to visit, why are you so insistent to chase me away? After all, I did save your life.” Chen Ge walked closer to Men Nan with Xu Yin.

“What are you doing?” Men Nan became alert immediately.

“Don’t worry, I just want to make a comparison.” Chen Ge pointed at his shadow. “There is another Red Specter living in my shadow. Can you tell how she became a Red Specter?”

Chen Ge had always been curious about Zhang Ya. Because of her disappearance, the scream factor for Western Jiujiang’s Private Academy instantly dropped by one-star. Therefore, before Zhang Ya swallowed the old director and the Red Specters from the society, she could already hold up the entire three-star scenario on her own.

Men Nan stared at Chen Ge’s shadow for a long time, and his face suddenly turned very nervous. “I can sense something familiar from the Red Specter in your shadow. She should be similar to me. We both pushed open a door when we were alive.”

“Zhang Ya is also a door-pusher?” Chen Ge thought back to Zhang

Ya's history, and he shook his head. "The place that she haunted doesn't have a door though."

After Chen Ge said that, Men Nan's expression became even more nervous. He slowly retreated into the blood mist. "My feeling is never wrong. If she is not the door-pusher then she must have consumed a door-pusher!"

Men Nan's body slowly dissipated. He realized that he was afraid of Chen Ge. This man was like a walking monster den. "I'm warning you, don't have any silly ideas. The door-pusher can garner two hundred percent power in the world behind the door." Men Nan thought about it and probably realized that number was still not enough to fight Zhang Ya, so he changed his words. "The door at the Third Sick Hall has been broken by those few mental patients. If I'm not here to watch over the door, the consequence would be unimaginable."

Chen Ge had always been curious about the world behind the door, so he followed Men Nan's words and asked, "What kind of consequence? The monsters behind the door will escape into the real world?"

"You're underestimating the world behind the door. This blood red world is filled with various negative emotions and the memories abandoned by living humans. If the door is not closely watched over, these things will slowly seep into the real world. As the gap deepens, something very scary will appear." Men Nan led Chen Ge into the room where the window could not close. The window frame was intertwined with blood vessels that knitted into human faces. "I cannot mention their name in this world, but you only need to know they are different from normal Specters."

Men Nan pulled a vessel from the frame, and it made a human scream. He passed the vessel to Chen Ge as if he was trying to tell Chen Ge something. When he touched the blood vessel, a despairing and painful memory flooded his mind. The memory's owner had a face that was similar to the one formed by the vessels. He had been chased before being horribly murdered.

"Each blood vessel is a horrible memory." Men Nan leaned on the window and looked into the world. "This is a fully blood red world."

Men Nan tried to tell Chen Ge something, but he did not dare say it in detail. Chen Ge did not quite get it, so he could only commit what the boy had said to memory. Chen Ge still had many questions to ask Men Nan, but the boy did not have the patience and quickly sent Chen Ge out the door.

Whenever Men Nan opened the door, he would be vulnerable for a period of time. Chen Ge memorized that as well. That seemed to be the weakness for the door-pushers.

After leaving the Third Sick Hall, Chen Ge walked on the highway for a long time before he ran into a kind person. The man dropped him somewhere close to the city, and Chen Ge called for a taxi to drive him to Mu Yang High School.

Chapter 411 - Charity and Sin

Chapter 411: Charity and Sin

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“It’s only 2 am; there’s still time.” Chen Ge took out his phone to look through the stuff that he had recorded. He was considering how to complete the mission at the underground morgue.

The passenger wanted to go to an abandoned school in the middle of the night, and that caused great pressure on the driver. With sweat running down his face, he kept studying Chen Ge through the rear-view mirror.

...

Chen Ge felt uncomfortable being scrutinized so closely. He suspected that if he continued to do this, he might be going on the blacklist of the taxi company at Jiujiang.

“Looks like I should consider buying a car, but I don’t have a driver’s license. Or I should try to find a Specter that knows how to drive.” The truck driver that Chen Ge had met in Eastern Jiujiang flashed across his mind; the man was quite suitable. “After completing the mission at the underground morgue, I should pay Eastern Jiujiang a visit. If the truck driver is willing to join the Haunted House, I can save the money on buying a car.”

Finding a potential employee, Chen Ge could not help but smile. Chen Ge arrived at Mu Yang High School at 2:40 am. He waded through the brush and soon found the school hiding in the darkness.

“This place is only a two-star scenario, but how could it feel creepier than the Third Sick Hall?” Chen Ge pulled open the backpack. He was there to ask the old principal for his help, so he did not want to make it look like he came with aggression in mind. However, without the hammer in his hands, Chen Ge could not calm down. Holding the hammer, Chen Ge pressed the recorder and entered the school. “The old principal once appeared in the sealed classroom.”

The bodies inside the well had been discovered, and after the police left, it had been a long time since a living person returned to this place. The grass had swallowed up the school grounds, and Mu Yang High School had returned to its original state.

Walking down the charred corridor, Chen Ge entered the education block. He pushed open the door to the sealed classroom and looked inside. The tables and chairs were arranged neatly, and like how he did on his first visit, Chen Ge sat in the middle of the room.

There was weird writing on the blackboard, various senseless requests were carved on the table, the windows rattled slightly, and the wind blew into from the cracks on the glass. Nothing had changed, but the questions in Chen Ge's mind were different from the previous time he was there.

"Where could the old principal be hiding?" Chen Ge did not have any bad intention toward the old principal—he just wanted them to have a reunion. After thinking for a while, Chen Ge removed the ballpoint pen from his backpack. Sitting there, Chen Ge started playing the Pen Spirit game.

"Pen Spirit, Pen Spirit, you are my spirit from my previous life, and I am your spirit in this life. Can you tell me where Mu Yang High School's first principal is?"

The ballpoint pen stood perpendicularly on the table, and after some hesitation, she wrote, "Office."

Chen Ge nodded when he saw the word. He felt like the Pen Spirit had found a sense of belonging in the Haunted House and even pride; he felt comforted by that. He stood up and left the sealed classroom. Chen Ge walked to the office block. He looked through every room and found the principal's room at the end of the corridor.

To leave a good impression on the principal, Chen Ge knocked on the door five times, and after hearing no answer, he used the hammer to knock it down. Chen Ge then realized that the room was quite empty. "The old principal built Mu Yang High School from the ground up, so he shouldn't have left this place."

Perhaps the timing was not right, or perhaps he had some reasons to not show up. "In his life, the old principal was a nice person. After death, he came back to take care of the students because he was worried. Now that I'm taking care of the students, could he have moved on before he had no other reason to stay in this world anymore?"

Chen Ge thought about it and realized that the possibility of that was not zero. Chen Ge stepped into the room. The principal's office was tidy; other than the table, chair, and a shelf, there was nothing else.

"The Pen Spirit must have her reasons for telling me to come to this office. Could it be that the old principal knows that I'm looking for him so he left already?" The image of a fat old man appeared in Chen Ge's mind, and he was wrought with uncertainty. He walked to the table to pull the drawers open. The first drawer had several certificates for city-level competitions. Mu Yang High School had few students and teachers, and the students did not really score good marks. Normally, when they were invited to competitions, they were there to take up the last place. The number of certificates that they had won was little, but the old principal had kept every single one of them. "The old principal really did want to build a good school, but he couldn't do it alone."

Chen Ge opened the second drawer. It was filled with appreciation letters. Most of them came from students, and some were for donations of outside parties. "He even kept these things."

After rummaging through those letters, he did not find anything useful.

He pulled open the last drawer. It had a pair of reading glasses and several thick account books. "Contribution and donation statistics?"

Chen Ge flipped through the books, and when he saw the name on the first line, he was stunned.

"Jiujiang Mental Illness Research Center, Doctor Gao?"

To make sure that this was the Doctor Gao whom he knew, Chen Ge went online to search for it. "Indeed, this is Gao Ru Xue's father."

Flipping through the books, Doctor Gao had always been the top donor every month, and this changed Chen Ge's impression of the man again. There were donations from different organizations in the latter half of the book. Chen Ge knew about those because they always made a big deal out of the donations like they could not wait for the whole world to know about their charity. However, in reality, their donations were much lower than Doctor Gao's.

Doctor Gao did not once mention that he was so charitable. "Could someone like this be the chairperson for the society?"

Chen Ge stood next to the table. If Doctor Gao was really the chairperson of the ghost stories society, then he had to be the most complicated person that Chen Ge had ever met. “On one hand, he is supporting charity, helping patients, but on the other, he murders and aids the monsters behind the door. What is his real purpose?”

Chen Ge could not fathom Doctor Gao’s thoughts. The best psychologist in Jiujiang had his own thoughts buried deep in his heart. The last account book contained the replies that Doctor Gao had written to the children. These were all kept by the old principal. Chen Ge found a picture that was slid between the pages.

The picture was blurry, but he could recognize it with one glance. Doctor Gao was in the picture. He was standing next to a young man and surrounded by children. Standing not far from them was a shy woman. The woman’s face was blurred, but from her frame and size, she seemed similar to the strange woman that Chen Ge had run into at Western Jiujiang Medical University.

“This woman is Doctor Gao’s wife?” The woman’s face was extremely blurry, and as Chen Ge tried to study the picture, his gaze slowly fell on a different person. The two young men that stood in the middle of the phone—one was Doctor Gao, and the other also looked very familiar. “This person who is standing next to Doctor Gao looks like Doctor Chen from Jiujiang’s Children’s Home.”

On the night that he visited Coffin Village, Jiang Ling and Fan Yu had disappeared alongside Doctor Chen, so at the time, the police had suspected that it was the doctor who kidnapped the two children. “Doctor Chen and Doctor Gao are friends, and it looks like they have both worked at Jiujiang’s Mental Illness Research Center before.”

...

Looking at the picture in his hand, Chen Ge sat down in the chair. The old principal had really given him a surprise. The appearance of this picture solved a problem that had been troubling Chen Ge. “At Coffin Village, the Zhu woman said that No. 10 got into a fight with an outsider, and it was because of that outsider that No. 10 did not have time to enter the blood door with Wu Fei.”

Chen Ge thought back to how the Zhu woman described the outsider. He was wearing a white coat and looked like a doctor with children surrounding him. That mysterious outsider, Chen Ge believed, was Doctor Chen. “Looks like there is more than meets the eye about this Doctor Chen, but why would he get into a fight with Doctor Gao? From this picture, they should be friends.”

Doctor Gao and Doctor Chen seemed to be complete opposites. One was someone mature who could handle everything thrown at him perfectly while the other was a doctor who could not survive in a large hospital and was forced to take up a job at the children’s home.

“The old director mentioned a Doctor Chen in his letters, and that Doctor Chen is probably not my father but the Doctor Chen at the Children’s Home, but why would the old director address his letters to Linjiang New Schistosomiasis Control Station? Did Doctor Chen once work at Linjiang New Schistosomiasis Control Station? But wasn't he a psychologist?

"The old director started the communication with Doctor Chen, so how did it end up with Doctor Gao liaising with the patients at the Third Sick Hall? Did the conflict between the two doctors started at the Third Sick Hall? Their opinions on how to deal with this issue split?"

Chen Ge wanted to ask the old director, who was now just a head, but the door only opened at midnight. Once he missed it, he would need to wait another twenty-four hours.

"My parents also left some information about Third Sick Hall. Director Luo once mentioned that he overheard them talking about the Third Sick Hall before they disappeared, so what is the role my parents play in this whole situation?"

Chen Ge had been looking for information on his missing parents, and he had a feeling that Doctor Chen and Doctor Gao should know something. Leaving the principal's office, Chen Ge wandered around Mu Yang High School. He wanted to thank the old principal in person, but the man did not seem like he was going to show up. "Where else could he be hiding?"

With some regret, Chen Ge left Mu Yang High School. He arrived at the Haunted House around dawn, and as he stepped through the door, the black phone vibrated. It was to inform him that the set-up for the one-star scenario Wife's Room had been completed.

"One-star scenarios are not that useful for me now."

With the responsibility toward his visitors, Chen Ge entered the underground scenarios with his backpack. With the stairs as the center, to the left was Mu Yang High School, to the right was the Third Sick Hall, straight in front was Coffin Village, and behind the stairs was the new Wife's Room. "The House of Horrors is starting to shape up. After the underground morgue has been completed, it will be about time to expand the place for the third time."

The third expansion was a benchmark. After that, Chen Ge's Haunted House would upgrade to become a Maze of Terror!

As for what kind of reward or functions would be added, Chen Ge had no clue. Based on the introduction on the black phone, he just knew that he would be heavily rewarded after the upgrade.

Standing in the underground tunnel, Chen Ge looked at the new scenario, the isolated room. Opening the door, the room looked similar to Room 3004. However, the walls, the kitchenette, and the coffee table were covered with blood, giving a huge visual impact. “The Wife’s Room should be a reconstruction of the crime scene for Ma Yin’s sister’s death.”

Chen Ge did not look uncomfortable. Holding the hammer, he walked around the room and soon discovered something weird about it. The room was decorated with many broken art pieces, and as he entered, the pieces seemed to turn to focus on him.

Chen Ge summoned Ol’ Zhou’s group to let them get a sense of the place, and the three ghosts’ reaction was weird. They were sure that there was a ghost hiding in the room, but they could not tell where the ghost was hiding. They could sense its weak presence like it was still asleep.

When Chen Ge heard that there was a ghost hiding in the room, his eyes lit up. He pushed open the bedroom door, and the expression froze on his face. There was a long noose hanging in the middle of the room, and there was a bloodied bedsheet poking out from the closet. There were some blood stains on the ground, and sitting on the headboard was a very ugly statue. “This room is completely identical to the room in Ma Yin’s video.”

Chen Ge walked to the bed and studied the statue for a long time. He held the statue’s chin and said the sentence that he had uttered several days ago. “You can verify the validity of my every sentence, yes?”

Hearing his voice, something inside the statue seemed to come alive—the presence around it was different from before, like a person had been wakened up from their sleep. The ugly face revealed a shocked expression, and blood tears fell down the statue’s eyes.

“This is such a coincidence. We meet again.” By then, Chen Ge already knew it was Ma Yin’s sister’s soul that was trapped inside the statue, so he did not want to torment her. “This will be your new home in the future. Don’t worry, I know what happened to you and will treat you like family.”

Fingers sliding across the cheek, Chen Ge helped dry the statue’s tears. His action was so gentle and soft. “The murderer who killed you has already been captured by the police. If you have any other needs, feel free to tell me.”

The blood tears kept falling, but Chen Ge could not tell whether it was due to fear or excitement.

“I feel like there’s a small misunderstanding between us. Actually, I’m not the kind of person you think I am.” Chen Ge knew that he should not force himself forward, but he had confidence that he could change the ghost’s impression of him. Was the Pen Spirit not the perfect example?

“Why don’t you three try to persuade her? I’ll wait outside.” Chen Ge tossed Ol’ Zhou’s group a look, and then he exited the bedroom. He closed the door and stood beside it, and soon Ol’ Zhou’s group’s voices came from inside.

“In the future, we’ll be colleagues, and you might not believe me, but this period when I’m at the Haunted House is the happiest moments of my life.”

“Our boss might look scary, but he is a good and kind person. He respects us and understands us.”

“You will slowly learn to like this place. We have many different types of ghosts here, and we are all friends. Everyone has their own unique power, but we are all honest and hardworking people.”

Even Chen Ge, who stood at the door, was feeling embarrassed. "Should I tell them that the statue can verify the authenticity of their sentences? Oh well, it could be worse."

...

Leaving the underground scenario, Chen Ge returned to the staff breakroom. He opened the door and crawled into bed. "Ran to three places in one night. I sure have a vibrant night life."

Removing his jacket, Chen Ge fell asleep when it was almost dawn. Chen Ge was woken up by the alarm at around 8 am. He brushed his teeth and washed his face before starting to clean the Haunted House. Xu Wan arrived at the Haunted House with breakfast at 8:30 am. She had a brief conversation with Chen Ge before going to the dressing room. The moment he finished the breakfast brought by Xu Wan, Gu Feiyu arrived. The young man looked spirited and bright. Without make-up, one could not tell that he worked at the Haunted House.

"Good morning, boss!"

"Quick, go and get your make-up done. The visitors will be coming soon." Chen Ge sat on the steps and put the finished breakfast away. When he saw the smile on Gu Feiyu's face, he asked, "Did something good happen to you?"

"No, I just found something interesting." Gu Feiyu squatted down next to Chen Ge and bounced lightly into Chen Ge. Then he asked in a conspiratorial tone, "Boss, do you have a thing with Sister Xu Wan? She brings you breakfast daily, and that one time, I even saw her arguing with the boss that sells breakfast, telling him to skip the spicy stuff cause you always sleep late so you cannot have anything spicy."

"I always sleep late? How does she know that?"

"She cares about you." The smile on Gu Feiyu's face grew bigger. "Actually, I come very early every morning, but I walk very slowly because I don't want to disturb you two."

"That is not an excuse for you to be late. If you don't report to work by 8:30 am next time, I'll reduce your salary." Chen Ge stood up.

"Please have mercy!" Gu Feiyu followed behind Chen Ge. "Boss, I just think you have many admirers, and I wish to be as popular as you."

Xiao Gu followed Chen Ge into the Haunted House, and he sounded sincere in wanting to learn. "When my uncle got discharged from the hospital, he told me to learn from you, but I'm dumb, and I don't know where to start."

"You want to learn how to become a popular person from me?" Chen Ge thought about it for a while, thinking back to the stuff that he had done, and he felt like if he told Gu Feiyu everything, his image would crumble instantly. After some hesitance, Chen Ge patted Xiao Gu's shoulder lightly. "Be calm, hardworking, and fearless; that's all I can tell you."

Gu Feiyu ruminated on Chen Ge's words, thinking that Chen Ge had wisdom.

"You're still young, plenty of things to learn." Chen Ge looked at the young man. "Since you work at the Haunted House during the day, why don't you go attend some classes at night. One day, if the Haunted House closes, at least you'll have a skill you can sell."

Entering the dressing room, Chen Ge helped Gu Feiyu get into the Doctor Skull-cracker's outfit. After sending the man away, he started to do the make-up for Xu Wan. Looking at his employee in the mirror, Chen Ge's lips moved like he wanted to say something.

"Boss, if you want to say something, just say it." Xu Wan knew Chen Ge well. After all, they had been through the Haunted House's hardest times together.

"It's nothing serious. I just feel like it's embarrassing for me as a boss to be taken care of by my employee daily," Chen Ge said as he continued the make-up.

"I saw how tired you were and just wanted to help you, but I don't know how to, so I can do something minor like bringing you food." Xu Wan looked at her reflection in the mirror, and she felt satisfied. "I shall enter the scenario now."

“Okay.”

Chen Ge sat on the chair that Xu Wan had just vacated and watched the girl walk away. “How did she know that I was about to talk about the food before I even said anything?”

Shaking his head, Chen Ge stood up. He did not think that Xu Wan would ever harm him—he just got an increased interest in the girl.

Exiting the dressing room, Chen Ge pushed the gate open, and the warm sunlight showered his body. He stretched lazily. The theme park opened at 9 pm.

Due to the new introduction of the horror app, many old visitors returned, and the ranking on the screen kept changing. The theme park’s workers handled the lines, and Chen Ge only needed to look after the underground scenarios. Each scenario had visitors, and Chen Ge was under great pressure. Director Luo was worried about Chen Ge, so he set up a special emergency rescue center at the resting tent. Regardless of whether they would need it or not, the fact that several doctors and nurses were standing on duty gave the visitors a different experience.

To facilitate the transportation of fainted customers, Director Luo even had someone design a special trolley, and it was painted with the words ‘Specially for Fainted Visitors’.

With Director Luo and Uncle Xu helping him with the admin stuff, Chen Ge was not worried. His focus was on unlocking new scenarios. The day flew by. After sending away the last batch of visitors at 6:30 pm, Chen Ge had Xu Wan and Gu Feiyu, who had been busy as well, get off work, and then he grabbed the tools and started to clean the Haunted House.

He busied himself until 7 pm, and the people at New Century Park had almost all left already. Compared to the rowdiness in the day, the theme park was scarily quiet at night. After cleaning, Chen Ge entered the scenarios to take a spin. Interestingly enough, whenever he entered the scenario, the ghosts would place the stuff that the visitors had left behind at the Haunted House at the entrance.

Chen Ge collected the items and labelled them before sending them to lost and found. This was something that he would do daily, but this time, when he was going to the lost objects, he found something weird. “A security pass?”

Staring at the picture and name, Chen Ge was shocked. “Why would Zhang Li’s security pass be here?”

Zhang Li was the security guard who had horrible reputation at Western Jiujiang Medical University; Chen Ge had met him once.

“He came to visit the Haunted House today?” After some contemplation, he pocketed the pass. After sending the stuff to lost and found, Chen Ge entered the surveillance room holding the security pass. He focused on the footage in Minghun and Murder by Midnight. Chen Ge knew everyone who visited the underground scenarios, so if Zhang Li had come to visit, he would have visited a one-star scenario aboveground.

Chen Ge glanced through the video, focusing on the faces. He spent half an hour before he found Zhang Li on screen. This guard who had a bad personality was together with a young girl. They visited Minghun and Murder by Midnight respectively.

Chapter 414: I Want to Help You

From the footage, Chen Ge could clearly see that Zhang Li and the woman next to him stayed away from the students from Western Jiujiang Medical University. They did not seem to not share a good relationship. Zhang Li did not have any close interaction with the woman; they did not look like lovers, more like siblings. “Could this girl be Zhang Shihan?”

Lee Zheng had once mentioned this girl to Chen Ge as well. She had been in an altercation with Ma Yin’s sister before her appearance, and that was why she was also on the suspect list. In the video, they looked like normal visitors. They would run when something scary happened and they would scream at the expected spots. However, as time went by, Chen Ge noticed something strange.

...

Zhang Shihan initially walked in front of Zhang Li. She was a forensic science student, so it was expected she had a stronger heart than Zhang Li, the security guard. However, at the last scene of Minghun when Xu Wan appeared, Zhang Shihan almost collapsed to the ground. When her body fell backward, it was Zhang Li who held her from falling. From the expression, it was also noticeable that when Zhang Shihan was almost dazed from terror, Zhang Li was still very calm.

“How come a forensic doctor who faces dead bodies daily is more scared than a normal security guard?” Then when Zhang Shihan and Zhang Li entered the Murder by Midnight scenario, when they were chased by Xiao Gu, Zhang Shihan showed nervousness and terror, but Zhang Li was very calm. “It feels like this security guard has been through something big.”

The two visitors left the Haunted House after Murder by Midnight. Chen Ge pulled out the surveillance by the door. Zhang Shihan and Zhang Li stood by the corner of the resting tent. Even though Zhang Shihan’s face was white, she was excited. Her hands waved animatedly while she told Zhang Li something. Zhang Li also showed a rare smile; it was as if whenever his sister was happy, he too would be happy.

It sounded like Zhang Shihan wanted to try out the two-star scenario. She pulled Zhang Li along to the back of the line, but Zhang Li resisted. No matter what, he refused to move. "Why wouldn't Zhang Li visit the two-star scenario? Could he tell that there are real ghosts inside the two-star scenarios?"

The pair of siblings stayed inside the tent for a long time before they moved onto other attractions. "Zhang Shihan is acting normally, but this Zhang Li sure is suspicious."

Chen Ge thought about it. He shoved the pass into his pocket and left the Haunted House with his backpack. "Before Lee Zheng calls, I need to collect as much information on the underground morgue as I can."

When he arrived at Western Jiujiang Medical University, Chen Ge ran to the security stop. He glanced into the place, but Zhang Li was not there. "I'm sorry, but I'm looking for Zhang Li. I work at New Century Park. When he visited us this morning, he left his stuff there."

"You personally came to return the item?" The one who spoke was a rotund guard. He looked friendly, and his stomach was huge; his guard outfit could barely fit his large body.

"It's what we should do." Chen Ge glanced at the fat guard's security pass; his name was Wang Erbao. "Do you mind telling me where he stays? I wish to hand him his stuff personally to make sure there is no mistake."

"With his strange personality, Ol' Zhang cannot mix with the rest of us. He moved out on his own. You can find him at Hai Ming Apartments."

"Hai Ming Apartments?" Chen Ge was startled. That was where Men Nan's side persona had once stayed.

"It's normal if you have not heard of it. The building is old and dirty. Other than the low rent, there's nothing good about it."

"What room is he staying in?"

"Room 403." Then, Wang Erbao added with concern, "Ol' Zhang is a weird character. If he is rude toward you, please don't take offense, he was just born that way."

“Okay, thank you.” Chen Ge called a cab to rush to Hai Ming Apartments. Inside the car, Chen Ge was considering one question—was it a coincidence that Zhang Li was staying at Hai Ming Apartments, or was there a deeper reason?

“Men Nan said that he saw the rental message on the school forum. Could that person who spread the news be Zhang Li? If it’s him, why would he do that?” Chen Ge arrived at Hai Ming Apartments with the question unsolved.

Knocking on the door to Room 403, Chen Ge waited for a long time before a suppressed voice said, “Who are you looking for?”

The door did not open, and there were no footsteps. The owner seemed to have moved to stand beside the door carefully and glance at the guest outside before he answered the knocks.

Is he afraid of something?

Chen Ge tried to make himself sound friendly. “I’m from New Century Park. Your security pass was left inside the park. I asked about you from your colleague before I found this place.”

There was no reply. Several seconds later, the door opened. “Give me the pass.”

The door was only opened a sliver, and Zhang Li’s body was hiding behind the door. Chen Ge was even more suspicious upon seeing how cautious the man was.

“Fine, but you at least need to let see what you look like, right? I don’t want to get scolded for giving the pass to the wrong person.” Chen Ge took out the pass to show the man behind the door. The man hesitated before he opened the door.

Tall and thin, with sunken eyes, Zhang Li was wearing a pair of sports shoes. He wore a pair of normal gray jacket, and his pockets were full. He looked like he was about to go out. “Now can you give me the pass?”

“Not yet.” Chen Ge looked at Zhang Li’s expression. The man should have recognized him by now. Anymore deception would have been pointless. “Other than to return the pass, I still have a few questions to ask you.”

Zhang Li’s face fell, and without warning, he closed the door. Chen Ge reacted fast to block him. "I don't have bad intentions; these few questions are crucial to you and me!"

Zhang Li glared at Chen Ge and warned, "Let go!"

"I know there is a problem in your heart. Think about it. Perhaps I can help you."

"I told you to let go!" Zhang Li raised his voice, and his face twisted. "I don't need your help, let go!"

Seeing the insistence on Zhang Li's face, Chen Ge did not force the man. He dropped his backpack to the ground and pulled out the half-meter-long hammer. When the hammer showed itself, the stench of blood flooded the corridor, and one could even hear the sound of wailing souls.

"It is my intention to help you, but whether you want my help or not, that is not my concern."

Staring at the weapon in Chen Ge's arms, Zhang Li's eyelids twitched. After a long time, with a straight face, he forced out, "Come in."

Zhang Li moved his steps slowly; he did not dare expose his back to Chen Ge. When Chen Ge entered the room, he added in that dark and suppressed voice of his, “Keep the door open for air ventilation.”

BANG!

...

Chen Ge locked the door and dragged the hammer into the room. He looked around. The room was simple with little furniture, and there was a pungent smell of subpar cigarette smoke in the air. There was a metal plate on the coffee table, which was filled with cigarette butts, and there were holes on the couch that were probably cigarette burns.

“You’re a heavy smoker?” Chen Ge acted like he had returned to his own home. He grabbed a chair and sat in the living room close to the door.

“Does that count as a question?” Zhang Li crossed his arms and stood beside the coffee table. He looked very guarded.

“Just answer the questions that I ask. This is for your own good.” Chen Ge glanced at the cigarette butts; they came from various brands, but they were all cheap brands.

“For my own good?” Zhang Li retreated several steps to lean against the window. “What do you want?”

Chen Ge placed the security pass on the table and put the hammer away. “Who is the girl that came to the Haunted House with you this morning?”

“My little sister. She just got fired from her job. She wasn’t feeling great, so I asked for a day off to accompany her to the theme park.”

“When the two of you entered the Haunted House, why did you purposely evade the students from Western Jiujiang Medical University? Were you afraid of being recognized?” Chen Ge kept his questions broad. When Zhang Li fell into the trap, he would then tighten the scope.

“The students don’t like me. If they recognized me, it might be troublesome.” Zhang Li took a deep breath. “But my sister and I have gotten used to it already.”

Realizing that there were words left unsaid, Chen Ge asked, “Gotten used to what?”

“My sister used to study at the university, but she got into an argument with another girl at the school due to some conflict. Coincidentally, the girl disappeared the next day.” Zhang Li’s fingers tightened. “Then someone created a rumor at the school, saying that the girl’s disappearance had something to do with my little sister.”

The thing was indeed quite a coincidence, or else Lee Zheng would not have listed Zhang Shihan and Zhang Li as suspects. Chen Ge nodded. “What did the rumor say?”

“Initially, those jerks would at least gossip behind my sister’s back then, but then they came to confront my sister, saying the girl committed suicide because her depression triggered after she had a falling out with my sister. Some even called my sister a murderer, and it was her who hid the body.” Zhang Li paused to grab a cigarette from his pocket and light it. After a puff, Zhang Li felt better. “Many of my sister’s friends left her, and my sister was at her lowest point of her life then. She even walked around the school personally to find that missing girl, but unfortunately, she couldn’t find her.”

“No wonder you’re so cold to the students at the university.” Chen Ge looked at Zhang Li and after a while, he said, “The police once contacted me, saying in that missing girl’s case, you and your sister were both serious suspects, and their suspicions were not unfounded. From motive, time, and ability, you two were the biggest suspects.”

“We did not kill anymore! The girl’s disappearance had nothing to do with us!” Zhang Li was annoyed, but he did not dare show it. He could only chew on the cigarette to vent his anger.

“I know you two didn’t kill anyone, and you’re not the real killer; you’ve just been used.” When Chen Ge heard the details from Zhang Li, he understood how careful the mastermind was. He not only dealt with all the clues, he even made use of these students and came up with two scapegoats to confuse the police. When Zhang Li heard Chen

Ge use a confident tone to say that they were not the killers, the man looked at Chen Ge with surprise, and he realized that perhaps this man was not so bad.

“You took a day off from work today, so you might not have heard the news. The body of the missing girl has been found, and her killer has turned himself in.” Chen Ge did not hide anything from the man.

“Liu Zhe is just one of the killers. There is still another one that is missing. We only know that he is related to the underground morgue.”

Chen Ge’s face turned serious. He pointed at the door. “Do not tell anyone what I’m going to say.”

Zhang Li nodded quickly. “I’m the only tenant on this floor, so there’s no need to worry about eavesdropping, and I will not tell a third person.”

“Okay.” Chen Ge told out his phone to show his conversation with Captain Yan, Inspector Lee, and Lee Zheng, then he added, “Actually I’m an informant planted by the police. I’ve helped them with many cases before.”

Zhang Li nodded dumbly. For some reason, he was slowly convinced by Chen Ge.

“The condition of you and your sister is still dangerous.” Chen Ge then dropped another bomb. “The other killer is still out there, and things are still dangerous. He is very familiar with Western Jiujiang Medical University and should be hiding in plain sight. Temporarily, we have no idea who he is, and to stop people from panicking, I came to see you privately to find out some information.”

“I will tell you everything I know.” Zhang Li no longer sounded that guarded. He sat down next to Chen Ge, his attitude completely different from before.

“We need information on the underground morgue, the more detailed the better.” Chen Ge voiced his need.

“Didn’t the school provide some to the police already when you came last time?” Zhang Li was suspicious, but he still chose to believe Chen Ge. “There is a blueprint for the morgue inside the library’s database. If you need it, I can snap a few pictures for you.”

“That’s a good start.” Chen Ge was not satisfied. “You’ve been working at the school for so many years already, have you discovered anything weird at the underground morgue or run into something not explainable by science?”

Chapter 416 - Expansion of the Morgue

Chapter 416: Expansion of the Morgue

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The reason Chen Ge came to find Zhang Li was because the security guard had been acting weirdly inside the Haunted House, and Chen Ge believed that the man had experienced something unique before. Zhang Li's somberness came from his soul; he should be hiding many secrets that he could not share with others in his heart. Being stared by Chen Ge, Zhang Li was nervous. His lips opened several times, but he made no sound.

"Please don't be hesitant, tell me everything you've seen and heard." The more Zhang Li acted like this, the more curious Chen Ge became.

...

"It's not that I don't want to, but I'm afraid you won't believe me even if I do." Zhang Li took out a cigarette from his pocket and asked, "Do you mind?"

"Of course not, this is your place. Don't mind me."

After he got Chen Ge's approval, Zhang Li lit the cigarette and took a deep puff. He enjoyed the feeling of the smoke filling up his lungs; it was as if only then would he be able to forget these annoying problems. The smoke escaped from his lips, and the first words Zhang Li said already grabbed Chen Ge's attention. "The cadavers down in the underground morgue know how to move on their own."

"Moving corpses?"

"That's not even the scariest thing." Zhang Li's arm trembled slightly. "When I first took up the guard post at Western Jiujiang Medical University, the school was in the middle of expanding the underground morgue. The pools that were originally used to store the cadavers had to stop their usage, and the admin planned to make a more advanced mortuary. The morgue is underground, so the work was hard.

"Initially, the school planned to transform the largest morgues at the deepest part of the place, they wanted to crack open the cadaver pools and redo everything. They hired a professional team to handle it, and the renovation was scheduled to finish in less than half a month. However, on the second day of the renovation, an accident happened.

“When one of the workers was cleaning the Formalin inside the pool, he accidentally fell into the pool. The pool was not deep, but the worker was simply unable to climb out. He said there were many hands holding him back, refusing to let him go.” Zhang Li soon finished the cigarette. He shrugged and said, “The large cadaver pools were similar to the open bathing pools that were common in the past; however, the liquid in the pool was brownish in color and opaque. You could only see the cadaver’s limbs, back and hair floating above water.”

“There was a metal hook used to fish the cadavers out from the water. The workers who were present dropped the hook into the pool and had the man who fell in grab the hook. With the cooperation of many people, they finally fished him out of the water.” Zhang Li lit another cigarette. He was a heavy smoker, especially when he was thinking about those dark memories stored in the back of his mind. “When the man fell into the pool, he accidentally swallowed a mouthful of the formalin, and thus, he was quickly rushed to the hospital to have his stomach pumped. The man was fine, but I heard that after he recovered, something was wrong with his mind. He was simply not the same anymore.”

“Do you still have contact with that man? Did he say anything before he went insane?”

“I’m not sure, this was already so long ago. But if you really need to know, I can help you ask around at the school. Don’t keep your hopes up though.”

“After the man was sent to the hospital, the renovation work continued as normal, but on the night after that, another strange event happened.” Zhang Li’s expression was one of distress like he still felt uncomfortable thinking about it. “The number of cadavers that had been moved out by the team in the morning changed.”

“This is what you meant by moving corpses?”

“I suppose so, but the scariest thing happened later.” Zhang Li was telling the stories of others, so he did not explain how he became like this. His voice dropped, and Zhang Li took another puff of the cigarette. “The team went deeper into the morgue on the third day. After they dealt with all the bodies inside the first morgue and moved away the pool that was built more than twenty years ago, all the workers were stunned by what they found.

“At the bottom of the pool, just like in a human body, the ground was covered with blood vessels. When light hit them, they quickly squirreled away.” Zhang Li had a frown on his pale face. “At the time, I was present, and I also looked in. How shall I put this? It felt like the pool was alive.”

“The person responsible for the team found the school admin to report this, but the school didn’t have a good explanation. In the end, they said that it was some kind of extremely rare fungus.” Zhang Li shook his head. “Even an uneducated man like myself knew they were lying. The renovation team said that they want to stop the work, but after the school offered to double the salary, the team continued.

“That afternoon, the team dug deeper into the pool because they wanted to expand the space, but the more they dug, the more worried they became. The soil underneath the pool reeked of formalin, and the soil was reddish in color. One could also spot lines that were dark brown, and they broke once you tried to touch them. No one knew what they were; they did not look like plant roots or insects.

“The team relayed the situation to the school. They even collected some soil samples and sent them to the school. The school could not give a clear explanation—they just rushed the team to move faster.

“To calm the people from the renovation team, the school arranged for someone to accompany them, telling them not to worry and everything that they had come across so far was something normal.” Zhang Li seemed to have plenty of issues with how the school handled the situation. His tone shifted slightly. “At the time, I was a newbie, and no one wanted to enter the underground morgue, so the task naturally fell on my shoulders. I was just a lackey for the school, and I didn’t know anyone from the renovation team, so I was stuck between a rock and a hard place.

“The renovation speed was very slow because weird things kept happening. The team members kept getting injured, and eventually, they all gave up and refused to work. The school eventually relented, and after some discussion with the foreman, they changed the plan.

“They planned to expand the mortuary outwards and stopped using the original morgue, abandoning it completely.

“However, there was a condition to the school’s compromise. They needed the team to finish the work within a month. If the renovation couldn’t be completed within the time limit, then it would be viewed as a violation of contract.”

“The renovation team already did not want to stay inside the deeper part of the morgue, so they sealed up the road that led into the morgue and started expanding outward, following the blueprint. After we left the deeper part of the morgue, the accidents stopped, and the renovation started to rush for the deadline. When they were close to the deadline, to rush the progress, they worked into the night.

“The school also knew how hard it was for the team, so they would assign people to send them water and provide aid.” Zhang Li’s teeth gritted as he continued. “The school handed this chore to the teachers that stayed at the school dormitory and the security team. Initially, everyone would go together, but after a while, the teachers would leave early since everything was going well. Other people from the security team took this opportunity to push all the work onto me.

“The underground morgue had been renovated many times, so the internal routes were very complicated. I was new, and even with the map, the chance of getting lost was still high. Three days to the deadline, the people from the team were nervous, and they had to hire a new batch of workers to hurry up the process. They worked day and night, so I had to stay to accompany them. It was fine during the day, but the place changed after the sun fell.

“It was middle of summer at the time, and outside was as hot as an oven. However, once you entered the morgue, it was not only not hot, you would shiver uncontrollably for no reason. The new batch of workers did not know about the things that happened in the deeper part of the morgue and they thought the working environment was alright. When some of them got tired at night, they laid a mattress on the floor and slept just like that.” Zhang Li squeezed the cigarette against the metal plate as his story was reaching its end.

“The underground morgue was different at night, but how different, I could not really tell. In any case, that night, the strange thing happened again.

“I received a call at 1 am saying that someone on the team had disappeared. I quickly called everyone else and headed to the underground morgue. When we were halfway there, the people called again, saying that the man had been found. At the time, I was so angry, but I was even angrier at the teacher who was responsible for watching over the renovation. The man berated me, saying that I had disturbed his sleep and worried him before I understood everything.

“I could not say anything to explain myself. So, I returned to my bedroom. Not long after that, the people from the renovation team called again, saying that a different person had disappeared. This time, I asked the man for more details. The man said, when the first person disappeared, he said that he heard someone calling his name and he raised his head to see someone waving at him, so he had followed the person. When he was halfway down the corridor, he had realized that the corridor led deeper into the morgue. At that moment, he knew that something was wrong, so he quickly ran back.

“The second person disappeared after he went out in search of the first man. His phone was not reachable, and no one knew where he was. The incident sounded serious, so as I rushed to the morgue, I called the teacher. After the teacher knew the gravity of the situation, he told me to calm the people first, and he would arrive shortly.

“That night, I stayed with the renovation team in the underground morgue, and around dawn, we found the missing man inside the deeper part of the morgue. He was lying next to the half-dug pool, unconscious.

“No one could explain this situation, and anxiety spread through the team. They refused to stay there any longer, but since the deadline was coming soon and their work was almost done, it would be a waste to give up then.

“In the end, it was the school who settled the problem. They assigned the security team to stay with the renovation team in the underground morgue to ensure that the project could be finished on time. That night, two guards and I stayed back so that the team could come to us directly if there was any problem.

“I really could not stand it anymore after midnight, so I found a corner to take a nap. It was quite peaceful that night; there was no accident. The project was reaching its end. After spending so much time in the morgue, that morning, I hit the bed and slept.

“On that last night, we returned to the underground morgue. Everything was going fine, and I believed that the peacefulness would persist through the night, so I found an isolated room and covered myself up with several old cement bags as I tried to sneak a bit of shut eye. Perhaps my mind had been too stressed at the time—sleep came quickly.

“When I opened my blurry eyes, the underground morgue became so dark. The lights brought by the renovation team had all been switched off, and only the old-fashioned lights on the wall were still on.

“I curled up in the corner and looked outward. People were moving in the outside corridor, and it sounded like the team was still working. I had just woken up, so my mind was not that sharp. I took out the phone to check the time. Before I got a clear look at the time, I suddenly heard footsteps. Someone was coming into the room. I was sleeping while people were working—that wasn’t good, so I hid myself deeper and kept myself quiet.

“The person walked around the room and left. I glanced at the time; it was 3:40 am. There were several unanswered calls and unread messages on my phone. I clicked the messages open and realized that they were from my teammates, asking me where I was.”

The smoke in the room had not dissipated, but Zhang Li took out another cigarette. He lit it and puffed on it.

“At the time, it really did not cross my mind, so I replied to him—I’m still in the morgue. Where are you guys? Did you two sneak back into the bedroom already?”

“I was a newbie, so I’d been trying to buddy up to him. I even joked about how they left without telling me.

“About ten seconds later, the man replied, telling me to show myself instantly because people were looking for me.

“I was confused. The team was still working outside, and these two had run away from their post. Yet, they told me that people were looking for me.

“Just as I was about to send a reply, the man called. After I answered it, I realized that things were different from what I thought.

“The man immediately told me that the renovation had finished a long time ago, and the team had already all retreated. They wanted to know what I was doing inside the underground morgue.”

Zhang Li bit the cigarette in his mouth into half, and his hands gripped his knees. “When he said that, I glanced out the room. One of the people walking on the corridor seemed to have heard me and was walking toward the room that I was hiding in.”

“If the renovation team had all evacuated, who were the people walking in the corridor? I hung up the phone and moved the cement bags to cover my body even more, only exposing my eyes. The footsteps came closer, and I turned my eyes to look. The light was dim, and a blurry shadow walked to stand beside me. The way he moved was weird, like he could not coordinate his limbs. I held my breath and did not dare to move. The man walked around the room and prepared to leave. I edged the cement bag slightly away, and what saw will follow me forever.”

Zhang Li’s lips were purple, and he finally voiced the nightmare that had followed him for so many years. “The man’s face was empty; his whole face had been picked clean.”

...

The cigarette dust fell on the couch, and Zhang Li’s arms could not stop shaking. “Way before body donor was a thing, the medical university used dead bodies from the penitentiary. After a criminal died from a gunshot, their head would look like that.” Zhang Li had problem continuing.

This time, Chen Ge did not dare force the man. “Why don’t you take a rest? Have some water.”

“It’s fine.” Even though it had been years, thinking back, Zhang Li was still very afraid. He finished the cigarette and continued. “When I saw the criminal, I knew the problem. The people who entered the room and the people in the corridor, they were all dead bodies used for autopsy classes.”

What Zhang Li described was indeed scarier than moving corpses. At the time, there had been a party down in the morgue, and Zhang Li had been the only living human guest. He had survived at that party until morning—no wonder he ended up in this state.

“I really did see it, and I kept it in my heart. I didn’t dare tell anyone, not even my sister.” His pupils danced, and Zhang Li’s frowned creased deeply. His expression was filled with pain. “A few years ago, when the girl who had the argument with my sister disappeared, my sister suspected that she might have wandered into the underground morgue. She planned to expand her search there, but I stopped her firmly. The place was not somewhere a living person should go.”

After sharing the thing that was trapped inside his heart, Zhang Li did feel better. He touched the box of cigarette and realized that he had already finished the whole box.

“Maybe you should stop taking so many cigarettes—it’s not good for your body.” Chen Ge sat in the chair and recorded everything that Zhang Li said on his phone.

“It’s fine. After that night, I no longer cared about these things.” Zhang Li crumbled the paper box, and without the cigarette, he was feeling rather unnerved. “Do you think I have lost my mind? Was I hallucinating that night?”

Chen Ge shook his head. He knew about the danger in the underground morgue. The black phone hinted at a group of people who were in search of immortality.

“Actually, I myself suspect that I was hallucinating that night.”

“Do you still remember how you escaped that night?” Based on what Zhang Li had said, there should be in an insurmountable number of dead bodies.

“When I was hiding underneath the bags of cement, my body felt like it was frozen. I didn’t even dare move an inch. I stayed in that position until 5 am, and the thing in the corridor started to move deeper into the morgue.”

“Didn’t you ask for help through the phone that night?” Chen Ge put down his phone. He was interested in the school’s response.

“When I had just woken up, I already talked on the phone with that security guard. I told them that I was still in the morgue, but they didn’t send anyone to come find me. I didn’t know what was up with them.” From Zhang Li’s tone, it sounded like he was still mad about that.

“Then did you discover anything weird when you left, like a big stain of formalin in the corridor or scratch marks on the wall.”

"I waited until 8 am and crawled out when I couldn't hear any movement anymore. My body was pulsing with pain, and there were many bruises. I was in a hurry to escape, so I didn't pay attention to such details." That was where Zhang Li's story ended. After that, he saw the underground morgue as a banned location, and his personality turned bitter. "I advise you to stay away from that place. But if you insist on going, call people to accompany you and go during the day." Zhang Li told Chen Ge other things that he had heard about the place.

"The corridor connecting the lab and morgue normally wasn't locked because even if it was, the door would be opened.

"During the previous expansion, the school added seven new morgues, but when people went to retrieve the bodies, they came across an 8th morgue. The morgue was closest to the original morgue, and it doesn't have a number.

"The roads that lead deeper into the morgue have been sealed many times, but no matter what, there is always a problem. I remember one time the school used bricks to seal up the corridor, but only two weeks later, the walls crumbled. When the admin went to check, they found out each brick was reeking with a thick stench of formalin.

"There are many similar legends. The migration of the old campus is related to this as well. I hear Western Jiujiang Medical University is also moving next year September. After that, this campus will be locked down."

Chen Ge did not expect the school to move. Things were getting quite serious.

"The information that you've given me is very useful. I'll pass it on to the other officers. Also, it would be great if you can give me the map of the underground morgue tomorrow." Chen Ge planned to leave after that, but when he was at the door, he suddenly remembered something. "Zhang Li, why are you staying at Hai Ming Apartments? I've heard rumors about this place, and it happened in the room just below yours."

"Some madman committed suicide, I know that. I'm already an old tenant here." Zhang Li's expression did not change. It appeared to be a mere coincidence that he was staying here.

"Then do you a student by the name of Men Nan who also used to stay here?" Chen Ge asked as an added thought.

“I know, the kid just wanted a cheap bargain and stayed inside the room next to the dead man. The room is cursed. A doctor once stayed there, but he moved away after one night.”

“How did you know he was a doctor?” Chen Ge paused to ask.
“Doctors wouldn’t wear their white robes outside of the hospital, and he only moved in for one day. No offense, but based on your personality, you wouldn’t have gone forward to greet him, I don’t think.”

“I’ve seen him around the campus before, that Doctor Gao. He is rich, so I wondered why he would move to such a dilapidated building.” Zhang Li was confused. “When I went downstairs to purchase cigarettes that night, I saw Doctor Gao standing in the corridor alone, doing God knows what.”

“Before Men Nan moved in, Doctor Gao once spent a night in that room?”

“Yes, don’t you think that’s weird? He has so many assets at Jiujiang, so why would he purposely stay a night at a cheap apartment?” Zhang Li’s words caused alarm bells to ring in Chen Ge’s mind. The first person to discover something wrong with Men Nan was Doctor Gao; the person who took care of Men Nan was also Doctor Gao. That could all have been a plan set up by Doctor Gao. Men Nan had moved into this place due to a thread that he had seen on the school forum, and now that he thought about it, that thread was also highly suspicious.

People from Hai Ming Apartments would not have purposely come to the medical school’s forum to post a thread. The thread was probably published by Doctor Gao, but why would Doctor Gao do something like this? What is he trying to accomplish? What is he trying to get from Men Nan’s second persona?

After giving it some thought, Chen Ge realized that the only thing that could have attracted Doctor Gao’s attention was Men Nan’s connection to his main person. When the ghost stories society was at its full glory, they could have easily killed Men Nan’s main persona, but they did not do that—they just made him fall into a coma.

Is Doctor Gao trying to figure out how to control the door-pusher? Chen Ge repeated the conversation that Doctor Gao had with Men Nan in his mind. If Doctor Gao is really No. 10 from the ghost stories society, did Men Nan’s main persona know about that?

Chen Ge wanted to complete the Trial Mission at the underground morgue, but that was hard with his power alone. If only he could drag Men Nan down with him, after all, Men Nan’s main persona was also a Red Specter.

Whether Doctor Gao is the chairperson or not, I can make use of this point to convince Men Nan. He won't want to see his other persona fall into the hands of the enemy.

With his mind made, Chen Ge planned to return to Third Sick Hall that night. "Zhang Li, you need to fetch me the map as soon as possible—it's very important."

Chen Ge was about to leave when his phone rang. It was from Lee Zheng.

"Do you need me to give you some privacy?" Zhang Li asked.

"No need." Chen Ge answered the phone before Zhang Li. "Inspector Lee, how can I help you?"

"Doctor Gao is the most cunning and careful person I've met in my years of being a cop! He has already noticed our plan, and two hours ago, he left Jiujiang."

"He left Jiujiang? Are you sure?" Doctor Gao leaving Jiujiang was good news for Chen Ge—it meant that there would be one less variable to worry about when he visited the underground morgue.

"How come I hear excitement in your voice?" Lee Zheng was confused. Doctor Gao's sudden departure meant that all their preparation had been wasted.

"This only means that he is really hiding something, looks like he's scared." Chen Ge said that on his lips, but his real plan was to make use of this opening to complete the mission at the underground morgue.

"I don't think you understand the situation. Based on our investigation, we've discovered more and more problems with Doctor Gao." Lee Zheng lowered his voice. "There is no one around you, right?"

"What's wrong?"

"Based on our investigation, Doctor Gao might be related to several murders. He was not a direct participant, but he was always involved somehow."

"Several?" Chen Ge still had a hard time believing it. "Could it be that he was framed?"

“With his intelligence, all over Jiujiang, the only person who could frame him is himself.” There was a tiredness in Lee Zheng’s voice. “I cannot deny the fact that he is a good doctor, but under that façade hides a madman. There is some information that I cannot reveal to you. the main reason I’m calling you is because I want you to prepare to make contact with Gao Ru Xue tomorrow night. Other than that, I’ll send you some information. I want you to take a look at it.”

Doctor Gao leaving Jiujiang is the perfect chance for me. When I get the map, I’ll start the mission.

For this mission, Chen Ge had prepared a lot, but he was still worried. Compared to completing a mission by the breath of a hair, he preferred to have a landslide victory.

Looks like I still need a few helpers. The door at Third Sick Hall would only open at midnight, so Chen Ge did not rush there. Instead, he called a cab to get to Jiujiang’s Children’s Home. When the guard saw Chen Ge, he was agitated and stood up to lock the door.

“Uncle!” Chen Ge ran over and forced his way in. “Are Jiang Ling and Fan Yu around? I have something important to discuss with them.”

“The police just dropped them back here yesterday. The two children are tired, so please just leave them be and let the children’s home have some time to recuperate.” Before Chen Ge’s arrival, the children’s home had been so peaceful. However, after his appearance, two kids had gone missing, their only doctor had disappeared, and they were now under great public pressure.

“It won’t take too much time.” Chen Ge strode in after that. The Children’s Home was the same as before. There were flower pots along the path and paintings of cartoons on the wall. The uncle could not stop Chen Ge, so he called the nurse to come help him.

However, the nurse had a good impression of Chen Ge. She told the uncle, “He was the one who found Fan Yu and Jiang Ling in the mountains. If not for him, we would have closed down already.”

With the nurse leading the way, Chen Ge came to the room where Fan Yu and Jiang Ling stayed. He pushed the door open, and the scene was quite friendly. A single table lamp was open in the bedroom, and Fan Yu sat at the table drawing while Jiang Ling watched him draw while standing on her tip-toes.

“Fan Yu, look who came to visit you.” The nurse called into the room. If this was other children, they would have run out happily, but to make things awkward, Fan Yu and Jiang Ling ignored her. The nurse smiled embarrassedly at Chen Ge. She wanted to say something but was stopped by Chen Ge. “Let’s go in and take a look.”

Inside the room, the warm light fell on Chen Ge. Everything here felt comfortable and warm until he saw the painting on the table. On the white paper, a black man walked ahead while various scary red shadows followed behind him.

Fan Yu’s painting ruined the friendly atmosphere, and when he finished the painting, he turned to look at Chen Ge. “You’re here.”

“Hmm.” Chen Ge had never treated Fan Yu as a normal child. He squatted down beside Fan Yu and glanced at his wrist. “Fan Yu, I have something to discuss with you. Do you mind if you lend me your wrist bangle for one night?”

Chapter 420: Departure!

“Sure, but the bangle only seems to work when I’m wearing it.” Fan Yu removed the bangle given to him by the ghost in Coffin Village. When the bangle left his wrist, the red blood vessels disappeared, and it looked just like a normal bangle. When he put it on again, the red blood returned. “If you need my help, you can bring me with you.”

“I don’t think so.” Chen Ge did not want to put Fan Yu in danger and had to take care of the boy. He scratched his chin and moved his gaze to settle on Jiang Ling. After the ghost from Coffin Village left her body, she was just a normal child. When Chen Ge looked at her, the girl almost cried.

...

The girl hid behind Fan Yu, and this made things awkward for the two adults there. Chen Ge did not know how to make his request, and the nurse felt like she had been ignored. After a small cough, Chen Ge had the nurse leave the room first. Then he came up with the kindest expression that he could. “Jiang Ling, I’m going to do something big tomorrow night. Please can you lend me your sister?”

Chen Ge tried his best to sound nice, but when Jiang Ling heard him say that, she still cried.

“Am I that scary?” Chen Ge did not know how to deal with kids. He felt children like Fan Yu and the phone spirit were easier to communicate with. Jiang Ling cried louder, and eventually, it was Fan Yu who leaned into the girl’s ears and made her stop crying. Her teary eyes looked at Chen Ge.

“Is that a yes? What did you tell her?”

“I said you’re her sister’s best friend. You’re a nice person and can make her sister happy.”

“Well said.” Chen Ge nodded. He felt like Fan Yu was picking up the good quality from him; the child was improving fast. Jiang Ling jogged to the sofa to pick out a plastic can from behind the cushion. Unwillingly, she handed it to Chen Ge.

“Don’t worry, I just needed her to fill up the numbers; I will not let her get injured.” Chen Ge accepted the can. There was a very small spider inside. “Is your sister inside here?”

Jiang Ling nodded with uncertainty. She felt like she had been tricked. His goal completed, Chen Ge did not stay any longer. He left the Children’s Home and returned to the Third Sick Hall. He waited until midnight and sneaked into the door after it appeared.

When Chen Ge showed up next to the old director, the lonely human head was about to cry because he noticed a different ghost behind Chen Ge. Chen Ge did not waste time with the old director but went directly to find Men Nan. He exaggerated the story and told Men Nan everything. After Men Nan heard him, he started feel conflicted. After leaving the blood door, his power would greatly decrease, and from his perspective, the threat that Chen Ge represented was no smaller than Doctor Gao. Men Nan was afraid that he might escape from a wolf’s den into a tiger’s cave. “Let me think about it.”

...

Chen Ge left the Third Sick Hall at 1 am. He turned back to look. If everything was fine, this would be the last time that he visited the place. Returning to New Century Park, Chen Ge arranged all the information on the underground morgue.

“There are only seven morgues—do not enter the 8th morgue.”

He memorized all the details before going to bed. The park opened at 9 am. At almost the same time, Zhang Li sent the map to Chen Ge. There were ten pictures and two one-minute videos. Did the man really think I’m a police informant?

Since Doctor Gao was not in Jiujiang, Chen Ge planned to activate the Trial Mission in the underground morgue that night. He sent the visitors into the scenario and sat down to study the pictures. The underground morgue was large, and it had been updated thrice. The first expansion’s date and blueprint could not be found anymore, the second expansion was when the two medical schools at Jiujiang joined together, and the third expansion was the one Zhang Li was a part of. This place covers the entire western side of the campus. It’s so damn big.

The underground morgue could basically be categorized into three parts. The outer perimeter was for various transport corridors and two storerooms as well as five morgues. The middle section was where the abandoned cadaver pools were; this place had been abandoned years ago. Based on what Zhang Li had said, there was a central hub at the deepest part of the morgue. It was recorded on the paper, but no one could find the path that led that way. Zhang Li noted specially that he suspected that something had happened there before, and that was why the paths leading there had been fully sealed.

Chen Ge looked through all the videos and pictures. There was only a map for the outer perimeter; the middle section's map was not there. It had probably been removed by someone already. "The underground morgue's biggest secret should be hiding at the central hub; I need to find the way to get there."

He memorized the map in his heart, and he looked through it for the whole afternoon. Chen Ge worked for the whole day until 6:30 pm. After Xu Wan and Gu Feiyu left, Chen Ge locked himself inside the staff breakroom. He took several deep breaths. After making sure he had everything, he took out the black phone.

The underground morgue is the eighth side mission to the four-star School of the Afterlife. After completing this, I have the right to unlock the four-star mission.

Sitting next to the table, Chen Ge's finger danced over the screen before he pressed on that mission.

"Do you accept the 8th side mission for School of the Afterlife?"

"Yes!"

"Side Mission 8: Eternal Life (In an undisclosed underground morgue, there's a group who seek eternal life).

"Mission Location: Western Jiujiang Medical University.

"Mission Hint: Life's meaning is not whether you can breathe or not but something else.

"Mission Requirement: Enter the underground morgue's central hub before midnight and survive until dawn!"

Based on the information on the black phone, Chen Ge's expression was dark. If I need to get into the central hub before midnight, I'll need to get moving now.

Chen Ge's eyes focused on the last few words. This kind of requirement that needs me to survive until dawn normally means a hard mission. Thankfully, I'm fully prepared.

Picking up the backpack, Chen Ge exited the room. Like his visit to the Coffin Village, he planned to take all the employees with him.

Even without fighting power, at least they will be able to fill up the numbers.

Pen Spirit, Xiaoxiao, Xu Yin, the hammer—Chen Ge poured everything that he could think of into his back, and when the white cat was not paying attention, he also picked it up.

Have I forgotten something? Right, there's still that statue in the underground scenario.

Chapter 421 - Five Entrances [2 in 1]

Chapter 421: Five Entrances [2 in 1]

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The statue had once had a relationship with the ghost stories society, but she now belonged to Chen Ge's Haunted House. Rushing down into the underground parking, Chen Ge pushed open the door to the one-star scenario Wife's Room. The ugly statue stood next to the bed, her expressionless eyes gazing toward a particular direction in the room. No one knew what she had faced in the past. Just what did Ol' Zhou and the rest tell her? How come she looks so devastated compared to before?

Chen Ge walked to stand beside the sculpture and took out Yan Danian's comic. "I've identified your real killer, and as long as you're willing to be my employee, even if I put my life on the line, I will help you take revenge."

...

The statue did not understand what Chen Ge said, but Chen Ge could feel her body shivering like there was a change to her emotion. "The man who killed you is hidden at the deepest part of the underground morgue. The place is very dangerous, but if you are willing to join my Haunted House, I'll bring all the employees with me to demand a justice for you."

Chen Ge had come fully prepared, and he sounded confident and strong. It was obvious that he was not kidding; he really did plan to do this. The statue still felt that something was wrong. However, after she used her power, she confirmed that what Chen Ge had said was the truth; he was not lying to her. "I will take revenge for you. Tonight, I will enter the underground morgue to capture the culprit that once harmed you."

The statue's ugly face looked at Chen Ge, and blood tears started to fall from her eyes. Chen Ge was telling the truth; he was really prepared to go down into the underground morgue that night to risk his life. "Come with me, you are more familiar with the place. If you are willing to help me, things will be a lot simpler."

The statue was afraid. She really did not want to return to the underground morgue—the terror of the place was something unimaginable to outsiders—but she could not say no to Chen Ge’s invitation. The man before her had helped her solve her problem and was willing to sacrifice his personal safety to venture into somewhere so dangerous. His intentions provided some semblance of warmth to her cold heart.

Seeing that enough groundwork had been laid, Chen Ge flipped open Yan Danian’s comic. “Come with me. When we’re there, I still have a lot more questions that I wish to ask you.”

The statue had stayed in the underground storeroom for years, so she would be very familiar with the place. That was one of the main reasons that Chen Ge had to take her with him. The tears in the eyes stopped flowing, and the statue’s ugly face started to change. The face that represented truth softened, and a 1.7-meter-tall girl appeared before the statue. The girl looked quite similar to Ma Yin—she was very reserved, and it was probably hereditary because both girls were very tall.

After the girl left the statue, she immediately crawled into Yan Danian’s comic, and on the empty page, a female statue appeared. The statue was radiating sadness, pain, betrayal, and despair.

With the girl’s aid, the chance of success for tonight’s mission has increased a lot. Chen Ge left the Wife’s Room and headed to Mu Yang High School. He transferred the boy with the heavy stench and the hanging man into the comic as well.

When the completion rate of the Third Sick Hall was over ninety percent, I was rewarded a patient’s list of all the mental patients. Each record carried the soul of a mad person, should I bring that with me?

The mad people were originally members of the ghost stories society. Even after their deaths, they were controlled by their madness, and Chen Ge normally did not dare use them.

I should bring them with me. At the very least, I’ll gain an additional trump card. Chen Ge thought about it and shoved the patient’s list into his backpack. When the society’s chairperson sees all of his members standing on my side, I wonder how he’ll react.

Chen Ge also thought that he had perhaps crossed a line; he had not only inherited all the items that the ghost stories society collected over the years but also recruited all of its past members. The ghost stories society lacked good leadership, and that was why they all acted this way. After I take over as the chairperson, I will change everything so that the members can receive real salvation.

Carrying the bag and holding the hammer, Chen Ge left the Haunted House. He did not even have the chance to close the gate before Lee Zheng's phone call came. "After Doctor Gao's disappearance, Gao Ru Xue's emotional state has become very unstable. She seems to know something; we need you to go over to make contact with her immediately and try to dig for valuable information."

"Brother Zheng, I have something else to do tonight, and I'm afraid I won't be able to stay for long. How about you try to find other people to communicate with Gao Ru Xue?"

"It can only be you," Lee Zheng said firmly. "On the day, she was targeted by the eyes-gouging killer, and we have been through her phone. She had been calling you endlessly that day. I do not know the nature of your relationship, but I am sure it is not that simple. Chen Ge, I hope you'll be able to recognize the good from the bad and hold onto your principles when the situation calls for it."

By then, Chen Ge realized that Lee Zheng had a wrong idea about their relationship. That day, Gao Ru Xue's phone had been taken over by the phone spirit, and she could contact everyone but Chen Ge. Gao Ru Xue had kept calling him that day because she was feeling nervous and unsafe.

"Okay, I'll be heading over now."

From Lee Zheng, Chen Ge found out that Gao Ru Xue had been staying alone at Doctor Gao's practice. She did not want to return to the dormitory to stay with her roommates nor did she want to move back to Xi Xia Hu. Chen Ge arrived at Doctor Gao's practice, and when he got down from the taxi, he realized that the practice was very close to Western Jiujiang Medical University.

There were plain clothes looking after Gao Ru Xue twenty-four hours, and when Chen Ge got out from the car, the man in charge immediately spotted him. While Chen Ge's get up gave the man pause and his gaze settled on the white cat lying on Chen Ge's shoulder for a long time, he decided to follow the superior's order and went over to make contact with Chen Ge. The man gave Chen Ge some updates on Gao Ru Xue's situation, and then he handed him a recording pen before leaving.

He knocked lightly on the door, and after a long time, Gao Ru Xue came to open the door. She did not look like she had rested recently—she looked tired and spiritless. “Chen Ge, what are you doing here?”

“I heard you are not feeling well, so I came to visit you because I was worried.” Chen Ge carried the heavy backpack, and he realized how awkward he sounded. To smooth things over, he picked up the white cat and said, “Do you like cats?”

The furry head with the multi-colored eyes turned to look at Chen Ge with confusion. The white cat’s ‘cute’ reaction did make Gao Ru Xue feel a little better. She reached out to rustle the white cat’s head and moved back. “I’m doing fine. Please come in. Do you want anything to drink?”

Gao Ru Xue had been trapped alone for quite some time already, and she actually wanted to find someone to talk to, but she did not know who.

“It’s fine.” Chen Ge followed Gao Ru Xue into Doctor Gao’s office. What populated the room were books. There were many different kinds of books, and most of them were limited editions that could not be found online. “Is Doctor Gao really such a heavy reader?”

“Yes, he does not have any other hobbies. Other than reading, he likes to collect some weird art pieces.” Gao Ru Xue brew two cups of coffee and placed them on the table.

Chen Ge took a small sip and rambled a bit before he commented offhandedly, “By the way, we have known each other for quite some time already, but I never once heard you call Doctor Gao your father. It feels like you two are quite unfamiliar around each other.”

Gao Ru Xue had a private personality. She was not purposely trying to freeze people out, but perhaps she had gone through some experience to make her this way, and the type of experiences that she had been through, that was the thing that Chen Ge was tasked to find out.

After hearing what Chen Ge said, Gao Ru Xue did not answer immediately. She looked at the coffee inside her cup, and after a long time, she finally said the secret that she had hidden in her heart for a long time.

“A few years ago, one of the patients got into an accident in the middle of his session, and his condition suddenly worsened. No one knew whether it was his medication or my father’s treatment method.

Halfway through his session, the patient went insane and jumped out of the window. At the time, my father hadn't acquired his own practice yet, so he was practicing at home, and our house was on the 8th floor.

"The death of the patient naturally fell on his responsibility. The family hounded us endlessly. We tried to explain, apologize, but they would not accept it. Eventually, we moved, but it was still no use. At the time, my father was under great pressure, but thankfully, he had Mom to give him the support he needed. At the time, I thought it was just a hurdle and everything would be fine after we stepped over it. However, no one knew that the event would have such devastating repercussion.

"The patient's family went to the hospital to block my father. They created such a ruckus, and things were worsening. Worried about my father, my mother called a cab to get to the hospital, but she got into an accident on the way there. No one answered the call. My father did meet Mother at the hospital, but..."

Gao Ru Xue held the cup with both hands. Her voice was very low, and she looked just like an abandoned doll. "It was too late. The rescue was unsuccessful. Mom left us, and my father trapped himself at home for a long period of time after that. It seemed like he had sealed himself off from the world.

"He refused to communicate with the outside world. When I passed his room in the night, I could sometimes even hear him calling my mother's name. From then onward, my father seemed to change into a different person. He started to do weird things like going out at night and coming back smelling of blood and formalin. When they were preparing to bury my mother, he did something unimaginable. He stole her body.

"Only I knew about that. I once asked him about it, but he seemed to transform into a different person. I will never forget how he looked at me then. Despair, sadness, and a madness that was intent on destroying everything.

"About a month after the disappearance of Mother's body, my father slowly returned to normal. His gaze became dark and deep like an ocean that had no limit; all the negative emotions had disappeared within it. He became more mature than before, like there was nothing in this world that was going to stop him.

“Other people assumed that he had walked out from the grief and regained a renewed hope on life, but only I knew that he had only buried those emotions deeper in his heart. The calmer he presented himself, the greater the pain in his heart. From then on, my father rarely appeared at night. He worked in the morning and would leave alone at night. Since then, I learned to live on my own.”

Gao Ru Xue had been hiding that in her heart for a long time, and this was the first time that she had shared it with another person. Chen Ge had saved her life in the nick of time, pulling her back from certain death, so she trusted Chen Ge a lot.

“Working in the day, going out at night and still very energetic.” Chen Ge felt like Doctor Gao’s condition was similar to his. He believed that Doctor Gao had also been influenced by a ghost to become like this. When Gao Ru Xue finished her story, she was tired and curled up on the couch.

Chen Ge did not disturb her; the girl did not seem to have realized that her father had gone missing. After all, her life would go on unchanged. She would survive the night alone since her father would never return at night. Looking at the time, Chen Ge went into the adjacent room to grab a blanket for Gao Ru Xue, then he picked up the white cat and tip-toed out of the place.

After the door clicked shut, Gao Ru Xue, whom Chen Ge assumed was asleep, slowly opened her eyes. She touched the blanket that covered her body and turned to look at the door that was closed.

...

After leaving the practice, Chen Ge walked toward Western Jiujiang Medical University. He needed to enter the underground morgue’s central hub before midnight. On the way there, Chen Ge called Lee Zheng to report what he heard about Doctor Gao from Gao Ru Xue. After he hung up, he threw these thoughts out of his mind. He was completely focused on completing this Trial Mission.

The underground morgue was different from other three-star missions. It was perfectly preserved and not destroyed, so Chen Ge could not afford to be careless. He did not enter the university from the front entrance but took a long detour to the western gate. According to the map provided by Zhang Li, the real entrance to the underground morgue was near the western gate. Compared to the other gates, this place was very quiet; there were not even stalls lining the road waiting to do business with students.

Chen Ge looked left and right. After he made sure that no one was looking, he avoided the surveillance camera and hopped into the campus. It is 9 pm now. I still have three hours.

Even though there were street lights around the western part of the university campus, compared to other parts of the campus, this place felt quite deserted. Chen Ge walked through the bushes that lined the road and kept his back to the wall. Following the map that he had memorized, Chen Ge slowly sought his way to the entrance to the underground morgue.

The western part of the campus was the largest part of the campus. There were two lab buildings and several other buildings whose usages were unknown to Chen Ge. However, most of the buildings were sealed shut, and entry was not allowed. Chen Ge continued to move forward, and he came across three security guards who were patrolling the area. They were patrolling very far from Chen Ge. Even with his Yin Yang Vision, Chen Ge could only tell their general frame. Why are the three security guards just going around this small area?

According to the map, there were five entrances that one could use to enter the underground morgue. The three guards were patrolling the front door. When Zhang Li and the renovation team were expanding the morgue, they had used this entrance. Of the four remaining entrances, two were attached to the lab buildings, one was attached to the abandoned education block, and the last one was an emergency entrance. It was probably to prevent an underground emergency, so this entrance should lead outside of the campus.

The security guards had blocked the front entrance, so Chen Ge had no choice but to use other entrance. He walked to the lab building on the left. He pushed the window open and jumped into the room. He only walked a small distance before he saw a glass container that was placed on a shelf. There was something that looked like a human head being soaked within.

I heard from Liu Xianxian that when she was following Liu Zhe, she discovered the man talking to a human head inside a glass bottle inside one of the labs.

Liu Xianxian had once caught Liu Zhe in this room talking to the detached head in the glass jar.

How suspicious. Chen Ge turned on the flashlight function, and the light hit the glass jar. Even after so many years, the human head in the jar still looked very much alive.

...

It's quite scary seeing these things at night. Chen Ge stared at the jar for a long time. The head seemed to be suspended in liquid and completely immobile. It did not wink or move, different from what Liu Xianxian described. To be safe, Chen Ge summoned Ol' Zhou's group to inspect the jar, but they discovered nothing weird.

The thing that possessed it has probably left already. Chen Ge was deep in thought, staring at the jar. The fact that Liu Zhe would talk with the human head suggested that there was something here that could possess these samples and communicate via these things that were suspended in jars.

If that was true, then things might be shaky. The whole western part of the campus was under the enemy's surveillance. There were so many organ parts in the underground morgue and labs, and any one of them could be silently watching him. I need to stay away from these things as much as possible.

Chen Ge placed the white cat in his backpack and walked out from the room. There was a ten-meter-long corridor, and the doors on both sides were locked. There were a few doors that even had the yellow police tape. He looked in through the windows on the doors, and rows of lab tables were placed in the rooms. His pupils narrowing, Chen Ge saw something that looked like water stain left on the experiment slab that was at the front of the room. It felt like something had just crawled up from that slab.

The entrance is not here. If not for the mission and the time limit, Chen

Ge would have liked to visit every room. The lab is a good scenario—the atmosphere here is not bad. I should try to build something similar at the park.

The reason Director Luo had taken down the surrounding attractions was to prepare for the Haunted House's expansion. To build a terror theme park, an underground parking lot was not enough.

He walked to the end of the corridor, and Chen Ge realized that one of the autopsy rooms was not locked. The door had been left half-open, and the seal was broken. There is no dust on the door handle—someone has been through here recently.

Chen Ge squatted down and noticed the friction and scratch marks on the ground. Chen Ge tried to push the door. The door was slightly twisted, and one had to hold the door upwards when they pushed to make sure no scratch marks would be left on the ground. Looks like the person was in a hurry when they used this door, so they did not notice these details.

As the door swung open, the stench of formalin hit Chen Ge. Chen Ge did not hurry to get into the room as that he knew whenever he could smell formalin, those things were nearby. Chen Ge placed the white cat on the table and touched its head. "Can you tell where this smell is coming from?"

Chen Ge tried to use his gestures to make the cat understand his meaning. The multi-colored eyes looked at Chen Ge, and after a while, the cat suddenly jumped down from the table and walked toward a single room at the back of the autopsy room.

"Found it?" There was another wooden door inside the room, and the cat snarled at the door. The formalin drifted out from behind the door. Chen Ge tried to push it and realized that it was locked.

"Move back a bit." Chen Ge raised the hammer, and the cat jumped back.

BANG!

The hammer aimed at the lock, and the key cylinder cracked. Chen Ge had gotten far more familiar with how to break down a locked door. He only needed to focus on the lock—compared to knocking down the whole door, that would create a smaller commotion.

There was a dark corridor behind the wooden door. Based on the map provided by Zhang Li, this was one of the entrances that led to the underground morgue. The corridor would lead Chen Ge to the outer perimeter of the morgue. Placing the cat back in his backpack, Chen Ge raised his flashlight into the darkness. He only glanced inward when he frowned. There was broken glass on the stairs and some indeterminate objects like someone had broken glass jars with organ samples there.

The three guards at the front door will probably come to check on the noise soon. I should hurry.

Chen Ge did not want to waste time, but when he turned to close the door, his gaze was attracted by something else. The back of the wooden door was filled with nail marks. It looked scary. Something was trying to get out.

There were so many nail marks that Chen Ge could not tell whether they came from one thing or multiple. Chen Ge snapped a few pictures on his phone and went down the steps, being careful not to step on any of the detritus.

Soon, he reached the underground level, and there was a split in the road. The corridor on the left was unpainted, and the one on the right was painted white. When he walked closer, Chen Ge saw some words painted on the wall—they were squiggly like worms, barely readable. The left corridor was called a human walkway, and the one on the right was called the cadaver walkway.

The handwriting is about two meters high, so the writer should be an adult, but this handwriting looks like a child's handwriting. Chen Ge took out his phone to glance at the map.

If he wanted to get to the underground morgue, he had to take the white corridor. For the sake of the mission, Chen Ge walked down the cadaver walkway. Perhaps it was his imagination, but once he entered the corridor, it felt like someone was moving in front of him. He tried to pick up the speed, and the person did as well; he slowed down, and so did the person.

He walked for half a minute when there were red letters surfacing on the white walls.

“You’re on the wrong path. This is a road for dead people only.”

“I’m warning you—turn back now.”

“Why are you so stubborn?”

“I know, you also want to be a cadaver, don’t you?”

Chen Ge did not care what they said. He was more curious about the words’ location. Some of them were on the wall, and some were on the ceiling. Chen Ge looked at them for a long time, and he realized that to create this effect, the person had to be crawling on the surfaces.

Could it be a lizard?

He stopped, and the person before him stopped.

The corridor became so quiet.

All three-star scenarios have their own unique ghosts. I wonder what kind of monsters the underground morgue has. Chen Ge placed the cat on the ground. When he started moving, so did the person before him. Hearing this echo, we’re about twenty meters away from each other. The person is just around that corner.

Chapter 423 - Apple

Could he be the one who left these blood letters?

Chen Ge decided to ask the person directly. He held the hammer and took out the recorder from his backpack. When he pressed the power button, the person before him suddenly disappeared. Only Chen Ge's footsteps echoed in the corridor. He turned the corner and a sentence was left on the white wall—You'll regret this!

...

Is that a threat?

There was nothing else on the wall other than the ugly handwriting. Chen Ge slowly put the recorder away.

Now is not the time to get hung up over these things. The crucial thing is to get to the morgue's central hub within the time limit.

Chen Ge knew very well, for a three-star scenario, the real terror started after midnight. Chen Ge walked down the white corridor, and he found more strange things. There were water stains on the painted walls, and it was unclear where the water came from. If one looked closer, one could find human hair on the ground—some were long and others short. Chen Ge picked one up, and it smelled faintly of formalin. The smell had soaked into the hair, not something that had been slathered on.

Other than that, the most confusing thing for Chen Ge was definitely the blood letters on the wall; the person seemed to understand that the white corridor was specifically for transporting cadavers only, and they kept warning outsiders of that fact. Are these letters used to warn the medical students?

The staff and students would use this corridor to enter the morgue to retrieve cadavers. The words felt like they had been written by cadavers, as they carried warning, threat, and a hint of hopeless compromise. Chen Ge could see new letters appearing every few steps, and the handwriting got worse like something happened to the author's wrist or hands. At some points, the handwriting stopped halfway like the brush had fallen out of the writer's hand.

These sure are strange.

Until now, Chen Ge had no idea what kind of monsters were hiding inside the underground morgue. The mission was just starting, and he still had many places to explore. The white corridors had slopes to them, and when Chen Ge reached the end, he was already at the second underground floor or the outer perimeter of the morgue.

This is simpler than I thought.

Perhaps due to Xu Yin's appearance earlier, everything went smoothly. Chen Ge only got a taste of danger; there was nothing really threatening. The end of the corridor was another split. One was unpainted, but it looked dark and creepy; the other corridor was still painted white, and there were signs of drag marks on the ground from the trolleys.

These should have been left behind by the staff when they moved the bodies.

There were carts specialized for moving dead bodies in the morgue. They looked light and convenient, which intrigued Chen Ge.

The trolleys made by Uncle Xu are a bit too rough around the edges. After the underground morgue has been unlocked, perhaps I can use these to transport the fainted visitors.

Being moved out of a morgue in a cart used to transport dead bodies, that would be a unique experience.

Taking out his phone, Chen Ge referred to the map. He was at the edge of the morgue and would reach the outer perimeter if he followed the white corridor. About seven meters down the path, there were three small morgues and a medium-sized morgue; beyond that, it was unknown. Chen Ge looked at all the map, but he could not find any more information. Brandishing his hammer, Chen Ge walked to the first small morgue. The steel door was not locked, and the door did not have any dust. The morgue had recently been accessed.

Should I go in to take a look?

Chen Ge had come up with a plan before he arrived. He planned to leave no rock unturned—that way, it would be safer on his way back. In this type of underground situation, the most dangerous thing was being cornered. The door creaked noisily, and there were four body freezers in the room.

The freezers were working normally and had notices saying things like ‘please do not touch without permission’. The room was small. Chen Ge walked around the room with the cat, and the cat showed no visible response. Exiting the morgue, Chen Ge entered the other few small morgues, and they were all fine.

The marks on the floor stop at the medium sized morgue. Looks like the staff from the school will not go further than this. Chen Ge tried the door of the medium-sized morgue, and he realized that it was not locked. There’s a no entry sign on the door, but the door isn’t locked. Is this a slip-up by the staff, or did someone open the door after the staff left?

Chen Ge pulled the door open a sliver and glanced into the room. Other than the freezers, there were a few metal tables along the corner. When his eyes caught the tables, Chen Ge’s gaze changed. The few tables were joined together, and there was something human-like lying on it.

It was both humanlike and not human—the thing had a human shape, but its four limbs were all twisted at impossible angles. The white cat elicited a soft growl, and Chen Ge slowly moved along the wall. He walked past the row of freezers, and they were not shut. The cooling air covered Chen Ge, and he shivered. Are these freezers filled with bodies?

Chen Ge moved away from the freezers, and when he got close to the table, he saw that it was a human plastic model that was picked apart which was on the table. It was probably a teaching aid in class, but it was abandoned there. The stomach was cracked open, and all the organs were arranged on the side neatly. This was fine, but the model’s eyes were open, and they looked so real, like a human’s eyes had been sewn into the model. There was a desire in that pair of beautiful eyes. Following his gaze, next to the model’s head was a rotten apple.

The rotten apple with the bruised, splotchy skin was a contrast to the shiny model. It was a work of art in a way. Chen Ge stood next to the table and was about to lean closer to take a look when there was a weird sound coming from the outside corridor. It sounded like mud falling from great height.

Something is coming?

Chen Ge did not have time to look. He took out the hammer and hid behind the door. He turned off the flashlight on his phone and used his Yin Yang Vision to focus on the white corridor outside.

The sound of mud flopping on the ground approached. Chen Ge leaned against the wall next to the door and raised the hammer in his hands. There was a flash of light in the dark, and then a white shadow walked out from the corridor painted white. The man was wearing a white coat and a thick mask. There was a flashlight squeezed under his armpit, and both of his arms were carrying two large red-colored buckets.

He moved very fast, and the content of the buckets, which looked sticky, kept getting splashed out from the bucket. As he walked near, the pungent smell hit Chen Ge. It was more than pure formalin; there was a worse stench mixed within. That... looks like a living human.

...

Chen Ge did not put down the hammer and kept his eyes trained on the man.

University staff? But why would he come down to the underground morgue at 10 pm?

The man's coat was too small for his muscular frame. He was clearly powerful—even though he was carrying two large buckets, he was moving quite fast.

What is the man doing? Why is he going deeper into the underground morgue?

The man was suspicious. He looked like a member of staff, but the thing that he was doing and his time of appearance confused Chen Ge. Chen Ge thought about it and gave up on speculating. He knew too little and decided to approach this in the most direct way. If he enters this room, I'll have a talk with him, but if he doesn't, I'll trail behind him and temporarily not spook him.

Perhaps due to his personality, Chen Ge rarely forced others—he gave the man a choice so that way, even if he accidentally injured the man, he would feel better. Gripping the hammer, Chen Ge held his breath. The footsteps neared, and the content of the buckets kept splashing out. The man frowned like he was not in a good mood. He continued walking ahead. When he walked past the medium-sized morgue that Chen Ge was in, he looked toward it and realized that the door had been pushed open.

“Didn’t I close this door earlier? Who opened this? Is Li Jiu also in here?” The deep male voice drifted out from behind the mask. He stopped to look around and cursed. The man was in a bad mood. He put down the buckets, and the hands that were covered by plastic gloves headed for the doorknob. Just as his fingers were about to grab the doorknob, another man’s voice came from the other end of the corridor.

“Brother Wei! Are you done yet? Why are you taking so long today?” A man who was thin and short, with tanned skin ran out holding a flashlight.

“There was a bit too much that needed cleaning today.” The man who was called Brother Wei did not enter the room. He pulled his hands back and turned to look at the skinny man with a frown. “Why are you here? Didn’t I tell you to go distract the guards? If they walk in here and see us, this will be so hard to explain.”

“Don’t you worry about that. Those guards are as cowardly as mice; they will never come in here.” Li Jiu looked into the medium-sized morgue. When he noticed that nothing was out of place, he turned his head back. He lowered his voice and moved to Brother Wei. “In any case, we’d better not finish this as fast as we can. When the guards were chatting, I overheard some things.”

“What did they say?”

“Haunted? You believe in something like that?” Brother Wei placed the red bucket before Li Jiu. “Stop wasting time. Since you’re here, help me with these things. They look so disgusting.”

When Li Jiu saw Brother Wei did not believe him, he added, “Not only the security, even the students who are seniors at this school know that this place is haunted. Brother Wei, think about it, when we are normally tasked with dealing with the cadavers at a medical school, they prepare everything beforehand, and we only needed to transport them into the cars, but this school would rather pay us double the price but refuse to come in here to deal with things themselves. This is definitely suspicious!”

“As long as we’re getting paid, everything is fine. What is scarier than poverty?” Brother Wei grabbed the red bucket and walked deeper into the corridor. The bucket was practically overflowing, so once he moved slightly faster, the content would splash out.

“But I’m not wearing any gloves!” Li Jiu cried. Brother Wei ignored him, so without any other option, he picked up the bucket that was left for him with both hands and chased after Brother Wei.

After the two walked away, Chen Ge came out from the room. He looked at the sticky liquid on the ground, but he too could not identify it. “This is perfect. They’ll help me scout ahead. If there’s danger, I’ll go and help them.”

Chen Ge was about to leave the room when the white cat on his backpack cried. Chen Ge turned to look and saw that the human model had turned its head. It had originally been looking at the rotten apple, but it was now looking right at Chen Ge.

The apple should represent life, and since the model was looking at the apple, it should desire life. Now that the thing is looking at me, does it mean that it’s planning to take over my body?

If not for the warning from the white cat, Chen Ge would not have noticed this.

Being stared by a model from the back, that is quite scary.

Without hesitation, Chen Ge walked to the model and had a staring contest with it. After a while, he gripped the model’s head with both hands and twisted it off.

“Since you like to look at me so much then, I’ll grant you the pleasure of watching me clear this mission.”

Chen Ge placed the head inside his backpack, putting it next to the comic and recorder.

The footsteps in the corridor faded away. Afraid that he might lose them, Chen Ge hurried to catch up. The white corridors looked rather scary. Chen Ge walked past a few more morgues, and the deeper he ventured into the morgue, the more confused he became. “Zhang Li said that there were seven morgues at the outer perimeter, and if we move any further, we would reach the middle section of the morgue, but that zone is supposed to be banned from any entry.”

The temperature was so low that it felt like all the freezers had been swung open, and the chill seeped out from the walls and floor tiles. The two that walked ahead also felt that something was wrong. They slowed down, and Chen Ge made use of this opportunity to catch up to them. There were only several meters between them. Chen Ge hid in the corner and focused on them using his Yin Yang Vision.

“Brother Wei, can’t you help carry this? The thing in the bucket just hit my hands.” Li Jiu put the bucket down and flashed the light on his hands. There were red spots surfacing on his palm that looked like insect bites. “They don’t feel like anything, but they do look scary.”

“You sure know how to create problems. Those are chemical baths. You’ll be fine after washing it away.” Brother Wei handed his flashlight to Li Jiu to have him shine the way, and he picked up the two large buckets.

“You’re trying to blame this on me? If not for you forcing me to carry the bucket, this would not have happened,” Li Jiu complained. He tried to wipe his hand on his shirt, but it did not have much effect. If anything, the red dots only got deeper in color.

“Stop wasting time. Come over and help. We’ll leave after we’re done. Why is this blasted place so cold?” Brother Wei walked ahead and held the buckets as he walked down the corridor following the map in his memory. They would pass a door that led to a morgue every few meters along the white corridor, and the number would be painted on the door. The two walked past Morgue No. 6 and then 7. Just as they were continuing to move forward, Li Jiu suddenly pulled on Brother Wei’s shirt.

...

“What is it this time?” Brother Wei glared at Li Jiu with impatience. Standing where he was, Li Jiu flashed the flashlight at the door next to Morgue No. 7.

“When we entered this place earlier, there is a wall next to Morgue No. 7, right?”

“I can’t really remember, why?” Brother Wei’s voice sounded pressed because it came out from behind the mask.

“Look at this. Why is there another morgue next to Morgue No. 7? Is it a new addition?” Li Jiu did not dare move forward anymore. “There is such a thick layer of dust on the doorknob, so this must have been built some time ago. How come I have no memory of it?”

“Stop scaring yourself. You probably remember the wrong details.” Brother Wei walked past Morgue No. 7 and stopped before the extra morgue. The morgue’s door looked the same as the doors that preceded it. The unclear number was the only difference, like someone had scratched it out with nails.

“Shall we go in to take a look?” Brother Wei searched his mind, and he did remember that Morgue No. 7 was supposed to be the last morgue.

“If you want to go, you need to go in alone. I don’t dare.” Li Jiu shook his head as he held the flashlight.

“Why are you so easily scared? We probably handle even more dead bodies at the crematorium every day than what’s down here, so why are you acting like this?” Brother Wei said that, but in reality, his heart was shaking as well. He skipped over this topic and picked up his pace as he ran past the extra morgue.

“Wait for me!” Li Jiu chased after Brother Wei, and something unexpected happened. The distance between Brother Wei and Li Jiu increased. Just as Li Jiu was about to run past the morgue, the steel door of the morgue opened on its own. It was very sudden, like someone from within had pushed it open.

Li Jiu was already shaking in his boots. The sudden movement of the door scared him, and he yelped in fear. Hearing that, Brother Wei stopped and turned to look. When he saw that the door was open, his face blanched. “Why did you go and open the door? If you have time to go sight-seeing, why don’t you come over to help me?”

Brother Wei lectured Li Jiu, but the latter was feeling wronged as well. “The door opened on its own; I didn’t even touch it.”

He glanced into the room, and the moment he did, his body froze with his eyes locked in a certain direction.

“What’s wrong with you now?” Brother Wei had been partners with Li Jiu for years already. He knew his colleague well; he was not someone who was into pranks. He put down the buckets and walked to stand beside Li Jiu and look into the morgue.

In a glass tube not far from the door was a body soaked in liquid, and the scariest thing was that the body’s eyes were open.

“Brother Wei, how come it feels like it’s watching us?” Li Jiu kept his voice low. Whenever he opened his lips, it felt like cold air was running into his lips.

“Let’s go and take a look.” Brother Wei grabbed Li Jiu by his shoulders, and two of them entered the morgue. The morgue looked more like a display room. There was a plaque on the wall. It said,

‘Every donor deserves to be respected, and that respect should exist at all times.’

The plaque was pasted on the wall, but Brother Wei and Li Jiu’s attention was completely captured by the body with the eyes open. They did not notice the words on the wall. The two moved slowly into the room and stopped next to the dead body.

“Liu Zhengyi?” There was a short introduction on the bottom of the tube. The body’s name was Liu Zhengyi, a graduate at Western Jiujiang Medical University who had stayed as a lecturer after his graduation. The man was a morally-upright man. The introduction said that on the day that he became a teacher, he had already decided to donate his body to the school after his death.

Once upon a time, a student had been joking with the cadaver’s looks in class, and he had scolded the student severely. He looked so young in the tube, and the introduction did not mention his cause of death.

“The preservation is so well done; it looks like a real person.” Brother Wei reached out to tap on the glass tube. The body inside did not respond.

“What are you doing? What if you really wake him up?” The red dots had already spread from Li Jiu’s arm, but he did not notice it. He yanked Brother Wei to the side. “Those security guards said that the underground morgue is haunted, and their own people refuse to come down here. Let’s leave immediately and not take any work from this school ever again.”

“Let’s finish this contract first.” Brother Wei flung Li Jiu’s hand off. He looked to the side. There were other glass tubes in the room next to Liu Zhengyi, and each of them had a cadaver inside it. There was a kind-looking old man. He looked peaceful and had the presence of a university professor. There was a muscular teen of about twenty. His eyes were closed, and there was a bright smile on his face like he was having a sweet dream. Brother Wei’s eyes scanned all the glass tubes, and when he saw the tube behind the door, he was startled.

The tube was empty. The weirdest thing about it was the cover at the top of the tube, which was open like something inside had just crawled out from it. The two sidled close to the tube and shone the flashlight on it. Then they discovered something even weirder. The top of the tube reeked of formalin, and there were two wet hand prints on the cover. Brother Wei and Li Jiu shared a look, and they both panicked.

“The thing inside the tube has crawled out?”

“Don’t panic.” Brother Wei looked around the tube. “If something did crawl out, it would have left more than two handprints, but there aren’t any more handprints or footprints.”

Li Jiu looked around with the flashlight, and he realized that Brother Wei was right. “Then how do you explain the two handprints?”

“No idea but we should leave immediately.” This was second floor underground, and they were surrounded by darkness. The darkness was so thick that it felt like it could not be banished by the light from the flashlight. As Brother Wei was retreating, he turned and walked out with Li Jiu.

“I’ll go deal with the stuff inside the buckets. You stay here and wait for me.”

“Okay, come back quickly.”

Brother Wei and Li Jiu left the room, and neither of them discovered that there was a cupboard behind the glass tube whose gaps were continuously leaking formalin.

Brother Wei picked up the two large water buckets and walked down the corridor. Li Jie stood where he was. He held the flashlight in his hand and forced himself to resist the urge to flash it into the morgue. He knew, in the darkness, the cadavers were all looking at him. "I'd better close the door."

Li Jiu closed the morgue and looked around. Brother Wei had already left, and it was quite scary standing there alone.

...

He turned back to look, and it felt like there were monsters just hiding in the edge of the light. He wanted to go and check, but he did not have the courage. After much deliberation, he felt it was safer to stay with Brother Wei. "This place is too creepy. Being together at least means that we have someone to look after each other."

Holding the flashlight, Li Jiu turned back every three steps that he made, deadly afraid that he might find someone following him. "Hopefully, I'm just being overly sensitive."

After Li Jiu walked away, a scary-looking hammer peeked around the corner. Chen Ge poked his head out to look at the pair that wandered away. His eyes were filled with confusion. Did the man discover me?

He walked out from the corner and stood at the door. The pictures given by Zhang Li didn't show this morgue. Could this be the mysterious Morgue No. 8 that shouldn't exist?

Chen Ge pushed open the steel door and looked in. Other than the glass tubes with dead bodies, there was nothing out of the ordinary. The dead look peaceful, so they should be voluntary donors. There is no trace of bad energy in here. This is not what I expected from Morgue No. 8.

Due to his experience, Chen Ge took a look around, and his confusion grew. The situation at the underground morgue seemed more complicated than he had anticipated. Just now, I think I heard the two talking about handprints and something crawling out.

Chen Ge was about to enter the room when the white cat jumped down from his shoulder and ran down the corridor.

There were other people in the corridor, and Chen Ge did not want to expose himself yet. Thus, he quickly retreated out of the morgue to chase after the cat. After consuming the society's blood, the cat's body seemed to have grown larger, and its reactions became faster. In a blink of an eye, it was already several meters away.

What is attracting it? Chen Ge was very familiar with the white cat. Whenever they were out on a mission, the white cat would stick close to him. The cat used to be very feral, but that had been lost after a period of complacency. Most of the time now, it would be very cowardly. Therefore, unless truly necessary, it would not leave Chen Ge willingly. To stop the white cat from going missing, Chen Ge also picked up his speed, and they reached the end of the corridor.

The place seemed to have been sealed up at one time, but something had later happened that caused the brick wall to crumble. There was all sorts of trash in the road, and there was a sign that read—Lack of maintenance over the years. Danger of falling objects. No entry!

There was trace of that sticky substance on the bricks next to the sign. Brother Wei and Li Jiu had gone this way. The outer perimeter with the seven morgues was the last expansion. Beyond this will be the middle section of the morgue.

Western Jiujiang Medical University had been built decades ago; it was Jiujiang's earliest medical university. The underground morgue had perfectly preserved the medical scene at the time.

Back then, they had still used cadaver pools to store dead bodies. The pools would be filled with formalin, and the bodies that the university gathered through various channels would be soaked there. When the students needed to experiment, the teachers would lead them to the underground morgue to fish the cadavers from the pools.

The road to the central hub should be somewhere in the middle section. Chen Ge put away his phone. The map provided by Zhang Li was mostly about the outer perimeter. There was little on the middle section and nothing on the central hub. Hopping over the sign, Chen Ge walked into the middle section, holding the wall.

The air in the corridor turned murky. There was a weird smell in the air. Chen Ge sniffed the air, but he could not tell where the smell came from. It felt like the smell was coming from all sides. It had soaked into the bricks of the ceiling and the walls.

“The middle section is the forbidden zone of the university. Normally, even the security team and the people from the school don’t dare come here, so what are the two outsiders doing here?” Chen Ge really did not get it. The two seemed to like ‘adventure’ more than he did. Chen Ge slowed down and covered his nostrils and mouth with his hand. He stared at the white cat, making sure that the cat did not leave his sight.

After running several meters, the white cat leaned low to the ground and entered the hunting state like it had spotted a rat. This was the first time that Chen Ge had seen the white cat in such a serious state. He moved slowly with his body bent low.

After a while, the stench in the air thickened. The white cat continued to prowl. The corridor became older and more dilapidated. The white paint peeled off the wall to reveal the gray bricks.

After a few more meters, Chen Ge heard the voices of Li Jiu and Brother Wei coming from one of the rooms. The thing that had attracted the white cat came from that room as well. Afraid that the cat might do something hasty, Chen Ge picked it up and placed it in his backpack. He walked to the door and peered in.

The room was larger than Chen Ge anticipated. There was a large rectangular pool. Brother Wei stood in the middle of it while Li Jiu stood by the edge. Every time, they collect such a large amount before they call us to come deal with it. Do they really think we’re not humans?

Li Jiu coughed twice. He had seen many bodies before, but whenever he saw these things, he could not stop his gag reflex.

The repulsive smell oozed from the pool, and Li Jiu’s eyes were watering from it.

“I told you to wait outside, so who can you blame but yourself?” Brother Wei poured the content of the buckets inside the pool. “Just be satisfied, based on our contract with the school, we should be bringing these things back to our crematorium to burn them, but with this convenient dumping spot, we’ve already saved a lot of trouble.”

“You have a point.” Li Jiu’s face was white. Looking at the things that had been dumped into the pool, he still felt like vomiting, “Just how did the medical students manage to do this? These are all picked from the human bodies. Just thinking about it makes me shudder.”

The two continued their conversation, and Chen Ge heard everything. He finally knew the two's identity and their purpose for being there. Li Jiu and Brother Wei were workers at some crematorium. The university asked them to deal with the leftovers after autopsy classes.

Normally, each cadaver had their label. After cremation, the remains would be returned to the families or buried in a public cemetery. They could not do anything about that, but there were rarely whole cadavers in an autopsy room. There were many things that were left behind after autopsies.

These things were very hard to deal with, and they took a great deal of time. Li Jiu and Brother Wei wanted to save themselves some trouble, so they prepared to dump these things at the underground morgue.

They seemed to have done something like this before, and they had not been exposed.

Chapter 427 - It Was Hiding Inside the Hole

Chapter 427: It Was Hiding Inside the Hole

“Brother Wei, is the hole stuck? How come it feels like it’s sinking slower than usual this time?” Li Jiu resisted his discomfort and glanced at the cadaver pool.

“There’s probably something stuck down there.” Brother Wei frowned while holding the buckets. He was getting agitated. They needed to leave the place as soon as possible, but weird things kept happening. “Go and look for items like brooms and sticks.”

...

“Brother, we’re in a morgue—where am I supposed to find a broom?”

“Then, are you suggesting we just leave it like this? If the university finds out, a fine is one thing, but we’ll definitely lose our jobs. They are very particular about the cadavers.” Brother Wei was not in a good mood. He waved his hands to fling the remains stuck to his plastic gloves away. “Don’t just stand there, go!”

Brother Wei was wearing a white coat, gloves, and a mask, but he only had a pair of sneakers on. He lowered his head to take a look, and he felt like his sneakers were soaked with something—it felt uncomfortable. After he was yelled at, Li Jiu had no choice but to go look around the room with a flashlight. He eventually walked to a wooden closet that was placed in a corner. He opened the closet, and it was filled with several large rusted metal hooks that had long chains attached to them.

“What are these for?” Li Jiu did not want to venture out of the room, so he took out one of the hooks. “Brother Wei, can this work?”

Brother Wei did not want to waste time either, so he accepted the hook from Li Jiu. The hook was large, but the end was not sharp. However, it was very heavy. If he dropped it into the pool, it would probably sink immediately. “I guess it’ll have to do.”

There was a hole that was larger than a normal man’s shoulders in the pool, and Brother Wei had no idea what it was for. Brother Wei lowered the hook toward the hole, and the hook was slowly submerging into the hole. Blocked by the floating substance, Brother Wei could not see into the hole. He stood by there and gripped the chains that were attached to the end of the hook.

“Why hasn’t it reached the end yet?” The hole was much deeper than he thought. “Who would dig such a deep hole at the bottom of the pool? Could it be the dead bodies?” If he had been anywhere but standing in a cadaver pool, he would have laughed.

“Just how deep is this hole?” When they were there the previous times, they just wanted to get things done, so he had really not considered that question before. To make sure the hook could continue to sink, Brother Wei squatted down. When there was about a quarter of the chain left, the hook finally hit something. Brother Wei grabbed the chain by both hands and pulled. He was shocked to discover that the hook was stuck.

“There was nothing in the way when it was sinking though, did it get caught on something? Maybe the thing that was clogging up the hole?” He pulled harder. Brother Wei was known for one thing—at the crematorium, he was the strongest. Brother Wei pulled like his life depended on it. The chain slowly pulled back, and it felt like the thing that was stuck on the end of the hook was especially heavy.

It looked like Brother Wei was fishing, but what could he possibly catch in a cadaver pool? Brother Wei had not considered that question. Half of his face was red, and even through the thick mask, one could hear him catching his breath. The chain was pulled out slowly, and it was covered with various indeterminate substances that gave it a creepy feeling.

“Come and help!” Brother Wei had pulling halfway through it when he suddenly realized that things were off. Earlier, when the hook stuck on something, it had been hard to pull, but at least the chain was still moving upwards. However, as he pulled, he noticed a resisting force from the other end. It felt like something was hiding inside the hole pulling back!

“Brother, I’m not wearing any gloves!” Li Jiu looked at the chain that was pulling out from the hole, and his legs were weak. Brother Wei gritted his teeth and leaned backwards. He used the weight of his body to stop the chain from sinking. He tried his best, and his mind was thinking about nothing but pulling that chain up.

"I don't believe I'm going to lose this." With his feet firmly planted on the ground, Brother Wei slowly moved back, and the chain pulled out little by little. The top of the hole started to bubble, and just as the hook was about to surface, the force inside the hole increased as if the thing inside the hole was only getting serious.

The chain was pulled taut for about a second before the force inside the hole suddenly increased. Without warning, Brother Wei's body was pulled toward the hole. His feet slipped, and he fell. He was yanked toward the hole!

"Ma Wei!" Li Jiu jumped into the pool and grabbed Brother Wei's coat at the last minute. His face almost touching the surface of the water, the smell of formalin made his eyes water. The chain danced on the water, and it was pulled into the hole by the force. The water was brownish and very murky. Ma Wei could see a blurry shadow sinking into the hole.

"What was that?" Cold sweat slid down his face. Ma Yin could not imagine what would have happened if he had been pulled into the hole. With both of his hands on the edge of the hole, Ma Yin collapsed to the ground with a blanched face.

"You didn't touch those things, right?" Li Jiu asked uncertainly. He was having a hard time just looking at the hole, much less coming in close contact with it.

"No." Ma Yin recovered after a long time. He stared at the hole and shivered. "Li Jiu, do you know of any fish that can survive in chemical water?"

"I know catfish can survive in sewers for a long time, but these chemicals are used to soak dead bodies—they're for dead people. No matter how strong the organism is, it would be useless!" Li Jiu got quite a scare as well. If Ma Yin had fallen into the hole, he would have needed to change partners.

"If it's not a fish, what could it be?" Ma Yin looked at the bubbling hole, and his voice shook. "When I was pulling on the chain, it was obvious that it got stuck on something. It felt like the thing was still asleep initially, but it got woken up by me."

Ma Yin was spooked. He looked at his hands. "The thing was powerful, at least twice as strong as me. Even with the advantage of the ground, I was still pulled away."

“Living deep inside a pool that is filled with formalin and dead bodies, twice the strength of a normal man...” Li Jiu did not dare to think any further. “Brother Wei, let’s hustle! It’s fine if we lose the job; our lives are more important!”

Ma Wei nodded. He also did not want to stay there. “Pull me up.”

He grabbed Li Jiu’s arm and tried to stand up, but he realized that his legs were powerless. He looked down, and Ma Yin saw that his shoes were completely wet like the content of the buckets had splashed on them.

“Can you stand up?” Li Jiu took a long time before he helped Ma Wei up. Ma Wei stomped his feet on the ground, but he did not feel any better. He felt like the parts below his calves were slowly losing their senses.

“The thing in the bucket is probably poisonous. It must’ve reacted with the other chemicals in the water.” Ma Wei had dropped out after high school, so he was not familiar with these things. He only knew that he needed to get to the hospital as soon as possible. “Li Jiu, your hands touched those things as well, right? Are they getting better?”

...

Li Jiu raised his palms. The red dots were spreading to form a rash, and it looked scary. “Some splashed on me, and it’s becoming like this. Your whole shoes were soaked, so it must be worse for you. We need to leave this place fast.”

Abandoning the two buckets, Li Jiu carried Ma Wei as they headed out from the pool. Before they could do so, the hole behind them gurgled like something was crawling out from it. At the same time, the tools closet placed in the corner of the room started to shake like there was someone coming out from inside.

“What’s going on?” Li Jiu was panicking. He jumped out of the pool and grabbed Ma Wei’s shoulders. “Quick! Those monsters are coming!”

He grabbed Ma Wei by both hands and yanked him out of the pool. The weird noises in the room grew, and the monster inside the hole started to crawl faster. The closet door burst open, and the rusted hooks fell to the ground.

After Ma Wei got out from the pool, the only thought they had was to run. The two stumbled to the door. The flashlight flickered, making the underground morgue scarier. The two were focused on escaping. When they reached the door, a man’s face suddenly turned from the corner!

“What the f*ck!” Li Jiu was walking ahead, but he was not that brave. Under the light from the flashlight, the man’s face looked paler than it was. The pair of eyes focused on them, and it felt like their bodies had frozen under his gaze. The face had appeared so suddenly that Li Jiu’s heart almost jumped out from his chest. He staggered back several steps to knock into Ma Wei, who was behind him. His legs having lost all feeling, Ma Wei had trouble even walking. The sudden collision with Li Jiu made him lose his footing. The two rolled and collapsed to the ground, their voices echoing in the underground morgue.

“I saw it!

“There was a face at the door!

“The thing’s outside!”

Their whole focus was on the hole in the cadaver pool and the closet at the corner, so they did not expect the real danger to come from the door. The only exit was blocked, and Li Jiu cried for help. Crawling on the ground, he clambered back into the room.

Ma Wei still had no idea what was happening. He was just scared by how Li Jiu was reacting. Not raising his head, he followed behind Li Jiu and crawled after the man. The room was only so big, and there was no place to hide. The two leaned against the innermost wall and saw despair in each other’s eyes.

“There were no footsteps. It was just a face that showed up at the door!” Li Jiu waved his hands. He did not even know how to describe it anymore. Ma Yin had followed behind Li Jiu, so he did not see the face, but based on his partner’s description, he was already feeling scared.

His legs were turning into jelly. If they ran into danger, he would not even be able to run. However, compared to Li Jiu, Ma Wei was calmer. He lifted the flashlight and slowly moved the light to the door.

A man with a backpack was standing on the corridor. He was of average build and had a smile on his face. He looked kind, but when Ma Wei’s eyes moved to the man’s left hand, his heart skipped a beat. The man was holding a hammer that was at least half a meter long. The hammerhead was covered with sticky blood stains, and the handle looked like it was made from human bones. It looked so scary!

A smiling face and wicked murder weapon, the first thing that came into Ma Wei's mind was the movies about crazed murderers. According to the movies, the killers would look like this when they were about to kill, and they saw torture as a hobby, an enjoyable activity. His body curled backwards. Ma Wei squeezed together with Li Jiu, and the two workers could not stop shaking.

"I was still discovered." Chen Ge also did not expect that the duo would suddenly run outside. He wanted to hide, but he realized that the next corner was about six meters away. He walked into the room with the hammer. Chen Ge did not think it was such a big issue being discovered by these two. From their reaction, they did not have that much courage.

The hammer dragged along the ground, and the white cat followed behind it. Weirdly enough, when Chen Ge entered the room, the sound from the hole and the closet became silent. Li Jiu and Ma Wei saw Chen Ge walk closer, and their foreheads were sweating. In the end, it was Ma Wei who gathered the courage and demanded in an officious tone, "Who are you? What are you doing in the underground morgue so late at night?"

"Who am I?" Chen Ge toyed with the hammer in his hand. Stopping before Li Jiu and Ma Yin, he smiled. "I still haven't come up with the answer yet. How about you help me think up an identity?"

"What?" Ma Wei was shocked. He certainly had not been expecting that. He looked at Chen Ge and the hammer that reeked of stale blood. He forced a smile and said, "You must be one of the security guards."

"Western Jiujiang Medical University's guards have a uniform, so obviously I'm not one of them."

Ma Wei did not know what to say. He had a feeling that the man was about to kill them. With someone holding his arm, Li Jiu beside Ma Wei opened his lips. "I believe you're one of the university staff. I know you have something to do here. Neither of us saw your face, so we will not disturb you from working."

With the help of the wall, Li Jiu slowly stood up. He held Ma Wei's shoulders, and they tried to move away from Chen Ge.

"Not a bad guess." Chen Ge looked at the two. "Then why are you two here? Don't try to lie to me. Tell me everything that has happened here."

“We’re employees at Jiujiang’s Song Lin Crematorium, and we’re here to help the school deal with the cadavers.” Li Jiu told Chen Ge in general what had happened. When he mentioned the monster in the hole and shaking closet, Chen Ge’s interest was piqued.

Chen Ge walked to the closet first. He opened the closet and knocked on the back wall. “It’s hollow behind this closet; I suspect there is a pathway behind this.”

Chapter 429 - 'Red' Corridor

Chapter 429: 'Red' Corridor

Turning to look at Li Jiu and Ma Wei, Chen Ge ordered, "Don't just stand there, come and help."

The black phone's mission requirement was for him to enter the central hub before midnight. Without a map, Chen Ge had no idea where the corridor heading to the central hub was, so the fact that he had stumbled across a hidden pathway greatly interested him. The three pushed the closet aside, and behind it was a secret passage that was only wide enough for a single person. There was wind howling on the other end, and the air smelled of decay and rot.

...

Chen Ge reached out to touch the edge of the passage. It was wet and slippery, and there was something that looked like moss growing on the walls. However, the 'moss' was not green in color but dark brown. In fact, when it caught the light of the flashlight, it would glow red.

"Give me the flashlight." Chen Ge accepted the flashlight from Li Jiu and shone it down the passage. The passage was narrow and had many turns, so he had no idea where it led.

"Why would there be a secret passage in the room where the cadaver pool is? This looks like it has been dug years ago, what was the purpose?" Chen Ge looked at the two men, and they both shook their heads.

"Shall we go in to take a look?" Chen Ge was talking to himself, but when the two heard that, their expressions dropped. Probably worried that they would be forced by Chen Ge to scout ahead, Li Jiu said in a soft reminder, "We'd better not wander about. Even the security said this place is haunted. Brother Wei and I have personally experienced that this place is not safe—perhaps the legends are really true."

Chen Ge also did not want to crawl into the tunnel. The space was too small, and it limited his power. Furthermore, if he ran into monsters from both ends when he was inside the tunnel, it would be very dangerous. When he was hesitating, the white cat called, and it slowly crawled into the tunnel.

The thing that attracted the white cat is inside this passage? Chen Ge grabbed the hammer and leaned his upper body into the passage. There's a draft, so the chance of asphyxiation is low.

Hearing the cat, Li Jiu and Ma Wei realized that the scary-looking man brought a cat with him. Their eyes wandered between Chen Ge and the white cat, and their impression of Chen Ge changed slightly.

"You two stay here. I'll be back after I go and take a look." Chen Ge was worried that his retreat would be blocked, so he had the two workers help him guard the entrance. "That person over there, give me your phone. If there's an accident, at least we can call each other."

Chen Ge was pointing at Li Jiu, but the man was confused. Normally, people asked for phone number if they wanted to keep constant contact, right? Why did this man ask for his phone directly?

However, since he was too afraid to refuse, Li Jiu passed his phone to Chen Ge. "Don't worry, if we can leave this place alive, I'll definitely return you your phone."

Hearing that promise, Li Jiu became even more nervous. After some brief conversation, Chen Ge found out the two's names. If something happened, he would use Li Jiu's phone to call Ma Wei.

"If you run into danger, you can call me as well. If you cannot hold them off, just run after you've called me." Chen Ge put Li Jiu's phone into the pocket of his jacket and followed the white cat into the tunnel. It did not feel like anything when he first entered the tunnel, but after he turned the first corner, Chen Ge realized that the air had become murkier, and the moss on the wall had increased.

The white cat has swallowed the blood that the society found behind the door. Now that it's running ahead, the thing attracting it might be related to the society.

The passage narrowed and the deepest part of the tunnel was completely covered by the moss-like plant. Chen Ge used the hammerhead to scrape away some of the 'moss', and he realized that this thing was no different from a human. After the surface fell away, a red liquid would seep out from it. Chen Ge leaned in to sniff and found that the liquid was quite fragrant and did not have the smell of blood.

Something like this can grow underground?

After the liquid leaked out, the ‘moss’ that was scraped away regrew at a speed that was unimaginable. It seemed like the liquid had some regenerative power. Chen Ge continued to move forward. The tunnel had become so small that he needed to bend over to move forward. The ‘moss’ continued to grow, and it felt slick stepping on it.

Where will this passage lead to?

The air became misty, but the color of the ‘moss’ turned brighter, from brownish yellow to a faded red. After a few more corners, Chen Ge’s breath caught in his lungs, he had trouble breathing. He called after the white cat and slowed down. He moved several meters, and the ‘moss’ on the wall had completely turned blood red.

Chen Ge looked around, and he was suddenly reminded of what Lee Zheng said. There were three types of corridors inside the underground morgue—the one with white paint, unpainted, and red paint. The blood red corridor was the creepiest and most mysterious. One had to be absolutely silent inside it, or something bad might happen.

Is this the red corridor that he mentioned?

The deeper he moved, the redder the ‘moss’ on the walls and the narrower the space. Chen Ge practically leaned against the ‘moss’ as he nudged further. He held the hammer in one hand, and as he turned a corner, the sharp part of the hammer scratched the wall.

Initially, Chen Ge was not paying attention, but when the ‘moss’ fell off, with the aid of the Yin Yang Vision, he could see something hidden behind the ‘moss’. He stepped back and slowly squatted down. He looked at the opening that the hammer had just made, and his pupils narrowed.

There was a human face under the ‘moss’—the face of a woman. Her skin was bleeding, and the most curious thing was that the blood from her face had a light fragrance to it.

This whole passage is built from human bodies?

Chen Ge froze, and he looked around. He wondered how many human faces were hidden under this ‘moss’.

This is insane.

The white cat continued to run ahead. Chen Ge looked at the woman's face and hesitated. In the end, he chose to not abandon the white cat and continued to follow it.

...

At the entrance, Li Jiu and Ma Wei looked at each other.

"We're going to stay here to wait for him to come out?" Li Jiu lowered his voice to the smallest. He was afraid that Chen Ge might overhear him.

"What else can we do? I have a feeling he might be testing us. The moment we run, he might come out and kill us," Ma Yin warned. The two of them could not understand why they would run into a young man holding a hammer in an underground morgue in the middle of the night.

"I still think we should leave. That man could be the 'ghost' that the guards talked about." The more he thought about it, the more scared Li Jiu became. His face was white. "When we saw him, he didn't even carry a light. This place is so dark, so how did he manage to look in the dark?"

Ma Wei conceded to Li Jiu's point. "That's right, something is definitely different about his eyes. Whenever our eyes met, my heart would race with panic."

“Which normal person would come to a place like this in the middle of the night? If we stay any longer, we probably won’t be able to leave.” Li Jiu silently nudged himself away from the secret passage behind the closet. Ma Wei used his flashlight to shine inside the passage. After he made sure that Chen Ge was not hiding around the next corner, he also started his retreat.

The two worked well together, and neither of them spoke as they helped each other walk out from the room. Compared to when they entered the place, the corridors seemed to have changed. They had a feeling that something was different from before, but what was different, the two could not put their fingers on it. Li Jiu walked in front with the flashlight. Ma Wei activated the flashlight function on his phone and followed closely behind.

...

“Be careful, there might be more than one monster in this underground morgue.” The scenario was like the most difficult escape-the-room game for Li Jiu and Ma Wei. They had to face cadavers that came back to life, monsters that could show up at any time, crazed murderers walking around with a murder weapon, and unknown deadly traps.

“Li Jiu, should I just drop my phone here? Holding it makes me feel like the man might call me at any time.” Ma Wei held his phone, but he did not feel any trace of security. The image of Chen Ge dragging Doctor Skull-cracker’s hammer across the floor appeared in his mind more than once. The young man had a creepy smile on his face, and imagining him on the other end of the phone gave Ma Wei the creeps.

“I think we should keep it. This is our only means of communication with the outside world. However, remember to change it to silent mode in case our location gets exposed during the key moments.” Li Jiu thought further and deeper. Being caught in a dangerous situation seemed to have brought out his hidden potential. Ma Wei followed his partner’s advice and changed his phone’s setting. The two stuck their backs to the wall and walked back the way they came.

After turning the corner, when they passed Morgue No. 8, Li Jiu, who walked in front, suddenly stopped. “Did the man open the door of the morgue? We closed the door when we left earlier, right?”

There was a sticky liquid stuck to the door handle. A thick mist of formalin circulated in the morgue. Li Jiu raised his flashlight and looked into the room. When he did, his eyes widened into two big circles.

“What’s wrong?” Realizing something was wrong, Ma Wei also leaned over to take a look. The glass tubes in the room were sitting where they were, but the cadavers that they were supposed to be holding had all completely disappeared!

Li Jiu’s legs were shivering, and he pointed his flashlight to the ground. There were a few water trails leading out of the room and entering the corridor they were in. “The ‘people’ inside the tubes have escaped, and they are now also in this corridor.”

Li Jiu’s Adam’s Apple was quivering. He moved his flashlight slowly to the corner, worried that something scary might pop out.

“Should we continue to move forward?” Ma Wei asked with uncertainty. His legs were still weak, and he could not run fast. If they ran into danger, he would be stuck there, waiting for death—that was the most despairing thing for the man. Li Jiu was also conflicted. The dark corridor was hiding the cadavers that crawled out from the glass tubes and various unknown dangers. However, if they stayed there, they would need to face the crazed murderer who was not less dangerous than the monsters.

“I think we should still move forward. If we move at full speed, we should be able to leave in about ten minutes if there’s no accident.” Li Jiu grabbed Ma Wei’s phone. “The person with the hammer is probably still in the passage. I’ll call the police first before contacting the security guards that are outside.”

Li Jiu used the phone to call the police, and the number was answered; however, the signal was so bad that he could barely finish a complete sentence.

“This shouldn’t be! Even though we are underground and the signal is understandably not so good, it shouldn’t be at the level where we cannot even contact the police!” There seemed to be something in the underground morgue disturbing the phone signal, and Li Jiu had to give up after giving it a few more tries. Misery loves company—he felt like all the bad luck had gathered on him that night.

“Let’s move outward first. If we run into any monster, we’ll retreat backward.” Li Jiu held Ma Wei, and he forced a smile. “At the very least, the man with the hammer doesn’t seem like he’s in cahoots with the monsters inside this place. That’s good news.”

The flashlight shone the light down the corridor. The two picked up speed, and when they passed Morgue No. 8, there was a weird sound coming from inside the room. Of course, they did not have the courage to stop to take a look. They pretended they did not hear anything and continued to move forward.

The corridor was so dark that it felt like it was endless. They ran past Morgue No. 7, and at the end of the corridor was a split in the road. Standing in the middle of the junction was a dark figure. It was not tall and very thin. It seemed to be holding something in its palms. Ma Wei touched Li Jiu’s arm. “Shall we continue to move forward?”

Li Jiu could not tell for sure. He felt like the underground morgue was exceptionally crowded that night. He raised the flashlight slowly to let the light fall on the person before them.

Wearing a white, loose jacket, with a head of long flowing hair, it was a little girl who stood at the junction. She had her face lowered and was holding a rotten apple in her hands. This curious scene made Ma Wei and Li Jiu stop moving. They froze where they were as a chill crawled up their spines.

Feeling the light on her, the girl slowly raised her head. She looked cute and sweet. It gave the feeling that she was a quiet, introverted child. She had a pair of light brown eyes, and her gaze was locked on the apple like she was considering giving the apple a bite.

With her silky-smooth skin, exquisite facial features, and cute appearance, the girl formed a great contrast with the rotten apple. However, the most curious thing was, staring at the apple, there was more than a hint of desire that was inexplicable in the girl’s eyes. The light from the flashlight made the girl frown slightly. Her small nose twitched like she smelled something fresh, and she continued to lift her head.

The light brown eyes turned to fall on Ma Wei and Li Jiu. The edge of the girl’s lips moved, and the thin lips curved into a light smile. The smile was pure and innocent. There was not really kindness, but there was no maliciousness either; it was as if the girl had found a toy that she liked. Other than the smile that appeared on the girl's face, nothing changed about her. The girl seemed to be acting according to her own consciousness.

"Her hair and dress are all wet, and her skin color is not normal. Do you think she could have crawled out from the glass tubes?"

"But when we entered the morgue earlier, we didn't see any tubes holding a girl."

"Wasn't there a tube that was already opened? I suspect she came out from that particular tube."

Ma Wei and Li Jiu were shivering under the girl's scrutiny. Considering the fact that she might be a dead body, the shivers became even more violent, and their bodies staggered involuntarily backward. The girl stood where she was, but there were weird noises coming from the corridor. There was the sound of wheels running on the ground coming from the corridor that was painted white, and Morgue No. 7 that was next to them had a knocking sound like the thing trapped inside was trying to come out. The smell of formalin in the air thickened. Li Jiu and Ma Wei did not have much time left to make a choice.

"Going back is definitely a dead end—we might still survive if we move forward!" Li Jiu gritted his teeth and grabbed Ma Wei's shoulder. "Let's give it our all! We'll charge our way out of here!"

"Okay!" The two made their decision, and like a cornered animal, they planned to make their last stand!

Li Jiu aimed for the opening next to the girl. Dragging Ma Wei, the muscles in his legs tensed, and he jumped forward like a spring. "The corridor on the right is not painted!"

Normally, it was Li Jiu hiding behind Ma Wei, but now that Ma Wei's legs were injured, Li Jiu stepped forward. He cut a way out for them, and his expression turned ugly due to fear. His features scrunched up together, and a yell escaped from his throat. "Quick!"

The two charged toward the girl, and the sound of the wheels coming from the corridor was nearing. What Li Jiu and Ma Wei needed to do was enter the corridor that did not have the white paint before the wheels arrived. Every second was important. The girl saw the two men charge after her, and she remained immobile. The smile continued to hang on her face like she was unaffected by what was happening around her.

“This is our chance!” The girl was too careless. Li Jiu raised the flashlight. He had planned everything in his mind. When they ran to the girl’s side, they would crawl past the opening next to her. The gap was large enough for him and Ma Wei to go through. If the girl did anything to stop them, he would use the flashlight in his hands to whack at her. This was the most tense and important moment of Li Jiu’s life, but he had confidence that he would be able to do this.

“Come on!” Running at full speed, when the sound of the wheels stopped, Ma Wei and Li Jiu had already reached the split in the road!

When they ran past the girl, the girl did not stop them; she just stood where she was, maintaining the same pose, not moving at all. It was surprisingly successful, but Li Jiu did not have the time to get excited because he knew it was not yet time to relax and celebrate. Running past the girl was just the first step; there was still a long journey before they could leave the underground morgue.

“Don’t let your guard down!” He turned to look down the corridor that was painted white. There was a trolley used by the university staff to transport dead bodies sitting in it. They did not see anyone pushing the trolley, but they did see the several human bodies sitting inside the trolley, and one of them even had its head already yanked off!

“Thankfully, we didn’t run down that way. Those bodies are definitely suspicious from the looks of it.” Li Jiu was glad that he had made the right choice at the most crucial moment. He pulled back his gaze and used his flashlight to illuminate the unpainted corridor.

A sticky liquid dripped on his face. Li Jiu raised his head in confusion, and what he saw would be branded in his mind forever. The unpainted corridor was crawling with dead bodies, and their limbs and bodies were sewn together with red threads. They walked toward Li Jiu and Ma Wei like string puppets. There was so many of them. The pungent smell caused Ma Wei and Li Jiu’s sense of smell to go haywire temporarily. Twisted dead faces fill their sight; everywhere they turned there were broken limbs and shattered bodies. Their brains were buzzing, and their thoughts were put on hold.

“Who would be able to survive this?” Running on inertia, Li Jiu almost ran into the crowd of dead bodies, but thankfully, Ma Wei pointed on his shirt at the last minute. “Back, back! Retreat!”

The two were quite good at survival. They had danced on the line of life and death so many times, and they had survived each time. There was definitely no way they were getting out. Seeing the corridor filled with monsters, Ma Wei and Li Jiu suddenly realized that the man with the iron hammer looked much friendlier and nicer.

They retreated quickly, and when they passed the girl, the child who stood where she was slowly turned her head. Like a toy whose spring had been turned, the girl’s spine creaked noisily as the head slowly twisted around. The lips were turning white, but the smile still did not leave her face.

The head turned 180 degrees, and the girl who looked so normal had completely shattered Li Jiu and Ma Wei’s last psychological bulwark. The fire running through their veins froze instantly, and a deep chasm of chilling helplessness opened up to swallow the two men. At a time like this, they could only try their best to run and escape. In their mind, the only person who could save them then was the young man from before.

Without once turning back to look, they raced back down into the middle section of the underground morgue. They rushed into the room with the cadaver pool, locked the door from the inside, and moved the closet to block the entrance. There were footsteps coming from the corridor. After a few seconds of silence, something slammed heavily into the room where the cadaver pool was. Ma Wei and Li Jiu leaned against the closet.

Just as they were locked in a standstill with the monsters outside the door, the hole in the middle of the cadaver pool started to gurgle and bubble again. After some time, the human remains that were supposed to have sunk to the bottom of the hole started to gush upward like there was something pushing them up from below.

“We cannot stay in this room any longer. Brother Wei, let’s go into the secret tunnel as well!” Li Jiu’s suggestion was very risky. After all, no one knew what was at the other end of the passage. “Since there was no other option, why not just give it a try? The man did not hesitate when he entered the passage earlier. I feel like he should know something about this place.”

“Okay! We’ll do it your way.” Ma Wei picked up the chain from the ground to tie the closet tight to the door. They needed to buy as much time as they could. The two crawled into the secret passage, and they moved so quickly, giving no thought to the type of danger that they might face inside the passage. The passage was small and narrow, so the two moved with one in front and the other at the back. The distance between them and Chen Ge slowly closed.

After running several meters, they could hear the sound of the closet being shoved down coming from outside. Their hearts shook, and they raced as fast as they could down the secret passage.

Chen Ge walked for a long time inside the passage, and the deeper he went, the thicker the layer of 'moss' became. It became so ubiquitous that he could not stop his shirt and body from accidentally touching it.

However, weirdly enough, when the fragrant liquid from the 'moss' touched the surface of his skin, his body temperature that had become so much lower than normal started to rise again. Even though it was only temporary, it made him feel warm, a sensation that he had not experienced in a long time.

This might not be a good development. Chen Ge was familiar with the fact that the 'moss' was covering human bodies. Even though he had been searching a method to make his body temperature return to normal, if the method was related to body bodies, he would need to give it a second consideration.

The ceiling of the corridor lowered, and the walls squeezed in from both sides. At the deepest part of the corridor, the path was almost completely swallowed by the 'moss'. The white cat scratched its way through, and without any other choice, Chen Ge had to use his hand to move the peels of 'moss' that blocked the way apart.

His fingers touched the wall. Under the bright red 'moss' were human faces. Their eyes were tightly closed, and Chen Ge literally walked before their eyes.

These human bodies are probably preserved with some special method. They look no different from normal, living humans. Chen Ge felt slightly uncomfortable. It would be no laughing matter if they suddenly opened their eyes when I am walking past them.

Chapter 431 - Too Difficult for Them

Chapter 431: Too Difficult for Them

This was a corridor made from dead bodies and covered in red moss. Chen Ge remembered the reminder—he had to maintain complete silence inside the red corridor. It was Lee Zheng who had told him that, but he did not tell Chen Ge why. He had only said that was what the school staff had told him. Will the noise wake the bodies in the wall?

Seeing the faces in the wall, Chen Ge softened his movement—his every step was the epitome of caution. With the white cat leading the way, he was not that worried. However, after he took a few steps, Chen Ge suddenly heard sound coming from behind him—it sounded like people running in the corridor.

The two workers are afraid of me; they wouldn't have come into the corridor if not necessary. This mean they were in danger, probably ran into some monsters.

With the increased movement, Chen Ge could feel the whole corridor shaking. As the footsteps echoed down the passage, the 'moss' started to leak red liquid. Much of the 'moss' from above his head, next to his body, and under his feet started to peel to reveal the many faces. They were so well-preserved that one could easily mistake them for being alive.

Their lashes quivered. When the red liquid slid past their faces, their skin seemed to be revitalized, and their eyelids twitched like they would open in the next second. Chen Ge did not dare stay in the corridor any longer. The area was too cramped, and if the bodies in the wall woke up, he had a feeling he would be buried alive.

Buried alive by the bodies and stay here forever, becoming one of them?

Chen Ge took in a cold breath, and he had a vague idea why there were so many dead bodies there. He moved faster to catch up to the white cat.

The corridor was very long, and the surroundings were all blood red. 'Moss' was still falling, and the bodies that formed the foundation of the wall vibrated slightly. Some of the bodies seemed to hear the noise, and they tried to extricate themselves from the rest. The whole corridor was shaking, and cracks appeared on the wall. Eventually, arms fell out from the ceiling!

The scene would make anyone's skin crawl. Even Chen Ge's heart was racing, much less a normal person. Holding his hands above his head, Chen Ge practically crawled forward. The arms that fell from the ceiling felt like they were grabbing after him. The sound behind him was nearing, and the bodies in the wall slowly awakened. Chen Ge could sense their movement.

This three-star scenario is more dangerous than I thought.

If the corridor collapsed then, even if he summoned all of his employees, it would have been useless. Only Zhang Ya would be able to use her long hair to force an opening for Chen Ge. The ghosts were only one of the standards to gauge the danger level of a scenario; some of the scenarios were naturally dangerous. For example, this underground morgue, due to it being built underground, was hard to be taken down.

The white cat's call came from ahead of him. After consuming the society's blood, the white cat had become smarter. It too could sense the changes in the corridor, and it called urgently for Chen Ge to come out. Since the bodies were awakening, Chen Ge threw caution to the wind and started running.

Some parts of the corridor were completely blocked by the red 'moss', and Chen Ge could only use his body to force his way through. If not for the fact that Chen Ge knew where the white cat was, he probably would not have charged forward so heedlessly.

The 'moss' peeled off, and the fragrant liquid stuck to his body. In this creepy environment, Chen Ge felt like his body was enveloped by a warm mist, like he was sitting beside a heater in the winter, and his body temperature was slowly rising. If not for the impending danger, he might even have thought about staying there a bit longer.

The footsteps behind him approached. Chen Ge did not have time to care about other people. He drilled forward, and after who knew how long, the pressure around his body suddenly gave, and his sight brightened. "Finally got out from there!"

His jacket was soaked and was radiating a light fragrance. The hammer in his hand also smelled less bloody, but it looked scarier. The other side of the corridor was most likely the central hub of the underground morgue. This place was no different from inside the corridor. Everywhere he turned, everything was covered by a thick layer of blood red ‘moss’.

This place is technically a room quarantined by using dead bodies.

The echoes of the footsteps inside the corridor did not influence the central hub much. Chen Ge waited for some time beside the exit, waiting for the two workers. He also wanted to know what was happening outside.

It was Li Jiu who poked his head through first. The man was obviously in shock. When he saw Chen Ge, his lips fell open like he was about to say something. Chen Ge expected such a response, so he quickly rushed forward to cover the man’s lips and then whispered into his ear, “Keep quiet.”

Two seconds later, Li Jiu understood the message and nodded quickly. Then, Ma Wei struggled out of the tunnel. Similarly, Chen Ge covered his lips before he could say anything. After the two calmed down, Chen Ge said, “This place is buried with endless bodies. If you don’t want to wake them up, be quiet.”

“Brother, the cadavers in the glass tubes outside have all come out. When we went past them, we saw them coming this way.” Li Jiu sounded worried, and his face was covered with sweat.

“When you went past them?” Chen Ge narrowed his eyes, and his detached tone scared Ma Wei and Li Jiu. “Were you two planning to escape?”

“Don’t worry, it’s understandable if you tried to run. I’m more curious, am I that scary? You’d rather go find dead bodies than listen to my advice.” Chen Ge used the hammer to peel the ‘moss’ on the red corridor away. The bodies did not follow them.

Ma Wei and Li Jiu did not know how to answer, so they kept their heads lowered and kept quiet, afraid that they might say something wrong. Actually, it was not their fault for being afraid. If a murder was committed there, the murderer could even skip the process of dealing with the carcass.

“Never mind. It’s fate that we manage to meet down here. If you two listen to my orders closely, I won’t make things too difficult for you.” Chen Ge sounded warm in his previous sentence. “But I shall warn you first, if you create problems for me...”

He picked up the hammer to allow Ma Wei and Li Jiu to see the blood stains clearer. “Please reconsider, this is human blood on the hammer.”

Li Jiu and Ma Wei nodded in quick succession without a second thought.

Chapter 432 - Patient 41

The Trial Mission required Chen Ge to enter the central hub of the underground morgue before midnight and survive until dawn. When he exited the corridor, it was about 11 pm, so there was still enough time to prepare.

“Tell me, what kind of monsters did you run into outside?” Chen Ge stood beside the tunnel to pay attention to things that were happening to it.

...

“There was a girl who held an apple and many dead bodies that came from who knows where—their bodies were sewn together, and the thread that held them together was all red in color.”

“Red threads? Are you sure you’re not mistaken?” This was the first time that Chen Ge had heard people using red threads to sew up the injuries on a dead body.

“The thread was definitely red in color, but it was thinner than the thread we use in daily life. Also, it can move on its own.” Li Jiu’s description reminded Chen Ge of the blood vessels used by the society.

“Other than that, did you run into other monsters? Like monsters that climb on the wall like a lizard or dead bodies that bounce on the ground like fish?”

“Not really.” Li Jiu and Ma Wei shook their heads. They really did not know there were so many creepy monsters down in the underground morgue; this place felt like hell, isolated from the human world.

“Looks like you’ve only run into a small part of them.” This was the largest underground morgue in Jiujiang, and it was also the oldest. Perhaps even the ghost stories society did not know how many monsters were collected there.

“Brother, what shall we do now?” Ma Wei and Li Jiu focused their eyes on Chen Ge.

“You should consider yourself lucky that you ran into me, or else you probably would not leave this place alive.” Chen Ge lowered his head to look at the clock on his phone. “Things are just waking up now. The real terror will show itself after midnight!”

“Midnight?”

“Yes, the monsters will all wake up after midnight. It’s a party for the dead.” Chen Ge’s voice escaped between his teeth. He glared at Ma Wei and Li Jiu. “My plan was to come in to look around and leave before midnight, but now that you have attracted the monsters, we’re trapped because the exit has been blocked! Because of you two, I’m also trapped here and have to stay here until dawn!”

Li Jiu and Ma Wei’s faces were immediately wrought with guilt and apology. “Brother, we didn’t have the luxury to think at the time. Who would have thought that something like this could happen?”

They lowered their heads and apologized sincerely to Chen Ge.

“Never mind, it’s too late to do anything now. It has become an undeniable truth that we’re trapped here. The only thing that we can do now is try to figure out how to survive.” Chen Ge was calm, and in a moment like that, he was like a safe harbor. “The monsters will hibernate in the morning, and they only move around at night. Therefore, we need to figure out a way to survive until dawn.”

“Until dawn? With just the three of us?”

“Never give up on hope. If you don’t want to die, try your best to survive.” Chen Ge stood in the room covered with blood red ‘moss’ and turned to walk deeper into the room. Looking at his back, Li Jiu and Ma Wei suddenly realized that this person might not be as bad as they thought.

Li Jiu and Ma Wei were unexpected helpers for Chen Ge. Chen Ge did not have many demands for them. He was thinking how to use these two crematorium workers to their full potential. They could help move stuff about and could scout ahead for him, and if they were really swamped by monsters, they could help delay them some time for him to call Zhang Ya. “Wait for us!”

Li Jiu ran to catch up to Chen Ge, and he whispered, “Brother, don’t hesitate to order us to do things for you. The situation earlier will never happen again—you can be sure of that.”

“Even though we might not be the sharpest tools in the box, we are powerful. If we work together, we’ll definitely survive this.” Ma Wei also walked over. His shirt was drenched with the weird liquid. The two workers volunteered to help Chen Ge; this was something expected by Chen Ge because they did not have any other choice.

“We’ll look around first.” He had not explored fully the central hub of the underground morgue yet. This area was fully covered by red ‘moss’. After some walking, Chen Ge discovered a second tunnel that was hidden behind the ‘moss’. If not for his Yin Yang Vision, he would not have discovered it. Chen Ge memorized its location silently, but he did not say anything about it. He followed the white cat and continued to move forward. In total, he discovered three tunnels; this matched the number of cadaver pools in the middle section.

Does each tunnel connect to a pool?

The three tunnels came from different directions, but they congregated at the middle of the hub. After walking around with the white cat, Chen Ge finally had a basic understanding of the underground morgue’s central hub. There were so many dead bodies stacked there that it was impossible to tell what the place had originally looked like. The walkway was in the shape of a circular screw, and at the end of the path was a steel door. It looked like a normal door, but that was the weird issue. The red ‘moss’ had covered everything else in the room, but this extremely normal-looking steel door had been left untouched by the ‘moss’.

Placed in the quiet, dark, and moist underground, the door was not a bit rusted. “Wait for me outside, don’t come in.”

Chen Ge picked up the cat that was lying before the door, and he tried to pull the door open. The room was very clean, and there was various medical equipment. Chen Ge did not know the names of most of them, but he knew that he had seen them at hospitals before. This looks like it is for emergency resuscitation.

The equipment was covered with dust, and the wires were all snipped. It was clear that none of it had been used for a long time. Surrounded by the equipment was a modified surgery table. The table was high on the edges and low in the middle. The grooves on the table were filled with the fragrant liquid.

Someone has been collecting this liquid. Chen Ge stood next to the table.

Actually, he was also curious about the liquid. Earlier, he had accidentally touched some of it, and his body temperature had started to return to normal. If there was enough liquid, perhaps it could undo the effect that the ghosts brought to him?

The fragrance is alluring. Who would have thought it leaked out from human bodies? Chen Ge sighed when the white cat hissed. It ran deeper into the room and scratched at the door that led to a different room. Chen Ge walked over to push the second door open. This room was only half the size of the first room. The walls were filled with pictures of victims, each of them representing a murder victim.

Chen Ge pulled out a random picture. The man looked to be in his forties, and the cause of death was drowning. There were a few notes on the bottom of the picture.

“Diagnosis result: Claustrophobia, Aquaphobia.

“Treatment solution: Patient forty-one was tormented by her step father when she was young. Her head was pressed into the water multiple times, and this left a psychological scar. It’s not hard to resolve this issue. I suggested that she does the same thing back to her father, to make her personally drown the fear and memory that she has been avoiding in her heart!”

Chapter 433 - The Number Three

Chapter 433: The Number Three

Chen Ge was hit with a sense of familiarity when he read the treatment method. When I was invited to the society for the first time, one of the members told me this. All the pictures pasted here are victims of the society?

The pictures covered the entire room with no space left. Most of them were taken after the victims' death, recording their death in picture. The ghost stories society, the victims, the underground morgue, the central hub that is made from entirely human bodies...

Chen Ge linked all the clues in his mind. His eyes widened, surprised at the lengths that the culprit had gone to for his plan.

The owner of the underground morgue is the chairperson! He needed a large number of dead bodies, so he volunteered to help the crazies at the Third Sick Hall and used a much-crazier method to help with their treatment, to turn them into his helpers to create the endless string of ghost stories. When he was treating the members, he transported all the dead victims here to build a kingdom made purely from cadavers!

The Third Sick Hall had been abandoned five to six years ago, and it was then that the old director had disappeared behind the door.

According to the timeline, the society had been active in the city's shadow for about five to six years already. They had never brushed shoulders with the police but left many untraceable ghost stories around the city with their own creepy method. Chen Ge pulled down another picture from the wall. The victim was a woman who looked around twenty and had a smoking body. There were some notes on her picture as well.

"Wednesday, Patient 107.

"Diagnosis result: Depression and anorexia.

“Treatment method: Lowering estrogen and thyroxin, and raising corticosteroid hormone. Patient 107 suffers from both biological and mental pressure. Investigation reveals that she has been mocked by ‘her best friend’ since she was young. The solution is to make a special appetizer for the patient—the ingredient shall be her ‘best friend’.

“Follow-up: Patient 107’s anorexia has been treated, and the depression is recovering. However, it is suspected that now she is suffering from a new mental illness, and the symptom includes cooking all of her favorite things.

“Treatment method: To be considered. Suggest absorbing her into the society as a new member to start the second level of treatment.”

The second picture was describing the DJ who arrived at the society with Chen Ge—Lychee. The DJ would be on the air every Wednesday to talk about cooking and food. The treatment by the society is indeed insane. They are not curing people but creating demons, slowing pushing living people into hell.

Lychee was the perfect example. She suffered from anorexia, but she eventually got turned into a monster. Standing in the middle of the room, looking at the pictures on the wall, Chen Ge suddenly realized that the craziest person of all was actually the chairperson. To be able to create so many crazy events and then maintain his rationality and calmness to come up with new treatment plans and diagnoses, the man’s world was definitely different from a normal person’s.

Half of the missing people in Jiujiang are probably here.

Each picture represented a victim, but most of the victims had it coming. For example, that middle-aged man who tortured his own adopted daughter or Lychee’s childhood ‘best friend’.

Every death had a reason behind it, and a case could be made that they deserved to die, but this was not applicable on the side of the law. If these people were allowed to live, they would be the demon in the hearts of the patients forever. Therefore, they used the most direct way to even things out.

Initially, the ghost stories society might really have been a support group for a group of mental patients, but as time went on, things changed. Those who were crazy did not get saved, and the twisted worldview got normalized. They slowly thought that they were the normal ones. The insane people who rationalized themselves as the normal ones were often the scariest.

Chen Ge's eyes swept the group of pictures, and he could see a completely different human history that was covered with pain and struggle. After the white cat entered the room, it ran to the left wall and continued to call after Chen Ge.

Knowing that the cat had discovered something, Chen Ge searched the wall that was covered with pictures closely. He eventually found a hidden door handle. Pushing the door open, Chen Ge entered the third room. If the rooms outside were like display rooms, then this innermost room was probably the chairperson's office. Two tables were joined together, and there were various books and files in the room. Everything was arranged neatly.

The clean and neat environment created an illusion that they were inside an underground office. Flipping through the data and notes, the handwriting was beautiful, but the content was chilling. They were filled with various ghost stories, and behind each story was a human life.

These should be the crimes that the chairperson has committed for the past five to six years.

Chen Ge did not have the chance to look closer when the cat called again. It stopped before the bookshelf and started to walk in a circle.

There's another door? Chen Ge moved the shelf away, and as he expected, there was indeed another door. Pushing the door open, the cat did not enter but called endlessly at the threshold like it was trying to warn Chen Ge.

Seeing the weird reaction from the cat, Chen Ge did not rush to go in. He stood at the door and looked into the room. The room had a double bed, and the wall opposite the bed had several pictures.

The first picture had been taken during summer, it was already so long ago, and there were three children of differing ages inside the picture. The girl looked innocent and cute. Standing in the middle of the two boys, she looked helpless as she tried to stop the boys from arguing.

The second picture was taken during winter. The three who were now older stood under a building. The girl looked at the burning building, and she was crying. She wanted to run back into the building but was stopped by the two boys and the nearby adults.

The third picture was much clearer. The three children had all grown up. The girl had grown into a beauty. She carried her textbooks and sat in the middle of the two young men. She was talking with one of them while the other young man, who appeared rather awkward, moved his head away to focus on the glass on the table. The picture had been taken from the side, and one could see the glass captured the girl's reflection perfectly.

The fourth picture was a wedding photo. The awkward boy had disappeared, and only the pair remained.

The last picture was next to the wedding photo. There was only the girl inside the picture frame. This was a black-and-white picture of the girl who had passed away.

Seeing the row of pictures on the wall, Chen Ge had a feeling that he could not describe. Without knowing when he made the first step, he walked into the room and stopped before the few pictures. The truth that he had been looking for was before his eyes, but Chen Ge felt lost.

So, it is you.

...

He stared at the wedding photo silently, the young Doctor Gao looking back at him. The man in the picture had a bright and happy smile, but Chen Ge had never seen that smile on Doctor Gao's face before.

Is it because the things on his back are too heavy?

More than one hundred human lives formed a web to secure Doctor Gao tightly, and they were like needles pierced into his soul, making it difficult for him to breathe.

Three of them eventually turn into one—is this why the society is so obsessed with the number three?

Many clues lined up in his mind, but the first thing that popped up in Chen Ge's mind first was surprising. At the home of the girl who suffered from heavy depression, Doctor Gao had once said, "You have not gone through what they have, so you have no idea how hard it is. The fact that they have been able to survive is also a form of strength."

Thinking back, it felt like Doctor Gao was telling himself that. As the best psychologist in Jiujiang, he had to have known that he was already sick. However, he chose a different treatment method, not to compromise but to resist with the most drastic measure.

Walking to the bed, Chen Ge opened the bedside table's drawer. It was filled with syringes and pills of unknown usage. Many medicine bottles had warned about overdosing on their labels.

The packages were already opened, and this place is filled with dead bodies—the only living person is Doctor Gao—so this medicine should be for him.

When Xiaoxiao's grandfather was dying, Doctor Gao had also been present, and he had revealed the fact that he had considered suicide. Sitting on the double bed, Chen Ge placed his hands on top of one another, thinking back to everything that Doctor Gao had said.

That day in the room, after Doctor Gao said that his wife had gotten into a car accident, he added, that he loved his wife and then... Chen Ge stood up and looked at the door. Then Doctor Gao pushed the door open and walked out.

The white cat wandered outside the door and refused to enter the room. The thing that attracted it seemed to be at the threshold between the two rooms and the thing connecting them was a normal looking wooden door.

Could it be that Doctor Gao pushed a blood door open at the lowest point of his life?

This place that was hidden at the deepest part of the underground morgue was filled with medical equipment and many other weird things. Doctor Gao seemed like he was attempting to bring someone back from the dead. However, he had failed. Crushed by despair, he planned to end everything, but something happened that changed his mind. "Standing inside the deepest pool of despair, there's a great chance he opened a door that led to the blood red world."

Chen Ge looked at the wedding dress. The woman in the picture appeared in Ma Yin's video, but in the picture, she looked lively and had a unique presence about her.

The dead has returned—that's something that is only possible due to the things behind the door.

Chen Ge understood what was attracting the white cat. The blood that it had swallowed came from behind the door, so it was those things that were attracting it.

The blood door appeared at midnight, and the black phone's mission required me to enter the central hub before midnight. Does this mean that the real mission location is really behind the door?

Just the morgue in the real world had given Chen Ge plenty of pressure, much less the world behind the door.

The world behind the door is much more dangerous than the outside world. Since the black phone did not state that I have to enter the door, I might as well hide in this room until dawn.

He knew that the completion rate would not be high that way, but compared to solving secrets and finding the truth, Chen Ge valued his life more. He sat at the table and flipped open the notebook. He used his phone to snap pictures of all the important stuff. The ghost society had created multiple ghost stories, and all the scares were jotted down in the notebooks. A whole table of notes and data, this was a treasure trove for Chen Ge.

If I can recover all these ghost stories, it'll greatly improve the content of my Haunted House; it could lay the foundation for a terror theme park.

Chen Ge sat on the chair and started studying. Time ticked by, and the white cat called nervously. It wandered between the two rooms like the thing it had been waiting for was about to appear.

At 11:55 pm, the table shook. There were still five minutes to midnight, and the central hub had started to change. The walls trembled, and blood leaked from the walls. Li Jiu and Ma Wei tumbled into the room. They did not dare to speak loudly, so they crowded Chen Ge to give him the updates.

“Brother, things are not looking good! The ‘moss’ outside is leaking blood; you need to go and take a look!”

“Leaking blood?” Chen Ge glanced at the time and followed the two out. The moss that grew on the ceiling, floor, and walls started to drip. Red liquid leaked out from the walls, and the scariest thing was following behind it.

After the ‘moss’ fell off, it revealed the dead bodies that it had been hiding!

The victims’ faces showed themselves. The room that was built from dead bodies finally revealed its true form at midnight. Li Jiu and Ma Wei were flabbergasted. They had no idea behind the thick ‘moss’ was a wall made from pure cadavers.

Their lips fell open, but no words came out. Cold air rushed into their throat, freezing their lungs.

“Move back.” With his Yin Yang Vision and Ghost Ear, Chen Ge’s senses were sharper than normal people. When Li Jiu and Ma Wei were in shock, he had realized that something was wrong. There were things coming from the other end of the corridors, and there were many of them!

Shouldn't be from the secret tunnels.

The walls, ceiling, everywhere they looked—there were dead bodies everywhere.

Red liquid seeped from their bodies, and Chen Ge could clearly see the thread of blood snaking through the dead bodies like viper, tying them together.

As midnight approach, more blood threads leaked out from the bodies—the number had reached an impossible stage.

“Brother, what should we do now?” Li Jiu and Ma Wei had not experienced something like this before, so the fact that they had not fainted directly was a miracle. There were still two minutes left until midnight, and the blood threads mixed with the red liquid, so one could not distinguish one from the other. Things only got worse. The blood threads were used to stabilize the dead bodies inside the walls. When the threads loosened and moved, the whole central hub shook like there was an earthquake.

“Come in here first.” Chen Ge pulled Ma Wei and Li Jiu into the room. He stood alone at the door, holding the handle. Midnight was coming, and the outside corridors had undergone various changes. The dead bodies that were sewn into the walls seemed to have lost some limitation. Arms fell from the ceiling, and they shook with the whole scenario.

...

If this gets moved to the Haunted House, I doubt anyone would survive it.

When Chen Ge moved his gaze, the eyes of the dead bodies suddenly opened!

The dead opened their eyes?

The eyes of the dead bodies were different from normal people. They had no pupils, or rather, the pupils had completely dissolved, and their eyes were a layer of something yellowish-brown. Thankfully, Chen Ge had a greater threshold for fear than most, and he could still maintain eye contact with the bodies calmly. However, what happened next caused even Chen Ge to panic.

More eyes opened in the dark. These were victims of the ghost stories society, and even now, they were still part of the society. The faces woke up from their slumber. Their faces twisted, and their bodies lost the humanoid shape. Their necks were turned in weird angles as they looked at Chen Ge. This was a hard scene to describe. Endless twisted arms and elongated necks reached toward Chen Ge. The caved-in heads opened their jaws as they moved toward him.

Chen Ge's back was covered with cold sweat. He tried his best to stay calm, and that was because his courage had been honed from completing the missions given by the black phone over the past two months. If he had seen this before he received the black phone, then he probably would have fainted.

Is this what a complete three-star scenario looks like?

His body stepped backward subconsciously. Chen Ge gripped the hammer, and it gave him a sense of security. When there was one minute left until midnight, the whole hub felt like it had come alive. All of the bodies had been awoken. The walls collapsed as the dead bodies crawled out from it. There were even cadavers that fell out from the ceiling. Their bodies were sewn together by red threads, and most of the body parts were attached even though they looked like they were falling apart.

Chen Ge now understood how scary the society's lair was, and he had a new understanding of Doctor Gao, who was behind all of this. As the chairperson of the ghost stories society, to be able to come up with the treatment methods for so many mental patients and murderous madmen, Doctor Gao was truly the scariest existence.

In the day, he was the best psychologist in Jiujiang, concerned about his patients, a flawless man. But at night, he stayed with the cadavers and used the victims' bodies to build an underground lab. This contrasting lifestyle somehow existed within the same man. The scariest thing was that he had lived this life for five years, and in these five years, no one had suspected him. "How did he do it?"

The cadavers rushed at them in waves. It was impossible for them to leave. Chen Ge could only retreat into the room and lock the door from the inside. "Come with me, don't ask anything. Whenever I order you to do something, just do it."

The cadavers seemed to be afraid of this door—they did not dare get too close. However, the bodies at the back pushed them forward, and the death masks would imprint themselves on the door.

"Don't just stand there, come on!" The steel door creaked noisily; Chen Ge had no idea how long it could last. He returned to the innermost room, staring at the time on his phone, he stood before the door quietly. Midnight finally arrived. Blood bloomed on the wooden door like roses. The heavy stench of blood leaked from behind the door, and it soon dyed the whole door red. Ma Wei and Li Jiu had not seen something like this before. What they had experienced that night stunned them. Their brains were running on autopilot, and all they knew then was to follow Chen Ge.

“What I’m saying next is very important so listen closely. You have two choices—either you follow me through that door or stay here and await your deaths,” Chen Ge said seriously. He picked up the agitated white cat and used the hammer to push the door open.

The smell of blood swallowed them like a wave. Ma Wei and Li Jiu dry heaved from the smell. Their faces were white, but they still followed closely behind Chen Ge. “Since you’re willing to take this risk with me, I shall give you another reminder.”

Chen Ge pointed at the half-open blood door. “Based on my understanding of the blood door, if there is no one holding the door open, it will close on its own after one minute, and it can only be opened after twenty-four hours. You’d better be prepared.”

Having been inside the door before, Chen Ge knew that only the door-pusher could control the door. The door-pusher in Coffin Village was the ghost in the well, and the door-pusher at the Third Sick Hall was Men Nan. Neither of them meant to harm Chen Ge, so after the mission was completed, they had helped Chen Ge open the door to let him return to the real world. However, this time was different. He was in an opposing situation with the chairperson.

After Chen Ge entered the door, no matter the result, the opponent would not open the door and let him leave. Therefore, Chen Ge would need to wait until the following midnight to leave.

If this is just to avoid the danger, there shouldn’t be too much of a problem. The world behind the door is scary, but the door-pusher, Doctor Gao, is not in Jiujiang. This is just like how the Third Sick Hall was after losing Men Nan—the level of danger will be greatly lowered.

When Chen Ge was ruminating, the steel door outside collapsed. The blood vessels crawled on the ground, and the cadavers crawled into the room. Without wasting any time, Chen Ge led Li Jiu and Ma Wei into the door.

I properly prepare every time I go on a Trial Mission, but even so, accidents cannot be avoided. Chen Ge looked at the dead bodies outside, and his eyes were filled with complicated emotions. The dead bodies controlled by blood threads were different from Specters. Even if he unleashed all of his employees, it would have been pointless.

Perhaps that is Doctor Gao's aim, and that's why he did all of this. Chen Ge realized the another limitation of Specters, but he soon recovered. Normal Specters might not do anything to dead bodies, but Red Specter could be the exception. If I had enough Red Specters, I would have no reason to be afraid of these cadavers.

Chen Ge was never overconfident, but he would not give up easily. In this Trial Mission, he had found himself a new target.

Chapter 436 - Doctor Gao's World

Chapter 436: Doctor Gao's World

Before the cadavers reached them, Chen Ge closed the door. Once the blood door closed, the blood fog stuck to Chen Ge, forming a very thin membrane.

The world here seems to be different from the Third Sick Hall and Coffin Village.

...

Chen Ge touched the thin membrane on his skin. It felt like his whole person had been enveloped. It brought difficulty to his breathing, and he felt very uncomfortable.

This did not happen when I was at Coffin Village and the Third Sick Hall.

He was feeling panicked. He took out the comic and realized that there was a thin blood membrane covering it as well. Walking to the corner, Chen Ge called Yan Danian and Ol' Zhou, but neither replied. Chen Ge opened his backpack and activated the recorder. However, no matter how hard he pressed, the recorder would not operate normally. Even the sound of static could not be heard.

Is the blood membrane preventing the connection between me and the Specters?

Gripping the hammer, Chen Ge resisted the urge to lash out.

I've seen the female ghost control the blood mist behind the door at Coffin Village, and Men Nan also disappeared into the blood fog in the Third Sick Hall, so the door-pusher can control the blood mist.

The blood membrane covered me once I entered the door. Is this a trap laid out by Doctor Gao, or has he not left Jiujiang and used some kind of Specter to trick the police? Is he currently hiding here and controlling the blood mist?"

Doctor Gao was the enemy that Chen Ge was the most unwilling to face—this was true from multiple aspects.

The longer we stay here, the thicker the membrane will get. This is troublesome.

Losing the Specters, Chen Ge could only rely on the hammer and the white cat, so things were not looking good for him. Slightly unsettled, Chen Ge squatted down to look at his shadow. He reached out to touch it, and the shadow was not affected by the blood membrane.

She's still here.

Feeling reassured, he tried to call Zhang Ya, and someone seemed to reply. However, the distance between them was very far. Even when he used Ghost Ear, he could not hear it clearly.

“What is this place? I can’t even breathe.” Ma Wei and Li Jiu were also covered by the membrane, but weirdly enough, they could not see it. However, they kept scratching their neck like there was an invisible noose there.

“Don’t panic. Keep calm no matter what happens.” Chen Ge then pushed on the handle and opened the door again. One minute had passed, and it was a preposterous and scary world beyond the door. The twisted road looked like a small intestine, and the walls were protruding outward like some kind of organ. Everything was covered with a thin layer of membrane. On the ceiling, there was a messy layer of blood vessels. Blood could be seen running through them. This place looked like it was a weird living organism.

Is this how Doctor Gao views the world? Just how twisted does a person have to be to imagine the world in this manner? What is on Doctor Gao’s mind?

The door at Coffin Village had been pushed open by the female ghost. In her eyes, all the villagers were malformed freaks, and the greatest desire within her then was to escape and not be discovered. Therefore, the world behind her door was had a thick fog and a visibility of about one to two meters. The villagers looked as she imagined them to be, human-shaped monsters.

In the same vein, in the door behind the Third Sick Hall, the patients were like zombies, the broken hands that symbolized fear hid under the bed, and thin monsters that symbolized desire roamed the place. They were how Men Nan viewed the world—these complicated emotions became monsters in the boys’ eyes.

The underground morgue was the third door that Chen Ge had entered. It was also the scariest and the one that confused Chen Ge the most.

The door will not lie; this is how Doctor Gao really thinks. Chen Ge turned back to look. Even after the world changed into an organ, this room with his wife's pictures hasn't changed. This should be the last oasis in his heart.

Grabbing the hammer, Chen Ge thought about it before removing the pictures from the wall carefully and placing them in his backpack. When he pulled open the zipper, Chen Ge was surprised to find a detached head inside his backpack. He had almost forgotten about this. The head was hiding at the bottom of the bag, and it looked like it was shivering.

Chen Ge touched its face before pulling it out. This is weird. The thing is not covered by the blood membrane. Is it because it belongs to the underground morgue?

The sudden appearance of a human head almost caused Li Jiu and Ma Wei to faint. After they made sure it was just a plastic model, they sighed in relief. However, what happened next made them worried again.

Chen Ge placed the head on the double bed and raised the hammer and stood before the head. "Tell me how to remove this membrane. Tell me everything you know!"

The room became very quiet. Other than Chen Ge, no one dared say anything. The expression on the face changed. Chen Ge heard a very faded plea. It's speaking?

Ghost Ear came into use. Chen Ge put down the hammer and placed the head beside his ear and asked the same question. A voice from an indeterminate direction came into Chen Ge's ear, and it sounded like it was crying. The voice only lasted for a brief minute. Chen Ge had to pay close attention before he realized that it was saying one word on repeat—"Approval."

Placing the head back down, Chen Ge ruminated on the meaning of the word. Could it mean that I need to gain the approval of this world to remove the blood membrane? I am the chairperson's nemesis, so that is almost impossible.

Chen Ge shoved the head back into his backpack and made his first step into the world beyond the door. His shoes stepped on the ground, and it felt like he was stepping on flesh. It was very soft, slippery, and somewhat sticky. It was not a great experience. If a normal person entered a corridor like this, they would probably be scarred for life.

“Don’t force yourselves, but it’s best if you follow me.” Chen Ge took the second step. Blood flowed across the vessel that was above his head, and the road underneath his feet would occasionally shiver.

The layout is similar to that of the real world, but the walls, ceiling, and everything in sight have been changed into flesh and blood.

Chen Ge took a deep breath. He placed the cat on the backpack and walked down the corridor.

Chapter 437: Do You Need Help?

The walls twitched like they were alive. A light mist seeped out from them to surround Chen Ge's body, thickening the membrane on his skin. The world behind the door seemed to mimic how reality was when the door was first opened. The layout there was completely identical to the underground morgue. The central hub was used to collect organs and fat. In reality, it was sealed due to various reasons and had been transformed into a unique lab by Doctor Gao using the cadavers as building blocks.

"Once you get used to it, it's nothing scary," Chen Ge said that for the benefit of Ma Wei and Li Jiu. They made a few attempts but failed to leave the room. When Chen Ge looked at them, they shook their heads vehemently. "This is indeed too much for normal people."

...

Chen Ge pointed at the room behind them and walked ahead on his own. The strange world, corridors made from flesh, blood mist everywhere—this place was like a nightmare that one could not wake up from.

The lamp in the ceiling became a human eyeball and did not release any light. Stay there long enough, and one would assume that they were originally from this place and were part of this world. The sides of the corridor had doors that were covered in blood vessels. Chen Ge opened a few of them, and they were filled with machines that he could not identify. Most of them were made from flesh, but some of them were normal machines covered with flesh and blood.

Such a crazy world.

After he turned the corner, Chen Ge saw a living person. Standing about five meters in front of him was a little girl in a white dress, squatting next to the wall. She had a red apple in her hands, but her eyes were focused on the organs that were dancing inside the wall. It was unclear what she was thinking about.

The girl surprised Chen Ge. Be it the pure white dress or the innocent-looking face, the girl formed a great contrast to this fleshy world. Why would a girl like that appear in such a world?

Chen Ge walked out from the corner and slowly moved forward. When the girl heard his footsteps, she was spooked like a deer caught in headlights. She turned in a fluster and ran away. The apple that she held fell to the floor. Chen Ge looked at the apple that rolled to his feet, and he bent down to pick it up.

The apple looked delicious, but it felt weird in his palm. It was slippery and soft. Chen Ge also swore that he could feel it pulsing.

Is this a real apple?

When Chen Ge picked up the apple, the girl was worried. She wanted to take it back from Chen Ge, but she was too afraid.

Something's not right.

Chen Ge placed the apple back down and moved back several steps. Seeing this, the girl immediately ran away and hugged the apple against her chest. Her face was the size of a palm. Combined with that expression of panic and relief, she looked so cute.

“Don’t worry, I don’t mean to harm you. I’m just lost.” Chen Ge maintained his distance from the girl. In reality, he was also guarding against the girl. After all, she was a resident here.

The girl was still anxious like a girl who had wandered a bit too far from home to play and was now approached by a stranger. She was trying to find a way to escape. Chen Ge could see that he was making the girl panic. He did not force his way forward. None of the Specters could be used, and if he pushed the girl too far, it was hard to tell who would lose.

Taking another step back, Chen Ge placed the hammer back inside his backpack. “I just want to ask you some questions.”

The handle was exposed at a spot where Chen Ge could grab it easily. If there was danger, he could pull it out in a second. The girl looked at Chen Ge but refused to get close to him. Holding the fleshy wall, she walked away from Chen Ge cautiously before turning and running away.

Chen Ge did not give chase. After the girl left, he was shocked to realize that his breathing had gotten smoother, and the blood membrane covering him had gotten thinner.

I have not done anything but help the girl pick up her apple. Will helping them gain me this world's approval?

Due to the lacking clues, Chen Ge could not be certain. He proceeded in the direction that the girl had run off in.

The child doesn't look like a dead body. She is agile and has vibrant facial expressions.

Chen Ge relaxed with the girl's appearance.

This world might be scary, but the residents here have maintained their humanity. I saw desire and fear in the girl's eyes—only humans can possess such complicated emotions.

Each world behind the door was different. Chen Ge was most afraid a massacre-filled world where the residents would kill without reason.

Looks like there's still hope.

The world behind the door reflected the heart of the door-pusher. The world was made of flesh and blood, but the residents had the appearance of living individuals. This contrast left a deep impression on Chen Ge. Exploring the world was actually no different from understanding the door-pusher. This was a valuable chance to get to know the person.

Chen Ge followed the girl to the end of the corridor. He pushed the door open and exited the central hub to enter the middle section. The blood mist was heavier there, and the walls were uneven, looking more like human organs.

There were three rooms in the middle section and each room had a cadaver pool. There was even a plaque on the door. 'To thank the selfless contribution of the cadavers, we should give them the utmost respect. I, as a medical student, make this solemn promise to treat every class seriously and will not take any pictures for entertainment purposes.'

The words on the plaque are not yet dry. They look new. Chen Ge glanced through the glass on the door. The pool was filled with a red-brownish liquid, but there was no cadaver in it.

The most urgent thing is to find the 'people' living here. That way, I can destroy this blood membrane and unlock my employees.

Chen Ge did not enter the room. He was about to leave the middle section when he heard a man's voice. It seemed to come from one of the autopsy rooms on the left.

"Life's meaning is not to do with anything material but what you've done. When you stand before the autopsy table, everything you see is just skin, fat, blood vessels, muscles, organs, and bones—do you understand?"

Chen Ge walked up to the room. The door was half-open, so he peaked into the room.

There was a male lecturer standing before the table. He was wearing a white coat, and his voice was stable and powerful. He was lecturing eight students in the room.

Chapter 438 - Liu Zhengyi

Chapter 438: Liu Zhengyi

With the mask covering most of his face, the male lecturer walked through the two groups of students with a glow in his eyes. “This is your first class, so feelings of nausea and curiosity are normal, but do not let me catch you making jokes at the cadaver’s expense. They deserve our respect. Inside this room, every death is so that the living could keep on living. What you should be focusing on now is the connection of the nerves, the arrangement of the blood vessels, the joints of the muscle, and the placement of organs.”

Only the male lecturer was speaking inside the room. He did not look old, but he was quite stern. Western Jiujiang Medical University had the biggest underground morgue, so probably only the students here had the privilege of being in such small groups to conduct autopsies on one cadaver. Due to the lack of resources, most medical universities had eight or even sixteen people per group.

...

Chen Ge stood outside the door to watch over all of this silently. He followed the male lecturer and felt like he had seen him somewhere before. “That pair of eyes is familiar. I think I’ve seen them inside Morgue No. 8 earlier.”

After some ruminating, he remembered that there was a cadaver soaked inside the glass tube of Morgue No. 8, and the special thing about that cadaver was that its eyes were open. Are the dead bodies that are soaked in formalin in real life reborn within the door? Is this part of Doctor Gao’s imagination, or has he trapped the dead’s spirits here?

The blood membrane on his body thickened. Just as Chen Ge was hesitating over whether to enter the room or not, he heard heavy breathing echoing down from the other end of the corridor. A smelly draft blew past him. Following that, the organs embedded in the wall started to pulse rhythmically. What is coming?

There was a monster coming from the other end of the corridor. The feeling it elicited in Chen Ge was completely different from the white-dress girl and the male lecturer. It was filled with negative emotions like destruction, murder, and anger.

The white cat scratched Chen Ge's shoulders, and its ears tipped backward. It hissed in a low voice; it also felt threatened. When Chen Ge's attention was fully on the corridor, the door to the autopsy room suddenly opened. Chen Ge turned to look and realized that the male lecturer was standing next to it and was studying Chen Ge curiously.

"I..." Before Chen Ge could come up with a reason, the male lecturer pulled him into the room.

"Come in first." Then he closed the door and said, "Go and hide. Don't let it see you."

The breathing neared in the corridor. With the urging from the male lecturer, Chen Ge crawled under one of the tables. It was a platform that could be raised, normally used to raise or lower cadavers.

When Chen Ge got into the room, he realized that the eight students were all cadavers as well. They had their heads lowered and their frozen fingers holding the scalpels in weird manners. No wonder they didn't respond. This teacher is most likely also a madman.

Chen Ge hesitated before crawling under the table.

The commotion was getting louder outside. The heavy breathing came closer, and Chen Ge glanced out through the gap in the walls. The blood vessels pulsed heavily. Soon, a humanoid creature with its face carved out walked by. Its body was much more muscular than normal, and it was about 2.4 meters tall, its head almost touching the ceiling.

The man's body structure was different from the girl Chen Ge saw earlier. Instead, it mimicked the walls. Its skin was just a thin membrane enveloping the inner organs, meaning Chen Ge could see into his body. The monster walked slowly. It seemed to have incorporated itself into this world and was just patrolling aimlessly.

The corridor shook and the monster paused when it passed the autopsy room. The faceless thing turned toward the door. Even though he was inside the room, Chen Ge could feel the door shake violently. After the monster realized that the door was locked, it went away. Several minutes later, Chen Ge crawled out from the table.

"What was that?" The male lecturer had been hiding behind the door. He did not answer Chen Ge's question but studied him with a strange gaze. After a while, he removed the mask. His facial features looked similar to the human face soaked in formalin in the real world.

“That’s the new security guard hired by the school. He’s quite a fiery one. If he discovers students like you who run away from class, he will most likely take you to see the headmaster.”

“Students? Headmaster?” Chen Ge did not quite understand what he said. The world in the male lecturer’s eyes seemed to be different from what Chen Ge was seeing, and the next sentence out of the lecturer’s lips confirmed that.

“Which class are you from? Who is your lecturer?” The lecturer did not get mad when Chen Ge did not answer. “It’s fine if you don’t feel like answering, but truancy is not good. Quickly get back to class. I know how a child like yourself might feel—I’ve come across many sensitive students.”

“A child like me? Do I look like a child?” Chen Ge was confused, but he could hear kindness in the lecturer’s voice. The tone used by the man when he talked to Chen Ge was different from when he talked to his own students. It was as if he was afraid of harming Chen Ge’s pride.

“A physical deformity doesn’t prove anything; a courageous heart is more important.”

The lecturer seemed to be consoling Chen Ge, and this confused him even more. “I’m deformed in your eyes?”

“It’s my mistake for misusing the word. I apologize to you, but please go back to class.” The lecturer, who had been berating his class earlier, changed his tone. It was obvious that he was indeed a good man. From the man’s various reactions, Chen Ge believed that he understood what was happening. In the lecturer’s eyes, the world that was made from flesh was the normal one, and someone with his appearance was the deformed one.

Chen Ge had no idea how the world presented itself in the lecturer’s eyes, but he tried to gain more information from the man. “Sir, how should I refer to you?”

“My name is Liu Zhengyi; you can call me Mr. Liu. If you face any problems in the future and have no one to go to, you can come to me.”

Mr. Liu was probably just being kind, but Chen Ge did not plan to let that chance slip. He slid the hammer back into his backpack. After some hesitation, he said, “Mr. Liu, actually, I’ve been bullied by people at the school, but I don’t dare share the secrets with anyone.”

“School bullying? Such a thing happened here?” Mr. Liu turned serious, and his tone immediately changed. “Don’t be afraid, tell me everything. I will definitely help you settle everything!”

Chapter 439 - Touch of Death

Chapter 439: Touch of Death

Chen Ge did not expect it to go so successfully—he had just wanted to make himself look vulnerable so that it would be easier to endear himself to the man. Who knew that Mr. Liu would be so direct, ask for the culprit, and be so ready to represent him?

He's a good teacher. Chen Ge sincerely thought this Liu Zhengyi was not bad. The Haunted House currently needs someone to manage the mannequins; he looks like the perfect candidate.

...

After sighing, Chen Ge did not instantly answer Mr. Liu's question. Instead, he whispered, "Sir, I know you mean well, but I cannot say."

"Are you afraid they'll retaliate for being a tattle-tale?" Mr. Liu frowned. "Then have you considered that the more you refuse the resist, the weaker you'll become in their eyes, creating a vicious cycle?"

Chen Ge lowered his head like he was seriously considering what Mr. Liu said.

"Don't be afraid, I'll help you," Mr. Liu promised, and he was ready to take action. After a while, Chen Ge slowly raised his head like he had come to a decision. "Mr. Liu, this involves many people, and then you'll realize the students and even colleagues around you have a side you don't know. You are a good person; I don't want to drag you into this mess."

"Involves many people? I know most people at this school; they wouldn't do something like that." Mr. Liu had a great sense of justice, but he was not dumb. After thinking about it, he said, "Other than the headmaster, there are only six teachers, not including myself, and a few experienced clinical doctors. Based on my understanding of them, they would not be involved in something like bullying students."

Chen Ge kept his head lowered, memorizing everything that Mr. Liu said.

“Minus the teachers, there are only students, security guards, and general staff.” Mr. Liu thought about it but could not come up with an answer. However, Chen Ge did not look like he was lying.

“Sir, these people look a certain way before you, but they change when you are not around. They are wolves under sheep’s clothing.” Chen Ge’s fists tightened when he said that, and the words were squeezed through his teeth. Seeing that, Mr. Liu felt sorry for Chen Ge.

“I cannot drag you down with me, but if there’s a chance, I’ll personally expose those people for you to see.” Chen Ge was not joking—he had sensed endless malice from that security guard earlier. The security guard who had merged with the world was not interested in Mr. Liu, but if he saw Chen Ge, he would attack relentlessly. Mr. Liu would then see the real face of these ‘people’.

“Alright then.” Mr. Liu did not force Chen Ge to continue. He walked back to the students and continued the class. Chen Ge was quite bored. The longer he stayed, the thicker the membrane became.

Mr. Liu is a nice person. I can make use of this chance to verify my speculation about whether helping the souls behind the door can help me gain the world’s approval or not.

He walked toward Mr. Liu, but before he got close, Mr. Liu stopped him. “No one is allowed to come near the autopsy table without the proper equipment.”

“Sir, I just want to see whether there’s anything that I can help you with.”

“Thanks, but as long as you focus in class and use that knowledge to help other people in the future, that is the biggest help you can give me.” Mr. Liu looked at Chen Ge and shook his head. “There are lab coats in the decontamination closet, go and put one on. You can attend this class for now, but after class is over, I’ll go with you to find your teacher.”

“Okay.” Chen Ge put on the coat and the heavy mask. He walked to the autopsy table and stood next to the four dead students, looking at the cadaver on the table. Before Chen Ge entered, the room had only had Liu Zhengyi—the rest were all dead bodies. When he thought about it, that was quite scary.

Liu Zhengyi gave his lecture to a class of dead people and would gesture at the cadaver. There was a textbook on the table, but Chen Ge did not understand most of the medical terms. He turned the page to one with pictures and graphs. He studied it and understood about thirty percent of it.

After a long time, the cadaver on the table was still the same, and the students were all dead bodies, so of course, they did not reach out to touch the cadaver. However, Mr. Liu did not seem to notice any of that.

Chen Ge was at least given a valuable class in autopsy. When he completed his first Nightmare Mission, he had been given a talent, Mortician's Make-up. A good mortician should be familiar with human anatomy and dead bodies. Chen Ge grabbed the scalpel from the student next to him and steadied his breathing.

Only through practice could he know that he had learned something from Mr. Liu. The first step of the autopsy was to separate the skin. Chen Ge's hand that held the scalpel was steady. Initially, Mr. Liu thought about giving Chen Ge some pointers, but after Chen Ge finished scouring the cadaver's skin, he stood to the side and watched silently.

The scalpel ran up the neck, and the incision started at the occipital point. The knife cut through the scalp and severed the hair. When the hair was snipped, and the sound echoed in the room, Chen Ge's heart beat with its rhythm. This was the first time that he had come into such close contact with a cadaver and in this manner.

The cadaver's skin was thick from long submersion in formalin. It was like cow hide, completely lifeless. Chen Ge felt death so clearly and closely for the first time that he would remember this feeling forever.

After death, every emotion and desire changes into regrets, and my Haunted House is the place where all these regrets collect.

Following the autopsy, the blood membrane became thinner and his breathing easier.

Mr. Liu would occasionally correct Chen Ge's mistakes. Initially, Chen Ge was very irregular in his actions and made many mistakes, but his learning capability surprised Mr. Liu. The autopsy only went halfway. When Chen Ge prepared to continue, he realized that the blood membrane would not thin anymore.

What's going on? Chen Ge put the scalpel down. He had planned to remove the membrane fully in this room. He lifted his head to look. Mr. Liu, who stood not far from him, was spacing out. The floor underneath his feet that was made from flesh had blood vessels squirmed about, and it crawled into his eyes.

The blood pulsed underneath the skin, and gradually, Mr. Liu's eyes turned blood red, filled with blood vessels.

Losing control, the man seemed to morph into a different person. He moved his body slowly to remove the cadaver from the table. He put the lab coat on it and then moved one of the students to replace its place on the autopsy table.

After he was done, he turned to look at the table where Chen Ge was standing.

The bloodshot eyes moved down the group, and he seemed to be wondering why there was an extra person.

Chapter 440: Five Types

The membrane was still there, so Chen Ge could not summon his employees. He had left his hammer near the closet when he got changed, so he could not grab it at short notice. Wearing the coat and thick mask, Chen Ge mixed into the group of students. He stopped everything he was doing.

His legs surrounded by blood vessels, his eyes red, Mr. Liu walked around his students. With a heavy mist of blood around him, Mr. Liu was under something's control and had lost his rationality. He could not make his own choice, and whenever he tried to think for himself, his brain felt like it was about to explode.

His hands pulling out his hair, Mr. Liu punched his own body, and the organs embedded in the walls pulsed following his changing emotions. The heavy breathing returned to the corridor. The monster slowly returned. It was so tall, and its skin was near transparent. It wore the blood vessels like a second skin.

The corridor shook slightly, and Mr. Liu slowly calmed down. He glanced outside, and without hesitation, he grabbed one of the students and dragged them to the door. The blood dripped silently. Through the door's window, Chen Ge saw a mouth open in the middle of the monster's stomach, and Mr. Liu pushed the student into it.

The monster was enjoying this process, and when he was done, his body grew bigger. After the student disappeared, the monster did not leave. The empty face looked through the window like it was not satisfied and wanted more.

Mr. Liu slammed the door shut, not stepping out of the classroom. After clearing away the student, he returned to the table. He removed the cadaver, put the coat on it, and then moved the student next to Chen Ge onto the table.

Everything was the same as when Chen Ge first stepped into the room, but now, he had replaced one of the students. The blood vessels around Mr. Liu's legs slowly retreated, and the red in his eyes dissipated. When the wall stopped pulsing, Mr. Liu's eyes regained their clarity.

He held his chest and collapsed on the ground, gasping for air like a drowning victim who had just been saved. Chen Ge rushed over to help Mr. Liu. His face was blanched, and his body seemed to have become slightly more transparent.

"Are you okay?"

"It's just an old ailment." Liu Zhengyi stood up. He seemed to have forgotten everything and treated Chen Ge as his student. "Okay, let's continue the class."

He repeated the lesson to a room of cadavers. He lectured passionately, basically to himself. Chen Ge tried to ask whether he needed help.

Mr. Liu's answer was the same. However, this time, when Chen Ge tried to follow Mr. Liu's instructions to conduct the autopsy, the blood membrane did not thin. This blood world was really unique. It was like a living organism with its own consciousness that allowed it to correct the loopholes.

If I stay here too long, I might be discovered. Chen Ge felt pressured. He needed to solve the blood membrane problem before he was discovered. Putting the scalpel down, Chen Ge called out, "Sir, I need to use the toilet."

"Come back quick." Mr. Liu was communicating with his students, so he did not pay Chen Ge much attention. When Chen Ge walked past him, he suddenly remembered something. He looked at Chen Ge with curiosity. "Student, did you tell me something earlier? I feel like I've promised you something."

"Sir, remember this face. I believe we'll meet again soon." Chen Ge wore the coat, picked up the white cat from his backpack, and left immediately. There was no blood in the corridor. If not for the fact that he had seen it with his own eyes, Chen Ge would not have believed that a 'murder' had taken place there several minutes earlier.

Liu Zhengyi has accidentally revealed some important information to me. There are five types of 'people' in the underground morgue—the headmaster, teachers, students, security, and general staff.

The blood world has changed Liu Zhengyi's worldview. In his mind, everything here has been normalized, but what do these five types represent in real life?

Liu Zhengyi himself is a teacher; they have their memory and professional skills. Most importantly, they retain their human image and even their personality in life.

Students should be the cadavers. They do not resist or speak; they should be the most common in this world.

I've seen the security. They look like a composite of many body parts. They have fully accepted this world and help to maintain order.

The general staff should be the victims of the ghost stories society. If their spirits linger in the real world after their death, Doctor Gao most likely drags them into this world to serve it.

Lastly, the headmaster must be Doctor Gao. He represents the consciousness of this world.

Five types of people made up this twisted world. It was impossible for Chen Ge to face them alone. This three-star scenario sure is something else.

Different from the cautious Chen Ge, the usually cowardly white cat charged ahead with a glow in its eyes. Feels like this cat has grown bigger.

Arming himself with the hammer, Chen Ge followed closely behind the white cat. They exited the middle section and reached the largest part of the morgue, the outer perimeter.

"Stop running!" Chen Ge grabbed the white cat and placed it on his backpack. He stopped at the corner of the corridor and peered down. At the junction between the outer perimeter and the middle section was a sealed door. There was the number eight written on the door.

Morgue No. 8, which is not in the school records, exists in the world behind the door? Looks like this place did exist once in real life but was hidden for some reason.

Chen Ge pulled on the chains that had blood stains on them. He looked at the lock for a long time.

This lock is different from the one that I've seen before. Hacking through it will be difficult.

Smashing through the lock would create too much of a commotion, so even though Chen Ge was curious about what was behind it, with the blood membrane still around him, that was not a good idea.

Once I can communicate with my people, I can come back with the employees. Judging by the fact that they went through to trouble of hiding these things, they should be valuable to me.

Remembering the location of Morgue No. 8, Chen Ge did not stay any longer and continued to proceed down the corridor.

In the fleshy corridor, the organs pulsed inside the wall, various vessels crossed the ceiling, and occasionally, blood would seep through. Compared to when Chen Ge first entered the place, the world behind the door started to change like a sleeping person slowly waking up. Walking down the hall, Chen Ge heard the conversation between two people coming out of Morgue No. 7.

“I hear the experiment failed again.”

...

“Yes, they’re all dead. No one survived to leave that room. It’s so scary. I hope it’s never my turn.”

“You wish, I predict we’ll be part of the next batch. Did you realize there have been a lack of newcomers lately?”

“I did. Perhaps that’s the reason the experiments are getting more frequent—something has happened outside.”

“Actually, I pity that body. Loved by a madman and has to endure the torture even after death, never to acquire actual peace.”

“Shush, that is not something we can discuss. Focus on the work.”

Chen Ge glanced into the room—it was two monsters chatting. They had the shape of a human and face of a human, but their bodies were glued together like putty. If not for the red threads, they would have crumbled already. When Chen Ge saw the two monsters’ faces, he was quite shocked.

Even though the bodies were probably an amalgamation, the faces were theirs. Chen Ge had seen them inside the room filled with pictures. Both of them were the society’s victims. One of them was Patient 41’s father, the middle-aged man who had tortured his child.

Chen Ge did not rush into Morgue No. 7. His brain turned—what he had seen confirmed his speculation. These two should be the general staff mentioned by Liu Zhengyi—they were formed from the lingering spirit of the society's victims and served the 'headmaster'.

From how Chen Ge viewed it, the ghost stories society was an organization with no bottom line. Even after death, they captured the victim's lingering spirit to force them into labor.

Wait a while longer. I will save all of you. Chen Ge gripped the hammer and squatted down on the corridor. He focused on Morgue No. 7 with his Yin Yang Vision. The two monsters pulled up the blood cloth covering the ground. Underneath it were plenty of cadavers. They looked like they had been transported here from outside. They placed the cadavers on the trolley, facing the door of the freezer.

"Ready, open the freezer." One of the monsters stood next to the freezer nervously. It took a deep breath, extended its arm that had plenty of sewing marks, and pulled open the lock on the freezer.

When the lock slid off, the thick door of the freezer was shoved open, and countless thick blood vessels sprung out like giant cobras. The other monster, who was experienced, immediately pushed the trolley forward. The vessels covered the cadavers like octopus tentacles and dragged the cadavers into the darkness.

"Quick close the door!"

The two monsters cooperated to close the door, but an accident happened then. One of the blood vessels slithered out from the gap and curled around one of the monsters' arm. The vessel had something like looked like a toothed orifice on its tip, and it munched the monster's arm right off.

There was the sound of slamming on the door like there was a beast trapped inside the freezer. The monster did not scream even though its arm was pulled out. In fact, it treated this like it happened daily. When the blood vessels retreated, it quickly locked the door. About ten seconds later, the morgue became quiet again, and the monsters prepared to open the second freezer. When all the cadavers were sent into the freezers, the two sighed in relief. By then, they were already fully wounded, with scars all over their bodies.

"Finally done." The two monsters left Morgue No. 7, pushing the trolley. Chen Ge followed them silently.

They sent the cadavers in real life inside the freezers, allowing the blood vessels to absorb them. Is it a way to feed the blood world? Chen Ge looked at the thick vessels above him and the blood threads that flowed through them and he got even more confused by this world.

The society discovered the 'door' five years earlier than me, and they seemed to have mastered the way of transforming the 'door'. Chen Ge glanced into the room when he passed Morgue No. 7. This place was looking less and less like a blood school and more like a blood factory. Doctor Gao is scarier than the monsters here. The man has lost his mind; there's no telling what he's thinking.

He walked forward, and there were two doctors wearing white coats arguing at the door to Morgue No. 6. Many professional terms were tossed around, and Chen Ge could not understand any of them. Doctors seemed to possess great ranking in this world—the two general staff did not dare get close to them like close proximity could be treated as an offense.

After the argument finished and the doctors left, the two monsters only dared to whisper softly to voice their disgruntlement.

“Looks like the experiment has failed again. That room has already consumed more than one hundred people.”

“Actually, it's not really a failure. Didn't the body move some time ago?”

“What do you know? The body is alive, but the soul has already disappeared. The madman wants to find his wife's soul—only by combining the soul and the body can the thing be counted as a person.”

“I don't know anything since it has nothing to do with me, but let's get moving. We're close to that crazy old man's place, and if we run into him, something bad is bound to happen.”

“You're right. I almost forgot about that.”

The two monsters shut up. When they passed Morgue No. 4, they slowed down, afraid of making any noise. However, to their surprise, an old man was just standing behind the door. When he saw someone pass, he yanked the door open.

“You two, stop right there!” The old man's voice was strict and stern. It could strike fear into people.

“Doctor Wei, are you looking for us?” The two monsters squeezed together and did not dare get too close.

“Answer my question.” The old man had a pair of eagle eyes.

The monsters did not dare to say no, so they nodded unwillingly.

“What do you wish to ask?”

The old man asked with confusion, “Am I dead?”

When the answer was revealed, the blood in the vessels sped up, and the organs inside the walls pulsed harder.

“You’re alive of course!” The two monsters forced a smile.

“But I remember dying very clearly.” The old man’s brows creased, and he started to think.

One of the monsters pulled on the other, and they slowly retreated down the corridor and ran away.

Chapter 442 - The Key Person

Chapter 442: The Key Person

The door was open, and the old man stood beyond it—there was befuddlement in his eyes. “Am I not dead?”

Chen Ge had seen this old man before, also within Morgue No. 8. His body had been just next to Liu Zhengyi. Soaked in formalin, he had looked so peaceful, completely different from how he was now.

...

Looks like everyone in Morgue No. 8 retains their memory and personality. They are not affected by the blood world.

The world behind the door was filled with many negative emotions. Staying here for a long time would cause one to be assimilated into it, and only those with strongest conviction would be able to survive.

It was that way for Liu Zhengyi, whom Chen Ge had run into earlier. When he heard his student was bullied, he prepared to stand up for the student. It should be the same for this old man. Combined with what happened to Liu Zhengyi, Chen Ge understood something. Perhaps the blood world cannot assimilate them, so it forcibly controls them every few hours to make them forget certain things to preserve the order here.

Chen Ge was a calm man, and another observation appeared in his mind.

Compared to mind-controlling them, killing them should be easier, but the blood world didn't do that. There is no pity or protection here, and since they're still alive until now, this means that they serve some purpose!

The monsters referred to him as a doctor, be it Liu Zhengyi or this gentleman, they should be the best in their respective field. The owner of the door sounds like he's trying to revive someone. He kept these two doctors alive probably to aid him in completing that revival experiment.

Through the conversation of the two monsters and the clues gathered, Chen Ge came to a conclusion.

The two monsters refused to interact with the old gentleman because they were afraid of trouble, but it's different for me.

Chen Ge placed the white cat and hammer into his backpack and walked along the corridor openly.

Hearing his footsteps, the old gentleman slowly raised his head. When he saw Chen Ge, he was startled like he had seen a ghost.

I wonder how I look like in their eyes. Chen Ge walked to the old man and asked politely, “Sir, I have a few words to discuss with you—can you give me a few minutes of your time?”

“It should be lecture time now. Which class are you from?” The old gentleman glanced at Chen Ge a few more times like he was slowly getting used to the sight, and his expression returned to normal.

“Sir, I heard your conversation with the two people earlier,” Chen Ge said directly. He did not plan to waste any more time.

“So what? You think I’m mad?” The old man held the door and prepared to return to his room.

“You’re not mad. Actually, you’re indeed dead.” When Chen Ge said that, the whole corridor became quiet. He could clearly hear the sound of the blood flowing through the vessels. The old gentleman focused his gaze on Chen Ge. He did not speak but nodded slightly and allowed Chen Ge to follow him into the room. Chen Ge did what he was told. Morgue No. 4 was a small morgue. Due to wiring, Morgue No. 4 had stopped being used, and it had been turned into a sample room.

The door closed, but the old gentleman still did not say a thing. He walked to the racks that carried multiple samples. Chen Ge did not know what the old man was up to, but he still followed him silently.

The old man led Chen Ge to the inner part of the racks. “If you have something to say, we can discuss it here—this place is hidden from outside view.”

Chen Ge nodded. “Sir, can you describe what I look like in your eyes?”

“Your features are placed at impossible places. The fact that you’re alive is a miracle,” the old man said directly.

“Then how do the surrounding walls and racks look in your eyes?”

“The walls?” The old man knew that Chen Ge was hinting at something. “They are painted white and look new.”

“Do you know how they look in my eyes?” Chen Ge pointed at them. “Their surface is covered with a transparent membrane, blood vessels of varying sizes run through them, and they pulse like living organs.”

Then Chen Ge pointed at his face. “The world in my eyes is the real one. I believe you’ve noticed that already.”

The stronger one’s will, the harder it was to control them behind the door. The old gentleman was this type of individual. He was not influenced by the negative emotions, and while he fought with the blood world, he slowly got tipped off to certain things.

“I know you might not be able to accept this so suddenly, but that is the truth.” Chen Ge had a close watch on the old man. Once he acted strangely, Chen Ge would act quickly. “I saw you once in Morgue No. 8 at the underground morgue. Your real body is soaked inside formalin, and you look peaceful.”

“You mean, I’m not only dead, but I’ve also donated my body to the university?” The old man tried to force himself to remember. He did remember something, but right then, things changed. Blood vessels leaked out from the walls and ground—they charged at the old gentleman all at once. Chen Ge had seen this before, so he came prepared. When they appeared, he took out his hammer and beat them off.

However, more blood came from the surrounding. There were so many of them that it was scary.

“Sir! Think about what you’ve done in the past! Everything you see is fake!” He protected the old man from the encroaching threat, but Chen Ge only managed that for a few seconds. There was heavy breathing from the outside corridor—‘security’ had been informed as well.

“What I’ve done in the past?” The old man’s eyes glowed, but right then, the blood vessels slid past Chen Ge and attacked the old man. The man’s eyes changed between red and white, his expression one of torment. Just as he was about to collapse, his body reacted like it had been programmed to do so. At the height of pain, he reached his arm into his sleeve. In the end, the old man failed to resist the control. When the blood vessels disappeared, he collapsed to the ground weakly.

“Sir?” Chen Ge squatted down to help the old man up from the ground. “Can you remember who I am?”

Holding his chest, the old man stood up from the ground. He looked at Chen Ge blankly and shook his head. Then, he appeared like he had remembered something and pulled down his sleeve. On his thin wrist, there were plenty of wounds gouged out by nails.

He looked at the latest wound and asked, “When did the new scar appear?”

Chapter 443 - Wei Jiuqin [2 in 1]

Chapter 443: Wei Jiuqin [2 in 1]

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge did not expect the old man to use this type of method to jot down the recording. When the blood vessels were crawling all over his system, when he was in the deepest depths of pain, he could still do something like this. It went to show how strong the old man's will was—much stronger than a normal man.

“Sir, you dug out these scars yourself. You can compare them to your own nails. I saw with my own eyes earlier that you used your other hand's middle and first fingers to scratch them out.”

...

“This is my own doing? How come I have no recollection of this?”

While the two were speaking, heavy breathing came from outside the door. The monster with the empty face had arrived. The creepy face leaned on the window of the door to Morgue No. 4. Its gaze was blocked by the racks filled with samples. When it could not look into the back of the room, it sounded like it was going to barge its way in. The door shook and trembled—the monster was incredibly strong.

“Stay here, and don't move.” The old man pulled down his sleeves and walked out from behind the racks. He walked to the door and pulled it open. The large monster that was sewn together from various dead bodies poked its head into the room. It had no face, and the skull was clean and shaven. It was anyone's guess how it sensed the surroundings.

“Who let you in here?” the old man demanded in a stern voice. In terms of size and frame, the old man was just half of the creature, but in terms of presence and aura, they were not even on the same level. The old man's gaze was sharp and penetrating. When he realized the monster was not moving, he raised his arm to block the monster. “This is not a place that you can enter. Get out!”

Hiding behind the racks, Chen Ge also thought this scene was quite amazing. The power level behind the two was night and day but their presence was the complete opposite. “The world in the old gentleman’s eyes is probably different from mine. Perhaps in his eyes, the monster is just a normal dude with malicious intent.”

The monster was blocked at the door by the old man. It seemed to have sensed Chen Ge. A large crevice appeared on its stomach and its large palm pulled out a rope filled with blood stain from behind him. The stench of blood and something else filled up the room. The monster gnashed its teeth, but the old man did not retreat. In fact, he took a step forward. He yelled at the monster, his voice rising. The two were at a standstill at the door. The stomach of the monster peeled open, and it created a sound that was similar to breathing. It was angered beyond belief, but there was nothing it could do. In the end, it left unwillingly.

When the monster disappeared down the corridor, the old man closed the door. He returned to the racks and pulled up the sleeve of his shirt. “Let’s continue our earlier conversation. You said that you saw me leave this wound on my arm, but how come I have no memory of it at all?”

“Sir, do you have any memory of wounds, blood vessels, and death in your mind?”

“Now that you mention it, I have been suffering from this recurring nightmare. When I close my eyes, I can see many blood lines curling around my body. I try my best to struggle, but I cannot resist being pulled into the darkness by them. After that, I wake up.” The man touched the scars on his arm. “When did I leave these wounds? I cannot remember them at all.”

Chen Ge told the old man what had happened earlier. However, he was only halfway through it when the organs in the wall started to react violently and the heavy breathing outside the corridor returned. With no other choice, Chen Ge had to stop.

“We’ll need to wait a little longer. Now we have no means to protect ourselves, so it’s pointless to reveal these things to you.” Chen Ge finally understood something. If the old man remembered something important, the blood world behind the door would forcibly control him, and the monsters that were patrolling the corridor would congregate. The old man had been able to save him this time, but Chen Ge did not want to test his luck. Compared to recovering the old man’s memory, removing the blood membrane was more important.

“Sir, do you have anything else that you need my help with?” Chen Ge’s sudden offer confused the old gentleman. He thought about it for a long time, and his eyes eventually focused on Chen Ge. “I want you to bring me to Morgue No. 8.”

“Morgue No. 8?” Chen Ge was surprised the old gentleman would make such a request. “The morgue was sealed shut by someone—why would you want to go there?”

“I can’t really tell, but I have a feeling something dear to me is locked inside there. Perhaps I’ve been there before and left something important there.”

“Do we have to enter Morgue No. 8?” Breaking the lock would require plenty of time, and that process might attract more than one monsters. In that case, they would put themselves in grave danger.

“Yes.” The man nodded. He could be quite stubborn, but he was certain this was the only and last favor that he needed from Chen Ge. Entering Morgue No. 8 would be dangerous, but since Chen Ge could not find a second ‘person’ to help in a short amount time, he would have to do it. He knew the blood world was onto him, and if he dragged this out, it would be dangerous to him.

“Staying in this place will continue to thicken the membrane on the skin surface. There are two more unfortunate souls in the room at the central hub. If I drag this any longer, the two of them might just die from asphyxiation.” Chen Ge finally nodded. “Okay, I will bring you to Morgue No. 8.”

After getting the confirmation from Chen Ge, the old man’s expression softened. His eyes that landed on Chen Ge filled with admiration. For some reason that he could not understand, he felt the young man was quite friendly and nice. Actually, the reason the old man felt that way was because Chen Ge was an outsider. Different from the people inside the door, there was humanity in Chen Ge. If it was Ma Wei or Li Jiu who came over, the old man might have felt even closer to them.

“The key to Morgue No. 8 should be in the headmaster’s room, but it is not going to be easy to go there. I know many ways that lead there. The closest route has the most security, and the other route is more deserted, but...”

“There’s no need to go through so much trouble; there is more than one way to open a door.” Chen Ge assumed he only needed to complete the old man’s wish to clear the blood membrane, so he did not want to make things too complicated. “You can just follow me to Morgue No. 8.”

Chen Ge walked to the door and the old man reminded him with uncertainty, “Whenever I leave this room, a bad feeling forms in my heart. I don’t know why, but you’d better be careful. Also, there’s one other thing—we mustn’t be spotted by others.”

The old man seemed to have the experience of running away before. However, he could not remember what had happened then—his memory was blurry.

“Don’t worry, I’ll be there.” Chen Ge’s body only had a thin layer of blood membrane left. After completing the old man’s wish, he should be able to get the full approval, and after that, he would not need to run and hide anymore.

Opening the door, Chen Ge walked out of the room. Nothing happened. However, when the old man left the room, the whole corridor shook slightly, and the organs on the wall pulsed faster.

“Let’s not waste time, we’ll go there directly! Quick!” The underground morgue’s outer perimeter had a complicated layout because it was connected to many buildings. Chen Ge was glad that he had taken a picture of the map and memorized it in his head before he started the journey. Holding the hammer, Chen Ge weaved through the corridors to head to Morgue No. 8. The old man followed closely behind him with conviction shining in his eyes.

After the old man left the room, the blood world started to change. If before it was the calm before the storm, now, the storm was arriving. With no return route and no other choice, Chen Ge led the old man quickly through the corridors. He had done all the preparation; no matter who blocked his way, he would force his way through!

There was a strange smell in the air. The blood that flowed above their heads started to speed up. The freezers in the morgues on both sides echoed with the slamming sounds as if the cobra-like blood vessels felt hungry again. After turning another few corners, Chen Ge heard footsteps coming from the other end. He gripped the hammer tightly but did not slow down. In fact, he ran even faster.

The person at the other end of the corridor heard his running footsteps. They were more cowardly and stopped immediately. Turning the corner, Chen Ge saw two general staff that looked like a pile of decaying mud fixing the corridor. They were pushing a trolley that was filled with broken carcasses. They placed the body parts into the gaps of the walls and then used a red thread to sew them back together. The two monsters worked seriously. They did not give Chen Ge much heed, but when they saw the old man behind him, they started to worry.

“We’ve been discovered.” Chen Ge raised the hammer to plan to silence the witnesses but was stopped by the old man. “Ignore them, these people are too cowardly to report us. If you harm them, the security will rush over immediately.”

The old man then stared at the two monsters. The two creatures very tactfully turned their heads away to continue working like they could not see Chen Ge and the old man. “I have interacted with them a fair bit, so I know them well.”

Chen Ge already knew these ‘monsters’ were quite afraid of the old man. “Sir, you must have been quite a vicious character.”

“You flatter me. We should get to Morgue No. 8 first; we can continue the conversation there.”

It was not looking great in the corridors. The organs in the wall started to leak blood, and the situation was quickly turning south. After a few more corridors, Chen Ge and the old man finally arrived at the entrance to Morgue No. 8. By then, the walls, floor and the blood vessels on the ceiling had started to leak blood, and the surrounding blood mist had gotten a lot thicker.

“The door is locked. How are we going to open it without a key?” The old man stood in the mist. Ever since he left the room, a headache had been following him. It felt like there was something that was trying to crawl its way out of his head.

“Leave it to me.” With no other option, Chen Ge focused on the lock on the door and raised his hammer high!

BANG!

The door shook, and the shockwave caused the walls next to it to bleed. “Sure is tough.”

Gritting his teeth, he smashed at the thing like his life depended on it. He aimed at the place where the door was joined to the wall. When he passed the door for the first time, he had planned to smash through the door already.

No matter how tough the door was, Chen Ge was not afraid. At most, he would knock a hole through the adjacent wall. If there was a way in, he would find it.

As Chen Ge continued to demolish the place, more blood vessels continued to pour out from the grooves on the hammer, and they made the weapon look scarier. After about ten more hits, Chen Ge realized that the blood was not just a decoration—it seemed to have a special effect. It was as if due to these blood vessels that it increased the damage effect of the hammer against anything inside the blood world.

Chen Ge had no idea how many strikes he had made. The place was chaotic, and this was different from the old man's plan. He wanted to have Chen Ge steal the key and then come over to silently open the door and retrieve the important thing that he had lost. However, Chen Ge's action was so beyond the normal realm of human actions that perhaps even the 'headmaster', who was hidden at the deepest part of the underground morgue, did not expect someone to be so crazy.

The door shook, and the lock rattled noisily. The lock was coming loose, and the scariest thing was the adjacent wall was coming loose as well. Chen Ge almost smashed his way through. Heavy breathing came from both sides of the corridors; 'security' was on their way.

"Are you done?" The old man was in a shocked state, seeing this from the back. His admiration toward Chen Ge earlier had now changed into something else.

"Soon!" Chen Ge bit on his teeth, took several steps back, and used the running start to swing the hammer one last time!

BANG!

The door of Morgue No. 8 slammed into the wall. The hammer landed on the edge of the wall, pulling off a huge chunk of flesh. The locked door was blasted through by Chen Ge. Now, the security from both sides were running at them. They were tall and large since they were made from multiple cadavers. With resentment and pain, a hole opened on their stomachs, and various arms reached out from them.

"Come in here!" Chen Ge entered Morgue No. 8 with the old man. The old man's wish had been fulfilled, and the blood membrane on Chen Ge's body started to thin. He slammed the door shut and used the hammer to block the door. "Hopefully, this can last until the blood membrane disappears..."

Chen Ge did not care much about this Morgue No. 8, but when he raised his head to look around, he was stunned. Morgue No. 8 behind the door was only slightly different from the one in the real world. There was an additional unique container made from flesh and blood in this Morgue No. 8. It was holding a man who looked around forty wearing a white coat.

“Doctor Chen?” The man who was trapped here was Doctor Chen from Jiujiang’s Children’s Home. At the last minute of the trial at Coffin Village, it was this man who had chased away No. 10 of the ghost stories society. “Why is he here? Did he lose during that battle?”

When Chen Ge was thinking, something slammed heavily into the door behind him. Many arms covered with blood tried to force their way through the cracks. The two faceless monsters had arrived!

“Sir, have you found the thing you have lost? I cannot hold on much longer!” There was still a very thin layer of membrane on Chen Ge’s skin. He could not rub it off no matter how hard he tried. He started to call for his employees’ names, but there was still no reply.

“Don’t panic.” The old man walked before the many empty tubes. He finally stopped at the glass tube that carried his dead body in real life. His palm fell on the glass, and his eyes fell on the introduction that was before the glass tube.

“Wei Jiuqin, Western Jiujiang Medical University’s Professor, the man who built Jiujiang’s Life Science Research Center. He donated his body for the pursuit of science after he died at the age of seventy-three from lung cancer.”

Reading the letters on the tube, various memories exploded in his mind. Various images of his life and research flooded his mind before the last memory fixated on the last moment of his life.

Inside the sickroom, he prepared to donate his body to the university. At the time, his children had tried to stop him, and with the last bit of strength in his body, he had written, “I’d rather they leave millions of wrong cuts on my body than make one mistake on their patients.”

Memories flooded his mind. The headache was mounting but his gaze was peaceful. Blood vessels squeezed out from the walls and ground to curl around his body. The old man did not move, still standing before the glass tube. The blood drilled into his body and pulsed under his skin. They looked like snakes travelling to his brain. Just from the look of it, Chen Ge could imagine how painful it must have been, but the old man did not even frown. Chen Ge wanted to go help the old man, but he was in a less than positive situation himself. The monsters slammed crazily into the wall, and the arms with sewing marks tried to reach into the room to grab his body.

“Sir, you have to make it!”

...

The blood vessels still made their way to the old man’s brain, but unlike before, the old man’s eyes did not get overtaken by the blood immediately. He retained his consciousness. His face was filled with popping veins; the pain was unimaginable. However, the old gentleman suffered through it, standing quietly next to the glass tube.

His not-so-tall frame stood upright like nothing in the world was going to make his body bend. The organs on the wall vibrated crazily, and the blood vessels above them expanded. The blood rushed through them, and endless blood threads leaked out.

The blood world did not expect an accident like this, and it was trying its best to fix itself. More blood came out from the corners of the room, and the place looked like hell. Compared to those blood vessels, the old man was slender and thin, like an inconspicuous rock caught in a heavy storm.

More blood curled into his body, but the old man seemed to have noticed them—no one could tell what was going through his mind then. Standing from afar, Chen Ge noticed that the old man kept his gaze on the glass tube. His body looked like it was about to be torn open by the blood vessels, but he was unfazed. His palm still on the cold glass surface, his gaze was complicated. He was yearning for life, but he was not afraid of death.

“Looks like I should be in here.” The old man finally remembered everything about himself. His fists tightened, and a low growl came out from his throat. The pain and torture faded to the background, and his eyes glowed brightly.

The blood expanded his body, making him look scary, but his expression was so peaceful and kind. Other people definitely would not have expected the stern old man to have such a side to him. He moved his eyes away from the glass tube and shook his head lightly. “What are these kids up to? I donated my body not for them to prop me up like a display, how pretentious! After I’m out, I’ll have to go teach them a lesson!”

With anger in his voice, the old man suffered through the endless pain and recovered all his memories. When the blood vessels realized that they could not influence the old man, they upped the ante. The whole room was shaking, and the organs in the wall and the blood vessels above them creaked open, blood dripping everywhere.

Standing in the downpour of blood, the old man maintained the same pose. It was clear that he was in great pain, but he did not surrender. If anything, there was condescension in his eyes!

The blood world and the old man’s will were battling within the old man’s body, a battle that could not be intervened in by outsiders. Chen Ge could not help; all he could do was block the door to prevent the security from harming the old man.

Chen Ge gritted his teeth and gave it his all. There were cracks forming on the walls next to the door, and the organs above him leaked. The surface was wrinkling, and like leaves in fall, they started to fall. The cracks on the wall widened. It did not take long for one of the security guards to poke one of his arms and head through.

Its stomach split open, and it was heaving heavily. When it saw Chen Ge, the heaving became rapid just like a glutton finding its favorite food.

BANG!

The door shook, and two monsters rammed at the door. Chen Ge was in a dire situation, and it almost reached the end for the old man as well. Due to the rapid acceleration of the organs on the walls, the blood vessels on the ceiling had expanded to their maximum size, but even so, it could not bend the old man's will. Compared to the power of the blood world, the old man was nothing. However, he had somehow managed to stop the blood world from controlling him.

His short life flashed across his mind, and the old man's eyes glimmered. The blood vessels reached their limits, and they started to crack before exploding with a snap. A rain of blood occurred in the room, and the room made of flesh started to darken. The vessels that curled around the old man lost their life, and they collapsed to the ground like died vines.

"Is that all?" The old man stepped over the dried vessels, his will as strong as diamond. When the old man forced the vessels to explode and shielded his own memory, the blood membrane on Chen Ge also disappeared. Chen Ge took a deep breath, and air thick with the stench of blood entered his nostrils. He had never felt better!

Like someone who had been submerged in water for a long time breaking through the surface, that feeling could not be put into words!

The door was slammed open, and the monsters tried to squeeze their way in. The body made from flesh and blood was pulled apart and the arms reached for Chen Ge. Seeing this, there was a smile on Chen Ge's face. He knew that, from that moment onward, he was no longer fighting alone. Activating the recorder, when the static noise appeared, Chen Ge gripped the hammer and opened the morgue's door.

"Xu Yin!" The blood red shadow appeared beside him, and Xu Yin's murderous gaze studied the monsters that approached Chen Ge. The red shirt was dripping with blood, and he flexed his arms with his knuckles cracking. There was now a third breathing sound in the corridor; the monsters had started to gather.

"Flesh and blood make up everything; nothing here is right. So, I've been living in a place like this." After the old man recovered his memory, he no longer saw the fake view. He soon understood everything after combining the memories he had before and after his death.

Walking next to Chen Ge, the old man softly reminded him, "We should leave now. I know a way out. There are too many monsters here—there's no need to fight them head on."

Moving his limbs, Chen Ge felt so refreshed after the blood membrane was shed. He looked at the monsters behind the door and had no intention of running.

“More monsters will gather; it’ll be too late for us to run then.” The old man was calmer.

“Don’t worry, leave this to me.” Chen Ge put the white cat aside and took out the comic. Then many figures appeared around him. “In terms of numbers, I don’t believe I’ll lose!”

Chen Ge had felt restricted with the blood membrane covering his body. When the blood membrane burst open, he could finally move his muscles. Just in case the membrane returned, Chen Ge called out all the ghosts in the comic. It was a wave of blackness. There were people from various ages and size, and even the old man was shocked by this.

“They’re all nice people.” After Chen Ge told the old man that, he whispered to his employees, “That is your future coworker, so make sure you leave a good first impression.”

...

The old man heard that as well, but he did not understand what he meant. However, the workers understood what Chen Ge meant, and their eyes that looked at the old man became different. The sudden appearance of so many people gave the security guards pause. They started to feel unnerved.

“Want to run now? It’s too late! Weren’t you having so much fun chasing me around earlier?” Once Chen Ge finished, the smell of blood around him thickened. Xu Yin moved his arms, and the red shirt cracked to form wounds as he pounced like a leopard.

“Go and help him.” Chen Ge stood at the door to study the battle. The security guards were more powerful than the thin monster at Third Sick Hall but not by much. However, they were much harder to kill than the thin monster.

“Don’t let any of them run away!” The underground morgue was a three-star scenario, and Chen Ge’s own Haunted House could be counted as a three-star scenario as well, so Chen Ge had confidence. With all of the employees hungering after them, none of the three security guards managed to escape. Their ugly souls became the food for the employees. Temporarily, no one could tell the change, but if this was allowed to continue, perhaps the Haunted House might have a new Red Specter. Chen Ge knew that the chance was low, but there was no loss in trying.

After dealing with the three security guards, the blood world started to change again. The flesh on the sides started to wilt, the vessels above them burst, and the blood slid down the wall.

“No need to rush, we still need to rescue a friend.” Chen Ge called Xu Yin into the room and stopped before the container made from flesh. The vessels in Morgue No. 8 had been destroyed, so the surface of the container looked drabber. Chen Ge had Xu Yin open the container, and a horrible stench drifted out. Chen Ge suspected that the man might already be dead.

Blood mist rushed into the container, and the middle-aged man, who had a tense expression, suddenly peeled his eyes open. The eyes were red, and he roared like a beast. That lasted for some time before he stopped. When the man calmed down, Chen Ge pulled the blood vessels around him off and then yanked him out of the container.

Doctor Gao and Doctor Chen were childhood friends and fell in love with the same girl. They’re also both psychologists, but their lives are so different.

Rescued from the container, Doctor Chen’s eyes slowly returned to normal, and Chen Ge’s shadow reflected in his gaze. After he got a clear view of Chen Ge’s face, he shivered slightly but slowly returned to normal.

Chen Ge caught all of those details. He squatted down next to Doctor Chen and asked, “Doctor Chen, are you that surprised to see me?”

After some time, Doctor Chen croaked out the reply. “I thought this looked familiar, and they keep calling me Doctor Chen, but my surname is not Chen.”

“Then, why do you call yourself Doctor Chen?” Chen Ge thought this man was rather amusing. Doctor Chen did not reply. He held the broken container and slowly stood up. Throughout the whole process, he kept his eyes on Chen Ge’s face, and this made Chen Ge feel rather uncomfortable.

Chen Ge did not dare lower his guard around this Doctor Chen. Doctor Gao should be the door-pusher for the underground morgue and had probably controlled the door for more than six years. He had many ghosts and bodies. Under such circumstances, Doctor Chen had managed to fight Doctor Gao to a draw—this man was not to be underestimated either.

“The reason I call myself Doctor Chen is to complete someone’s favor. They want me to use this surname to do something in Western Jiujiang.” Doctor Chen’s body was weak. He had trouble even standing. After a pause, he added, “That man has the surname Chen too.”

Hearing this, Chen Ge knew something was up. However, no matter how hard he pushed, Doctor Chen had nothing else to say. Chen Ge did not force Doctor Chen; he did not like to force people. “It’s fine if you don’t want to share, but I will escort you out safely.”

There was still an arrest warrant out on Doctor Chen due to ‘kidnapping’ children. He definitely would not have been to escape in his state, so Chen Ge planned to drop him at the Haunted House after they left this world. After Doctor Chen recovered, he could leave then. Having Ol’ Zhou support Doctor Chen, Chen Ge collected the ghosts that had no combat ability back into the comic, and a space immediately opened up.

“Sir, you know the way to the headmaster’s office, yes? Let’s go there now.” Chen Ge raised the hammer and looked different from before.

The old man did not get it. “Why are we still going there when the door is already open? We don’t need the key anymore.”

“It hasn’t been easy for us to get here, so how can we return empty-handed?” Chen Ge’s face had a smile that the old man did not quite understand. “You just need to tell me what kind of monsters we might face and what to be cautious of.”

“Don’t be rash. I’ve remembered many things. This place is more dangerous than you think.” The old man was worried about Chen Ge’s safety.

“I know it’s dangerous here, but this is something I have to do.” Chen Ge put away his smile and looked down the wandering path. “The blood world has entrapped more than you, Doctor Wei. I can’t just leave them here.”

He tried to brush up the old man's good impression of him. After hearing that, the old man nodded. "Okay, I'll lead the way."

"Thank you, sir."

"You have to be prepared. The deeper we go, the more dangerous it gets. There are things scarier than that security monster." The old man thought about it. "This place is similar to the underground morgue. The bodies here can be separated into two types—one is like me, who volunteered their body, and the other type consists of criminals on death row that were purchased from alternative channels. The second type are harmful and dangerous."

"Can you tell me in more detail?"

"The faceless monsters you saw earlier are the death row inmates. After the gunfire, the bullets shattered the skull and exploded inside the brain. They were already carrying resentment, but normally, they are put into their place by people like us. However, in this world where negative emotions fester, they become even crazier and more uncontrollable."

Chapter 446: I'm Also a Doctor!

“These dead people hate everything living. They are not satisfied with their current state and desire to be reborn. Their eyes are filled with nothing but venom and hate. Following that, their bodies also start to twist, reflecting the ugliness of their heart!”

After getting all the information from the old man, Chen Ge had a gauge in his heart. The blood door at the central hub had already closed, so if they wanted to leave, there was no other option than to capture the door-pusher to get him to open the door.

...

If Doctor Gao is the door-pusher, there's a great chance that he's currently not inside this world, so capturing the door-pusher is impossible. Then again, the door-pusher is the scariest presence here. If he's not around, doesn't that mean I can do whatever I want here?

Chen Ge looked down the red corridor, planning to search through the rooms one by one. Perhaps he might run into ‘potential employees’.

After clearing away as many obstacles as possible, when the door-pusher returned, Chen Ge would have one less thing to worry about.

“Our power is pooled at one spot, but our enemy hasn’t realized that; their people are spread at various corners. With the old sir leading the way, I still have the greater winning of chance.” Chen Ge still had trump cards that he had not used yet, so he was confident. “Sir, let’s go to where the headmaster could be. Perhaps there might be a surprise reward.”

The old man could not persuade Chen Ge otherwise, so he agreed. The blood vessels on the ceiling started to crack, and the blood dripped on their bodies. This blood looked different from normal; it was formed by the smaller blood threads.

“Let’s move fast.” The old man’s shirt was soaked. “I once saw a general staff accidentally cut a blood vessel when he was fixing it. The blood splashed on him, and although we didn't think much of it initially, when I returned about one hour later, I realized that his body had become a warm bed for the blood threads. Innumerable blood threads crawled out from his body and dragged him into the cracks on the wall."

"Meaning at most we have forty minutes left?" The burst blood vessels caused the whole world to rain—they could not avoid it. "This feels like a planned cleansing. The whole world will probably be affected."

Chen Ge and the old man walked away while the other ghosts protected Doctor Chen, who was at the back. Soon, they walked past the several morgues and reached the end of the outer perimeter.

"The headmaster could be in any of three places—the lab, surgery room, and office. I know the location of the lab and surgery room, but I've only heard about the office from the general staff."

"Meaning the general staff might know the location of the office? No problem. In that case, we can go to the other two places first. If there's nothing there, we'll catch a few general staff to interrogate them." Chen Ge twirled the hammer in his hands. The old man trusted that he had enough power, but he was afraid that they did not have the time. The group ran down the corridors and soon arrived at the lab.

No one could tell what the room had originally been. The blood vessels covered the door, the blood and flesh squishing together. The old man pushed the door open, and the blood vessels on the door was pulled apart. The room was big and had a lot of medical equipment.

When the door was open, there were two doctors arguing in the room. Their eyes were red, and they looked unhinged. The old man coughed, and hearing that, the two doctors turned around. When they saw that it was the old man, they stopped arguing, and the blood in their eyes lessened.

"Doctor Wei? Why are you here?"

"You came at the right time; the experiment has failed again." The two doctors pulled Doctor Wei into the room. Chen Ge wanted to stop them, but the old man waved his hands. The two doctors pulled the table in the middle of the room open, exposing the blood vessels and trough that was made from flesh.

There was a living person encased in the trough. He had many wounds on his body, and he still had his last breath in him. His chest rose and fell, dancing on the line of death. The two doctors pointed at the person like they were saying something, but the old man ignored them as he studied the person in the trough.

To ensure that he stayed on the brink of death, the doctors would rescue him and control his injury while adding wounds to his body. Chen Ge looked from a far with his Yin Yang Vision. He seemed to have seen the man on the wall of victims before. He was a victim of the ghost stories society. The man had enjoyed bullying his classmate when he was twelve. He had used a pencil to poke his friend's leg and pull on the friend's hair. These were just pranks, but in his friend's eyes, he was a monster; it had deeply affected his growth.

"The picture looked new, but with the recent movement of the society, they completed this 'hunt' at least three weeks ago, meaning the guy has been stuck in the trough in this state for three weeks already."

The two doctors were still talking, but Doctor Wei ignored them. He turned to Chen Ge. "The aorta has been burst, so there's nothing I can do. I planned to save him."

The two doctors also noticed Chen Ge. They followed behind the old man and looked at Chen Ge cautiously. "Who are you? How come we haven't seen you before?"

Chen Ge ignored them and asked the old man, "Are you familiar with them?"

"These two have already lost their humanity, I remember now." The old man still had not looked at the two. "The tall one is Wei, a renowned surgical specialist. However, after he was exposed to be involved in selling organs on the black market, he spent his life on the run. The short one is Wang, also a brilliant doctor. He has an explosive personality, and while he looks kind on the surface, he's really a creep. I have no idea where the headmaster found these people."

"So, two madmen." Chen Ge heard the disgust in the old man's voice, and he knew what to do. "Sir, do you mind leaving first and giving me one minute?"

"What do you plan to do?" Before he got an answer, he was pushed out by Chen Ge.

Actually, the old man's question was the exact question on the two doctors' mind. They looked at Chen Ge as he closed the lab door and felt the temperature in the room dropping.

“Are you one of the general staff? How come you look different from others?” The two doctors were unnerved. The man felt off.

Chen Ge shook his head. He pointed at the lab coat that he was still wearing. “I’m also a doctor.”

“A new doctor?” The two were even more confused.

“You can say I’ve invited myself.” Chen Ge called Xu Yin and raised the hammer. “My treatment method is simple. Many of my patients like to call me Doctor Skull-cracker.”

Chapter 447 - A Picturesque Contrast

Chapter 447: A Picturesque Contrast

Blood expanded on the hammer like spider web. Chen Ge's fingers grabbed the handle that looked like a human spine. He stood in the middle of the room, his feet on the flowing blood. "Is there anything else you two wish to say?"

The doctors retreated at the same time. In their eyes, Chen Ge was not a normal man. "If there's nothing else, we shall start the treatment. Don't worry, it won't be painful."

...

Chen Ge and Xu Yin rushed forward. The two doctors who had done bad things in their life received karma in their death. One minute later, Chen Ge opened the door and walked out with Xu Yin. "We can now move on."

The old man looked into the room. The two doctors had disappeared. He did not ask Chen Ge about the two doctors, and he moved forward like nothing had happened. The vessels above them pulsed harder. The white cat poked its head out from the backpack. It seemed to sniff the thing that had attracted it, and it kept meowing at Chen Ge from inside the backpack. Whenever they rounded a corner, it would create a small chaos inside the bag.

"This cat sure is cunning." The white cat could probably sense the negative impact of the blood, so it hid inside the backpack. Chen Ge looked at its watery eyes and sighed. After asking for the old man's opinion, they tried their best to follow the route demanded by the cat. The corridor shook, and heavy breathing came from the end of the corridor.

"Finally, couldn't resist it anymore?" Chen Ge had the old man stand behind him, and he walked ahead with Xu Yin. One of the vessels burst, and the blood slid down the cracks. Between the organs, various teetering shadows appeared at the end of the corridors.

Sewn from various cadavers, the blood vessels twisted and turned within the faceless skull to transform into an ever-changing façade. The arms were combined together from various body parts. The fingers were missing, and the fingernails were blackened flesh. The heaving came from the open stomach, and it sounded like there was a different monster living inside them.

“No wonder we didn’t run into them after the earlier ones—they have been gathered here. Is this the order of the blood world?”

The appearance of all the security guards meant that the surgery room was the last oasis of the blood world. It also went to show the importance of the location. It was probably hiding something important.

“This is more than I expected.” The old man did not retreat. Instead, he stood beside Chen Ge. “You’d better deal with them as soon as possible. This is a flesh factory, and these monsters were made from various ‘abandoned meat’, a material that is bountiful in this underground morgue.”

Chen Ge nodded. After the earlier altercation, he understood the make-up of these monsters. They were constructed out of different cadavers and joined together by threads. The core was the soul of one or several death-row inmates, filled with resentment and hatred. “From outside to inside, it is an amalgamation of trash, completely worthless.”

The two drew closer, and the brawl was about to break out. Only Chen Ge would be able to analyze the situation at a time like this. The underground morgue was a top three-star scary scenario, so Chen Ge had endless anticipation for this world behind the door. However, when he was really inside, he realized that most of the monsters could not be brought out with him. They were different from the ghosts of Coffin Village. These monsters made from dead bodies were too aggressive. They could not be communicated with anymore.

“Such a shame they’ll never experience the warmth of the human world.”

To leave a good impression before the old man, he did not charge ahead but pulled out the comic to push his employees forward.

“Seeing how troubled you are, how about I give you an early release?”

With a Red Specter leading the charge, the other employees became courageous and brave. However, most of them just huddled around Xu

Yin. After Xu Yin dealt with the monsters, they did the follow-up.

The corridor was thin, and Xu Yin stood in the middle of it. As long as he was not taken down, no matter how many monsters there were, they would only be torn apart. The red on his shirt brightened, but the wound around his heart was not affected. He was mad in the massacre but could not find his heart.

The chaos ran down the corridor. The walls started to crack. Xu Yin morphed into a blood red shadow; wherever he looked, blood would flow. He was so fast, and his fingers were like the sharpest knife—this was his grand feast. Facing the endless security guards, Chen Ge's group was slowly moving forward.

The blood world's consciousness realized the problem, and heavy breathing came from the deepest part of the corridor. This sound was different from the sound made by the security guards' stomachs; it was much more powerful. In fact, the whole corridor shook as it breathed.

Xu Yin, who was covered in blood, finally ended his massacre. He flung the blood on his fingers away and stood in the middle of the flesh corridor alone. His lowered head slowly looked up, and his pale face was calm and collected as his bloodshot eyes looked down the end of the corridor.

He had heard this breathing before. When Chen Ge entered the education block for the first time, tricked by the phone spirit, he had heard this sound once at the third underground floor. At the time, there had been other sounds like slithering fish accompanying this voice.

"Looks like the monster is huge. I wonder if it's a Red Specter."

The cooperation of Xu Yin and the other employees cleared the security. After consuming so many souls and spirits, the employees gave Chen Ge a surprise. Bai Qiulin, who had the missing hand, had a blood stain that could not be removed on the sleeves where his hand was supposed to be. This faded blood stain proved that he had the potential to be a Red Specter!

The gambler?

Thinking about Bai Qiulin's past, the man was quite a character in all honesty. To clear the debt, he had chopped off his hand before his debt collector. He was a ruffian and a thug, but it was also undeniable that there was a shining redeeming quality—that was his guilt toward his mother.

I should focus on cultivating him next. He'll be my third Red Specter.

Chen Ge planned to pour all the resource on Bai Qiulin to speed up his growth.

It is such joy to be my employees. There's no need to worry about anything but eating and having fun.

The surgery room was at the end of the corridor. After the security was cleared away, the path was clear. "This is it."

The old man pointed at the door at the end of the corridor. To Chen Ge's surprise, the door to the surgery room was not made from flesh but looked similar to the one in the real world. Chen Ge was unnerved by such normalcy in this blood world. He walked to the door, and the door was closed. The door itself was painted with different colors.

This should be Doctor Gao's room. Fruits and half-read books were placed on the coffee table, and an advertisement played on the television. The remote was placed on top of the couch, and the clock beside it showed the time as 3:15 pm. The painting was detailed and beautiful like the image was etched in the painter's mind. A serene afternoon and warm scenario, this was a fresh contrast to the world of flesh and blood around it.

"Surprised? I had the same expression as you when I saw it for the first time." The old man sighed. "This painting shows the headmaster's former home. He hopes for this to be the first thing his wife sees when she wakes up."

"Looks like he knows home is warmer than flesh and blood." His hand on the handle, Chen Ge pushed the door open. The surgery room was very large, about triple the size of the lab. This was the source of all the blood vessels, so it was the equivalent of the heart.

Many blood vessels congregated here at the center of the surgery room. There was a pool that was much bigger than a normal cadaver pool, and right there was a middle-aged man in white robe standing at its edge.

He was tall and strong, mature and rational. His eyes were holding a world. Hearing the door, the man lifted his head like he had anticipated everything.

Chen Ge stopped, and when he saw everything, he realized that he could not stop his heart from racing.

“Doctor Gao, we meet again.”

The thick blood vessels covered the entire surgery room. They were like the roots of an old tree, ringing everything and everyone within it. The organs on the wall shrank and expanded. Human faces were incased in the ceiling, and from a far, it looked similar to a large puzzle fitted with human bodies. Chen Ge had imagined meeting Doctor Gao again. There had been many scenarios, but he had not once expected that they would meet again in such circumstances.

The blood dripped on the white coat, but it slid off without leaving a trace. Doctor Gao was the most unique presence in this world. He stood amid the blood, flesh, and dead bodies, but he was wearing a white coat that signified hope and salvation. Doctor Gao looked at Chen Ge with a calm and collected expression. "You have arrived later than I expected."

...

"You knew I would come here?"

"I knew it would eventually come down to this. When I first saw you on the 24th floor of Fang Hwa Apartments, I already knew this would happen. You gave me a deep and acute sense of danger."

"Is that why you kept coming to my rescue then, to prevent me from coming into conflict with the other members of the ghost stories society?" Chen Ge thought back to the incident back then. No. 10 had been helping him, and at the end, he had eventually left a hint underneath the table, giving him the location of Linjiang New Schistosomiasis Control Station.

Doctor Gao nodded. "You are all my patients. Isn't it normal for the doctor to look out for his patients?"

"Patients?" Chen Ge shook his head. "You have no right to label other people that because, in my eyes, you are the one who suffers from the most serious illness. The world behind the door does not lie. This nightmare that is completely twisted and constructed from flesh and blood is a true reflection of your heart.”

“A soul and heart filled by carcasses is not an illness. Everyone has something twisted in their hearts. If this is an illness, then all of us are sick, including you.” Doctor Gao smiled. He seemed to enjoy chatting with Chen Ge. This young man before him, be it in terms of thoughts or understanding of people and situations, was different from most. Doctor Gao found something like a ‘kindred spirit’ within Chen Ge. “I am a psychologist and thus have seen many twisted souls. The reason they become like that, most of the time, is not their own doing.”

The voice paused, and the smile on Doctor Gao’s face slowly disappeared. “When you arrived, you should have seen the pictures on the wall already, right?”

Chen Ge nodded. “Those are the victims of the ghost stories society for the past five years? The sins that they have committed?”

“Victims?” Doctor Gao lifted his head to look at the puzzle of human faces above him. “From my perspective, they are the real offenders. They did what they liked with no consideration for others or the consequences. They live around us, wearing a human skin, but like the devil, they kept creating endless misfortunes. Every one of them had a reason to die, and what I’ve done is merely make their death more meaningful and valuable.”

“But is this fair to them?” Chen Ge stood from the viewpoint of an outsider and tried to play the devil’s advocate. He was not particularly partial to anyone. “I ran across a man who was barely alive in the lab. According to what the doctors here said, they had purposely suspended him in that state for the sake of an experiment. While they rescued him, they also added new wounds to his body. He suffered such endless torture mainly because of pranks that he committed when he was a child. So, he bullied his friend? Admittedly, it should not have happened, but does that deserve a punishment so cruel? Is that fair?”

“You can stand there and question the fairness because you are not taking the perspective of the victims. You cannot see the wounds in their hearts, so you cannot understand the despair that they have faced. You cannot understand the pain that caused them to suffocate, the pain that makes them want to tear themselves open.” Doctor Gao spoke faster, as if he had been reminded of himself. “That kind of pain is permanent, a pain that seeps into every single cell of your body. It will torment you endlessly. It follows you like a shadow, like bugs that crawl into each inch of your body. You know they are there and have dominated every part of your body and soul, but you cannot release them.

“No matter what you do, they will follow you, breed, and fester inside you. They feast on your soul, and you can hear them tear through your memory until every part of your brain and memory is filled with these disgusting bugs. You’ll see them when you close your eyes and will never forget about them when you’re alive.

“Can you understand this feeling? This is the pain that every patient who suffers from a mental illness has to face twenty-four hours daily. Do you still think what I did was wrong?” Doctor Gao looked into Chen Ge’s eyes. “Even with such an amount of pain, they tried their best to live, to be alive. However, ignoring the pain is not going to give them salvation; if anything, it is only going to heighten the pain.

“Human beings are called human beings because we have self-consciousness. When a person can use ‘I’ to refer to themselves, they are considered a human. However, my patients, they have been slowly losing their self-identity because the pain has been slowly consuming their ‘I’, their self-identity.”

This was the first time that Doctor Gao had shared these things with Chen Ge. His argument not only included psychology but also sociology and philosophy. “Human beings are a life form made up from multiple contradictions. Human being is not a simple noun because the experience and pain every one of us is expected to suffer through life cannot be summed up by these two simple words, human being.”

After hearing what Doctor Gao had to say, Chen Ge gripped the hammer tightly. Perhaps due to the discrepancy in cultural level, he did not really understand what Doctor Gao said. With pleading in his eyes, Chen Ge turned back to look at Doctor Wei. This seemed to be the first time that the senior doctor had heard any of that as well. He coughed lightly and told Chen Ge, “Don’t mind what the mental patients say too much. Don’t fall into their worldview, or else you’ll end up as crazy as them.”

“Don’t use crazy as an excuse to devalue us. You are only doing yourself a disservice,” Doctor Gao snapped. “When you see something you cannot understand, you’ll always use abnormal to define it, but have you once considered who came up with the standard to define what is normal and what is abnormal?”

Doctor Gao stood beside the blood pool. In a way, he was the center of this world. This blood world that was constructed of abandoned flesh and blood would shift and change according to Doctor Gao's every whim and fancy. "When your eyes fall on a person, what are you looking for? How would you study said person? Humans are called humans, not because of the sound that they make, not because of their actions or looks, but because of their soul. Everything is surrounding the soul. The soul is the center of a human."

Even though Chen Ge did not quite understand what Doctor Gao was saying, he felt the man had his point. Chen Ge realized that this was an extremely dangerous thing. When a person accepted the worldview of a madman, they were not far from being a madman themselves.

"Doctor Gao, no matter how hard you try to convince yourself, there is one point that you cannot deny. They died because of you. Your hands are covered with blood, and that means you have violated the law." The blood threads started to crawl underneath his skin. Chen Ge was running out of time. He flipped through his comic to release all of his employees. "You are one of the few people I have admired in my life, and because of that, I cannot allow you to continue this anymore. Doctor Gao, you're already sick. Since pushing the door open, you've not been yourself anymore. Even if you manage to revive your wife, when she opens her eyes and see the state you're in, she will not be able to recognize. This is not the man that she married."

Doctor Gao stood where he was and did not move. He was calm, but the blood vessels underneath his feet started to pulsate violently. The same was happening to the flesh on the wall. The human faces on the ceiling all showed expressions of terror. The world behind the door was a reflection of Doctor Gao's heart. Everything there was related to the man. When the man's mood changed, so would the whole world.

"You are not her, so how would you know what she feels?" Doctor Gao was a master at hiding his emotions, but the world that was changing belied them. This top psychologist of Jiujiang was starting to lose his cool. He might have looked collected in person, but the world that represented his heart was bubbling. In this case, the latter was a clearer representation of Doctor Gao's emotions than the former.

"Actually, you know it yourself." Chen Ge took one small side to the side to reveal the door behind him. "The entire world is filled with rotten meat and dirty blood, but this door that is facing the blood pool is the most normal. If I'm not mistaken, your wife should be inside the pool, right? You hope that the first thing she sees when she wakes up is the home that you once shared, not this whole world that is twisted beyond belief.

“Doctor Gao, stop running from the truth. Only when one is at the deepest depths of despair will they be able to push open the door, and the door doesn’t lead to salvation but a world of deeper despair. You wish to use more despair to give yourself salvation—that is impossible.”

Chen Ge still wanted to say something, but he was interrupted by Doctor Gao. “You don’t need to continue anymore. I’ve understood what you’re trying to express.”

He returned to his original emotion with an added detachment in his eyes. “I told you all that because I hoped you would understand my feelings.”

Doctor Gao trained his eyes on Chen Ge and revealed the last secret. “When I first saw you, I used every connection and power I had to investigate your history. I realize that we are very similar, and in a way, that is very true. You think it is crazy for me to spend five years down here in the morgue with the accompaniment of dead bodies, but do you know, in my eyes, you are also an undeniable madman?”

Chen Ge did not expect that he would have such a high appraisal in Doctor Gao’s eyes. He had always thought that he was just a normal man; there was nothing particularly special about him.

“The deeper the investigation went, the more problems I found with you. Perhaps you have not realized this yourself, but I can tell you clearly, the madness hibernating in the deepest part of your heart is even scarier than mine. That is a fire that cannot be quenched and will consume everything in its path.”

“Are you sure you’re talking about me?” Chen Ge did not quite understand why Doctor Gao was telling him all this, but the man had no reason to lie to him either.

“It is fine if you don’t want to believe me, but it is very simple to prove it. There is a ‘door’ inside the toilet at your Haunted House. Open it, and you will be able to see the real you.” Doctor Gao’s eyes were still as cold as ice, but there was a smile on his face. “That night, I entered the door. I’ve seen your world, so I know very clearly. When we are placed next to each other, you are the real madman.”

“That door is related to me?” Chen Ge did not know whether Doctor

Gao was purposely leading him down a rabbit hole or being sincere. "Based on what you're saying, I've opened a door before?"

Only those in deepest grasp of despair had the chance to open 'doors'. Chen Ge did not think that he had experienced something that traumatic before, and he had always believed that the door had been pushed open by someone else.

"I am sure of that. You are the door-pusher because I've seen the real you inside that door." Doctor Gao had an unreadable fear in his smile. His lips looked quite unnatural.

"I am the door-pusher?" Chen Ge's heart sunk. "What else do you know?"

"I still know many things. As long as you promise me three things, I will not only tell you everything that I know, I will even help you enter that 'door' and help you find the thing that you are looking for." The blood vessels were bubbling, and the floor was filled with blood threads that seemed to expand on their own. The blood pool behind Doctor Gao was also bubbling. Obviously, Doctor Gao's emotions were changing like he was anticipating Chen Ge's answer. "This is a transaction that is mutually beneficial. There is no reason for you to reject it, right?"

Chen Ge was indeed curious about the world behind the door. When he was thinking, his eyes kept wandering to the blood pool that was changing.

When I first entered, the color of the pool was not as vibrant as this. Chen Ge looked at other places. The flesh on the wall seemed to have wilted like flowers—it had become darker in color, and things were continuously dumped into the pool through the many blood vessels. It looked like Doctor Gao was planning to soak up all the 'nutrients' of this blood world and channel them into the blood pool. Is Doctor Gao trying to buy time?

His mind turned, and Chen Ge came to a more stable solution. As long as he managed to detain Doctor Gao or the wife that he loved the most, then he would definitely have the upper hand.

"What are the three things? Tell me about them first, and I will consider whether to accept the conditions or not." Chen Ge purposely took three steps forward when he said those words as if to prove that he was being sincere.

“When you took those steps, your gait was 0.2 times smaller than usual. This means that you are planning to complete something within your heart, but you are not certain it will succeed. The grip of your hands on the hammer is tighter than usual. Even though you’re trying to make it seem as natural as possible, before your consciousness caught up to this problem, there were about 0.3 seconds when your pinkie subconsciously curled tightly around the handle.” Doctor Gao took out a black wooden box from his pocket. “Looks like you have discovered I am trying to drag the time out. Then again, this might be better. I am not doing all this because I have no confidence in winning. I just wanted to give you a chance, a choice.”

The wooden box opened, and the thick smell of blood flooded the stench that was inside the room. The surrounding blood vessels started to collapse, and innumerable blood threads came out from them and gathered inside the wooden box. About one or two seconds later, a blood red palm that was filled with wounds reached out from inside the wooden box.

Covered with vengeance and fury, a monster that was half twisted and half covered with wounds crawled out from inside the box. The red eyes focused on Chen Ge, and the face that looked like half of it was licked by the flames revealed an ugly smile.

Without any order from Doctor Gao, it charged madly at Chen Ge.

“Xiong Qing?” Chen Ge gripped the hammer with both of his hands, but he did not take a step back. “You are just on time. After consuming you, I will gain another Red Specter! It is time for a feast!”

Chapter 449: How Many Spectres Does He Have?

Half of Xiong Qing's body morphed into blood threads like a wing that was pulled out from his body. Resentment and vengeance filled his gaze. Whenever he saw Chen Ge, he would lose control, and the desire to tear this seemingly harmless man into pieces filled his mind. It was unimaginable that a living man would be a Specter's nightmare, but Chen Ge had somehow managed that. It was Chen Ge who had chased him around the hospital with the hammer that night. Running away like a rat, he had lost all of his pride.

His fury burning, the memory at Coffin Village also appeared in Xiong Qing's mind. He had been tricked again and again. Chen Ge, and Chen Ge alone, dominated his red eyes. There was only one thought in Xiong Qing's mind—Kill him! Kill him with the cruelest method possible!

...

The roar echoed in the surgery room, and Xiong Qing rushed at Chen Ge instantly. The blood red wing opened, and an arm that was filled with wounds reached out for Chen Ge's eyes. The Red Specter was just inches away from him, but there was no reaction in Chen Ge's eyes.

The fingers that were missing skin were surrounded by blood. They were so close that Chen Ge could see the missing flesh between the man's fingernail and finger, but he did not evade. When Xiong Qing's hand was ten centimeters away from his face, it stopped; the wounded hand was held in place by a pale hand. The blood spread, and Xu Yin stood before Chen Ge.

"Is it painful?" The five fingers tensed, and they poked into Xiong Qing's arm like knives. The red flowed like rain, and Xu Yin and Xiong Qing got into each other. Cruel, mad, and holding nothing back, the battle entered the highest part almost instantly!

The blood threads from the world kept crawling into Xiong Qing's body, while Xu Yin had not found his 'heart', so he was technically not a real Red Specter.

"Looks like your friend is not in a good state. He'll be eaten in about ten minutes." Doctor Gao was very familiar with Chen Ge's ability, and he had come up with the solution already.

"It is not going so well, yes, but ten minutes is more than enough." Chen Ge held the hammer, and when he spoke, he already walked to within five meters of Doctor Gao. "I actually don't like to rely on others. When you need to get something done, you need to do it yourself."

In terms of physique, he was much better than Doctor Gao. With the hammer, if they were involved in a physical fight, the prospects were not good for Doctor Gao. Seeing Chen Ge walking toward him with the hammer, Doctor Gao frowned. "Before you arrived, I envisioned twenty-four different scenarios and came up with twenty-four different solutions..."

Before Doctor Gao finished, Chen Ge charged at him with the hammer. He was not going to give the man any chance to speak—his thoughts had been completely read. Facing an opponent as scary as this, the best solution was to talk with the fist. If he was not going to win the battle of the wits, then there was no point coming up with a plan.

The hammer headed for Doctor Gao's skull. At this stage, Chen Ge had no reason to hold back.

The hammerhead knocked into Doctor Gao's shoulder before slamming on the edge of the pool. The blood splattered everywhere. Doctor Gao was still calm, but his face was paler. If he had not evaded it earlier, his head would have caved in already. "Earlier, you were still talking about humanity and justice, and now you viciously charge at me; is this the fairness you speak of?"

Chen Ge raised the hammer again. He had no idea why Doctor Gao was saying these things, but he knew that if he did not apprehend the man soon, he probably would not leave that place alive. Without stopping to think about what Doctor Gao had said, Chen Ge glared at the man. He raised the hammer and charged at him again.

"Evolving from beast to man, we have taken thousands of years, but regressing from man to beast often takes only several minutes. Chen Ge, you shouldn't have acted so rashly." Doctor Gao did not evade this time. He waved his hand lightly. The flesh above them started to move, and the tortured monsters fell down like rain. They were all victims of the ghost stories society. Their resentment was high, and they tried to attack Doctor Gao instinctively, but they could not control their bodies.

The blood threaded through their bodies, joining the flesh and blood. They were controlled to surround Chen Ge. Doctor Gao did not order them to attack but just had them stop Chen Ge. He understood that if he allowed the battle drag on, he would be the ultimate victor.

More monsters fell from the ceiling. This flesh factory had stored all of the dead bodies. After so many years, even Doctor Gao had no idea how many carcasses this place had.

"You are indeed prepared, but you're still one step behind compared to me." Chen Ge took out a plastic bottle from his backpack and let out the spider that had been dead for a long time. "You severely injured this girl at Coffin Village—it is now time for payback."

Many arms reached out from the blood mist and tore apart the carcasses to clear out an empty space. The girl's pretty face was a direct contrast to the twisted arms coming out of her body. She was also a half Red Specter. When her clear eyes landed on Doctor Gao, her expression started to twist like she had remembered something awful.

This new Specter was Jiang Ling's sister, Zhu Xinrou. When they were in Coffin Village, Doctor Gao had broken half of her arms. Specters were all vengeful entities. They would always take vengeance. Once targeted, they would never let go!

A screech echoed through the room. Zhu Xinrou placed her arms on the ground and crawled forward like a spider. The scene looked weird and scary.

"Stop her!" Doctor Gao's expression still had not changed much—it was so hard to read. While Doctor Gao gave his order, Chen Ge also called out all the ghosts to help Zhu Xinrou clear the way. Neither party stepped back while speculating how many trump cards the other party had.

The cadavers that fell from the ceiling were mostly the society's victims. Their resentment was directed at Doctor Gao. Furthermore, they were just normal ghosts, so they were powerless before Zhu Xinrou.

It did not take long for Zhu Xinrou to charge her way through. To make things worse for Doctor Gao, Chen Ge was hiding behind Zhu Xinrou with the hammer. This man who had spoken of fairness and justice earlier seemed to have forgotten his own speech. From the looks of things, he was looking for an opportunity to launch an ambush.

“Just how many specters do you have? This is the first time I’ve met such a troublesome person.” Doctor Gao looked at Chen Ge, but the latter was not up for a conversation. As the battle continued and more trump cards were revealed, Doctor Gao had a harder and harder time reading Chen Ge.

“Six more minutes!”

More cadavers fell from the ceiling, and the bodies teetered as they tried to stand up. Their bodies filled the room with a disgusting stench. They were not afraid of death, and they followed Doctor Gao's orders to assault Chen Ge.

...

The employees surrounded Chen Ge to protect him. Among them, the boy with the stench gave Chen Ge a great surprise. As he consumed the stench of decay, he kept growing, and his own scent also became more obvious.

The smell seemed to have affected the dead bodies around him as well. They were controlled by the blood thread, but once they were inside the zone of the boy's stench, their movement slowed down, and the madness in their eyes was slowly replaced by disgust. The victims' original target was not Chen Ge to begin with, so after they felt disgusted, their resistance to Doctor Gao's orders became more obvious.

The bodies started to slow down, and the resistance against Zhu Xinrou felt became smaller. The half Red Specter showed her true power. Her arms opened, and like a large spider, she charged through the crowd, creating chaos and massacring!

“Time's up!” Chen Ge hid behind Zhu Xinrou, but his eyes were locked onto Doctor Gao. He dragged the hammer, finding the time to charge forward. Doctor Gao stood next to the blood pool, and he was expressionless, facing the sea that seemed to have no bottom.

“Chen Ge, it still came to this. Ever since I first met you, I've tried to stop us from getting to this stage, but fate cannot be changed.” Doctor Gao sighed. This was the first time since Chen Ge knew Doctor Gao that he had heard him sigh. “Since conflict cannot be avoided, I will use my own way to resolve this.”

Doctor Gao looked at Zhu Xinrou, who was still growing, and he raised his hand again. "It is time to end this petty game."

Zhu Xinrou got closer to Doctor Gao, but the doctor did not panic. As his arm slowly raised, the blood in the pool continued to rise. It looked like there was a scary monster living inside it.

"This is my world." The expression on Doctor Gao's face slowly changed; it spoke of absolute confidence. "This place is mine!"

The pool churned to form a whirlpool. At the deepest part of the pool lay a woman in a blood red wedding dress. Her skin was glowing red. Other than that, she looked perfectly normal, sleeping on a bed of blood and dead bodies.

She looked so pure and innocent, but underneath her were endless body parts! It felt like she was still alive and using the dead bodies as a bed and pillow.

"Chen Ge, this is my wife, the core of this door and my entire world."

When Zhu Xinrou was two meters away from Doctor Gao, the woman inside the pool seemed to have felt something. Her lashes twitched before her eyes peeled open!

The blood flushed, and everything started to boil!

The woman's presence was stronger than all of the Specters that Chen Ge had ever met. She was part of the blood pool, and when she awakened, so did the entire blood world. The organs danced, and the blood vessels expanded. This woman was the heart of this world; everything there was possible because of her. The blood red dress dragged out from the pool. The blood formed into steps as she walked toward Chen Ge.

The indescribable pressure made Zhu Xinrou stop. She did not dare move, as a single wrong step would cause her to be demolished.

"Only a Red Specter can fight a Red Specter." Doctor Gao seemed to have planned everything. Only when his eyes fell on the woman would they soften.

"Chen Ge, you'll never win. Once you stepped through that door, you'd already lost." Doctor Gao's expression returned to normal, like everything had returned to his expected tracks. "I know you well, and it's because I know you well that I felt so uneasy. The ghosts around you are growing at an unprecedented speed. If this had dragged on any longer, the situation would only have gotten worse for me.”

“So, you created this illusion of leaving Jiujiang to make me lower my guard and enter the underground morgue?”

“I knew that you might have guessed this beforehand, but based on my understanding of you, even if you knew this might be a trap, you would still come. There is a demon living in your heart that will only continue to lead you deeper into the abyss.” Doctor Gao looked at Chen Ge, and this was the first time that there had been uncertainty on his face. “The confusing thing is that you seem to like this experience.”

“Why would you say that?” Chen Ge thought Doctor Gao was past trying to drag the conversation; he sounded sincere. Chen Ge himself was feeling nervous, being diagnosed of this illness by a top psychologist.

“You are the strangest patient whom I’ve met. You make me curious and excited. I will make sure to preserve your soul and then conduct the treatment.” Doctor Gao thought he had the victory, and while he was distracted, Chen Ge took two more steps forward to close the gap between them.

Doctor Gao knew that there was another Red Specter on Chen Ge, and it was the strongest Red Specter that Chen Ge had.

“No one can fight the Red Specter?” Chen Ge grabbed the hammer. He did not slow down but charged full speed ahead with the Red Specter watching him!

The woman looked at Chen Ge, and multiple blood threads weaved into chains to rush out from the pool. They were like blood constrictors as they tried to yank Chen Ge into the pool. The air was filled with the smell of blood. The chains rattled, but Chen Ge did not retreat, instead continuing forward.

“Men Nan!” The blood chains that came at Chen Ge were stopped by an invisible force. A five-year-old boy came out from Chen Ge’s side with a dark face.

“Using my own life to force me out, you sure are something else!” The day before Chen Ge came to the morgue, he had visited Third Sick

Hall again. Using the reason that Doctor Gao would control him through his side persona, he finally convinced Men Nan.

“You throw me to fight this type of opponent immediately. Chen Ge, the biggest mistake of my life was trusting your words!” Men Nan roared as he blocked the woman’s chains. He was slammed into by the chains, and with just one hit, his body lightened greatly.

“Help me hold on for three minutes!” Chen Ge charged at Doctor Gao without turning back. This was his last chance. As long as he managed to kill Doctor Gao, everything would be over. All the ghosts had been stopped, and this was a perfect chance for Chen Ge. He charged at Doctor Gao like a madman, but to his consternation, even at a stage like this, Doctor Gao was still so calm.

“Chen Ge, you’ve surprised me, but you have overlooked one thing.” The white coat that he was wearing started to surface with blood threads to knit into a complicated picture.

Chapter 451 - Changing Shadow

Chapter 451: Changing Shadow

“I pushed the door open, and you are in my world.” Time seemed to have slowed down. As Doctor Gao’s emotions changed, the whole blood world seemed to be affected as well. “There is no absolute bad or wrong, good or evil in this world. Even the so-called sins are human constructs.”

Doctor Gao stood where he was quietly. Many blood threads crawled out from his body and morphed into different human faces. “I know you suspect me of creating a reason for myself, but when you stand in my perspective, you’ll realize I’m doing the right thing—or at least you cannot judge me for committing a simple sin.”

...

“Doctor Gao, stop arguing. No matter who is it, no one, not even I, would do something this crazy!” Chen Ge raised the hammer. He was close to Doctor Gao. “Everything has its opposite in this world. If there’s good, there’s evil. The difference is the choice; since you have made the choice, why are you finding yourself the reason?”

Xu Yin and Xiong Qing’s battle was equal. Men Nan was not a match for Doctor Gao’s wife—the battle might seem evenly-matched for now, but it would collapse in a few minutes. If Chen Ge wanted to win, he had to deal with Doctor Gao before that was over. If he showed a single speck of kindness, it would be over for him. He did not want to suffer endless torment of having his soul experimented on by a madman after death.

The blood rain fell on their bodies, and Doctor Gao listened to what Chen Ge had to say seriously. He looked at the hammer that flew at him, and complicated emotions collected in his eyes.

“You still haven’t understood this world. The world is constructed by people; it is different in different people’s eyes. Like you said, everything has its opposite in this world; the opposite of good is evil. So, tell me, what is the opposite of human?”

“Opposite of human?” Chen Ge’s heart skipped a beat. He felt like he had heard that before, but he could not remember where. The hammer almost reached his body. The wind was whipping in his ears, but Doctor Gao still did not move. His eyes that looked at Chen Ge seemed to be inhabiting a different world.

Chen Ge remembered something vaguely in his mind—he seemed to have had a similar conversation with someone before. “The opposite of human is beast, monster, or ghost.”

“They are all wrong. I’ve researched man for so many years, and if we have to pinpoint something that is opposite of man, it should be God.”

The blood bloomed on Doctor Gao’s coat like a rose. It started to crawl up the coat like it signified salvation and life. “For the past five years, I’ve spent every night in the accompaniment of bodies, staying inside this underground morgue, building my own world. Slowly, I forgot the purpose of being human—I even forgot that I was a human. I’ve seen more than one thousand patients and the different worlds they inhabit. Some are twisted; some are just weird. I’ve been wondering, these people that seem to exist only in their own world, could they be considered human?

“Or perhaps from another perspective, all insane people are the Gods of their own world.”

When he finished, Doctor Gao’s coat was completely dyed red. “This is my world; I am the God here. How can a human resist God?”

The hammer fell on Doctor Gao’s head. If one looked closer, one could see the hammer head touching his hair, and it squeezed several hairs. Chen Ge used all of his strength, but the hammer would not move another millimeter.

“Stop wasting your energy As I’ve said, from the moment you entered the door, you’d lost.” Swathed in red, Doctor Gao exposed a side that was completely different from before. His eyes were burning red, and various negative emotions piled up in his heart.

Despair. Anger. Disgust. Pain.

His body seemed to have connected with the blood world, and he suffered the pain of this world alone. If the world behind the door was a nightmare for the door-pusher, then Doctor Gao was the man who swallowed the nightmare whole. He bore all of the sins with his unhinged madness.

“Chen Ge, stay with me. You will become my best assistant, and I will try my best to cure your illness.”

The red shirt on Doctor Gao seemed to represent this world—Chen Ge could see the many souls crying on it. He wondered how the madman managed to accomplish all that.

“To use the whole society to trade for you, this is a huge bet.” His fingers grabbed the hammer, and the blood on the hammer slowly got consumed by the blood on Doctor Gao’s coat. “Stop resisting, and stay here forever!”

The negative emotions in Doctor Gao’s eyes were overflowing. He was at the edge of losing control. He reached out toward Chen Ge like he was about to pluck his heart out. The fingertips were like knives that easily cut through Chen Ge’s skin. Chen Ge did not feel pain but a chill in his heart.

Doctor Gao was moving so fast and without warning. He did not make a move earlier, but once he did, he reached for the jugular. His chest felt frozen, but suddenly, Doctor Gao stopped moving.

There was surprise in his eyes. “You want to help him?”

Hearing Doctor Gao’s voice, Chen Ge looked down. A small doll with a cut face stood between Chen Ge and Doctor Gao. Its body was punctured, and it tried to resist, but the black hair in its body locked it in place.

Zhang Ya had made this doll using the soul of the patient called Devil in the Third Sick Hall. Since it was a gift from Zhang Ya, Chen Ge had carried it with him. However, he did not expect it to save him in the nick of time. It felt like the doll could help him block the fatal blow once.

“Then again, what’s the point?” Doctor Gao ignored the doll, and the fingers pierced through it. The black hair binding the doll slowly broke. Whenever one hair snapped, the shadow behind Chen Ge darkened.

Doctor Gao seemed to have sensed something as well. Anxiety circled his heart, and he did not waste time. He only had one purpose then, which was to kill Chen Ge!

The young man before him gave him an indescribable sense of danger, and the scariest thing was that the sense of danger was mounting.

The doll was punctured through by Doctor Gao, and his fingertips reached for Chen Ge's heart.

The cold fingers peeled open Chen Ge's skin. Doctor Gao's hand that was covered by blood threads pierced through the doll. He was attempting to reach into Chen Ge's chest to pluck out his heart. The sound of his beating heart was amplified in Chen Ge's ears. However, Chen Ge could feel no pain, only a certain iciness.

The organ that was supposed to supply his body with warmth was now frozen. The bone-chilling tingle spread from his heart to the rest of his body. His brain froze, and he could not sense the passing of time. Chen Ge tried to gather all the strength in his heart, but all he could do was move his eyes. He watched as Doctor Gao's hand reached through the door. The black hair that bound the doll's limbs and joints started to collapse and snap under the pressure.

...

The black hair fell in the blood rain, and Chen Ge felt something important leaving his body. He was familiar with that feeling. Initially, it was fear, then concern, but starting from a moment later, many other things were mixed in as well. It was more than pity; it was a feeling that Chen Ge himself had a hard time explaining. The heart slowed down, and Doctor Gao's fingers were just right above his heart.

The blood threads that were formed from despair crawled away from Doctor Gao's fingers. They were climbing toward Chen Ge's heart to replace the blood vessels around it. They were preparing to surround his heart from all sides and perfectly remove it. "You are the person that I admire the most. I will help you preserve this heart."

The heart was the warmest place in Chen Ge's body. It also gave Doctor Gao a sense of warmth that he had not felt for a long time. His hands slowly closed. Just as he was about to grip the heart, the shadows behind Chen Ge rippled, and a woman's voice could be heard echoing through the entire blood world. "Let go."

All the ghosts and carcasses stopped moving. Even the owner of this world, Doctor Gao, subconsciously stopped what he was doing. The shadow that was as dark as night was like an abyss that opened up on the ground. Looking down, it was a wave of black hair that was expanding quickly!

Chen Ge was facing Doctor Gao, so he had no idea what was happening behind him. This was also the first time he had heard the woman's voice. She had only said two words, but it had managed to ignite the hope in his heart. His frozen train of thought started to run again. Chen Ge's heart that was close to being plucked out started to beat, and a familiar name appeared in it. "Zhang Ya?"

The reply he got was a scream that seemed to shake the whole world down to its core!

The shadow behind him dissolved into a dark sea in an instant. Endless black hair flooded the place and slammed into everything with the cruelest method. She did not hold back and tore everything that was caught in the wave of hair into pieces!

The doll had already completed its mission, so it morphed into a black cloud. There was unwillingness in its departure. Doctor Gao was forced back. His expression was livid; his perfect plan had been poked through by a sudden intruder.

He had purposely exposed his weakness and even gone to the hospital to drop a huge hint for Chen Ge. He had used the scapegoat to send false information to the police to trick Chen Ge, all to lure the man into the underground morgue. Doctor Gao knew full well that there was a top Red Specter living in Chen Ge's shadow. However, since she had consumed too many Red Specters, so she had entered a slumber, and this was the perfect time to deal with Chen Ge!

He had controlled the blood door for many years already and had conducted many experiments on Red Specters. He was familiar with the fact that Red Specters needed to hibernate after consuming too many Specters. It was also because he was familiar with that fact that he had come up with this trap.

Alas, something that he could not have foreseen occurred. When the woman's voice appeared in this world, things had already gotten out from his control. Various negative emotions flashed across his eyes. Doctor Gao stared intensely at the black hair that rushed at him. The hair came at the Specters and cadavers like a tsunami, swallowing everything in its path.

"This is my world..."

Where Chen Ge stood was the center of the black hair. There was an open wound on his chest, and the blood kept leaking. His body temperature gradually dropped. Chen Ge's body teetered, and just as he was about to collapse, he felt a familiar sense of coldness on his back.

It was without malice; if anything, it felt like a hug. He reached his hand behind him, and Chen Ge touched something cold. The blood continued to drip down his palm. Several strands of hair curled up his arm to sew up the wound on his chest. The very last strand did not pluck itself off but sewed itself into Chen Ge's heart.

Chen Ge slowly turned his head around, and standing half a step behind him was a woman wearing a red dress. The dark red blood flowed on the dress, and the beautiful face slowly lifted. Chen Ge's shadow was reflected in her bloodshot eyes.

"Zhang Ya, long time no see." His hands slowly raised. Chen Ge used all the energy in his body to try to grab her shoulders. He seemed to try to pull her into his embrace, but he was so weak that he could not even do that anymore. His pale lips slowly opened, and Chen Ge uttered in a tone that he had a hard time deciphering, "The man tried to steal the home that I've prepared for you..."

Before he could say a second sentence, the black hair held Chen Ge up. The Red Specter behind him opened her arms and walked past him with a gentleness that was extremely rare.

When the Red Specter walked past Chen Ge, the gentleness on her face completely disappeared. In its place was endless resentment and the desire to kill. There were emotions akin to a bloody sea roiling in her eyes. The black hair poked into the surgery room that was made from flesh, and the whole world started to scream.

Pieces of flesh were peeled out from the wall, and similar injuries appeared on Doctor Gao's body. Blood was leaking from his body, but he did not react in any way. He had prepared for this worst scenario as well!

"Looks like after tonight, I will need to go look for a new 'door'." Doctor Gao opened his arms, and the organs in the room started to align their beating into the same tempo. "You cannot win."

He leaned backward to fall into the pool. Several seconds later, the blood world continued changing. The bubbles started to form inside the pool like a monster was breathing.

When Chen Ge entered the underground morgue for the first time, he had heard this sound; when he entered the place the second time with Liu Xianxian and Ma Yin, he had also heard this sound.

Something was coming out from the pool. The red dress stood beside the pool. Zhang Ya looking down into it.

Her expression did not change. She was not worried about the thing that might appear from the pool. To her, whether it was a ghost or a god, as long as it could be killed, it was all the same.

Doctor Gao sank into the pool. His body dropped on top of the pile of cadavers, and various arms pulled him down into the abyss. Bubbles escaped from underneath the pile of dead bodies. Slowly, the dead bodies that covered the blood pool started to shake. All the bodies seemed to have come back alive and charged at the pile like starving individuals fighting over food.

The blood inside the pool started to decrease at a rate observable to the naked eye. The blood morphed into red threads and crawled into the pile of dead bodies, sewing them all together.

...

The flesh on the walls wilted, and the blood vessels on the ceiling that supported the entire world snapped and collapsed. The world was irreversibly damaged, and the emotions that created the world were sucked out. The doctor standing amid the endless bodies suffered all this despair alone.

A hand made from dead bodies reached out of the pool. The arm, legs, and the deformed body were all twisted together. Blood dripped, and the monstrosity was covered with blood threads. The hand slammed on the edge of the pool heavily, crushing it. The five fingers gripped the ground, and a bestial roar came from the deepest depths of the pool!

In the roaring blood sea, another hand that was constructed from cadavers reached out from the viscous liquid. The whole world was shaking, and a large monster climbed out from the pool. It was made completely of dead bodies, and the blood threads were exposed on the body's surface. It had no nose or eyes but a gaping maw.

The entire head consisted of human faces that were screaming. The monster raised its arm, and many cadavers fell, pulled by gravity, but it did not mind that as it tried to swipe at Zhang Ya!

Compared to the monster that was constructed from all the cadavers in the surgery room, Zhang Ya appeared so small—they were not on the same level. However, facing this monster, Zhang Ya showed no sign of dodging. The red dress stood where she was. She stared at the monster before her, and the madness was ignited in her eyes!

She showed a version of herself that Chen Ge had not seen before. Facing away from Chen Ge's pale face, dark veins pulsed on her face, and her eyes were filled with murder and venom!

She was a Red Specter, a real Red Specter!

The shrill scream echoed in the room, and the black hair rushed forward like waves. Perhaps because she had consumed the dark blood, Zhang Ya's hair seemed to have become darker, and from a far, the rush of hair looked like the coming of the endless night. Without evading, without waiting for the monster's hand to fall, Zhang Ya's hair rammed into the monster.

A large chunk of cadavers fell, and the monster's hand was blocked. It could not slam down but was slowly lifted upward. The monster's split mouth roared, and more cadavers fell from its lips. It could not believe this Red Specter could manage to stop it and had an even harder time believing that this Red Specter was even more unreasonable than it was.

It lifted its other hand, but before it could make a move, the black hair had already swallowed everything. Things shook even harder, and the surgery room felt like it was about to collapse.

Doctor Gao, who had gathered everything he had, was still on the losing end. Things had gone off track to such a state that all he could then was try his best to kill Zhang Ya. Another scream escaped from the monster's lips. The woman who was fighting with Men Nan paused, and the blood on the red wedding dress started to move.

She heard Doctor Gao's voice and traded wounds for wounds. Risking the danger of having her arm torn off, she poked her other arm into Men Nan's stomach to heavily injure the boy. Without stopping to consume Men Nan, the woman dragged her wedding dress and charged at Zhang Ya.

"Be careful!" Chen Ge gripped the hammer and wanted to help but was stopped by the black hair. Zhang Ya turned to give Chen Ge a view of her profile. The black veins were getting more obvious on her face, and Zhang Ya split out a part of her black hair to deal with Doctor Gao's wife. She did not seem like she understood the concept of defense, and no matter the enemy, she would choose offense over defense.

The assault of the black hair caused the woman in the wedding dress to increase in speed. It was not until then that Chen Ge and Men Nan realized that she had been reserving her strength. Just as the woman was about to get entangled by the black hair, her body exploded into numerous birds.

Each of the birds was small, and they had no legs. This meant that they could only fly forward to charge at Zhang Ya. Some of the birds were stopped by the black hair, but some of them reached Zhang Ya. They collided together and transformed back into the woman with the wedding dress.

The black hair was too far away from her to return. This was an opening. Zhang Ya had lost the protection of her hair. Her fingers that were sharp as knife reached for Zhang Ya's face. Zhang Ya had no defense, but there was no fear in her eyes, like such emotions had been shattered the moment she faced death. The woman was very fast, but just as she was about to poke through Zhang Ya's eyes, no one heard the voice of the man at the corner.

“Yan Danian!”

When the woman morphed into the birds, Chen Ge had already activated Yan Danian's power—Spirit Drawing. It had a chance to pull normal Specter into the comic and had the chance to freeze a Red Specter for half a second.

In that crucial half a second, the black hair had already returned. The black veins pulsed on Zhang Ya's face as they crawled forward. She raised her hand to grab the woman's arm. The woman also realized the problem. She immediately morphed into the flock of birds, but this time, most of her body had been consumed by the black hair, which stood at the ready.

The ambush failed, and the woman suffered grievous damage, causing her body to turn transparent.

Due to the damage suffered by the woman, the monster in the pool lost its rationality and started to attack Zhang Ya madly. The woman's arms were swallowed by the black hair. Black veins popped up on Zhang Ya's neck. She was not just manipulating the hair now. After she consumed the black blood, something seemed to have happened to her hair.

Facing away from Chen Ge, Zhang Ya did not let Chen Ge see her face. Her eyes were swirling with vengeance, and as she controlled her hair, she pulled both the woman in wedding dress and the corpse amalgamation into the fray.

“Has she lost her mind? Even if she’s a Red Specter...”

The wound on Men Nan’s stomach was recovering. His body slowly turned transparent, and he was preparing to sneak away when he saw how cruel Zhang Ya was. He started to have second thoughts.

“Men Nan! Come with me, deal with him first!” Chen Ge was calmer than anyone there. While Zhang Ya was dealing with the two, he called all of his employees to surround Xiong Qing!

“If Xu Yin can consume Xiong Qing, they will lose one Red Specter, and we will gain another!”

Chapter 454 - The Last Red Specter

Chapter 454: The Last Red Specter

The black hair dragged the monster and the woman into it. It looked like a suspended black ocean from outside, completely barring the blood world. The people on the outside had no idea what was happening inside.

“Don’t mind them!” Chen Ge was straightforward. Since he had no power to intrude into the fight between Zhang Ya and the other two Red Specters, if he wanted to help Zhang Ya, he had to figure out a different method. Xiong Qing, who was isolated, was perhaps the opening.

...

Xu Yin and Xiong Qing’s battle had reached the climax, and Xu Yin’s body had started to crack with wounds. Blood flowed out, but the more intense the pain, the stronger he became. In contrast, things were not looking good for Xiong Qing. After Doctor Gao stole all the blood from the world, Xiong Qing had lost the blood world’s support, so he no longer had the home field advantage.

Hearing Chen Ge’s call, Men Nan pouted and controlled the blood mist unwillingly as he walked toward Xiong Qing. The boy had no choice. If he did not help Chen Ge, after Doctor Gao dealt with Zhang Ya, he would be next. Turning back to sneak a look at the endless black hair, fear crossed his eyes. If he helped Chen Ge deal with Doctor Gao, he was afraid that he would be Zhang Ya’s next meal. He lamented his weakness. He had brought shame to the name of Red Specter. However, with no better solution, he could only try his best to help Chen Ge and pray that the man would say a few good words for his sake before Zhang Ya.

“I must have lost my mind back then! Why would I tell him that the best way to become a Red Specter is to consume a Red Specter?” Xu Yin and Xiong Qing continued to trade blows. They fought like they had no use for their lives. Men Nan tried to find the opportunity to sneak in some attacks, and the other employees also surrounded them.

The pressure on Xiong Qing increased. There were no fewer wounds on his body than Xu Yin's, and his wounded body was almost at his limit.

"Do not give him the chance to rest! Get him!" Chen Ge was out for blood. Xiong Qing had tried to kill him so many times, so of course, he would not show the man mercy. From Chen Ge's perspective, Xiong Qing was the key to winning this battle. If Xu Yin could consume Xiong Qing, their chance of winning would increase tremendously.

Compared to a one-on-one fight, Chen Ge was more familiar with swamping his enemy with numbers. He grabbed the comic, looking for an opening. Xiong Qing was very familiar with Chen Ge. If anyone was targeted by this man, regardless of whether they were a ghost or a living person, their ending would not be good. The man was like misfortune incarnate—only by killing him could he sigh in relief.

The ghosts assaulted him, and the wounds on Xiong Qing's body increased. He felt like a lamb surrounded by wolves. The most horrible thing was that the ghosts had no honor and exploited tactics like ambushing to their maximum. They kept picking his blind spots to attack.

"Too slow! Don't hold back!" Chen Ge urged his people. Men Nan finally made his move. His body slowly morphed into the blood mist and hid behind Bai Qiulin. A few ghosts were swept away by Xiong Qing's blood wing. Bai Qiulin skipped upward and used this opportunity to bite at Xiong Qing's neck.

He was too slow, at least much slower than Xiong Qing. Before he got close, Xiong Qing had already responded. The blood curled together to form a needle to pierce at Bai Qiulin. Just as the needle was about to puncture Bai Qiulin, the blood mist moved him away, and it slipped through the attack to cover itself around Xiong Qing's head.

"Such trouble." The mist condensed into Men Nan's shape. He stood on Xiong Qing's shoulders, and his fingers pierced directly into Xiong Qing's neck!

"I disliked you when you were at the Third Sick Hall. Kept telling me ghost stories about the broken hands under the bed, and now look, we're both ghosts! I have no reason to be afraid of you anymore!"

His eyes turned red, and his expression twisted. Men Nan did not reach his fingers deeper into Xiong Qing's neck. Instead, it looked like the boy plan to yank the head right off. Facing two Red Specters and on the brink of death, Xiong Qing unleashed his full potential. The half of his body that was covered with injuries exploded, and the blood threads slowly reknitted themselves in the air.

“This world is uneven and unfair; it should be given the necessary correctional treatment!” Xiong Qing’s remaining eye stared straight at Chen Ge. “All I ever wanted is fairness!”

Xiong Qing had turned from a doctor to a patient because he suffered from hemineglect. Everyone knew he was sick, but no one knew why he was sick—perhaps only Doctor Gao knew his actual diagnosis. Chen Ge realized that he had underestimated the power of the Red Specter. The fact that Xiong Qing had been selected by the society and transformed into Red Specter meant that there had to be something special about him.

This specialty might not be physical but mental. The blood threads expanded, and Xiong Qing’s other half was also slowly unraveling. His body had always been uneven—he had looked like half human and half ghost, but at that moment, his body was slowly turning into a full ghost.

“Stop him!” Chen Ge used Yan Danian’s power again to create the opportunity for Men Nan and Xu Yin. Just as their battle was about to reach its climax, the sea that was created from black hair boomed with an echo!

The black hair expanded, and many carcasses fell from the sky. The blood rained, and in that whole area, only a red shadow stood. Other than her, no one else was standing. The ceiling above them cracked like it would collapse at any moment. Chen Ge wanted to deal with Xiong Qing to help Zhang Ya, but she had already won the battle.

“Already won?” He glanced toward the blood pool. The red dress stood in the middle of the blood rain. Zhang Ya was facing away from Chen Ge, and he could only see her back. “Zhang Ya’s dress seems to have deepened in color—her arm is bleeding!”

With Yin Yang Vision, Chen Ge could see these things clearly. He had Men Nan and Xu Yin continue to attack Xiong Qing while he slowly approached Zhang Ya with the hammer. He wanted to check personally because that Red Specter that was shining like a red sun seemed to have been injured.

The black hair fluttered on the ground. When Chen Ge got close enough, he saw the seriously wounded Doctor Gao sitting next to the blood pool with his wife in his arms. His wife's body was severely damaged, and he seemed to have exploded the cadaver monstrosity to escape from Zhang Ya's black hair because he was worried about his wife's safety.

"Zhang Ya, is your arm injured?" Chen Ge stood next to Zhang Ya, but the latter's reaction was weird. She turned her head away like she did not hear Chen Ge, and when he looked again, the blood stain on her arm had already disappeared.

Chen Ge moved his gaze to look at Doctor Gao. "Follow me to the police station. Regardless of whether you're right or wrong, there has to be someone who answers to the loss of more than one hundred human lives."

"Answer?" Doctor Gao lifted his head. With one hand holding his wife and his other supporting his body, he slowly stood up. "Chen Ge, you might not believe me when I say this, but I foresaw this possibility as well. Everything that has happened, I predicted it all a week ago."

Doctor Gao hugged his heavily-injured wife and leaned against the blood pool. He reached his hand into his white coat. He was barely standing, and Chen Ge knew that he had no energy left to pose a threat. Yet, in that condition, Doctor Gao still had a smile on his face, and that smile made Chen Ge uncomfortable. The blood world was collapsing, and the flesh that made up the walls and floor lost its color. Even the blood rain was drying up.

“I am familiar with every single Specter that you have, including Men Nan from the Third Sick Hall. I’ve predicted everything, and this scenario did cross my mind a few times.” Doctor Gao took out a sticky notebook that was covered with blood from his pocket and tossed it at Chen Ge.

...

For the sake of safety, Chen Ge did not reach out to grab it and allowed the notebook to fall to the ground. The book fell open, and the draft flipped through the many pages. It was filled with the predictions of what might have happened. Looking at the date, they had been written a few days ago.

“Why are you showing me this? To prove that you did not lose in terms of intelligence?” Chen Ge also had a habit of recording important stuff, and in that regard, he was really similar to Doctor Gao.

“I just want to tell you that everything is part of my design. I want to force myself into a decision. Only when you have no other options and no hope will you make the most correct choice.” Doctor Gao reached into his coat again to pull out a sharp scalpel from his pocket.

“In these five years, I’ve done multiple experiments, but I cannot find a way to awaken my wife. She has lost all of her memory, and I cannot find her soul. I can only order her to do something to lie to myself. I know that when she was pushed into the emergency room, I'd already lost her." Doctor Gao looked at the reflection on the scalpel. He hugged his wife, whose expression was rather dumb without an order from Doctor Gao. "Everything I did was to bring her back. Is that not a simple wish?"

When Doctor Gao spoke, black threads crawled out from the cadavers around him, and they drilled into his body. The black threads carried with them heavy negative emotions. They were formed from pure negative feelings.

"This day has finally arrived. It is sooner than I expected; I originally planned to make this decision after Xiao Xue's wedding."

"What are you trying to say?" Doctor Gao's emotions were very unstable, and Chen Ge silently called after Zhang Ya.

"Actually, in his blood world, there is another hidden Specter." Doctor Gao's eyes were so emotionless that it was quite scary.

"Another Specter?"

The black threads kept crawling into Doctor Gao's body. These were more than one hundred human lives that had been taken by the ghost stories society.

"Chen Ge, you've been to Coffin Village, so you should know, after death, the door-pusher will become the scariest Specter." Doctor Gao raised the scalpel, and the black threads danced in a maddened frequency in his eyes. The whiteness in his eyes was completely eclipsed, and his eyes turned as black as onyx. "Actually, I'm curious about what is above a Red Specter!"

As a doctor, Doctor Gao knew which part of his body to hit to deliver a fatal blow!

The silver blade plunged downward, and no one was close enough to stop him. This happened so suddenly. Chen Ge did not expect Doctor Gao's last trump card to be himself. No wonder he was able to keep his cool. Like he said, he was already prepared for any eventuality.

"The last Specter in this world will be Doctor Gao, who pushed the door open." Chen Ge looked at the man from afar. When Zhang Ya's hair curled around Doctor Gao's arm, the blade had already punctured his skin. No one could stop him. Just as Chen Ge was about to give up, there was a scream of a girl coming from the door. "Dad!"

The familiar voice reminded Chen Ge of someone, but said person had not used such a tone in her words before. In his mind, the girl was calm in the face of everything. She used the hardest shell to protect her heart.

Turning back, a fair girl stood at the entrance. She looked at Doctor Gao with red-rimmed eyes, her fingers tightly intertwined. Behind the girl were two crematorium workers. They slowly walked out with shaking legs.

“Gao Ru Xue?” Chen Ge thought back to the fact that he had visited Gao Ru Xue before he came to the underground morgue. When he left, he had even covered her with a blanket.

Hearing his daughter’s voice, Doctor Gao’s hand paused, and the blade stopped moving. However, he did not stop completely. Two different types of emotions battled in his black eyes, and the blade inched down his skin little by little.

When Gao Ru Xue saw this, she screamed and cried as she ran toward Doctor Gao. The scalpel was still reaching toward the heart. When it was a third of the way through, five slender fingers reached out from Doctor Gao’s embrace to lightly curl around his hand that held the scalpel.

His body shook—there was a shock and clarity in Doctor Gao’s dark eyes. He turned to look at the woman in his embrace with disbelief. At that moment, he had not given the woman any orders. The man and the body seemed to have frozen in time. Gao Ru Xue finally caught up to them. Her warm hands gripped Doctor Gao’s hand tightly.

“Please follow me home.” Feeling the warmth on the back of his hand, Doctor Gao looked at the wife in his embrace. That five slender fingers were between his hand and Gao Ru Xue’s like she wanted to grab hold of both of them at the same time.

The black threads in his eyes were temporarily suspended, and the pupils slowly returned to normal. Doctor Gao released his hands that held the scalpel. He held his wife’s hand and then turned to look at Gao Ru Xue.

“This is the first time you’ve called me...”

“I know what you’ve been doing, and I wanted to help you keep the secret, so I didn’t dare tell anyone anything. I couldn’t even sleep peacefully at night because I was afraid that I might say something wrong in my sleep!" Gao Ru Xue was detached and disliked human interaction. She finally revealed the reason why; she had been hiding this secret for so long.

"I know." Doctor Gao did not touch Gao Ru Xue, as if afraid that he might curse the girl with his touch.

Gao Ru Xue held Doctor Gao's white coat, which was dyed with blood, and used a pleading tone to beg, "Dad, let's go home."

Shaking his head, Doctor Gao tightened his embrace to pull his wife closer. "From the moment I pushed the door open five years ago, it has been destined that I cannot go back."

He moved his gaze to look at Chen Ge, and he grabbed the scalpel stuck in his chest again.

Blood flowed out from the wound, and the madness in the doctor's slowly receded. The way he looked at Chen Ge reminded Chen Ge of the first time he met the good doctor at Fang Hwa Apartments. He was confident but mature, a man with a story. "I should be the only one who can understand you. All of your reactions, I've predicted them one week ago. I cannot lose unless I have no intention of winning from the very beginning."

His grip tightened and slowly pulled the scalpel out of his chest.

Chapter 456: The Third Door

The scalpel fell to the ground, releasing a sharp tingle. Doctor Gao held his heart. As his life slowly disappeared, the black threads in his eyes returned. “At the moment of death for the door-pusher, the stronger the resentment around them, the stronger the Specter they will be become after death. This is why I have been cultivating this world behind the door since five years ago. Every inch of this place is filled with despair and blood.” Doctor Gao hugged the wife in his arms. “Human power is limited, and I have already reached my limit. To find her, I need to acquire a stronger power.”

“Therefore, you’ve been planning to become a Specter for five years?”

...

“Lingering spirit, baleful Specter, Red Specter—I’ve been thinking about what is above a Red Specter. Perhaps if I reach that state, I can finally accomplish what I want.” The black threads in Doctor Gao’s eyes were running out of control; he would be losing it soon. “Chen Ge, while I still retain my sanity, I wish to make a trade with you.”

“You want me to help revive your wife?”

“Not that, it won’t go against your morality.”

“Tell me.” Doctor Gao was not acting right. Chen Ge was unsure what this madman might do next, so he thought to agree to his demand first.

“Since you have visited the Third Sick Hall, you should have noticed that many things the society did is related to the number three; this number is very special to me. It represents Room 3 in the Third Sick Hall, the three people in my heart, and the three doors the society owns.”

“Three doors?” Chen Ge sucked in a breath. He had thought that the society only had two doors—he did not expect that they would have a third door other than the underground morgue and the Third Sick Hall doors.

“The door is in Eastern Jiujiang’s Li Wan City. It is a door that has gone completely out of control.” Doctor Gao’s body was shaking. The threads made from despair and negative emotions crawled all over his body. “One third of the stuff that the society has accumulated over the last five years is behind that door, and I can give you everything inside it.”

“Are you kidding? The door has already gone out of control; even if there’s a treasure inside, I’ll need to be alive to enjoy it.” Doctor Gao was willing to surrender all of the things that the society had gathered, which was indeed tempting to Chen Ge, but what the man said about the door losing control unnerved him.

“That is the content of the trade. I hope you can help me look after Ru Xue and do everything within your power to close that door.” Doctor Gao was not worried that Chen Ge might reject him. “In return, other than the treasure left behind by the society, I will share the method to close these doors with you.”

There was a door in Chen Ge’s Haunted House. In terms of business, that door was a security risk, and he had been looking for a way to close it. “Looking after Gao Ru Xue is no problem. I can handle her future expenses like school fees and even future employment, but I will need to consider about closing that door.”

“You will say yes.” Doctor Gao looked at Chen Ge, but it felt like he was looking into the man’s heart. “Your parents know the door-pusher, and she knows your parent’s location.”

Doctor Gao had used the society’s power to investigate Chen Ge’s past.

“How do I know you’re not lying to me?” The clues about his parent had already gone cold; Chen Ge was shocked that he would find more information from Doctor Gao. Reaching into his pocket, Doctor Gao pulled out a picture. “This is the picture taken when the society was going after the door-pusher. The picture was taken one week before your parent’s disappearance.”

The background of the picture was a creepy alley, and normal buildings bookended it on both sides. It looked so normal but also abnormal at the same time. A husband and wife stood facing away from the camera, and facing them was a little girl in a red shirt.

In the picture, the girl seemed to have discovered the photo-taker and was screaming down the alley. The couple was in the middle of turning. From their backs, Chen Ge could confirm that they were his parents. Doctor Gao had no reason to lie to him.

“Where was this taken?”

“Li Wan City after midnight.”

“I’ve been to Li Wan City, and the streets don’t look like this. However, my parents did go out every night one week before they disappeared like they were looking for something.” Chen Ge walked forward to take a closer look at the picture, but his legs were wound by the black hair. Zhang Ya did not let Chen Ge leave her side, like there was still hidden danger.

After seeing this, Doctor Gao slid the picture to Gao Ru Xue. “The door has now gone out of control, and no one knows what will happen next or what kind of monster will escape from behind the door.”

“Doctor Gao, there is one question that I don’t quite understand.” Chen Ge interrupted Doctor Gao. “From my perspective, you have never cared about people’s lives before, so why do you insist that I close this door? How does that benefit you?”

“The door has lost control. After you enter it, you’ll understand why.” Doctor Gao took Chen Ge’s response as a yes, so he told him how to close the door. “There is only one method that I’ve discovered to close the door. That is to find the door-pusher, have them suffer all the despair in the world behind the door, and then detain them outside the door. The world behind the door exists solely on the door-pusher’s despair. After losing that sustenance, the door will slowly disappear.”

“Therefore, I need to find the door-pusher? But what if the door-pusher has already changed into a Red Specter or has been vanquished?”

“Red Specters can still suffer despair, but as for if they have been vanquished, I have not come across that situation before.” Doctor Gao’s voice was turning weak. The black threads in his eyes kept jumping like they were preparing to shoot out of his body. Just looking at the man, Chen Ge could imagine the pain that he was in.

“Take Gao Ru Xue away with you—this world is collapsing. I will go and search for more methods to close the door.”

The organs and flesh fell from above them. The underground morgue started to collapse. The negative emotions that sustained this world had entered Doctor Gao's body, so it was collapsing on itself.

The corridor shook, and Doctor Gao touched Gao Ru Xue's head. "Go back home. I've already opened the door."

Without waiting for the girl to speak, the woman in Doctor Gao's head raised her head to look into Gao Ru Xue's eyes. Their eyes met for a brief moment before the girl fainted. The woman's body became transparent, and with an order from Doctor Gao, she also made the two workers who had brought Gao Ru Xue there faint.

“The memories they have of tonight have been buried deep in their mind. After you entered, I had the cadavers move the dead bodies in real life into the door. I’ve demolished all the evidence. I hope you can also forget everything that has happened tonight.” Doctor Gao’s body shook. The black threads were almost crawling out of his eyes. “Take them and go.”

Doctor Gao really had considered everything. No matter the choice Chen Ge made, he would not lose. Kill him, he would become an entity stronger than a Red Specter, and everyone would die; not killing him meant agreeing to the trade and expanding the benefits to their maximum.

...

“Looks like I have no choice.” Under Zhang Ya’s gaze, Chen Ge had Bai Qiulin carry Gao Ru Xue. Trusting that the Doctor Gao would not harm his own daughter, the fact that he had handed Chen Ge his daughter was a sign of his sincerity.

He has been doing so much investigation—is it possible that he was also looking for a suitable candidate to look after his daughter?

The society had been living in the shadows for so long and had made plenty of enemies. After Doctor Gao’s departure, it would be dangerous for Gao Ru Xue.

The ceiling cracked, and blood red mist drifted into the surgery room. Whenever Chen Ge entered the world behind the door, he would be limited inside a building—this was the first time that he had seen the view outside a building. That was the real world behind the door. The space that was constructed by the door-pusher’s heart was like a medium between the two.

The red light fell on Doctor Gao, and the black threads grew at an exponential rate. At the same time, the white cat in Chen Ge’s backpack crawled out, and one of its eyes had turned completely red.

The thing attracting it was just outside the crack!

The white cat wanted to jump out, but this time, Chen Ge was prepared. The morgue was collapsing; they needed to leave as soon as possible. He hugged the cat and shoved it back into the bag before zipping it up. Ignoring the resistance, Chen Ge slowly retreated. His purpose there was to complete the mission on the phone—surviving until dawn was more important.

The walls were cracking. The ground fell, and a loud boom echoed from the ceiling. A large piece of flesh fell and knocked heavily into the ground. Looking through the crack, there was a heavy fog outside the morgue. The fog seemed to be covering a blood red city!

“The city’s structure looks no different from Jiujiang, but the whole style gives a unique sensation.” The underground morgue was exposed, and Chen Ge saw something approaching in the mist.

“Go now. If the door is destroyed, you’ll be stuck here forever.” Doctor Gao hugged his wife, and his eyes were now completely dark. “We might meet again in the future. I’ve already marked one of the doors.”

“Marked one of the doors?” Doctor Gao’s tone was getting weird like there was more than one person speaking. His eyes that looked at Zhang Ya and Chen Ge were turning as well.

“Zhang Ya is already injured. Getting into a conflict with Doctor Gao now will only benefit the creature in the mist. We should leave now.” Chen Ge retreated, and during that process, he asked Zhang Ya to surround Xiong Qing. The man had just unleashed his potential, but he was cruelly slaughtered. His body was shattered into pieces, and his head was stolen by Xu Yin.

“Don’t worry, it’s too dangerous here. I’ll bring you with me.” Chen Ge smiled at Xiong Qing as he dragged the two workers and started to run.

Xiong Qing shuddered from Chen Ge’s smile. He screamed for help until Xu Yin covered his lips. The world was crumbling. Chen Ge turned to look at Doctor Gao. The man’s skin was cracking, and his pair of dark eyes focused on his wife. Their bodies leaned close together like they were prepared to be buried side by side.

“Such a scary enemy.” Before Chen Ge arrived, Doctor Gao had come up with many different scenarios. This was the worst scenario for Doctor Gao, but even so, he had not lost.

The corridors shook greatly. Chen Ge and Doctor Wei ran toward the central hub. When they passed one of the morgues, a few more doctors joined Chen Ge with Doctor Wei's persuasion. Chen Ge was surprised by the sudden addition. If not for the crumbling location, he would have looked around the area. Chen Ge managed to reach the central hub before the entire world collapsed. The door was half open. The blood was peeling off, and the door did not look as red.

"It's time to leave." Chen Ge led all of his employees and ran out the door. It sounded like there were cries for help coming from behind the door, but that had nothing to do with Chen Ge anymore.

The door closed, and the blood retreated. When it opened again, everything had returned to normal like everything earlier had been a nightmare and they had now awakened. There were stains on the ground. The pictures on the wall and the dead bodies had all disappeared. Doctor Gao had thoroughly prepared, so all the evidence had been destroyed.

"Since the world has collapsed, the door probably cannot be used anymore." Chen Ge opened the backpack to release the white cat. It seemed like it was about to growl at Chen Ge, but when it saw the Red Specters standing next to Chen Ge, it mellowed out and crawled back into the bag. It scratched at the zipper like it was trying to close the zipper on its own.

"Such a curious cat." Chen Ge took out the comic to calculate his earnings. He first looked at Xiong Qing. Being stared at by a group of Specters and the fiendish Haunted House operator, Xiong Qing experienced despair that he had not experienced in his life before.

"Don't be afraid, it won't be painful." Chen Ge signaled for Xu Yin to consume Xiong Qing, but Xu Yin's reaction was weird. He shook his head and pointed at his heart. No matter how hard Chen Ge persuaded, Xu Yin refused to consume Xiong Qing—he seemed more interested in finding his heart.

The man and ghost pushed back and forth; the only result was that it scared the hell out of Xiong Qing.

"It's nice that you have your own consciousness." Chen Ge called for Bai Qiulin. Of all his employees, only he had a blood stain on his shirt, so he had the potential to become a Red Specter.

"Ol' Bai, don't let me down." Chen Ge reached over to pat Bai Qiulin's shoulder, but he missed. He already treated his employees as actual people. Bai Qiulin had a bitter smile on his face. He was afraid just standing before Xiong Qing, much less consuming him. In the end, it was with Xu Yin's help that Bai Qiulin finished the consumption.

When he did, Bai Qiulin collapsed to the ground. He tore at his body like a fire was burning in his heart. His process was different from those of Zhang Ya and Xu Yin. He did not go into a slumber but had his fight at the line of being vanquished. This lasted for more than one hour before he returned to normal. His body no longer looked that fragile, and his heart was dyed red by blood. Bai Qiulin's situation was the complete opposite of Xu Yin's. He had already found his heart. By consuming more ghosts, he would one day become the Haunted House's new Red Specter.

This kind of Red Specter might be weaker than Xu Yin, but it is still a Red Specter.

With a new Red Specter in his employment, just that alone would make Chen Ge's adventure that night worth it.

He took out the comic to move his employees into it before turning to Doctor Wei and the three doctors standing next to him. The four were the best of their field, and the admirable thing was that they had all donated their bodies to the university.

"Nice to meet all of you. I admire you from the bottom of my heart. If possible, I hope you'll come stay with me as guests," Chen Ge said sincerely. He had left a good impression on Doctor Wei. Doctor Wei saw him as a young man who was not afraid of darkness and evil.

"You've saved my life. I cannot reject your request." Doctor Wei nodded and turned to look at the rest. "What about you?"

"I like this kid. He is a very studious person and is a student of Jiujiang Medical University. I have high hopes for him." The doctor who spoke walked to stand beside Chen Ge. This man was Liu Zhengyi. The two other doctors also agreed.

"Thank you very much." Chen Ge bowed. He was so happy. He had gained four top doctors at once. They had managed to save dead people from inside the door, so of course, they could handle small things like fainting.

He had already started a plan in his heart. If people came to annoy him again, he would scare them until they fainted. Then he would stand and watch as they got resuscitated. He would give them another surprise to make them faint again and then revive, then faint, repeating this process.

With the smile on his face, even though they were standing inside the dark underground morgue, they could sense the happiness Chen Ge was radiating.

“Is he so happy simply because we’ve agreed to join him as guests?”
The few doctors saw this and felt that this man was not bad.

Chapter 458 - Maze of Terror!

Chapter 458: Maze of Terror!

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Chen Ge used Yan Danian's comic to collect the four doctors. It seemed that dawn had not arrived—he had not received the message from the black phone saying that the mission had been completed.

Now that the Haunted House has a medic unit, the safety of the visitors will be guaranteed. Uncle Xu won't have to worry about me scaring the visitors anymore. Chen Ge was satisfied. Perhaps I can try to come up with more exciting features in the future. After all, I doubt there are any Haunted Houses on the market that will have the best medic unit like I do.

...

A Haunted House had to be unique and lasting to be able to stand the test of time. It had to have something that could not be replicated by the competition to stand out. Chen Ge felt like his Haunted House had managed to do that. In all of Jiujiang, even the whole country, Chen Ge did not think any other Haunted House could rival his own.

This is the competition of business.

Chen Ge had gotten a lot of rewards from that night's trial mission. Bai Qiulin would become a Red Specter after he consumed enough Specters. The addition of the four doctors solved a problem that Chen Ge was facing. The threat of the ghost stories society had been resolved as well. He could focus on building up his Haunted House to face the futuristic park that was opening.

As long as I can stop the futuristic park from stealing my customers, and the visitor number doesn't drop exponentially, it can be considered a victory.

The opponent was strong. This was a tussle between a physical theme park and futuristic theme park. From all the information so far, the only advantage that New Century Park had over the futuristic theme park was Chen Ge's Haunted House. Director Luo had already noticed that, which was why he had decided to fully support Chen Ge.

There are less than three weeks left.

It was crunch time, but Chen Ge was not worried. The Haunted House was improving, and after the four-star scenario appeared, it might change again. Chen Ge found a trolley that was used to transport cadavers and placed the two crematorium workers in it. When he picked up Gao Ru Xue to move her into the trolley, he felt a bone-chilling presence coming from behind him.

Looks like there is one Specter that has not yet returned.

Black hair reached out from Chen Ge's back, and it felt something was curling tightly around his spine. With his life dependent on it, Chen Ge dropped Gao Ru Xue on the trolley and stood where he was honestly.

The chill did not disappear. The girl behind him seemed to have walked into his body and moved into his heart. His heart froze, and it slowed down. Chen Ge felt his body become frigid. If this continued, he might not be able to live to see the sun.

"Zhang Ya." Chen Ge turned around, and she was standing behind him. Zhang Ya had her head lowered, and her black hair covered half of her pale face. No one could tell what was on her mind.

"This should be our second date, right?" Chen Ge very naturally raised his hand to caress Zhang Ya's hair. "It has only been a few days, but it feels like we have not seen each other for a long time."

He sat next to the trolley and stretched lazily. Zhang Ya stood where she was for a long time before slowly moving to the trolley. Blood dripped, and after some hesitation, she sat down beside Chen Ge. "Our first date was at the abandoned school, and the second date is at the underground morgue. I believe that I will remember them for a long time."

Chen Ge nudged toward Zhang Ya as he leaned against her. He could feel that chill reaching for his heart, and he lowered his head to look at Zhang Ya's face. Neither of them spoke. In the dark, creepy morgue filled with the smell of formalin, the man and the ghost sat side by side, enjoying the rare 'peace and quiet'.

Chen Ge leaned against Zhang Ya's shoulder and asked softly, "Did you get yourself injured?"

Zhang Ya shook her head. When she was alive, she had never had a friend, much less lover. Now, Chen Ge was being too close to her, and she did not know how to act.

“Give me your hand.” Chen Ge’s voice drifted into her ear. Zhang Ya could feel the warmth from Chen Ge’s body, and her hands that gripped the red shirt slowly loosened. Her fingers moved toward Chen Ge, and when she was about to touch Chen Ge’s hand, she suddenly pulled back and crawled back into Chen Ge’s shadow without warning.

The morgue seemed to have turned brighter and the atmosphere not as stuffy. Chen Ge, who was covered in cold sweat, leaned against the two workers. He had chosen to sit next to the trolley earlier because he had realized that his legs were numb and his body was frozen. He was already having trouble standing.

“I, Chen Ge, have never been afraid of anyone. I’m acting thusly before Zhang Ya because I feel her affection toward me, and I don’t want to disappoint her.” Chen Ge sounded like he was trying to convince himself. He tried multiple times but failed to stand up. Half of his body was numb from the cold. If this is allowed to continue, something bad is bound to happen. Zhang Ya’s affection level seems to have increased again. It probably won’t take long to break through the current level of ‘Gripped by Passion’.

Collapsed on the ground, Chen Ge tried to think. Just what is it about me that deserves the affection of so many ‘people’?

After a long rest, when the black phone received the message, Chen Ge finally stood up from the ground. He opened the unread message.

“Successfully reached the central hub of the underground morgue before midnight and survive until dawn.

“Congratulations, Specters’ Favored, for completing the three-star trial mission—The Underground Morgue!

“Congratulations for demolishing the entire ghost stories society, completing the only hidden mission at the Third Sick Hall—Ghost Stories Society!

“Obtained the reward—The Chairperson’s Letter of Appointment!”

Reading the message on the phone, Chen Ge was surprised. The completion rate for the underground morgue is only sixty percent? That is probably because the culprit, Doctor Gao, is still alive, but the hidden mission from the Third Sick Hall states that I have already demolished the entire ghost stories society. The black phone couldn't have made this mistake, or is it because Doctor Gao is not considered a human anymore?

Not living but still alive.

Chen Ge turned to look at the door. The world behind it had already collapsed, and the door could not be used anymore. The black phone kept vibrating; more messages were coming in.

“The interior space is lacking! The third expansion will occur tonight!

“After completing the third expansion, three-star scenario
Underground Morgue will be fully unlocked!

“Warning! After the third expansion, the Haunted House will officially upgrade to become a Maze of Terror!

“Warning! After the upgrade, you'll get a chance to win a random unique construct, and the Haunted House will unlock new features!”

Chapter 459 - : Big Business!

Chapter 459: Big Business!

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The underground morgue's mission was a turning point for Chen Ge. After upgrading to Maze of Terror, the Haunted House would gain a new feature. This meant that he was closer to finding his missing parents.

Maze of Terror, that does sound scary. Although it doesn't say what kind of new feature will be added, hopefully, it won't be a disappointment.

...

Counting the underground morgue, Chen Ge's Haunted House had already unlocked ten scenarios. There were three aboveground—The Night of the Living Dead, Minghun, and Murder by Midnight—and seven underground: Mu Yang High School, Western Jiujiang's Private Academy, A Room of Three, Third Sick Hall, The Wife's Room, Coffin Village, and Underground Morgue.

Currently, the scenario with the highest difficulty was the Third Sick Hall because this scenario's completion rate was more than ninety percent, so all of the scare points had been unlocked.

The hidden quest at the Third Sick Hall was for me to vanquish the society, and the reward I have been given is this chairperson's letter of appointment. What is its usage? Perhaps it can be used to order the lingering spirit of the dead members?

When the completion rate for the Third Sick Hall's trial mission went over ninety percent, Chen Ge had been rewarded a patient's list. It was possessed with the souls of all the patients. These patients were all maddened individuals, and only Doctor Gao could control them. Chen Ge was afraid that they might harm the visitors if he released them, so he had not been using the patient's list.

Based on his former experience, these two rewards should be related. Therefore, the first thing that came into Chen Ge's mind was to use the letter of appointment to control the patients' lingering spirit.

Those few are pure madness, but with this, it will be perfect for them to handle Third Sick Hall.

Chen Ge felt happy thinking about the 'joy' that he would be able to give to his customers. He stretched his body and placed Doctor Chen, who was also unconscious, into the trolley. The four of them moved together.

Doctor Chen is currently on the police's wanted list because he is suspected in 'children kidnapping'. Before the misunderstanding is cleared, I should let him temporarily stay with me. It just so happens that I have plenty of question to ask him.

Doctor Gao had Specters with him because he had opened the door, but Chen Ge could not understand why Doctor Chen could control spirits. He planned to uncover the man's secret.

The trolley moved outward, and the corridor slowly opened. The bodies and the pictures had been demolished by Doctor Gao. Before the match was concluded, he had already come up with all the solutions.

The underground morgue is separated into three sections. While the size of the place is smaller than Coffin Village, the scarier part is that it is much harder to escape from the underground morgue. Chen Ge had already started to consider how to set up the scenario. As the experience he faced that night crossed his mind, insanity flashed across his eyes. How about we go for a big one this time?

Chen Ge pushed the trolley round and round before he managed to leave the middle section. When he passed Morgue No. 7, he stopped to glance into it. He did not see Morgue No. 8 from last night like it had not existed in the first place.

They should have been guarding this place from the dark.

Western Jiujiang Medical University had been spreading the legend about Morgue No. 8, but none of the students had gotten into an accident in the morgue. This probably had plenty to do with the people inside Morgue No. 8. They were no match for Doctor Gao and could not stop him. All they could do was their best to protect their students.

If the two crematorium workers did not show disrespect to the cadavers, those unfortunate events wouldn't have happened to them.

Chen Ge turned to where he imagined Morgue No. 8 had been and bowed. Then, he continued to move forward.

When the workers came in to deal with the cadavers, security should have been waiting outside. The workers didn't leave for the whole night, so they should have called the police. Why is the underground morgue so quiet?

Chen Ge reached for one of the workers' cell phones to look at the time. It was 5:30 am; the sun was just climbing up.

I should wait for the upcoming interrogation. Chen Ge realized that he had gotten way too good at this. He shoved the cell phone back into the man's pocket. He eventually reached the entrance.

The cold morning wind touched his face, and he felt more refreshed. The crematorium's van was parked at the front door. The section where the cadavers should have been had two unconscious men in security uniforms.

Is this Doctor Gao's doing as well? Chen Ge looked into the car. The two men were fine; their condition was similar to Gao Ru Xue. Since the trial mission had been completed, Chen Ge did not want to create more problems for himself. He placed the two workers in the trunk and then pushed Gao Ru Xue and Doctor Chen away from the campus, avoiding the camera.

Chen Ge sighed in relief after he got into the taxi. He first dropped Gao Ru Xue home before taking Doctor Chen to New Century Park. This was the first time that Chen Ge had welcomed a guest into his Haunted House, so he wanted to make sure Doctor Chen feel welcomed. He placed Doctor Chen inside the room that was deepest in the Third Sick Hall and prepared snacks and water for the man. Before he left, he even dropped his phone number.

I'm still worried. Chen Ge thought about it and took out a pen to leave a note for Doctor Chen. He wrote that he was Fan Yu's family, and he had no bad intentions. He just wanted to talk to him.

After exiting the room, Chen Ge placed a sign on the door that read —'No Entry. Hungry ghost inside.' He activated the recorder, placed it by the door, and left.

He felt drowsy when he reached the staff breakroom. However, Chen Ge did not go to sleep immediately because he had many things he needed to do.

He took out his phone and called the mannequin workshop. It rang about ten times before it was picked up.

“Boss Qian? Were you asleep? I have big business I want to discuss with you.”

“Big business?” The boss, Qian Guigen, heard that, and he woke up immediately. “How big are we talking?”

“I wish to make one hundred human-sized mannequins.”

“Wait, how many?”

“One hundred. I will go and make them myself; you only need to provide me with the materials and facilities.” Chen Ge looked at the rising sun, and his eyes reflected the light. “This might just be the beginning. If possible, I plan to enter a long-term cooperation with you because my Haunted House will need more mannequins in the future.”

Chapter 460 - You're Awake?

Chapter 460: You're Awake?

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Boss Chen, one hundred mannequins is not a small number; do you mind if I ask why are you creating so many mannequins?”

“This is not our first cooperation, so I’m not going to hide certain things from you.” Chen Ge told Qian Guigen directly, “I’m making dead people mannequins. These one hundred mannequins will be made into cadavers and placed inside the Haunted House.”

...

Just hearing Chen Ge’s voice on the phone made the skin crawl on Boss Qian’s back. He shuddered. “Since it is for dead bodies, you can just use normal material, the material for one mannequin is about one hundred RMB.”

“The material needs to be of high quality, as least as good as the previous ones,” Chen Ge said firmly.

“Boss, your Haunted House is so dark, and it’s for dead bodies. Using good material is going to be a waste!” Qian Guigen did not quite get it.

“You might think I’m making mannequins but I’m actually creating a body that could replace blood and flesh. These mannequins are very important to the Haunted House.” Chen Ge had his own plan. To completely replicate the underground morgue, the real ‘paradise’ for the dead, he needed many mannequins, and each of them would be filled with lingering spirits of the dead.

“If it’s similar to last time, then the material for each mannequin will be around nine hundred, but since you’re asking for so much, I can try to help you get some discount. If one mannequin is 800, then it’ll cost 80,000.”

“No problem, please get it settled as fast as possible; I need them soon.”

“My workshop is currently vacated, and I will lend it to you for free as long as you let me stay and watch you work. I can pick up some skills from you.” Boss Qian was conflicted. “The biggest issue is I only have enough material to make twenty mannequins currently. I’ll need to leave the city to procure the rest of the material—some of them even came from overseas. You’ll need to wait for at least a week.”

“Just make it as fast as possible. By the way, do you have time now? I wish to go to your workshop to complete the base for the twenty mannequins.”

“Now? Sure, I’ll meet you in half an hour.” After hanging up, Chen Ge took out a new set of clothes from his cupboard and went for a shower. He put on the new clothes and left the Haunted House.

“How come I still smell like formalin after a shower?” Chen Ge did not mind it too much. When he left Qian Guigen’s workshop, it was already 9 am.

“The base for the mannequin is ready. Tonight, I can rush the rest. Tomorrow, the mannequins will be ready for use.”

Dropping 20,000 as down payment, Chen Ge left the workshop and returned to New Century Park.

He did not sleep for the whole night, and his body was at its limit. After greeting Uncle Xu, Xu Wan, and Gu Feiyu, he sat in the corridor and started to rest. The Haunted House’s framework was starting to come into shape. Each scenario was manned by someone or something, and it saved Chen Ge plenty of trouble. Now, all he needed to do was make sure the visitors signed the disclaimers.

The holidays were coming, and it was obvious that the number of visitors was rising. Other than the younger visitors who were there for the adrenaline, there were also families who came with their children. Chen Ge’s Haunted House pushed New Century Park back into the public eyes, and this park that had almost been forgotten by time started to revive.

Director Luo is right. For New Century Park to get back on track, it has to be the contribution of more than just the Haunted House. The other facilities need to be updated as well. Only then will we be able to get the visitors to come and stay.

For the expansion of the Haunted House, Chen Ge could depend on the black phone, but the updating of the old facilities needed a large amount of money. Director Luo would have to deal with that.

With Director Luo around, Chen Ge did not need to get himself concerned with these things; he only needed to be focused on managing his Haunted House. The line in front of the Haunted House was getting longer. The scores of the visitors in the resting hall were changing as well, and the speakers around the place broadcasted the visitors' live screams.

A one-star scenario was no biggie for most visitors, and most of them had started to challenge two-star scenarios. As that number increased, so did the people who wanted to challenge three-star scenarios. There were more pictures and information of the three-star scenario online, but so far, no one had been able to clear it.

Actually, this was not the visitors' fault. Chen Ge had drafted the difficulty based on his own experience. To clear Coffin Village, the term was to find that tattered wedding dress. A lingering spirit was attached to that dress, and leaving with the dress meant leaving with a ghost.

To clear the Third Sick Hall, the visitors had to find a tape dyed with blood. Chen Ge told the visitors that the tape held the biggest secret of the Third Sick Hall. Actually, he did not lie. The biggest secret at the Third Sick Hall was that there were not only Specters here but also a Red Specter.

The morning went by, and no accidents occurred. When it was time for lunch, Chen Ge went to the canteen to purchase two boxed lunch and went into the underground scenario. He entered the Third Sick Hall and walked to the deepest room. The sign on the wall had not been touched, and the recorder was where it had been.

Chen Ge picked the recorder up. The tape inside was slowly turning. Chen Ge glanced at it. After making sure that there was nothing wrong, he picked it up and opened the door.

There was a sick bed in the middle of the room. Doctor Chen was already awake. He looked at the water on the table as if gauging whether it was poisoned or not.

"You're awake? Do you still remember what happened yesterday?" Chen Ge gave the boxed lunch to Doctor Chen. He sat to the side and started eating.

"Chen Ge?" Doctor Chen was quite surprised to see him. "It was you who saved me?”

“What do you think?”

“I can’t remember anything.” Doctor Chen rubbed his temples. He picked up the water and took a sip and his throat felt better.

“What is the last thing you can remember?” Chen Ge was more curious about that.

“I followed Jiang Ling and Fan Yu to Coffin Village and got into a fight with Doctor Gao at the village. I was too careless and lost.” Doctor Chen tried his best to think. “I remember being dragged through a door. The madman said that I was his only friend, so he wanted to keep me as a souvenir. That’s all I can remember.”

“Hopefully, you’re not lying to me.” Chen Ge swallowed the mouthful of rice and looked at Doctor Chen seriously. “Doctor Gao is dead, and the door at the Western Jiujiang Medical University is closed. It was me who saved you at the last moment.”

“I believe you, but...” Doctor Chen was uncertain. “That madman had at least two red specters on him. How did you manage to defeat him?”

Chapter 461 - The Man

Chapter 461: The Man

Hearing that, Doctor Chen was speechless. He had heard some rumors about Chen Ge before, and he shook his head with a bitter smile. “That is very scary for me already.”

...

“Doctor Chen, I still have other things to do, but I’ll come back later to ask you some questions. Hopefully, you’ll answer them honestly since I’ve saved your life.” Chen Ge put down the boxed lunch and took a sip of the water. His action and expression was different from what he was going to say next. “Down at the underground morgue, you once told me, your surname is not really Chen Ge. You only go by that name because someone asked you to use it to do something for him in Western Jiujiang.”

“I told you that?” Doctor Chen hesitated but did not deny it. “That’s right.”

“Who is that person? Why the surname Chen? What is the favor that he asked of you to do in Western Jiujiang?” Chen Ge asked three questions at the same time.

Doctor Chen thought about it, and he gave Chen Ge the reply. “I knew the old director from the Third Sick Hall and once worked under him. When the door there first appeared, the old director approached me. I personally went to look around the door and even went behind it.”

Doctor Chen lowered his head in thought. “I should be the first person to have entered the world behind the door other than Men Nan. I’ve seen many things there; it was like a nightmare. I’ve only told this secret to two other people—the old director and my best friend, Doctor Gao.

“The three of us decided to seal up the door with cement, but the effect was not so good. The door would still appear, and the blood would seep through the adjacent walls at midnight.

“Perhaps because I’ve been to the world behind the door, I felt like it was being possessed by something. Whenever midnight arrived, I could hear the scratching of nails underneath my bed. There was no one in the toilet from the half-open door, I could see a black shadow in the mirror. It was facing my bed like it was trying to crawl out from the mirror.

“I was a psychology student, so when these things first appeared, the first thing I did was diagnose myself to ensure that these were not part of a hallucination. There have been cases of psychologists ending up in the psychiatric ward before, so I thought something had happened to me. However, a series of things that happened later changed my mind.

“On the third night after coming out from the blood door, I saw a man standing outside the window, his head facing my bed. My house was on the third floor, and there was no security net on the second floor—that was not where the air-conditioning machine was placed. After taking away all the possibilities, the only conclusion was that the man was at least three meters tall. The man looked at me for a long time before crawling into a family’s apartment on the second floor.

“I immediately called the police, but they couldn’t find that suspicious man on the second floor. With the complaints from the downstairs neighbor, the police brought me away to be interrogated instead. The next morning, when I was at the station, I heard the news of my downstairs neighbor committing suicide. The victim’s death was very strange. His shoulders were sunken, and his expression was filled with terror.

“I suspected that the man’s death had something to do with that man I saw. I told the police everything, but the police officer suggested I go for a psychiatric consultation. I remember showing him my ID.

“The police still refused to believe me. Instead, a brother at the station who looked friendly got interested in my story. Initially, I thought he was also an officer, but after a long conversation, I realized the man was just released from lockup due to impersonating law enforcement, speeding, and so on.”

Doctor Chen sighed. “I didn’t dare go home and tried my best to figure out a way to stay at the station. It was not until rumors about my mental state started to do the rounds at my workplace that I had to leave the police station.

“After I went home, the man’s shadow kept appearing at the window. I was afraid that I would be the next victim, so I directly moved to the most crowded and populated hotel in the city.

“That continued for a month. The man stopped appearing, and my life returned to normal.

“However, it was not a solution to stay at the hotel forever, so I planned to sell my old home and buy a new one in the city. Actually, I had planned that for a long time already. After paying the down payment, I contacted a moving company in Eastern Jiujiang and planned to move some important stuff during the day.

“The new place was fifteen floors tall, and I purposely chose the top floor. After all the furniture had been moved, it was already late afternoon. I treated the moving workers to dinner and had a few drinks myself. I was ready to move into a new place to start a new life.”

Here, Doctor Chen paused. “Returning to the new home, I lay in the familiar bed and soon fell asleep. At around midnight, I woke up from the chill. I curled up in the mattress, and when I turned my head to the side, I suddenly realized that there was a man in the room. I was awakened by the shock instantly. Upon closer inspection, the man in the room was the monster I’d seen before!

“He was more than three meters tall. His upper body was straight, and his lower body was still crawling out from underneath the bed. There was a strange smile on his face, and his lips said, ‘You’ve finally returned.’

“I did not expect that the monster would be hiding under my bed, and I ran out like crazy. I did not stop to put on my shoes as I charged out the door. I did not dare turn back to look. I ran down the corridor and cried for help, but there was no response.

“My shoulders became heavier like the monster was standing on my shoulders. A laughter came from above me, and my sight turned blurrier. The corridor seemed to have twisted, and I knew that I was about to fall.

“Resisting the nausea, I reached the mouth of the stairs. When I felt like my five senses were about to be taken over, I heard the sound of a lighter.

“A dancing flame appeared in my sight, and I soon saw a man leaning against the wall of the stairs, lighting the cigarette on his lips. This man was familiar. It was the man whom I saw at the station, the one that had been brought in due to his many criminal activities.

“His cigarette burned slowly, and as the ash fell, I heard begging noises coming from above my shoulders. The cigarette burned to its end, and the monster on my shoulders completely disappeared.

“It was he who saved me. I had a long chat with him that night. He told me about the hidden world and taught me how to close the door in the Third Sick Hall. He was the one who asked me to use his surname to do something for him in Western Jiujiang.”

Doctor Chen stopped to take a sip of the water. He looked at Chen Ge and said, “The man looked very similar to you, and the request he asked of me is related to you.”

“Looks like me, the favor he asked is related to me, smokes cigarette, and is happy go lucky.” Chen Ge did feel like Doctor Chen was describing his father, but then he thought about it and realized that was not right. “I am such a big helper and lawful citizen; how could my father impersonate the police and speed drive? There has to be some misunderstanding.”

Doctor Chen looked at the bloodied tape that was turning in the recorder, and he did not comment but just nodded slightly. “That is what I thought as well. Whether that was your father or not, the favor he asked was definitely related to you.”

...

“Tell me.”

“For that, we have to go back to the Third Sick Hall. I followed the man’s instructions, and with Men Nan’s main persona’s help, we successfully closed the door. However, about half a year later, I realized that the door was opened again.”

“Was it the old director?” When Chen Ge completed the mission at the Third Sick Hall, he had found out that the old director was suffering from cancer. He did not want to die, so he had escaped into the world behind the door.

Doctor Chen shook his head. “The director was too old, and he did not have the guts. It was Doctor Gao who opened the door, and it was him who was talking into the old director’s ears.”

Sighing, the emotions in Doctor Chen’s eyes became complicated. “I treated Doctor Gao as my dearest friend, so I understood why he did that. If I was in his shoes, I perhaps would have done the same thing because I know how much he loved his wife.”

Finishing the water, Doctor Chen described what had happened over the past few years. “On how to deal with the door, there was a difference of opinion between me and Doctor Gao. I believe that the door is misfortune, an omen of tragedy, a problem that needs to be fixed immediately.

“However, Doctor Gao’s opinion was different from mine. He believed that the door could be used. Emotions like despair, pain, and anger could be manipulated. At the time, I didn’t know he had already opened a door of his own. Due to the difference of ideals, we eventually broke off.

“In the end, when I was forcing my way to close the door, I realized that he not only had a very good understanding of the door, he even owned a Red Specter. I was not his match, so I went to the man for help. From his perspective, we probably looked like two children arguing.

“He did not accost Doctor Gao. Instead, he went into the door at the Third Sick Hall. He seemed to make an important discovery inside that world, and that was related to his later disappearance.”

Doctor Chen suddenly paused. He looked at Chen Ge as if wondering whether to tell the rest.

“Don’t hesitate—just tell me everything you know.” While Chen Ge was listening to Doctor Chen, he had already finished the boxed lunch.

“You should have been to the world behind the door at the Third Sick Hall already, but I wonder if Men Nan’s main persona has told you that the window in one of the rooms can’t be closed.”

“Window?” Chen Ge thought about it. When Chen Ge recently visited the Third Sick Hall, Men Nan did appear like he had been busy fixing the windows. “Yes, I do know that.”

“The man crossed swords with a monster behind the door, and they broke the window. I do not know what happened, but when the man left the door, there was a frown on his face. Then he asked me of this favor.”

Doctor Chen stood up from the bed, and his expression was serious. “He gave me three scenarios, and the favor would be different depending on these three scenarios. If you did not take up the Haunted House and chose to enter another field, then I was supposed to help you from the dark; if you took up the Haunted House but the results were not great, I was supposed to write you a letter every year with Mr. Chen's name to tell you to give up; if you took up the Haunted House and did a good job, I was supposed to find you and tell you something in person."

"What is it?" Chen Ge had a feeling that his parents had already predicted that he would take good care of the Haunted House.

Doctor Chen's expression turned the most serious that it had been so far. He looked into Chen Ge's eyes and said, "Do not go looking for them."

"Do not go looking for them?" Chen Ge narrowed his eyes, smiling, but did not add anything beyond that.

"It's such a shame because I failed to help you and even ended up needing your help." Doctor Chen did not know what to say. Chen Ge's parents probably would not have predicted this as well.

"What were they doing before they disappeared? Anything weird they have told you or done, tell me everything." Chen Ge's words sounded more like an order than a question.

Doctor Chen was afraid that Chen Ge might do something stupid, so he answered honestly. "They stopped contacting me after telling me this. I know that they had been going to Eastern Jiujiang before their disappearance like they were looking for something."

"If they stopped contacting you, how do you know they had been to Eastern Jiujiang?" Chen Ge placed his finger on the recorder, and the bloodied tape turned slowly.

"These things are easy to find out. Eastern Jiujiang was relatively quiet, but for a period before your parents' disappearance, mysterious cases of ghost arson, ghost highways, cursed hospitals, water ghosts, cursed babies, and many other things were revealed." Doctor Chen shivered just talking about them. "Whenever midnight arrived, something would happen in Eastern Jiujiang. After your parent's disappearance, Eastern Jiujiang became quiet again."

"You suspect that those things have something to do with my parents?"

"I'm ninety percent sure."

"Are you kidding?" Chen Ge held the recorder and frowned. "We've always been a family of lawful citizens—why would they be involved in those things? Were they perhaps dragged into a big conspiracy?"

"That shouldn't be the case. Eastern Jiujiang used to be quiet like it is now. There haven't been any big case or too many supernatural happenings." Doctor Chen subconsciously lowered his voice.

"Something is up. After I'm done here, we shall both go to Eastern Jiujiang to take a look. There has to be a storm under the calm surface," Chen Ge told Doctor Chen. "You can stay here for now; I'll bring you out when the night falls."

"Okay." Doctor Chen sneaked a look at the recorder. "I will not run away, so you can take that recorder with you."

"You're my guest; how can I leave you here alone?" Chen Ge exited the room and placed the recorder by the door. "If you have any demand, just tell the Red Specter. I'll come back at 7 pm."

"Then... thank you." Doctor Chen picked up the boxed lunch and started to eat. Watching Chen Ge disappear down the corridor, he shook his head with a bitter smile. "This feeling sure is familiar..."

Chapter 463 - Where Are You Going?

Chapter 463: Where Are You Going?

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

After moving the trash out of the Third Sick Hall, Chen Ge went to the toilet to wash his face and threw himself back into work. At 6:30 pm, the Haunted House closed down for the day. Chen Ge had Xu Wan and Xiao Gu clean up the place while he went to look for Uncle Xu to borrow the park's van. He wanted to use it to transport the mannequins back from the workshop. When he was done with all that, he entered the underground scenario to find Doctor Chen.

They exchanged contact details. Then Chen Ge used the black cloth to close Doctor Chen's eyes and led him out of the Haunted House. He left the doctor in Western Jiujiang's countryside. It did not take that long because Chen Ge returned to New Century Park at almost 7 pm. Xu Wan and Gu Feiyu had already cleaned the Haunted House by then.

...

"Thank you for your hard work. Leave the rest to me." Chen Ge accepted the broom and took out his phone to call Qian Guigen.

"Boss Qian, please prepare the materials now. I might spend a whole night at the workshop to rush the first batch of mannequins."

"Okay, I'll wait for you at the workshop," Boss Qian answered easily. Just as his little shop was running out of business, it was Chen Ge who gave him hope.

After hanging up, Chen Ge turned around to see Xu Wan and Xiao Gu, who were still standing there. "Is there anything else?"

"You're the boss, but how come I feel like you have it worse than the employees? It feels like you're always working through the night right now." Without the dead people's make-up, Xu Wan was cute, but compared to when she first arrived at the Haunted House, she had a maturity about her now.

"Brother Chen, is there anything the two of us can help with?" Xiao

Gu also walked over. "After all, there's nothing important waiting for me at home anyway."

The employees volunteered to work extra time, and that was quite touching for Chen Ge. He thought about it and realized that carrying twenty mannequins alone was quite tiring, so he did not reject their help. "Okay, you two come with me then. We'll try to finish everything by midnight."

Closing the door, Chen Ge hopped into the park's van and drove Xu Wan and Gu Feiyu to the workshop. Chen Ge had already done the base that morning, so he gave his employees a brief lesson and handed them work like transportation and filling, which did not require much skill. At 11 pm, the twenty mannequins were all done.

The mannequins used the best material and were human-size. However, to save time, Chen Ge did not put make-up or clothes on the mannequins yet. The group worked together to move the mannequins into the van and back to the Haunted House. "I'll work on the rest myself. You can go home now."

Chen Ge looked at the time. The Haunted House would welcome its third expansion at midnight, and it would upgrade to a Maze of Terror. He was afraid that the sudden change might arouse Xu Wan and Xiao Gu's suspicion.

"Boss, there are so many mannequins here. How long will it take you to carry them yourself?" Xiao Gu looked at the mannequins lined up in the corridor, and it did look quite scary in the dark.

"I'll need to put some make-up on them so that we can put them into use tomorrow." Chen Ge thanked the two and closed the Haunted House's door.

"Do you plan to do that alone?" Gu Feiyu still wanted to say something, but Chen Ge had already started working. "So hardworking. Success in this world really only comes to those who work hard for it."

"Well, that's a life lesson for you. Anyway, I'll see you tomorrow morning." Xu Wan shrugged and left. Gu Feiyu was left alone in the park.

Compared to the rowdiness in the morning, the park at night was dark and silent. The image of the mannequins collapsing over one another appeared in his mind, and he shivered. "The boss is ultimately the boss. If it was me, I would have run out after the first night.”

Xiao Gu walked out from New Century Park. It was already 11:30 pm, and the bus had stopped running. His rental was quite far from the park.

“Should I call the cab?” Gu Feiyu reached into his pocket and felt sorry for himself. He had lived in the city for months already, but Chen Ge was the only boss who had paid him his salary. The rent and hospital had taken up quite a large amount of money. Normally, he would not even call for take-out; he had been cooking for himself to save money.

“Since I have nothing better to do, I could try walking home. I should cover as much distance as I can before I need to call the cab—that’s the best way to save money.” Gu Feiyu plugged his earphones in and started to walk down the road. The chilly night breeze crawled through his sleeves. There was no one else on the road, and the lights on the sidewalk were getting dark.

He walked for around forty minutes, and at around midnight, Gu Feiyu suddenly heard someone ask him for his destination and whether he would like to hop into his car.

He pulled his earphones out and looked around, but there was no one there.

“That’s weird. Did the sound came from the earphones?” He put the earphones back in and repeated the previous song, but he did not hear anything unusual. “That was weird.”

Gu Feiyu did not understand it. The lights by the street dimmed, and he walked ahead on his own. The buildings became smaller and the road quieter. He used this road when he returned home every day, but that day, something was different. He walked for another ten minutes when he reached a junction. One was the normal road that he used to head home, and the other looked so unfamiliar like he had not seen it before.

“Where are you going?” That voice appeared in his ears again. Gu Feiyu removed the earphones and looked to the side. He realized that a bus was stopping behind him. The bus itself looked old, and it did not even have the headlights on. There were a few passengers on it—they had their faces lowered, probably looking on their phone.

“There are still buses running at 1 am?” Gu Feiyu was weirdly worried. He walked back to the wall, and right then, his phone suddenly vibrated. Opening it, Gu Feiyu realized that it was a bonus from Chen Ge. It was attached with a voice message. "Thank you for your help earlier, Xiao Gu. This is your bonus for the overtime."

Chen Ge's voice was warm in the cold night. Xiao Gu was about to tell Chen Ge about the weird things that night, but before he could make the call, he turned around to look, and the bus had already driven away. It entered the road that he felt was very unfamiliar. Standing at the junction, Gu Feiyu saw the bus leave. The lights returned to normal, and he no longer felt as cold.

"That was strange." Gu Feiyu did not dare to wander about anymore. He waited at the junction and called a passing cab.

"Where are you going?"

"The apartment next to Ming Hwa Zhuang." Gu Feiyu was still thinking about the bus. He asked the driver with some uncertainty, "Boss, did you spot a bus when you were coming over?"

"No." The driver glanced at Gu Feiyu through the rearview mirror and grumbled, "What is wrong with you youngsters lately? A few days ago, I picked up a passenger in Eastern Jiujiang, almost the same age as you. The first thing he asked was whether I'd seen a moving company's truck when I was driving on the road. The road is big, can you tell whether a vehicle has passed or not for yourself?"

“You didn’t see it?” Xiao Gu turned back to look, and the buildings on the side of the road seemed to change again. “That’s weird; the bus was still there earlier.”

...

Inside the dressing room of the Haunted House, after sending the bonuses to Xu Wan and Xiao Gu, he tossed the phone aside and focused on putting the make-up on the mannequins. With Mortician’s Make-up, he reconstructed the cadavers’ most realistic look. Their eyes were popping and filled with envy toward the living.

I should hollow out the faces for these few, maybe I can make them detachable. The face will turn and shatter when the visitors get close.

Chen Ge tried his best and worked until 2 am, when he finished the make-up on all twenty mannequins.

By then, Chen Ge was feeling tired. He set his alarm and went to sleep. He had just lain down when the phone in his pocket vibrated. In his blurred state, he sought out his phone and realized that it was a new message on the black phone.

“Congratulations for completing the third expansion! The Haunted house has been upgraded to a Maze of Terror! The maximum number of ownable Red Specters has increased! The limitation on the number of employees has increased!

“Maze of Terror’s Special Effect: Lowering of sense of direction (The rest of the special effect will unlock after the fourth expansion; it will be a process of the body and the soul being lost).

“Specter’s Favored, congratulations for upgrading the Haunted House to Maze of Terror. The random unique construct won is “The Screaming Door”!

“The Screaming Door: When you’re all prepared to scream, you’ll be able to push open this door! Third expansion completed; three-star scenario underground morgue has been unlocked!”

Chen Ge woke up instantly from the successive messages. The expansion is already done?

He put on his jacket and ran out the staff breakroom. When he prepared to go underground, he realized that the wooden boards next to the entrance to Night of the Living Dead had disappeared. In their place was a pure-black, steel door that was carved with the faces of various baleful Specters!

This is the new reward? The Screaming Door? The solid door blocked the only entrance and exit. Chen Ge walked to the door and touched the realistic carving, and the screams echoed in his mind. He held the door handle and pushed it open.

After the upgrade, the underground scenario looked creepier. Walking in it, it felt like someone was calling his name and he was almost convinced to follow it.

There should be other hidden effects. He walked down the stairs. The left path led to Mu Yang High School, the right led to the Third Sick Hall, the road forward led to Coffin Village, and the newly unlocked underground morgue was directly behind.

Chen Ge took a spin, and with the black phone’s help, he checked all the scare points. After confirming that there were no security threats, he returned to the ground floor to move the mannequins into the scenario.

The mannequins can house several ghosts. After they get used to this tempo, this should come as quite a surprise to the visitors. Oh right, where should I put the doctors? Scaring people is not their specialty—maybe I should set up a special medic room for them to stop them from running about.

Chen Ge designed the scenario, and when he was done, it was already dawn. He slept for as long as he could, and he woke up punctually at 8:15 am. He opened the door. A new day has arrived. Hopefully, the visitors will love the new scenario.

He took out his phone and released the information on the new scenario on the app designed by Director Luo for the Haunted House. When this new introduction appeared in the app, it immediately attracted the attention of all the online users.

Many were surprised at how fast Chen Ge's Haunted House was expanding. Their clearing speed was slower than the boss' expansion. Many people left messages that they were going to challenge the new scenario, and some pointed out that Chen Ge really did love his job or else he would not have worked so fast to make such great quality content for them to enjoy.

"This system designed by Director Luo sure has its uses." Chen Ge snapped a few pictures of the new scenario and uploaded them. Seeing the reception, he logged off. "The warm reception is to be expected. Today will probably mark the return of the fervent aficionado."

Xu Wan entered the park at 8:20 am. Chen Ge helped her with the make-up, but even after Xu Wan got into the scenario, Xiao Gu was still not there. "Stuck in traffic?"

He tried to call, but no one answered. At around 9 am, Chen Ge saw Xiao Gu run into the park.

"Boss, I'm so sorry!" Xiao Gu gasped for air, and his face was rather pale.

"Did something happen to you?" Chen Ge looked at Xiao Gu and felt that something was wrong.

"I returned too late last night and did not have a good night sleep, so I woke up late this morning." Xiao Gu apologized multiple times. "Boss, I'll go do my make-up now."

"Okay, no need to rush." Chen Ge looked at Xiao Gu, who ran into the Haunted House, and could not shake the feeling that something was off. He reminded himself to pay him extra attention.

The park opened at 9 am. The visitors rushed in, and Chen Ge could clearly tell that the holiday was coming—the number of visitors had increased so much. When the holiday arrives, the real battle between us and the futuristic park will begin. As long as we do not lose too many visitors, there's a chance we can win this.

Chen Ge had seen the inside information of the park, so he was familiar with their strength.

In just five minutes after the park opened, there was already a long queue at the Haunted House. Some had even started lining up before the park even opened. They rushed toward the Haunted House when the gate opened.

“Please don’t push!” Uncle Xu and the workers came to help maintain the order. Chen Ge entered the resting hall to use his phone to enter the intro that he had written for the new scenario into the screen.

“Weird noises came from the morgue, and the trolley that transported the dead bodies moved up and down the corridor. Formalin was thick in the air. To leave this place, you need to make a choice—a choice between red or white corridor.

“There is a group of immortals living under the biggest underground morgue in Jiujiang. Their eyes open when they smelled the formalin. This is the latest three-star scenario at the Haunted House—The Underground Morgue.”

The intro managed to grab the attention of many visitors, but they were clever now. No one was willing to be the first test subject.

“Like usual, since today is the first day for the new scenario, the ticket price for the new scenario will be halved!”

Chapter 465: More People Could Be Safer

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

A new scenario was open, but no one was willing to come visit. From the interaction of the visitors on the app, they were curious about the new scenarios, but only experienced visitors who had survived a two-star scenario could withstand the terror of a three-star scenario. Every one of them was more cautious than the last; they waited for others to scout the road ahead for them and bring back firsthand information. Some who were familiar with Chen Ge's Haunted House had even found seats at the resting hall to wait for the show to begin.

This batch of visitors sure is lacking; they are too cowardly. None of them are willing to come forward. Chen Ge took his phone and walked back to the Haunted House. After he left, the situation became excited. The visitors whispered to one another, talking about the new scenario.

Every scenario in Chen Ge's Haunted House felt very realistic; they were the boss' labor of love. Three three-star scenarios, each offering a different experience. This made the visitors' hearts all conflicted. They were curious and wanted to try them out, but they were afraid of the possible scares.

"Mr. Mu, it was this Haunted House that sent Brother Wong to the hospital. Even now, he's still recovering." There was a young man in jeans in the crowd, whispering to the middle-aged man standing next to him. "He opened a new scenario in just a few days. I believe they have already prepared everything beforehand and are just waiting for the holidays to unveil everything to fight with us. This latest scenario is quite possibly not the last scenario that he has prepared."

"Of course, people will keep the best for last. However, it is still too difficult for New Century Park to fight with us with just a Haunted House. They're walking on the edge of the knife; it is very problematic for them to position their theme park thusly. The focus is too singular," the middle-aged man explained.

"Then, should we just ignore them? Let them die out on their own?"

The young man thought that the middle-aged man had a point.

“We cannot do that either.” The middle-aged man looked at the excited visitors around them and lowered his voice. “One theme park is more than enough in Jiujiang. We only need to incorporate New Century Park’s uniqueness into our own. Then, this place will have no reason to exist.”

“Incorporate their uniqueness into our own?” The young man nodded like he understood somewhat. “Meaning we should open a Haunted House of our own? I seem to remember Brother Wong saying something like that when he came last time.”

“Our technical ability is at least five years ahead of New Century Park’s. We have stuff that they don’t, and we can easily copy what they have. Therefore, they have technically zero chance of winning.” The middle-aged man had already come up with a plan. “However, before that, we have to solve a problem, which is to figure out why this place is so popular. Based on my understanding, New Century Park’s House of Horrors managed to create unprecedented popularity on the internet. The good reviews are so high that it is something that has not been achieved by other Haunted Houses before.”

“Understood, shall we visit the scenario that Brother Wong experienced before?” The young man glanced at the screen in the hall. “But it feels like his new scenario is quite interesting as well.”

The middle-aged man considered it seriously. “Xiao Lee, you are the most courageous person our team has. Today’s mission will be very important. I will cooperate with you from the outside. Remember to send me all the important details.”

“You’re not coming with us?” The young man was startled.

“There has to be someone who stays outside. I heard that Brother Wong recorded important footage last time, but unfortunately, it was deleted. We cannot allow that to happen again. After you finish the recording, send it to me immediately, and I will upload it to the company’s server.”

Mr. Mu’s words were very convincing, but Xiao Lee was not feeling comfortable. Only when a person fainted could others delete the stuff on their phone without being discovered. Listening to Mr. Mu’s plan, the company sounded like they were prepared to sacrifice him. “Then, let me start with a one-star scenario.”

Many visitors were curious with the arrival of a new scenario, but they were lacking a leader. Chen Ge stood inside the Haunted House, observing the situation outside. He wished that he could summon some ghost to take the lead for them. It was not until 11 am that someone in the lines finally lost their patience.

“We have already visited the Third Sick Hall and Coffin Village—the requirement to pass is to find a specific item. To find something in such a large area is too difficult. Wait for me while I go ask the boss. If the clearing requirement for the new scenario is not a treasure hunt, I think perhaps we still have some hope of clearing it.” The person who spoke was Yang Chen from Western Jiujiang Medical University. He had seen the introduction to the Haunted House’s new scenario that morning. He had skipped school and come with two of his friends to come visit.

“Are you sure you want to try that new scenario? Boss, did forget how the three of us were sent out of the Haunted House before?” The one speaking was Wang Dan. He was still running that mouth of his.

“We should think this through.” The last to speak was Lee Xue, the girl who looked so studious. The three of them had visited the place before. When they visited, they happened to be with the same group as the members of the ghost stories society. After Chen Ge dealt with the members, he had given the three free tickets for their next visit.

“We came because this is a new scenario. If you surrender now, what’s the point of us skipping class?” Yang Chen looked at the line that was approaching the Haunted House. “How about this? We’ll buy the ticket first but not go in yet. When there are more than enough visitors to go with us, we can go in together. The bigger the group, the harder it’ll be for us to get scared.”

The two friends agreed. Under Uncle Xu’s pity-filled gaze, they bought the ticket to the new scenario and moved into the Haunted House.

“Sign the disclaimer first. The pen and paper are on the table.” Chen Ge lifted his head, and when he saw it was his old customers, he immediately turned friendly.

“Boss, we’re here to try out the new scenario.”

Hearing the words ‘new scenario’, the smile exploded on Chen Ge’s face. “The new scenario has a half-price promotion today; you came at the right time.”

Seeing the smile on Chen Ge's face, Yang Chen's hair stood on end. He quickly explained, "We want to wait for more people before we go in."

"No problem. Go and rest over there for now. I'll go get some drinks for you."

"There's no need, boss. We're not that thirsty..." Yang Chen still wanted to say something but was interrupted by Chen Ge.

"There's no need to be so polite around me. We're family, right? I feel so close to you students from the university." Chen Ge passed water to the three. "Wait here, I'll go look around outside."

Chen Ge walked out and yelled at the visitors, "Does anyone else want to experience the new scenario? Now, we already have six visitors registered for this session. Since this is the first time, to give everyone a chance to get used to things, I will allow ten people to go in together!"

The sudden announcement from Chen Ge spooked Uncle Xu. From Chen Ge's tone, he could hear the excitement in this Haunted House boss who did not know the meaning of the phrase 'bottom line'.

"The new scenario is very scary and is only open to visitors who have challenged a two-star scenario. Are there any courageous visitors who are willing to give it a try? We're having a half-price promotion, and we already have six participants!"

...

Using the loudspeaker, Chen Ge repeated the promotion. With his Yin Yang Vision, he could see the interest on some of the visitors' faces.

"I'll go!" When most were hesitating, a young man in jeans walked out. His face was rather pale, and when he left the crowd, he turned back to share a look with a middle-aged man in the crowd.

"How shall I refer to you?" Chen Ge looked at the young man and nodded. With someone leading the way, the rest of the visitors were swayed.

"My surname is Lee." The young man had just come out from the one-star and two-star scenarios. He really could not connect the experience that he had just been through with this smiling boss before him.

"Okay, Mr. Lee, please hold on for a moment." Chen Ge picked up the loudspeaker and shouted again, "We already have seven participants! We need three more, and the underground morgue will be officially open! This is an extremely meaningful day! All of the participants' stories will be written into the app's introductory page!"

Finally, another group of visitors came forward. "Boss, count the three of us in."

Two girls and one guy walked forward. These three were quite unique. The man was pale and very thin. He looked very polite and shy. There was a large bag on his arm, filled with food and drinks. The girl on his left wore sports sneakers, and she looked very outgoing. Her hair was tied in a ponytail, and there was a certain air about her. The girl on his right was the complete opposite of the other girl. She was only 1.6 meters tall, and she had a cute face. She looked so young like the friendly girl next door.

The three did not look like siblings or partners. They walked to Chen Ge and started their self-introduction. "We are editors from a supernatural magazine and your Haunted House's loyal fans. We've already visited all of your scenarios."

Chen Ge had no recollection of these people, but he pretended like he just remembered them. "Now that you mention it, I think I can remember."

"Your Haunted House's design is very good. How did you come up with these ideas? If you have time, we have to sit down and talk." The man wanted to exchange numbers with Chen Ge, and although Chen Ge initially rejected it, after seeing that the introduction of their company that was situated at Eastern Jiujiang, Chen Ge changed his mind. Perhaps he might run into them again in the future.

"Alright, ten people, this is perfect. What are your names?" Chen Ge was very polite to his customers, with a sincere smile on his face always.

"My name is Ah Nan, and this big sister is our main editor, Hu Ya. The girl on the other side is called Tails. Don't be fooled by her appearance; all the innocence is just a front." The man held two large bags, and ignoring the eye-rolling from his colleagues, he continued the introduction.

"Hu Wa¹? Tails? Those sound like pen names." Chen Ge glanced at the big sister. The woman was wearing sportswear, and her presence was something that radiated from within. Perhaps from her job scope of managing writers, she gave the impression that she was not to be messed with, but she looked pretty when she smiled.

"Hu Ya does have canine teeth, but why is Tails called Tails?" Chen Ge glanced at the girl and thought the girl was quite cute. "The four of you, please come with me."

Just as they were turning to go, someone in the crowd screamed, "Wait a minute! Boss, you allowed more than ten people to enter Mu Yang High School, and this is a three-star scenario; can't you allow more people to go as a group?”

The one who spoke was a man who was about 1.9 meters tall. His sleeves were rolled up, and even though the day was not that hot, he was sweating profusely.

“You also want to visit the new scenario? Sure!” Chen Ge preferred this type of visitor—straight forward and open with his demands.

“We’re partners.” The tall man walked toward the Haunted house and dragged a fatty with a drawn face behind him. “Do you mind adding two more people?”

“Even adding three more is fine! Let me tell you, there’s no need to worry so much. The most important thing from visiting a Haunted House is to have fun!”

“Boss Chen is awesome!” The man gave Chen Ge a thumbs up, thinking that Chen Ge was a forthright man.

“Other visitors have said that, but I just try my best.” Chen Ge waved at them. “Follow me!”

Other visitors had just completed their tour and were running out. Chen Ge had the six visitors wait outside while he went in to sign the disclaimers. Entering the Haunted House, he ran to the ghost’s changing room to grabbed a few outfits. At the corner of the corridor, he summoned Ol’ Zhou, Duan Yue, and Bai Qiulin.

“Wear these clothes. Make sure not to expose your heart that is dyed.” Chen Ge thought about it closely. After the employees put the outfits on, he ran to Yang Chen’s place to grab several disclaimers. Chen Ge had Bai Qiulin’s group sign the disclaimers and then went to the door to give the disclaimers to the rest. After they signed them, Chen Ge collected the disclaimers and put them away.

“Alright, let’s go meet up with the other visitors.” Chen Ge led the six visitors deeper into the Haunted House, where the temperature was much lower than it was outside.

“Give me your disclaimers as well.” Chen Ge collected the paper from Yang Chen’s group. After making sure that everything was in place, he led the twelve visitors to the scenario entrance. “This is the first time that the underground morgue has been open to the public; there are many things that might not be completed yet. If you see anything weird or aren’t sure if they are props, you’d better turn and run.”

“But wait... Boss, what do you mean by that? Is there stuff here that is not part of your Haunted House’s props?” Yang Chen knew how scary Chen Ge’s Haunted House was and paid attention to every single word that Chen Ge said.

“Of course. Other than props in the new scenario, there are many surprises waiting for you.” Chen Ge sped up. “The underground morgue’s clearing requirement is different from the others. I have pasted five pictures of the victims on the wall in the central hub. You don’t need to go look for them—I’ve already told you their location—but remember, there are only five pictures, and only those with a picture will clear the scenario.”

“Only five pictures? Then what about those without pictures?” Yang Chen felt very strong negative emotions from the rules set up by Chen Ge; this was encouraging competition between the visitors.

“Those without a picture will just fail the scenario. Don’t worry, there’s no punishment for those who fail.” The more Chen Ge said so, the more afraid Yang Chen became. This was not the first time that he had interacted with Chen Ge. Due to curiosity, he had approached the famed criminal psychological professor at his university to discuss Chen, Ge and the lecturer by the name of Gao only had two words to comment on Chen Ge—Stay away.

...

With Chen Ge leading the way, they all walked down the corridor.

“Come this way. Go down the stairs, and the entrance to the scenario will be behind you.” Chen Ge looked at the twelve visitors following him. “I repeat again, safety first. When you come across anything weird or cannot be certain if it is a prop, you’d better stay away from it.”

His hands on the heavy Screaming Door, Chen Ge pushed it open. Screams echoed in his mind, and a blast of cold wind came at them!

The temperature dropped even more. The few visitors squeezed together, and Chen Ge stood at the dark entrance, smiling at them. “The visitation time is thirty minutes. Have fun and good luck.”

After the visitors walked down the stairs, Chen Ge closed the door. He locked the door with chains, and it could not be opened from the inside.

“Those who visit three-star scenarios have survived the trials of a two-star scenario. They have a higher stress resistance level and should be able to visit the entire scenario.” Chen Ge entered the dressing room and put some make-up on. He opened the door to the changing room and selected an outfit that was suitable for him. “The new scenario has just been released, so I shouldn’t go overboard. Some background music and the phone spirit should be more than enough.”

...

The solid door slammed shut, and the sound of the lock moving made their skin crawl. The visitors stood on the stairs, and it felt like they were being imprisoned. A sense of helplessness rose in their hearts.

“Whenever we come here, it’s like we’re entering a different world.” The man from the supernatural magazine walked ahead. “My name is Ah Nan. These two are my colleagues...”

“Nice to meet you, I’m Yang Chen. These are my friends, we’re students from Western Jiujiang’s Private Academy. This is our fourth time visiting this Haunted House.” Yang Chen shook Ah Nan’s hand. He understood the importance of working together.

“Three editors from a supernatural magazine and three students from a medical university. With the six of you, I have a feeling we’ll succeed this time!” The large man wiped the sweat from his forehead. “My name is Fan Dade; I’m a chef at New East International Hotel. This is my younger brother, Fan Chong; he just came out from a break-up and cooped himself up at home, so I dragged him out to give him a distraction and relax.”

“You came to a place like this to relax?” The young man in jeans had a pale face. This was his second time coming underground. If not for the order from the futuristic park, he would not have come back to this place.

“How about the rest of you?” Fan Dade was friendly and reliable with his large physique.

“You can call me Xiao Lee. I... I’m a maintenance worker for robotics.” Xiao Lee put his hands inside his jeans. Thinking about the upcoming challenge, he felt like he was even stuttering.

“My surname is Zhou. I’m in real estate. This is my girlfriend, Duan Yue.” Ol’ Zhou picked up Duan Yue’s hand under her wrathful gaze as he patted her palm lovingly. Duan Dade’s little brother hugged his large stomach and felt that it was warm.

Everyone’s eyes eventually fell on the thin man that was at the back of group. He had one hand in his pocket and a face that told others to not get too close to him. Sensing everyone else's gaze, he dropped his name. "Bai Qiulin."

"Alright, now that we know each other, let's get moving—we don't have much time." Fan Dade thought that he was quite lucky. Be it the editors or the students, they were people with strong hearts.

"Wait a minute, we have something to share with all of you." Yang Chen took out a small notebook from his pocket. He shared the experience that his seniors had collected at the Haunted House with everyone else. Different from before, this time, everyone was a veteran, and they knew the terror of the Haunted House, so they paid him full attention.

"This information is so important; it must have taken you a lot of time to collect it, yes?" Ol' Zhou nodded his thanks at Yang Chen.

"Of course, this is the precious experience our seniors gained from sacrificing themselves. Don't spread this news or upload it on the app to prevent the boss from changing things," Wang Dan said. He sounded unwilling, like he thought it was a bad idea to share this inside information with outsiders.

"Don't worry, I will not leak it." Ol' Zhou held Duan Yue's hand as they walked forward. Thinking about the notes, he said, "This Haunted House sure is scary. There is already a full notebook just on the things that people need to pay attention to."

"The scarier things are still waiting for us. This time, we're trying out a new scenario, and we're the first batch of visitors. The experience of our seniors might not be able to be of much use, and we'll need to depend on ourselves." Yang Chen put the notebook back into his pocket. "Let's prepare to go in now. We'd better switch our phones to silent mode, and do not use your phone in the middle of the visitation."

"What will happen if you use it?" Xiao Lee was reminded of the mission that he had been given. He was there that day to take pictures and videos.

"Something scary will happen. I advise you not to try your luck. Once something happens to you, all of us will be affected." Yang Chen knew that very well.

"Is it something that serious?" Xiao Lee grumbled and switched his phone to silent. The twelve visitors walked down the stairs and stopped at the entrance to the underground morgue. Before them was a rusted steel door, and behind it was a dark corridor.

“Why is there a room here?” Tails glanced to the side and saw a door next to the corridor. She pushed the door open, and the room was decorated like a crime scene. Things were cluttered, and there was a large blood stain.

“Don’t get separated. During the visitation, our biggest enemy is ourselves. Try to keep your curiosity in check and focus on the mission,” Yang Chen explained to the girl whom he saw as being younger than him.

“Okay.” As Tails pulled her gaze away, she saw the statue in the room blink. She was about to say something when Yang Chen and Wang Dan pushed the steel door to the underground morgue open.

There was a wall sconce every few meters in the corridor, and the walls were painted white. There was a weird smell in the air. When Wang Dan and Yang Chen smelled it, they were shocked. This was a familiar smell.

“This smells like... formalin?”

Wang Dan and Yang Chen shared a look. As forensic students, they knew this smell too well.

“Isn’t this too realistic? It’s just a Haunted House, but it has applied actual formalin. Does Boss Chen not even care about cost?” Wang Dan stood at the entrance and did not enter.

...

“Underground morgue, formalin, corridor that is painted white...” Yang Chen glanced down the corridor, and he also stopped. “How come it feels like I’ve returned to school.”

“Have you two entered your university’s underground morgue?” Ah Nan walked over. He frowned slightly when the smell of formalin hit him. “I hear that when you students attend autopsy classes, the teacher will personally lead you to collect the cadaver, so you students should be more familiar with this underground morgue, right?”

“Who told you medical students have to be familiar with the underground morgue?” Wang Dan recovered and took several steps back. “In any case, I have not been to the underground morgue before. How about you ask the two of them?”

Lee Xue shook her head, but Yang Chen’s reaction was weird. He walked into the corridor alone and sniffed at the wall. “The stench of formalin leaks directly out from the wall; this means that it has been soaked fully into the wall. This is not achievable by just splashing the wall with formalin. I now suspect that Boss Chen has broken down the morgue from some university and moved it here.”

“This smell is not directly harmful to the human body, right?” Xiao Lee looked down the corridor but refused to take the first step.

“We smell it daily, and we’re just fine, right? Furthermore, this smell is really not that strong.” Yang Chen touched the wall and used his finger to lightly scrape the white paint. “I once heard from a senior who said that the underground morgue at our school is also painted white. According to legend, those corridors that are painted white are specifically for cadavers, while the unpainted corridors are for students and staff.”

“There’s such a story?”

“I thought that was a unique situation at our school, but based on what we’re seeing, I guess it is the same for all morgues.” Yang Chen called after Wang Dan and Lee Xue. “The three of us will walk ahead; no matter what, the rest of you’d better stick close to us. Don’t split up no matter what happens! Only by sticking together will we be able to clear this scenario.”

“I agree with your suggestion, but how do you suggest we split the pictures? The boss has said that there are only five pictures available.” Bai Qiulin’s face was drawn like the whole world owed him money. “I’ve visited this place before. The boss often says the opposite. He said the pictures are not that useful, so this proves that the pictures are the key to clearing this scenario!”

“Five pictures, but since the three of us move together, we only need one.” Yang Chen made a huge concession. “The aim is to clear the scenario. Boss Chen said those things probably to drive a wedge between us. Based on our understanding of the man, before we enter the central hub, nothing too scary will happen. However, that will change once we get our hands on the picture.”

“I also think so. Perhaps the picture is nothing but a red herring.” Ah Nan agreed with Yang Chen. “The three of us editors are just here for the experience. We also only need one picture.”

“Five pictures, and the six of us have already taken two. I came in alone, so it’s not too much to ask for me to have one, right?” Bai Qiulin looked at others, and before he finished, the chef Fan Dade spoke.

“My little brother just has a break-up. I’m going to fight to get one for him.”

“Big brothers, I’ve challenged two one-star scenarios and one two-star scenario already. The aim is to clear a three-star scenario. I’m begging you to give me one picture.” Xiao Lee was quite helpless. He had the futuristic theme park to answer to. He had come here to look for something useful. From the sound, the picture it was cursed, but it seemed to be important as well. To complete the mission given to him by Mr. Mu, he had to get one picture somehow.

The pictures had all been assigned, and only Ol' Zhou and Duan Yue did not get one. The rest of the visitors turned to the two of them. With a smile, Ol' Zhou grabbed Duan Yue's hand and said, "It's alright. The two of us will follow the rest of you. As long as we don't get separated, everything should be fine."

Ol' Zhou did not create an issue due to the picture, and this improved the other visitors' impression of him.

"We still have not reached the central hub yet, so what's the point discussing all this?" Wang Dan felt that their group would contribute the most, but they only got one picture. That felt wrong, but he did not point it out even though his tone was rather rough.

"Then, everyone, please follow closely." Yang Chen walked at the forefront. The deeper they went, the darker it got. Without the aid of lighting, they needed to be within six meters of each other to see each other's faces.

"Bro, should we just give up?" Fan Chong stopped at the entrance. The fat on his body jiggled like he was shivering from fear.

"That would be so much of a waste since we're already here." Fan Dade looked at his brother and placed his arm over his shoulder. "You always coop yourself up at home. You have to come out to experience some new things. Don't just keep yourself locked up at home. I know you're not feeling the mood, but a break-up is not the end of the world, right? Life moves on."

"I'm really not staying at home because of the break-up." Fan Chong sighed. He seemed to have his own secret, but since he could bring himself to say it, he had no choice but to allow himself to be dragged down to the morgue.

The chef and the brother walked at the back, and before them were Duan Yue and Ol' Zhou. The single visitors, Xiao Lee and Bai Qiulin, walked side by side, and ahead of them were the editors and Yang Chen's group.

The party soon reached the first split; one was unpainted, and the other was painted white. On the corridor that was painted white, blood red letters read—No Living Humans Allowed.

The unpainted corridor, in comparison to the white corridor, looked rather dark and creepy.

“The white corridor is used for cadaver transportation, so we should use the unpainted corridor.” Yang Chen did not hesitate and walked forward. However, he stopped once he took several steps.

“Oh Yang, what’s wrong with you?” Wang Dan ran into Yang Chen. He followed Yang Chen’s gaze, and he also stopped. The few visitors all surrounded him. In the unpainted corridor, they could clearly see a ball-like object bouncing up and down.

“Is that a human head?”

“Too dark to tell.” Yang Chen did not expect to come across something so weird at the start of their visit. “Don’t worry, there are many of us. Let’s go take a look.”

Chapter 469 - Starting Now! [2 in 1]

After Yang Chen said that, he took several steps forward. He felt cold wind caressing his back, and when he turned, he saw the other visitors still standing where they were earlier, including Wang Dan and Lee Xue.

“Why aren’t you guys moving? Let’s go together!” Yang Chen was not that courageous of a person in reality—he was just comparatively more rational than others.

...

“Based on the personality of the Haunted House’s boss, the most dangerous place is often the safest place. Based on your earlier analysis, the white corridor is to transport the cadavers, so it should be the dangerous path, but I feel like the unpainted corridor that you chose is the real dangerous one. We cannot use a normal way of thinking to dissect the boss’ design,” Bai Qiulin said. His voice was cold and made some of their hearts tremble, but they could not deny that the man had a point.

“Then how do you suggest we carry on?” Wang Dan’s tone was pointed. His group of three friends had contributed the most, but they only were given one picture—he was still hung up over that.

“It doesn’t matter which path we choose; the most important thing is that we do not split up from one another.” An Nan from the magazine walked forward. “As long as the twelve of us stick together and don’t panic unnecessarily, we have a good chance of clearing this scenario.”

He looked at the object that bounced up and down inside the corridor, and his expression became rather unnatural. “The exploration time is thirty minutes, so we have time to go down both paths. There is no reason to argue due to a small issue like this.”

Ah Nan tried to mediate the situation. Bai Qiulin looked at the three medical students like he muttered like he was talking to himself, “This is just weird. Why do the three of them insist on leading us down that path?”

His volume was so soft that only Fan Dade, Fan Chong, and Xiao Lee, who were standing beside him, heard him.

With the three medical students leading the way, the twelve visitors officially entered the corridor. The lights on the wall flickered nonstop, and there was a faded smell of formalin in the air. The corridor narrowed as they moved forward, and the floor became more dirtied and stain. They had no idea what they were, and it was sticky when they stepped on it.

“Bro, should we just return and leave?” Fan Chong suggested again. He really did not understand why his big brother would bring him to a place like this to relax.

“Don’t be scared, I’m here for you.” Fan Dade himself did not notice that when he spoke, his expression was nervous like he was a thief who had broken into someone’s home. Wet handprints started to appear on the wall, and the ceiling above their heads seemed to have gotten lower. The tallest among them, Fan Dade, could touch the ceiling just by raising his hand.

The few continued to move forward. After they walked another ten meters, it was Ah Nan who first realized that something was wrong. “Wait a minute, we have been walking for so long, but how come it feels like the distance between us and that ball object hasn’t changed?”

Now that he mentioned it, the others came to the same realization. They realized that he was right. The bouncing object seemed to be moving at the same speed as them, and it maintained a constant distance behind them.

“There is still time to walk away now.” Bai Qiulin stood in the middle of the group, where it was the safest. “You all know that is probably not some kind of ball, but a human head that is moving on its own. This has to be something designed by the Haunted House’s boss, just waiting for us to scare ourselves.”

Bai Qiulin seemed to have a lot of experience visiting the Haunted house. He placed his hand inside his pocket. He did not go after anyone, just explaining the situation, “Think about it, when we were distracted by the human head and continued to move into the corridor, what if the human head suddenly increased in speed to move toward us? Will we be flustered? If some other monsters come from the other end of the corridor then, the twelve of us will be surrounded and probably separated in the chaos.”

Ah Nan nodded and agreed with Bai Qiulin. He shouted at the visitors behind him, “Please remember to stick close together, and don’t run off on your own. It is safest when we stick together.”

“It is futile to say something like that. We all know what we’re supposed to do, but when the real terror arrives, the thing that decides what we’ll do is not rationality but human instinct. The body will move before the brain thinks.” Bai Qiulin’s tone was detached and straight-forward, but other people could not find a counter-argument. “If I’m not mistaken, if we continue to move forward, there will most likely be another split in the path, and the corridors will become more and more complicated. The human head and monsters will appear then. The Haunted House’s aim is to heighten the fear in everyone’s heart, and to do that, it tries everything within its power to separate us. At the split, when people are scared, they might run down different corridors. The layout here is so complicated that once you run down a corridor, it’ll be hard to get out.”

“You’ve said so much, but that is all your imagination.” Wang Dan was not feeling well. They were so kind to bring other visitors with them and had shared the knowledge of their seniors. They were even the ones leading the way. Yet, someone kept trying to go up against them.

“Indeed, that is just my speculation, but I hope everyone will be ready when the time comes. If there’s a split coming up ahead, everyone must pay attention and follow me.” Obviously, Bai Qiulin was trying to wrangle the leadership away from Yang Chen’s group.

Wang Dan still wanted to say something but was interrupted by Yang Chen. “He’s only looking out for all of us. There’s no need to argue over this.”

Yang Chen felt unnerved. He sniffed the formalin in the air, and his eyes scanned the group of visitors. There was something that was not right. “When we came to visit this place before, something similar happened.”

As they moved forward, steel doors that were sealed up started to appear on both sides of the corridor. They looked old and rusted. “Where did Boss Chen get all these things?”

The human head continued to bounce forward. It kept a certain distance from the group of visitors. They walked for another minute before they came across a four-way junction. The corridor on the left was painted white, and it was covered with many blood letters; the corridor on the right was unpainted, but the human head turned and entered it; the corridor right in front of them was also not painted, and there was a room down the corridor that was open.

“This place is just like a maze; we have been down here for less than a minute, and we’ve already come across two junctions. If we continue to move forward, it is guaranteed that we’ll get lost.” Fan Dade had a bad sense of direction. He was the largest, but he was also the most cowardly. He kept talking to Fan Chong and Ol’ Zhou to distract himself from the surroundings.

“I still say we follow the human head. First, I can promise that our seniors once said, if we get lost inside the underground morgue, we need to follow the corridors that are unpainted. They will eventually lead us out; this is the design of the morgue before it was built. Second, there’s no need for us to make this into something that is so complicated. We’re just here to visit a Haunted House; we’re not going on some kind of exploration and adventure. In fact, this human head could very well be a guide.” Yang Chen believed in what he said.

“I think we should go look inside the room where the door is open. Perhaps we can find some useful clues there.” Ah Nan did not agree with Yang Chen this time.

“I don’t care what kind of choice you make. I just want to remind all of you to not stay so long in the junction. It is very dangerous here.” Bai Qiulin did not look at Yang Chen or Ah Nan. Instead, he kept turning his head to look behind him, like there was something scary approaching them from the dark and eerie corridor. He did not say anything scary, but his one small motion also made the rest of the visitors turn their heads to look back down the corridor. Inside the dark corridor, it really seemed like something was moving, and there was more than one of them!

“We have been walking for so long already.” Fan Dade laughed drily as he dragged his little brother to the front of the group. So far, it had been the two of them who stood at the back.

“Er... I’m sorry.” Tails, who stood next to Ah Nan, raised her hand. The girl’s voice was soft, and it was impossible to tell her real age from her appearance and her voice. “Have you guys discovered something? That human head keeps on moving, but I’ve been looking around. There is no mechanism controlling it inside the walls, and look at its movement pattern—it went up and down, up and down. That doesn't look like it was pulled along by a string." Tails explained her keen observations.

"Perhaps the mechanism is hidden inside it? Perhaps the boss is giggling while he looks at us from the surveillance camera." Xiao Lee shrugged. He was an employee at the futuristic theme park, so he knew a thing or two about devices at the park. He knew that with current technology, many things that seemed impossible could be done

"But look closer." Tails used the cutest expression to say something that made the rest of the visitors so uncomfortable. "The degree that it moves up and down is different each time. It doesn't look like a programed thing. In fact, it looks more like an invisible person is bouncing the thing repeatedly against the ground, or the human head is moving on its own."

Before the visitors could recover from the shock of the shadows coming from the corridor behind them, their focus turned to the human head inside the corridor to their right. They looked at it long enough, and it really did feel like the human head was bouncing on its own. It bounced and laughed, and the distance between them seemed so close.

Fan Dade wiped the sweat from his forehead. Suddenly, he felt like standing in the middle of the group was not that safe anymore.

"We should ignore the human head for now. We should go straight ahead to inspect what is behind that open door." Ah Nan looked at Yang Chen. "Based on your speculation, the human head is a guide. If that is the case, when we exit the room, it should still be here waiting for us, so there is no reason for us to hurry and leave."

"I also think it is better that we check out the room first." Hu Ya had been silent throughout, but when she spoke, it meant that the three editors would be following her direction. Yang Chen felt like arguing his case, but he surrendered after Hu Ya stated her stance. The beautiful main editor had a mature and warm voice—it was a completely different style from Tails. In fact, she reminded Yang Chen of Chen Ge. Yang Chen felt this was a very well-hidden, black-belly big sister and not someone he could cross.

"Then, we will do that first." The twelve visitors walked past the junction and squeezed themselves before the open door. This was a wooden door, and the bottom end was dug out. The door itself was covered with scratch marks. There was a sign written on the side of the door in pen that read 'Paradise'.

"A paradise inside theme park?" Yang Chen walked at the front of the door. He used his hands to touch the deep gouges on the door. Inside the grooves, there were blood stains and some brownish-black substance. "Do you think these marks were made by human hands?"

After entering the underground morgue, everything that he saw was so authentic to a point where he almost forgot he was visiting a Haunted House. Pushing the door open, the room was filled with many different items. There were bottles and vials arranged on the racks. Various organ models were soaking with yellow liquid inside the containers.

"What kind of paradise is this?" The room was very small, and it could not fit all twelve visitors. As Ah Nan entered the room, he told the rest of the visitors, "The rest of you should stay outside. Don't wander off on your own. Wait for us to come out, and we will move out together."

The three students from Western Jiujiang Medical University and the three editors entered the room. To complete the mission handed to him by Mr. Mu, Xiao Lee also entered the room. After they entered, Bai Qiulin very naturally stood guard at the entrance to the room.

Fan Dade, who was more cowardly, dragged his little brother and squeezed next to Ol' Zhou. "The two of us should just stay here. When they're done with the search, we'll just continue to follow them."

When he finished his sentence, he turned to smile at Ol' Zhou with an embarrassed smile. "We don't visit place like this often. When we move in deeper, do you mind if we stick with you?"

"Of course not." Ol' Zhou looked like such a friendly person. Kind, passionate, and loyal. Inside the dark and eerie corridor, Fan Dade was surrounded by Ol' Zhou, Duan Yue, and Bai Qiulin. He felt safe. These three were more trustworthy compared to the young'uns inside the room.

"We sure are lucky this time. We've found ourselves good company to party with—perhaps we really can clear the scenario this time."

While the big brother was happy with their luck, the little brother had a bad feeling growing in his heart. The meat on his body jiggled as Fan Chong turned back to look down the corridor that they had come from. The lights that were attached to the walls had been extinguished. He had no idea when that had happened.

The scariest thing was that the lights continued to get extinguished starting from the furthest one every few minutes. The corridor became darker, and the thing hiding inside the darkness seemed to be moving forward.

“It really feels like something is coming.”

...

Yang Chen, Ah Nan, Wang Dan, Lee Xue, Xiao Lee, Tails and Hu Ya ransacked the place, and other than the dust that covered their hands, they did not come up with any worthwhile discoveries.

“The haunted House’s boss would not have wasted such a huge amount of energy to create a useless room. There has to be a big secret hidden inside this room.” Ah Nan led the two female editors to walk through the racks. “This place looks very much like an abandoned warehouse.”

There were some ruined tables, chairs, and society equipment left in the corner. Ah Nan went to pick up one of the costumes from the pile. He discovered that the costume was wet like someone just had a bath and then put the clothes on. Putting the costume down, Ah Nan moved his finger to his nose, and he smelled a weird stench.

“This doesn’t smell very much like water.” While Ah Nan was caught in his thought process, Hu Ya walked deeper into the warehouse alone. She opened the cupboard that was placed at the corner and looked through the weird paintings that were stored inside.

Tails followed behind them. Since the path was blocked, she leaned against the printer that was by the wall. She accidentally hit the switch, and a rather pudgy face appeared on the printer.

The light on the printer suddenly came on. The first piece of paper fell next to Tails. The girl, who was an editor at a supernatural magazine, had quite a strong heart. Her first reaction after seeing the sheet of paper was not to get scared but to pick it up. “Did I trigger some mechanism? So lucky?”

She picked up the white piece of paper to take a look. There was a rough frame on the A4 paper.

...

“What is this?” Tails looked at it for a long time but could not get it. “Ah Nan, come and take a look at this. It suddenly fell out from the printer, and there is a vague pattern on it.”

Ah Nan, who was researching the costume, took a look. He was confused, studying the pattern on the paper.

“There’re no letters and numbers, so it shouldn’t be a code.” Ah Nan flashed his phone at it. “It’s just a normal piece of paper.”

He used his saliva and rubbed it on the pattern. “The color doesn’t change; it doesn’t look like it has been chemically treated.”

He tried every method that he could think of, and the conclusion was that it was a very common piece of paper.

“I’ve tried all the methods I’ve learned from detective novels.” Ah Nan handed the paper back to Tails. “Why don’t you keep it? Perhaps we might need it later.”

“Okay.” Tails folded the paper. Before she pocketed it, the printer ‘spat’ out another piece of paper. It was the same size, and there was also a pattern. However, compared to before, the pattern seemed to have gotten clearer.

“Is someone controlling this printer?” Ah Nan opened the printer’s lid to inspect it. He did not discover any problems; it was just a normal printer. “This is weird. These are things that we use in everyday life, but how come it becomes so cursed when they’re moved inside this Haunted House?”

Pulling out the printer’s plug, Ah Nan ignored the second piece of paper. He was feeling nervous. “We have spent quite some time here already. It’s time to move on.”

Hu Ya, who was at the deepest part of the warehouse, was still studying the few paintings. Her expression was off, like she was stunned by the paintings’ weird style.

“Sister Hu Ya? We’re leaving,” Ah Nan urged.

“Come and look at these paintings. They look like they’re painted from the angle of the cadavers. Even I can feel the desire that is seeping through the painter’s hands. It’s hungering for life, like it was close to crawling out of these paintings to drag the viewers into it.” Hu Ya wanted to take out her phone to snap some pictures, but considering that they were inside a Haunted House, she resisted the urge. “If there’s a chance, I wish to speak with the artist. If possible, I want to hire him to come draw for our magazine.”

“If you let our art team hear that, they’re going to be so pissed.” Ah Nan smiled. Hu Ya and Ah Nan walked out of the warehouse. Tails followed behind, and she was about to leave when the printer issued a sound, and the computer next to it was switched on.

The sound was amplified in the quiet surroundings. Tails had been watching the computer, and she was sure that no one had touched it.

“Is the boss controlling it remotely?” Tails stood where she was, and her mind started to wander. “The boss could not have created this space for nothing. Could the secret of this warehouse be hidden inside the computer?”

When they entered the warehouse, Tails had already been curious about why the place was called paradise—there had to be a reason.

Her large eyes widened as she neared the computer. The screen gave out a weak light, and the screen was still black. However, a person’s face could roughly be seen on it. Initially, Tails thought that it was her own reflection on the screen, but the more she looked at it, the more she felt that was not the case.

“That’s a man’s face, right?”

There were many things inside the warehouse, and the place was chaotic. The three editors were at the deeper part of the room while Yang Chen’s group was closer to the door. There were some broken cupboards lying between them.

“Lee Xue, look at these organ models inside the glass containers—they are perfect replicas of the ones we have at our school.”

“They are even to scale.” Even a medical student could not tell the difference with these props, and this unhinged Lee Xue. After all, they were supposed to be inside a Haunted House, not a medical hospital.

“People that don’t see human organs on a daily basis will not be able to replicate them so perfectly.”

Organ models were different from mannequins. Only by splitting an actual human open would one be able to see them. Furthermore, human organs were different from animal organs. Yang Chen could confirm that all the containers there were holding human organs.

“During our last visit, I already sensed that the boss is very familiar with human anatomy. Only two types of people will have that—either they are doctors that save lives or murderers that take lives.”

“You’ve been watching too many movies, haven’t you?” Wang Dan was chilled by what Yang Chen said. “The boss pays attention to details. He probably hired someone to custom make these things.”

“I feel things are not that simple.” Yang Chen moved his gaze away and headed out the room. “There’s a different experience every time we visit this place. Each scenario is different from the last, but they are all so real like they have been moved from the real world into this place.”

The three students prepared to leave the warehouse. Xiao Lee held the phone in his hands, but he could not find the chance to snap some pictures. Behind him was Bai Qiulin, who stood at the door. He had one hand in his pocket and glanced at Fan Chong.

The man’s large stomach moved. Fan Chong had no idea that he had already been targeted—all of his focus was on the corridor. The lights went off one by one, and the rate at which they were being extinguished had picked up. It gave the impression that the darkness was moving faster. His fingers tightened subconsciously, and his eyes widened. There seemed to be shadows in the dark, and some of them looked like they were crawling on the ceiling.

His heart raced, and Fan Chong grabbed Fan Dade's arm. "Bro, careful! Something is coming!"

"What thing?" Fan Dade was a rather dull person. He only started to look around when he was reminded by Fan Chong.

"Right there! Quick, call them to come out!" Fan Chong remembered what Ah Nan had said. No matter what happened, they had to stick together.

"Don't panic, I'll go take a look." Fan Dade walked to the junction. He was cowardly, but he would not show that before his little brother. He walked several steps and stopped. He reached out his neck and tried his best to look down the corridor.

The lights went out faster and faster, and the place dipped into darkness. Fan Dade started to panic, too.

After Fan Dade left, Ol' Zhou and Duan Yue retreated to the back. They worked together with Bai Qiulin to surround Fan Chong in the middle of them.

Chapter 471: Chance to Struggle

The atmosphere in the corridor changed tremendously compared to before. The people that stood at the entrance of the warehouse all turned to look down the junction. The sound of the bouncing head became clearer, and the lights went off one by one. Fan Dade, who stood at the forefront, could clearly see a human shadow standing in the dark.

The body swayed, and the head that was attached to the shoulders looked like it could fall at any moment. There was also a pair of arms of different length. It looked like they had hurriedly been sewn on. It hid in the dark and jumped up and down on its tiptoes.

...

A woman's mumbling drilled into his ears. It was soft and sad. No one could hear exactly what she was saying, but it sounded like pleading and also complaining. The content was about how she wanted to borrow something.

Anxiety, fear, and pressure injected into their souls, and terror crawled out from the corner. Fan Dade's legs were weakening, and a chill ran up his neck like a pair of icy hands leaning out from his shirt to caress him. Sweat trickled down his forehead, and his legs shivered. All the lights in the three remaining corridors at the junction went out; only darkness remained.

The sound of a beating heart and bouncing head slowly acclimated to each other's rhythm. The lights were still going off, and the light several meters in front of Fan Dade was extinguished without warning.

The teetering body was closing in on them.

His legs shook even more. As Fan Dade was about to turn, the light next to him went out. Half of his body was shrouded in darkness, and his large body was like a wall, bordering on the edge of light and darkness.

His neck turned colder and colder. The shivers crawled up his leg like millions of ants had crawled into his clothes. His energy was slowly drained, and he tried to scream, but his throat was locked. His pupils almost narrowed into dots.

A pool of darkness reached out from the shadow toward Fan Dade. Soaked in formalin for so long, their skin was as tough as cows hide. It stuck to Fan Dade's body, and the shadow was darkening before the face revealed itself.

The skull was hollowed, and when it appeared, it shattered Fan Dade's mind. In that moment, it felt like his heart had stopped beating and the blood in his body ran the other way. It was something that was hard to describe. Fainting or screaming became a luxury.

Who can save me? Who can save me?

It was unclear who made that noise or the place that it came from. Fan Dade's frame started to shake, and his skin color slowly turned abnormal.

"Bro? What's... wrong with you?" Fan Chong's voice appeared behind Fan Dade. It gave the man some semblance of light in the whirlpool of darkness. He was reminded of the sibling whom he had grown up with. Fan Chong had said something similar when they were young.

The blood rushed to his brain, and Fan Dade slowly turned his head around. His face was filled with popped veins. His expression was twisted, and his quivering lips slowly opened. Standing in the darkness, Fan Dade used every ounce of energy he had to scream, "They're coming! Run!"

His back was chilled, and liquid came out from his ears. His ears were dominated by the sound of nails scratching in the dark. He felt like the faceless monster had crawled onto his body in the dark and the hands that were dripping with formalin covered his ears.

His mind was blank. He saw his little brother's lips open but could not hear his voice. Fan Dade screamed at the top of his lungs. He was like a spooked bull. He grabbed his little brother, who was also shaking, and ran down the corridor whose lights were still on.

"Run! They're coming! They're just behind us!" His scalp felt like exploding, and his every strand of muscle was shaking. Fan Dade did not turn around and did not care about the other visitors; his mind was filled with the image of that face!

“Brother!” His arm was grabbed, so Fan Chong could not struggle, only allowing himself to be dragged by Fan Dade.

“Where are you two going? Come back here!” Ol’ Zhou called after them. His voice could be heard by everyone inside the warehouse.

Bai Qiulin was the first to run after them. Behind him were Xiao Lee and the medical students.

“Come back!” Ol’ Zhou screamed again. With an anxious expression, he pulled Duan Yue to make chase as well.

“Follow them!” Bai Qiulin, Xiao Lee, and Yang Chen’s group chased after the two. Things happened too suddenly—no one expected a visitor to suddenly go insane. Fang Dade and Fan Chong reached the end of the corridor and rushed down one of the split paths without looking. Ol’ Zhou was the closest to them, but after Ol’ Zhou got into the corridor, he paused.

Before him was a T-junction, and the curious thing was... there were footsteps coming from all three corridors!

“Should be this way.” Ol’ Zhou grabbed Duan Yue’s hand and ran down one of the corridors, but he only took few steps when Bai Qiulin held him back. “Stop, we mustn’t lose our stability at a time like this!”

“Let me go!” Ol’ Zhou swung Bai Qiulin’s aside. He could not watch their friends disappear into the darkness!

Ol’ Zhou shoved hardly, and Bai Qiulin staggered backward to knock into the wall. Xiao Lee and the medical students who followed behind them saw this clearly.

“Brother! Don’t act so impulsively! We cannot chase them anymore!” Yang Chen said quickly. His mind moved fast, and he realized that this was a trap. “Calm down, we need to calm down!”

He was afraid that Ol’ Zhou would run off and stopped him with Xiao Lee’s help, but right then, the only light in the corridor went out!

The whole corridor was plunged into darkness.

“Squat down and stay where you are! Don’t move!” Yang Chen shouted.

No one could tell what happened in the dark. The footsteps of the Fan siblings slowly disappeared, and they were replaced by the wheeling sound of a trolley.

Something was following behind the brothers!

Thirty seconds later, the light came back on.

The group of people slowly came up from the ground. They looked at each other and saw terror reflected in each other's eyes.

"The lights went off, and two visitors disappeared. What about that trolley sound? What is chasing after the brothers? What did they see?" Yang Chen's mind was filled with questions. The more he thought about it, the more unsettled he became. What happened earlier was like a pail of ice water that fell on him, making him chilled from head to toe.

All that preparation was for nothing, and the feeling of helplessness was worse than despair!

Yang Chen gripped his hands and took in a cold breath. "Are we not even given the chance to struggle?"

“Squat down and stay where you are! Don’t move!” When all the lights went off and darkness fell, Yang Chen’s voice echoed down the corridor. At the time, the three editors were still inside the warehouse. Ah Nan and Hu Ya were in the middle of the racks. They were walking ahead and did not realize that Tails was no longer behind them.

The warehouse sunk into darkness, and the only source of light was the ray from the computer screen. Tails moved her face to the screen. As she leaned closer, the face in the screen became clearer. The dark frame leaned forward like a body soaked underwater slowly surfacing. She stared at the face on the screen—it was bald, and due to the long soaking in certain liquid, its face was pale and white.

...

“These features...” Removing the paper from her pocket, Tails opened the paper before the screen. The clean, fair fingers fell on the paper, and Tails’ eyes widened. She realized that the face on the paper was similar to the one that was showing on the computer screen!

“It was a human face?” She turned back to look, and all the lights outside in the corridor had been extinguished. In the darkness, she clearly saw the power light for the printer come back on. A piece of paper fell down next to her. This time, there was no face on the paper; instead, there was something written on it—Look behind you!

Holding the paper with both her hands, Tails was enveloped by the fear of the unknown. Her body chilled as she squatted alone in the dark, unable to find her friends. Her neck froze, and she forced herself to not turn around. The cold light from the screen fell on her body, and her slight frame was shivering. Her pupils quivered in the dark, and try as she might, her eyes kept wandering to the corner.

The dark screen started to ripple like water, and something underneath it was swimming to the surface. Tails did not dare to move, and she stared at the screen from the corner of her eyes. The ripple expanded, and inside the screen that no one else was paying attention to, a bloated face that was blue from asphyxiation crawled outward!

It happened so fast that Tails could not react in time. She could only see the face charge at her. She wanted to scream, but there was no sound. Her eyes widened like they were about to pop out from their sockets. The face was still closing in on her—the neck, the arm, the upper body.

The wet arms grabbed the helpless girl like it was trying to pull Tails into the computer with it!

The lights in the corridor finally came back on. Ah Nan turned toward the door and shouted, “What just happened?”

He and Hu Ya quickly ran out. The faces of all the visitors were bad. Ol’ Zhou was still gasping for air. It appeared like he too had been given quite a shock.

“Tell me, what happened?” There was a bad feeling in Ah Nan’s heart. He scanned the group and frowned. “The chef and his little brother are missing?”

“They ran away on their own.” Bai Qiulin massaged his shoulder. When he was shoved by Ol’ Zhou earlier, he had been knocked into the wall.

“All of you were outside then, why did the two of them suddenly go crazy?” Ah Nan kept his eyes on Bai Qiulin.

“Just now, the lights in the corridor went off one by one. The little brother saw something approaching in the dark, so the chef went back to the junction to check. Then, he suddenly went insane, grabbed his brother, and started running.” Bai Qiulin told him everything that he had seen, not hiding anything.

“Things in the dark?” The frown deepened. “This means that the monster in the darkness has collapsed the chef’s mind, but only the chef has seen the actual monster.”

When Ah Nan said that, everyone’s heart shuddered—the unknown was the most terrifying. Just how scary must something be to be able to scare a 1.9-meter-tall man to such an extent? The scarier thing was that the monster was still hiding in the dark, and any one of them could be next.

“Did any one of you trigger any traps while you were outside?” Ah Nan hugged one of his arms, and his other held his chin.

“No, we were shocked by things that happened as well,” Bai Qiulin said firmly. “I’ve already told you that the junction is the most dangerous place and that we should not stay here any longer, but you all refused to listen to me.”

He sighed. “We must be under the boss’ constant surveillance. He is looking for opening to get us, and when he saw one, he tore at our mental health like piranhas finding food.”

With the truth before them, none of them could retort. The three editors and three medical students were their own cliques. Even if they agreed with Bai Qiulin, they would not have stated so. However, Xiao Lee was different—he was an isolated visitor like Bai Qiulin who had entered the Haunted House alone to challenge a three-star scenario. His impression of Bai Qiulin improved greatly. Be it in terms of logic or physical power, he was much greater than normal. Therefore, he was thinking of forming a group with Bai Qiulin so that they could look out for one another.

“I think we should listen to everyone’s opinion before we make a decision.” Xiao Lee did not openly support Bai Qiulin, but he was on the man’s side. Plus, he was facing Yang Chen and Ah Nan when he said those things, so that was clear enough.

“It was my idea to explore the warehouse. That was my mistake.” Ah Nan apologized, and he turned serious. “Next time, before I make any decision, I will communicate more with everyone else.”

“It’s fine.” Bai Qiulin pointed toward the corridor that Fan Dade and Fan Chong had disappeared down. “What shall we do next?”

“We should go look for them, right?” Ol’ Zhou was kind. “If we can be scared when all twelve of us are around, it’ll be worse for the two of them when they’re stranded.”

“You’re right.” Bai Qiulin and Ah Nan agreed. They turned to look at Yang Chen, who stood in the middle of the corridor. “What do the three of you think?”

“I agree that we should go find the chef and his brother, but before that, I hope you all understand something.” Yang Chen scanned everyone there. “We now have the power of agency because we can choose whatever path that we want. Once we start to go look for the two of them, we’ll lose that power and become toys in the boss’ hands, falling into the traps that he set up.”

“What do you mean by that?” Ol’ Zhou was not satisfied.

“I was being very clear. If we want to clear this game, we have to try our best to go the furthest.” Yang Chen turned away from the corridor that the chef took to the opposite corridor and said, “I suggest we move forward to find our own way.”

The cleverer the man, the more arrogant he would be. Yang Chen desired a clear—even if it was just one time, it was a proof of competence.

“I disagree.” Ol’ Zhou was the first to reject the idea. “When we came in, you said that we’re all teammates, but now that something has happened, that is thrown out of your mind? Don’t you think you’re being a bit much?”

...

“Ol’ Zhou...” Duan Yue smiled at the crowd apologetically as she pulled on Ol’ Zhou’s sleeves. It appeared like she was used to apologizing on Ol’ Zhou’s behalf since the man was a man filled with justice and would often run his mouth on certain events.

“I also do not think that we should abandon them.” It was Xiao Lee who spoke. Since he came in alone and had no team support, he was afraid that if the same thing happened to him, he would face the same issue as the Fan siblings—cruelly abandoned.

“I was just stating my thought. Whatever the decision, it’ll still be dependent on the majority.” Yang Chen raised his hand. “I think we should go back to the junction and go down the other corridor.”

When he finished, Wang Dan and Lee Xue also raised their hands.

“Only three, now who agrees with searching for the chef and his brother.” Ol’ Zhou was the first one to raise his hand. It was followed by Duan Yue and Xiao Lee. Three versus three. “The rest of you, stop wasting time.”

“I have no issue with going to find the chef, but the student has a point as well.” Bai Qiulin gave a third option. “I agree we should go look for the chef, but we cannot take the corridor that he took.”

Then he turned to look at Ah Nan. “What does the rest of you think?”

Ah Nan had been thinking, and he turned to Ol' Zhou. "We're a party, and internal conflict will only bring us down, so I also choose to find the chef."

He and Hu Ya raised their hands. "Five versus three, so let us move out."

When Ah Nan was doing the headcount, he suddenly raised something. He looked left and right. "Wait, where is Tails?"

"Is she still inside the room?" They all ran into the warehouse and hopped over the trash and squeezed through the racks. They searched the whole place but could not find Tails.

"Where is she?"

"I swear she was just behind us!"

When darkness fell, it was not two people who disappeared but three!

A chill wrapped itself around everyone present. They stood where they were, and some were already ready to quit. They had prepared everything that they could. Yet, in just a few minutes, a quarter of the team had already disappeared.

"A living person could not have disappeared just like that! There has to be a hidden passage in this room!" Ah Nan had not given up. "The boss would not build a completely useless space."

"Perhaps Tails has discovered the secret of the room, triggered some kind of trap, and fallen into the secret passage?" Hu Ya thought back to where Tails was standing. She walked to the printer and stared at the power button that was flickering. She moved her eyes downward and saw the printed paper that littered the ground.

"I remember there wasn't so much paper." She squatted down to pick them all up. The few earlier pictures were rough frames, but the last sheet had the words 'Look behind you!' written on it.

It was three simple words, but it created a different type of terror due to the unique circumstance they were in.

"Looks like Tails really did discover something, but how did she trigger the trap, and where is this trap?" Hu Ya looked at the paper and then at the printer. "Could it be related to this thing?"

She waved behind her, and the few worked together to move the printer away. On the wall that was behind the printer, they saw a deep tunnel that they had no idea where it led. The edges of the hole were uneven like they were gouged out by human hands.

“Tails?” Ah Nan screamed into the hole, but there was no reply.

“I have to confirm Tails’ safety.” Hu Ya took out her phone to call Tails, but there was no answer. “We already said to keep our phones on when we entered this place to ensure a constant channel of communication. Did something happen to her?”

“Did she not pick up the call? Then, shall we crawl right in?” Ah Nan was also worried.

“Follow me.” Hu Ya was more courageous than Ah Nan. She turned on the flashlight on her phone and crawled into the hole.

“Hey!” Yang Chen wanted to remind them about the danger of using phones inside the Haunted House, but he knew that Hu Ya was not going to listen to his order, so he shifted his tone. “Don’t make a rash decision. There might be something waiting for us on the other end.”

“Feel free to choose other routes, but the two of us will take this one.” Hu Ya was worried about Tails’ safety. She picked up her phone and moved into the hole. The tunnel walls were slippery, and this lowered her speed.

“I’m sorry, but I have to listen to the big sister.” Ah Nan was the next to follow. The few that stood outside were caught in a conundrum.

“We should follow them. It’s not a good idea to get separated.” Yang Chen sighed. The situation had totally gotten out of control.

“Brother Bai, shall we follow them?” Xiao Lee wanted to butter up to Bai Qiulin, so he was very polite around the man.

“Since Fan Dade and Fan Chong’s disappearance, things have been taken out of our hands, and it’ll only get worse from here.” Bai Qiulin did not sound optimistic. “We mustn’t split up anymore, but we cannot stay at one spot for too long. It’ll give the boss more time to set up traps and monsters. We have to try to be ahead of him—only then will we have a chance of winning this.”

Then, he crawled behind Ah Nan. Xiao Lee, Duan Yue, and Ol’ Zhou followed.

There were only the medical students left in the warehouse. When they first entered the underground morgue, they had been the leaders, but now, no one was paying them any heed.

“Something is just not right.” Yang Chen looked at the team that wandered off, and he sighed tiredly.

“It’s fine. Even with just the three of us, we can still do this.” Lee Xue consoled Yang Chen. The three wanted to discuss something else, but suddenly, they heard the sound of bouncing. They turned to look. The lights in the corridor started to go out again, and the human head moved to the entrance of the warehouse.

“We should move forward for now. We need to leave this place first.” With the three students at the back, all the visitors crawled into the tunnel.

They moved several meters before they came across some light. Hu Ya poked her head carefully out, and at the end of the tunnel were three corridors that were painted white.

“Another split? Which corridor would Tails choose?” Hu Ya called Tails’ number again, but there was still no answer. “Just what is happening?”

Gritting her teeth, this main editor was starting to lose her cool.

...

Tails, who was stranded, walked down the dark corridor alone. Her eyes were watery with tears as she held her phone like she was talking with someone.

“Sister Hu Ya, where are you all? I’ve been walking for so long, but I still haven’t found you!”

“I can hear your footsteps, keep moving forward.” Hu Ya’s voice came from the phone.

“Okay.” Tails nudged herself forward. With one hand on the wall, her slight frame slowly disappeared into the darkness.

“Why haven’t I seen any of you guys yet?”

“Don’t be scared, Tails. Just keep moving forward. I will be here with you...”

Hu Ya's voice that came out from Tails' phone was soft and gentle. It shone directly into her heart like the sun.

"Sister Hu Ya, listen to me. The ghost was hiding inside the printer. It dragged me into the hole, one that you'll be able to see once you move the printer away."

...

"Okay, don't worry, we'll meet up soon."

Hearing the sound on the other end, Tails was still worried. "You have to take the left corridor! When I just exited the tunnel, there was the sound of wheels coming from behind me. I didn't have the time to think and just ran in a random direction. I only dared to call you after the sound disappeared."

"We're coming. Just keep moving forward. Don't be scared. Don't hang up the phone." Hu Ya's voice continued to come from the phone like a kind and patient big sister. With Hu Ya's company, Tails felt rejuvenated, and she wandered deeper into the darkness.

...

"The phone is still not working." Ah Nan stood in the middle of the split and looked at the white corridors on both sides. "Which path shall we take?"

This question had bothered him for a long time. The underground morgue was different from other scenarios; this place was like an extremely complicated maze, and they were already lost in it.

"There is no answer. The boss has figured out everything. There is probably something that disturbs the reception here." Xiao Lee tried to explain it using the scientific way.

"It's not that. The signal is at its maximum, but there is simply no answer.” Hu Ya put her phone away and moved to stand next to Ah Nan. There was worry in her eyes. “Tails probably dropped her phone when she was trying to run away.”

Hu Ya had stated the most likely scenario, and it was also the explanation she gave herself.

“Then what shall we do next? Which corridor shall we take?” Yang Chen looked at Hu Ya, who used her phone inside the Haunted House, and he moved silently away from her. Now that things had gotten out of hand, he surrendered the position of leader and tried to be as unnoticeable as possible. He looked surreptitiously at the other visitors, and the anxiety in his heart grew. He told himself to be careful as he tried to find this source.

“There are no signs on either corridor, but they are both painted white. Based on the medical students, these are used to transport cadavers—they are roads for the dead—so we’d better be careful.”

After Xiao Lee voiced his opinions, he turned to look at Bai Qiulin. He probably wanted to get Bai Qiulin’s support, but the latter had not been paying him any attention.

“We’ll need to take a gamble.” Hu Ya and Ah Nan shared a look and chose the left corridor without consulting anyone else. “Tails’ phone is still ringing, but no one is answering, so she should have dropped it somewhere. There has to be something scary chasing her for her to do something like this. It is probably that trolley that was moving about. Under the circumstance, she will definitely choose the path closest to her, and the corridor on the left is relatively close.”

“Your analysis sounds more like a self-persuasion; it doesn’t hold any water.” At the end of the day, Yang Chen was young, and he disagreed due to the flimsy analysis. “What if the thing that chased Tails came from the left corridor? In that case, she would have taken the right corridor, and if we go down the left corridor, we will run right into those monsters.”

“In comparison, the possibility of Tails entering the left corridor is higher, and that is enough for me.” Hu Ya and Ah Nan entered the left corridor without waiting for the rest. Since the two editors had already made their move, to ensure that the team stuck together, as unwilling as Yang Chen was, he had to follow. A team of twelve had already dwindled down to nine; if they split up further, it would only get worse for them.

Sighing, Yang Chen realized that he could not understand the boss anymore. Based on my understanding of the boss, the real terror of this scenario will occur after we obtain the picture. Everything so far is just an appetizer.

However, when he followed that train of thought, Yang Chen could not help sweating. Since the team was already having so much internal conflict at the very beginning, if this continued, perhaps they would be fully taken down before they even saw the pictures.

The boss is too insane; he didn't even give us a chance to win! Yang Chen sighed internally, but his expression did not change. He was afraid his emotions might affect other people.

We mustn't depend on other people, at a time like this—we have to put ourselves first.

Yang Chen turned to look. This batch of visitors had moved into their own cliques. The two editors moved at the front, Bai Qiulin and Xiao Lee were in the middle, and Ol' Zhou as well as Duan Yue followed at the back.

The two editors have already lost their rationality, and they are too stubborn. Bai Qiulin is too arrogant, and I have a feeling that he is still hiding something. Yang Chen looked around, and eventually, his eyes fell on Ol' Zhou. The couple is kind. The husband upholds justice, and the wife is gentle and soft. These two are perfect teammates; I have to communicate more with them.

Yang Chen whispered something to Lee Xue, and he slowed down to walk to Ol' Zhou. Noticing Yang Chen coming over to him, Ol' Zhou's guard went up. He still remembered how cold Yang Chen had been when the chef and his brother disappeared. He did not give Yang Chen any face. Since Yang Chen could abandon the chef, then in the future, he could abandon them too.

"What are you doing?" Ol' Zhou had a drawn face, but Duan Yue kept apologizing on his behalf.

Yang Chen lowered his voice to apologize to Ol' Zhou. He explained his situation and analyzed the situation to Ol' Zhou, and finally, Ol' Zhou's expression softened. However, when Yang Chen brought up the possibility of a cooperation, Ol' Zhou denied it without giving it much thought. Duan Yue beside him asked why, and Ol' Zhou answered in a voice loud enough for Yang Chen to hear, "Cooperating with them is similar to asking a tiger for its skin. We're not as cunning as them—we'll only be taken advantage of.”

Duan Yue nodded like she understood what her husband was saying. Yang Chen could only smile awkwardly. However, hearing Ol' Zhou say that, he was even more certain that he needed to get Ol' Zhou's cooperation.

For some reason, the anxiety in his heart grew like the danger was just next to him, perhaps even hidden among the visitors. Therefore, he needed to work together with others to prevent accidents.

As Yang Chen tried to persuade Ol' Zhou, the corridor that they were walking on changed. The formalin in the air thickened, and drafts of cold wind came out from an open steel door that was at the end of the corridor.

“Tails?” Hu Ya walked at the front of the team. She yelled into the half-open steel door, but there was no reply. “I’ll go take a look.”

The light on the door gave off a weak, yellowish glow. Hu Ya moved forward alone. She leaned against the wall and slowly moved toward the door. The door was covered in rust, and something that looked like blood was flowing down it. “What is this room used for?”

...

Hu Ya moved her feet to nudge forward one more step. She leaned her body forward and adjusted her head to glance inside the room without touching the door. However, before she got a close look, a drop of liquid fell from the ceiling and hit the back of her hand. It was sticky, kind of like blood, but it was mixed with something else that gave off a strange stench.

“It’s leaking?” She slowly raised her head when the lights around them dimmed, and the steel door vibrated.

“Be careful!” Yang Chen shouted, and the lights in the corridor started to go off again. They went off very fast like a hungry beast dashing at them!

Without giving them a chance to prepare, darkness swallowed everything.

“Squat down now! Stay where you are!” Yang Chen was agitated, but there was no better solution. When the lights went off last time, three people disappeared. How many will disappear this time?

The whole corridor was thrown into darkness, and it was so quiet that they could hear the breathing and beating hearts of the people next to them. Everyone was squatting on the floor, and nobody moved. In the dark, the wind picked up, and a blurry shadow could be seen teetering at the end of the corridor before disappearing. It felt like it had joined their ranks.

Time dragged on, and the heartbeat echoed in their ears. Combined with the creepy background music, the fear in their hearts was amplified.

Creak...

An ear-scratching sound came from Hu Ya's direction. The door before her had been pushed open. "Who would open the door at a time like this?"

As the steel door opened, formalin filled up the air. A different sound now echoed in the corridor.

Tik tok, tik tok...

It was the sound of water dripping. It dropped from a high position and fell against the ground. The sound neared Hu Ya before stopping in front of her. In the dark, no one could see anything, but the dripping sound kept coming.

"The thing is just standing next to me." Hu Ya's palm was soaked with sweat as an indescribable pressure swallowed her. She gathered her courage and raised her hands to reach forward, but she touched nothing but air.

"It should be here; the sound came from here." Hu Ya was certain, and her hands continued to reach forward.

Tik tok...

Another drop fell, and this time, it fell on her arm. "I couldn't touch it, and it is moving and dripping. Could it be... that it's above me?"

Her eyes had gotten used to the darkness. Hu Ya lifted her head and saw a humanoid shadow attached to the ceiling above her. It was leaking like it had just crawled out from a pond. Its four limbs were attached to the ceiling like a lizard, and its skull dangled downward. Its empty skull hung just above Hu Ya's head like it was preparing to bite away her face!

" What is this! " Hu Ya's half-squatting body went numb, but her mind was moving fast. The woman's courage should have been the greatest among all the visitors.

"It's above me!" Hu Ya screamed. She grabbed the phone in her pocket and flung it at the spot above her head.

The phone hit the wall, and a flash of light appeared behind Hu Ya. Ah Nan turned on the flashlight on his phone. The light came on, and the monster on the ceiling ran away in response. All they could see was the shadow slithering away.

...

The sound of the trolley became clearer. Fan Dade and Fan Chong could not move anymore. The two of them had already lost all sense of direction. They were not hoping to clear the scenario now—they just wanted to get rid of the thing following them.

“Quick, come in here!” The two of them ran into a white corridor, and they saw a half-open steel door. The words ‘Morgue No. 2’ were written on it. Without stopping to take a look, Fan Dade dragged Fan Chong into it and slammed the door shut.

“Bro, slow down.” Fan Chong struggled loose from Fan Dade’s grasp. He gasped for air and leaned against the wall as he slid down to the ground. He had not done such intense exercise for so long. Several seconds later, the sound of the wheel passed by the door and disappeared.

“We’re saved.” Fan Dade was soaked in sweat like he had just been pulled out of water. His legs were weak, and he collapsed to the ground. “That was too tiring. I need to rest.”

Fan Chong did not expose his big brother for his stubborn lips. He sat next to his brother and added, “Why did we have to do this, coming to the Haunted House to find trouble for ourselves? We’re a family of cowards, so why do this?”

“It’s that attitude of yours that makes me want to do this. No one is born a coward; plus, the reason we’re here has nothing to do with Mom and Dad. It’s purely because I want you to come out to take a walk. Don’t just stay at home to play those games; a little exercise is good for you.”

“Bro, that is more than just a simple game.” Fan Chong thought about it and decided to come clean. “That game, according to legend, is made by a killer, and the evidence of his child abuse cases are hidden inside it. However, no one has been able to solve it.”

“Stop finding excuses. I’m your old brother—do you really think that I don’t know what you’re going through?” Fan Dade shrugged. “It’s just a break-up. If you lose this one, there’s always a next one.”

“Who told you all that?” Fan Chong was too lazy to argue with his brother. “I’m not going to waste time arguing with you. We’re not going to clear this scenario. We’ll just stay here for thirty minutes and wait for the boss to come save us.”

“That’s not so nice, right?”

“What’s wrong about that? No matter what, I’m not leaving this place again.” Before Fan Chong finished, the row of freezers that lined the walls suddenly issued a sound. His whole body shivered from the shock. “What was that?”

“Don’t know, but it sounds like it came from the freezers.” Fan Dade crawled up from the ground. The brothers leaned against the door and were panicking.

“I think we should just stand here. As long as we don’t trigger the trap, nothing will come out.” The sweat covering Fan Chong had not gotten the chance to dry before new sweat appeared.

“You have a point.” Neither of them had the courage to get close to the freezer, but the thing inside the freezer did not seem like it was going to let them go.

The light in the room flickered, and one of the freezers elicited the sound of nails scratching on the metallic door. It sounded like the thing was looking for an opening to crawl out.

Something was trying to get out of the freezer. The nails scratched at the edges of the door like the thing inside was slowly searching for the mechanism that would unlock the door. The spine-tingling sound echoed in their ears. The thing inside the freezer scratched for a long time until it became agitated, and the brothers could hear the sound of low breathing like it was getting frustrated.

“Bro, did you hear that sound?”

...

“I did. It should be the worker that is hiding inside the freezer. He’s waiting for us to go closer the freezer, and then he’ll jump out to scare us.” Fan Dade tried his best to remain calm. “This is a used and worn trope—there is no need for us to get panicked over this.”

“No, I was more focused on something else.” Fan Chong was clearly the thinker in the family. “Have you noticed just how good the actors of this Haunted house really are? It’s like they’re really living the character they’re given.”

Fan Dade was reminded of the faceless monster that was hiding in the dark, and the hair on the back of his arms stood. “Now that you mention it, yes.”

“There is often not device installed on the inside of the freezer to unlock the door. After all, this is a storage room designed for the dead.” Fan Chong listened to the breathing sound that came from inside the freezer, and his heart pumped very fast. “The sound of nails scratching against the door earlier sounded like the dead coming back to life. It failed to find the device to open the door, and because of that frustration, its breathing became heavier. This is a valid and understandable process to make it feel like there is a really a monster that has come back to life currently trapped inside the freezer.”

With a bitter smile on his face, Fan Chong reached out to grab the door handle. “If my speculation is not wrong, the monster inside the freezer will adopt a more stringent method to try to escape. For example, ramming into the door to create a louder noise. Then, it will not only attract the other monsters roaming the corridors to come attack us, it will also tip off the other monsters that might be residing in this room. In that case, if we are surrounded on both sides, it really will be over for us.”

“Then what good suggestion do you have? I will listen to you, little brother.” Fan Dade was a chef. Even though his little brother was not that physically strong, Fan Chong was much brighter than him.

“Those familiar with escape and survival games will know there is a hidden rule to this sort of game, and that is to not stay at a fixed location for too long. This rule is particularly written to target those cowards who try to hide in one place for the entirety of the game. It will ruin the fun.” Fan Chong rubbed the sweat away from his forehead. “New Century Park’s House of Horrors is famed on the internet for their scares. The Haunted House’s boss is also said to be familiar with psychology and has a sadistic streak about him. I am one hundred percent certain that he will have similar rules set up inside his Haunted House.”

“In other words, you suggest we leave this place soon?” Fan Dade was feeling regretful. If he had known this would be the situation that they found themselves in, he would not have run so fast earlier. Now that they had been separated from the rest of the group, things were not looking so good for them.

“Not soon but now.” Fan Chong did not dare to stay there any longer. “We have to leave now since the monster inside the freezer is still stuck inside, and the sound of the trolley has wandered away.”

“We should leave now?”

“Yes, this should be the only chance that the Haunted House’s boss is going to give us. If we miss this, we’ll come head to head with a scarier existence.”

When Fan Chong said those things, the breathing inside the freezer picked up, as did the sound of scratching. The thing inside the freezer fought with desperation like it was going to die from a lack of oxygen. The nails snapped, and blood leaked out from the edges of the door. The monster inside the freezer seemed like it was in great pain, and its emotions were fraying. There was a sudden loud bang against the door—it sounded like someone had used their head to slam into the steel door.

Fan Dade and Fan Chong's hearts both squeezed with that loud bang. The brothers looked at one another, and they both realized that what Fan Chong had predicted earlier was slowly becoming reality.

"We have to leave now!" Almost at the same time as Fan Chong said that, the sound of the trolley returned to the corridor.

"I knew it." Fan Chong ultimately had underestimated the terror of the Haunted House's boss. The man had indeed given them the chance, but the chance was only several seconds long.

"What should we do now?" The sound of the trolley wheels coming from the corridor triggered the scary memories in Fan Dade's mind. He leaned against the door and peered out. He was just in time to see the lights in the corridor going out one by one until the whole corridor fell into darkness, and only the sound of the wheels could be heard.

This symbolic cart inside the corridor was slowly moving forward, and the freezer inside the morgue kept making sounds. The scariest thing was, initially, it was only the first freezer that made the sound. However, it seemed as if the activity had started to spread, and the two freezers next to it started to come alive with activity.

Their hesitation was dragging on; Fan Dade and Fan Chong still had not come to a decision. At this crucial moment, the two looked at one another, and they saw panic reflected in each other's eyes. They were only there for a Haunted House visit—who would have thought they would need to make a decision as scary as this?

The sound of the wheels came closer and closer, and the speed did not slow down. Fan Chong and his brother had already given up on resistance. They prayed silently in their hearts, hoping that the monster outside the door would not notice them and give them a second chance to try again.

Ten seconds later, the two brothers' faces paled considerably. The miracle that they had hoped for did not appear. The sound of the wheels suddenly disappeared when it passed Morgue No. 2. This meant that the trolley had probably stopped outside the door!

Cold droplets of sweat slid down their faces. The monster that had been chasing after them was finally going to reveal its real identity. Fan Chong and Fan Dade leaned against the door. The two did not even dare to breathe too loudly as they focused on the situation outside the door.

Several seconds later, there was still no sound coming from the corridor. The trolley seemed to have disappeared into thin air, and everything was in Fan Dade and Fan Chong's imagination.

"The thing has left?" Fan Chong pressed his ear to the door and listened intently.

"Shall we go out to take a look?" The freezers behind him started to shake. The monsters kept using their heads to knock into the doors. Flakes of rust on the old freezers continued to fall. Fan Dade was really worried that something might crawl out from the freezers and charge at the both of them. He curled his five fingers around the door handle and slowly pushed down. The spring turned in the lock, and just as it was about to spring open, something from the corridor slammed heavily into the morgue door!

Bang!

The heavy collision caused Fan Dade to loosen his grasp on the door immediately, and he jumped back several steps. "That thing is still outside!"

The IQ of the monster outside the door was not lower than a normal human. After the ambush failed, it had given up on stealth and started to ram against the door like its life depended on it. The door rattled endlessly, and the freezers behind them shook. Fan Dade stood in the middle of the room, and the veins on his neck popped due to the rush of blood all over his body. He did not know where to hide, and his body started to get weakened. He subconsciously teetered backward.

"Bro, don't go there!" However, Fan Chong's warning was too late.

The blood flowed down the wall from the edges of the door. When Fan Dade was several meters away from the freezer, the old freezer door burst open, and a bloody face rushed out. It had both of its arms open like it was trying to hug Fan Dade and then drag him into the freezer.

His whole body was swallowed by the sense of chilliness. The cold rushed to his mind. Before he could figure out a solution, his body already carried him forward. All the freezers in the room started to move, and the blood continued to leak. The whole room looked like it was going to be dyed red.

“Go! Go now!” If they were trapped there, then it would be over. Fan Dade and Fan Chong ran toward the only exit. They pulled on the door handle and pushed the steel door open. Before the two managed to run out, several shadows rushed at them from the dark. Each of them had weird expressions like they were wearing faces that did not belong to them.

“Go, run!” Fan Dade screamed. He tightened his fist, and the man who was about 1.9 meters tall decided to fight it out with these monsters!

His mouth issuing some weird noises and voices that he could understand, Fan Dade charged at the monsters. However, before his fist landed on them, something that he would remember for the rest of his life occurred. The human faces slowly started peeling! This was the first time in his life that he had seen something like this. He did not even know that human faces could peel and fall!

“What the f*ck is this?” This was beyond his expectations and his threshold for terror. The courage that he summoned earlier dissipated completely. He wanted to run back into the room, but when he turned to look, he had a renewed understanding of the term ‘despair’.

The freezers inside Morgue No. 2 had all been forced open, and the monsters with the shape of humans had crawled out from their containers. The smell of formalin crawled into his nostrils and refused to leave. His sight was slowly swallowed by the color red. Surrounded by the monsters, Fan Dade and Fan Chong lost consciousness and crumbled to the ground.

Half a minute later, all the monsters returned to their hiding spots like the nightmare earlier was just an illusion. If not for Fan Dade and Fan Chong, who were foaming at the mouth, lying unconscious on the ground, no one would have realized that something so terrifying had happened there minutes ago.

Time slowly ticked by. At the end of the corridor, several ‘people’ wearing white coats slowly walked over. “I kinda pity them.”

“Me too. We are not used to seeing these things, much less them, and we’re ghosts.”

“It’s not a good idea to dump them here. We should try to resuscitate them.” One of the doctors moved his ear close to Fan Dade and Fan Chong’s nose to listen for their breathing. Then, he checked both of the men’s pulses. “The physical condition is not bad, and there is no sign of heart issues. Still rescuable.”

....

Five minutes later, Fan Chong slowly opened his eyes, and the sight of his world gradually cleared. “Where the hell am I?”

There were no monsters or dead bodies around them. He wobbled up to a standing position, and everything that had happened earlier rushed back to his mind.

“Haven’t I already fainted?” He held the wall and looked around him. He realized that he was still locked inside Morgue No. 2.

The sound of nails scratching the doors came from the freezers, and the sound of wheels returned. The show looked like it was going to restart.

“Wait, this isn’t right! Did I forget something? Haven’t I already experienced this?”

“Where are we?” His eyes focused. The large, well-built Fan Dade was lying on his side on the ground, and he looked so weak. Seeing his brother in this state, Fan Chong’s lips moved, and he had no heart to answer his brother’s question.

...

“Have we been moved out of the Haunted House by the workers?”

Fan Chong did not say anything for a long time, and he looked like he was possessed. Fan Dade realized that something was wrong, and he struggled upward to look around. The steel door, freezer, and the sound of wheels that crawled into his ears. The déjà vu feeling stunned Fan Dade. “This scenario... Haven’t we been through this already?”

The sound of nails scratching became clearer as well as the breathing sound coming from the freezer. Without the answer from Fan Chong, Fan Dade already knew what was happening. The trolley whipped past with the wind and stopped at the door. The freezer doors were pushed open, and blood spilled out. A greater number of monsters compared to before crawled out. His legs weakened, and Fan Dade’s hands starting to shake as he leaned against the morgue’s door.

The door behind him kept being slammed into, and his body shook alongside the door. Fan Dade felt like his skeleton was about to break.

“Stop! This is too much! I just woke up! I just f*cking woke up!” Fan Dade felt like crying, but in comparison, Fan Chong was much calmer. For someone smart, he knew not to make the same mistake twice. Wiping away the cold sweat, Fan Chong collapsed to the ground like his legs were cramping. He fell down next to Fan Dade.

“Bro, if you wake up first from the shock later, remember not to wake me up and let me sleep a little longer.” With that, Fan Chong closed his eyes and ‘fainted’. Before Fan Dade realized what was happening, the lights in the room went out.

“Bro, Xiao Chong? Fan Chong?”

The door to the morgue was blasted open, and Fan Dade was surrounded by several shadows. The whole underground scenario was filled with Fan Dade’s screams.

...

Half a minute later, the light came back on, and the corridor returned to normal. The shadows had dissipated, and Fan Dade’s eyes were gyrating wildly next to the wall; the man could no longer produce anymore white foam.

Facing the ground, Fan Chong, who lay next to Fan Dade, slowly opened his eyes. While he was scared, there was also a trace of excitement in his heart.

“The monsters will not attack us if we play dead? No, probably because my brother has attracted all the aggression.” Thinking back to what happened earlier, Fan Chong’s scalp was dull. “I have to leave this place as soon as possible; any place is better than here.”

He forced himself to stand up and went to shake Fan Dade’s shoulders. “Bro, wake up! Hey!”

Fan Dade did not respond, and Fan Chong was getting nervous. He dragged Fan Dade’s shoulders using both of his hands, wanting to carry him on his back. He just pulled Fan Dade up when he heard a sigh coming from the end of the corridor.

“Fainting spell due to fear is categorized as sudden fainting. The first thing you need to do is to lay him flat on the ground to ensure a constant flow of air and then conduct cardiac resuscitation. Moving his body like what you’re doing now is not good for him.”

This was an unfamiliar voice that did not belong to the other visitors. Fan Chong could not clearly hear what the person said. When the person said the first sentence, he released his grip and collapsed to the ground. Fan Dade’s body also fell, and the two brothers lay dead in the middle of the corridor.

The person did not expect that his kind reminder would cause the man to faint. Several seconds later, the lights dimmed, and a cold draft picked up in the corridor. Four doctors wearing white coats, masks, and gloves walked over. They were covered so tightly that their faces could not be seen.

“Why did he faint? Wasn’t he perfectly fine earlier? Perhaps his mental state was too tense.”

“This larger man is physically not bad; the skin is not bruised after so many falls. The last time we had a patient like this, it was in Autopsy Room 7. It was a building site worker; it was quite a breeze when we had to remove the body fat.”

“Stop wasting time, we need to rescue them first. Leaving them lying in the middle of the road like this is too dangerous.”

One of the kind doctors went to help Fan Dade while the others surrounded Fan Chong. The wind that touched his skin was cold, but Fan Chong could not stop himself from sweating.

I seem to be surrounded, what should I do? What would a normal person do in a situation like this?

There was a cold touch on his neck, and one of the doctors gasped. “But he’s fine. Why has he fainted?”

“His heart is moving so fast; he should be acting.”

“Then, doesn’t it mean that he has seen us? How about we...” When the doctors were discussing, Fan Chong on the ground silently opened his eyes slightly, and he happened to look into the sharp gazes of the few doctors.

“So, he is acting.” The leading doctor looked to be the youngest, but he was also the scariest. “I hate people who rely on tricks the most.”

Fan Chong’s face jiggled as he smiled an embarrassed smile. His fatty hand pressed against the floor as he tried to sit up. “I’m surprise that this Haunted House has its own group of doctors. This is so rare even internationally. No wonder this is the best Haunted House in Jiujiang.”

He glanced at the doctor who was saving his brother. No matter how he looked at it, there was something weird about the whole thing, but he could not tell what. His body temperature dropped as he was surrounded by the group of doctors. Fan Chong forced himself to reveal a happy laugh. “In that case, I won’t disturb you anymore. Please continue.”

He pushed his hand into his pocket, and his finger glided on the phone display. He leaned backward. He did not even want his brother anymore. At a time like this, he needed to save himself.

“Wait a minute.” The group of doctors spoke at the same time, and their eyes focused on Fan Chong’s hand that was inside the pocket. Fan Chong knew that things were getting worse, and he moved faster. After he turned a corner, he realized that it was a dead-end, and the only exit was blocked by the doctors.

“You’re overly obese, and your heart rate is irregular after multiple scares. We have professional equipment, so I hope you’ll cooperate with us to conduct an examination.” After he finished, the doctor turned to ask with uncertainty, “We do have the equipment, right?”

“You want to help me treat my illness?” Fan Chong grabbed his phone and slowly got close to the doctor. When he was one or two meters away, he suddenly picked up speed. “Thank you for your kindness, but I’m fine—there’s no need for you to worry about me!”

Fan Chong’s large body rammed into the group of doctors. He knew that he could not stay. He needed to fight his way out. His arms flailed about and brushed against the doctors’ coat. Fan Chong felt like his fingers had hit something.

Chapter 478 - Exposed

Chapter 478: Exposed

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Fan Chong's flailing arm hit the leading doctor. He had no idea what he had brushed up against, but it felt wet. The doctors' coats are all wet?

Fan Chong glanced out of the corner of his eye. The spot where Fan Chong had hit the doctor sunk underneath the skin, and it did not return to normal after a long time. What happened to his neck?

...

It was quite a scary scene. The doctors were wrapped up in their uniform, but only his neck had sunk downward. It looked very irregular, like the uniform was holding not a person but a muddy statue.

The uniform moved, and the collar split open a small slit. A heavy mist of formalin leaked out, and it caused Fan Chong's eyes to water.

"Spirited and rambling, complete with irregular actions. These are early signs of mania. Looks like you are seriously ill." The leading doctor's collar slowly returned to normal. He shared a look with the two other doctors. "Detain him. We have to perform a full physical examination for him."

"I'm not sick!" Fan Chong was feeling despair. At other people's Haunted Houses, at most, he would be scared until he fainted, but this Haunted House would recover them after fainting. He did not understand why people with such good medical skill would come to this Haunted House to become actors. "I'm really not sick, don't come any closer!"

Hearing the yells from Fan Chong, the leading doctor shook his head. "Whether you're sick or not is not dependent on you but the doctor. If you don't believe us, you can go to the nearest hospital to have it checked out."

...

Fan Chong's screams echoed throughout the underground scenario. All the visitors who heard it shivered uncontrollably and turned to look at the direction where the screams came from.

Xiao Lee squatted on the ground and whispered to Bai Qiulin next to him, "This person sounds familiar."

"Looks like something has already happened to Fan Chong and Fan Dade. There's no need for us to go look for them." Bai Qiulin still maintained his cold tone. He did not like to converse with others, a lone wolf.

The lights came back on, and the monster above Hu Ya's head had disappeared.

"What was that earlier?" Ah Nan jogged over to help Hu Ya up from the ground. "Did you get a close look?"

Hu Ya shook her head. "It seems to have no face."

"No face? If that's not some kind of special make-up, then it has to be some kind of robot, right?" Ah Nan looked at the ceiling, and there were some water stains on it.

"The Haunted House looks old, but it is fitted with so much new technology. The boss sure is willing to invest." The people who said it did not mean it, but the person who heard it did. Xiao Lee took out his phone to record this important discovery, and he sent it out.

"That's right. This boss sure is something else. I hear Haunted Houses' props are different from other fields. They cannot be recycled, and other than competitors, no one would want them." Ol' Zhou and Duan Yue were close to Xiao Lee, and they saw everything that he did. With a smile of his face, Ol' Zhou released his grasp on Duan Yue. The two of them stood next to Xiao Lee, surrounding him on both sides.

When Xiao Lee saw Ol' Zhou walk toward him, he smiled. He had a good impression of Ol' Zhou. From his perspective, the most reliable person was Bai Qiulin, and the nicest ones were Ol' Zhou and his wife.

"Now that the lights have come back on, we should hurry to find Tails." Yang Chen looked at the time. "I've calculated it—the time between the two lights out is three and a half minutes. I'm not sure whether the timing is fixed or random, but if it's fixed, I suggest we find a relatively safe place in the next three minutes and wait until the next lights out is over."

Yang Chen's eyes scanned the rest of the group. When he was done, he lowered his head. "Fan Chong and Fan Dade are already out. Only we remain. We need to find what the monster in the dark looks like and confirm what will happen during lights out before we can decide what to do next."

There was a speculation in his heart. Combining his previous experience, the way Yang Chen looked at other visitors became different. He did not share his inner thoughts, afraid that it might be used by the hidden threat, so he had to rely on himself. He had to find that person before the next tragedy happened.

Yang Chen was very smart, but ultimately, he was just a university student, just over twenty. He emphasized clearing the scenario—this was a challenge and validation for him. However, this was different for other visitors. For example, Ah Nan and Hu Ya. Compared to clearing the scenario, they were more concerned with finding Tails.

"There are only two paths—the chance of Tails taking this path is very high." Ah Nan did not continue, but his meaning was very clear. The two editors continued to move forward. Bai Qiulin obviously did not care about what Yang Chen said. He and Xiao Lee followed the editors.

"Ol' Yang, should we just ignore them and go off on our own?" Wang Dan suggested. "After all, we're not close to them, and if they are so insistent of finding that missing girl, then let them be."

"I think it's better for us to stick together." Yang Chen looked at Ah Nan and Hu Ya's shadows, and his expression changed. He suddenly remembered a small detail.

When they were asked to sign the disclaimer, Ol' Zhou's group and the three medical students signed them inside the Haunted House, and he did not see the other visitors sign them. Indeed, they came in directly and skipped over the signing process.

A whirlpool appeared in Yang Chen's heart. This means that the person I'm looking for should be hidden among the six people who came in later. One of them didn't sign the disclaimer!

Fear crawled around his heart. Yang Chen narrowed his eyes, and he thought back to what he had said to the boss—they needed to gather ten people before they could start the visit. If they did not gather ten people in the end, could the boss have added his own workers into the ranks?

The boss had done that before. That had happened during their visit to the Mu Yang High School scenario.

I get it now. Yang Chen revealed a cold smile. No wonder I felt we've been dragged by the nose, and all of our suggestions were denied. A ghost has infiltrated our group.

He realized this secret, but he did not tell anyone. Instead, he trained his focus on the few visitors that had entered later.

The editors, maintenance worker, and the missing chef—each of them could be the ghost.

Yang Chen stayed at the back, and his eyes were shining as he calculated. He kept his head lowered and arranged his expression to ensure that no one would be able to see through his thoughts. If you all want to play, then fine, we'll play, but I will win this round.

Because he had not done it before, that was why he was desperate for success. Yang Chen was enjoying this whole process very much. He liked this sense of excitement; it was something that other modes of entertainment failed to provide him.

...

There is a ghost mixed within the twelve visitors, and capturing them will clear the scenario.

Yang Chen walked between his friends as well as Ol' Zhou and Duan Yue. After ensuring his own safety, he silently started to observe the activity of the two editors and Xiao Lee.

The Haunted House boss never plays by the rules. Even Fang Chong and Fan Dade, who sounded like they were eliminated, could still be the ghost. Their earlier disappearance might be preparation for them to appear later in the disguise of victims.

Yang Chen thought of everything. He was very careful and kept adding more speculation and proof to his analysis.

The lights on the wall gave off a weak, yellow glow. The steel door on the side was left half open, and there were water stains on the ground. It was a whole row of rusted freezers inside the room.

"Morgue No. 1?" This sign was written in horrible handwriting by the side of the door. Hu Ya peered into the room—all the freezers were locked.

"Tails?" she yelled into the room, but there was no answer. "Tails wouldn't have gone to hide inside one of the freezers, would she?"

The two editors went inside the morgue to have a look around. They did not discover anything. The group of people continued to move forward.

The morgue in Jiujiang Medical University was not arranged according to their location but their usage and size. The few visitors continued down the corridor for another three minutes before they came across yet another half open steel door.

"Morgue No. 5? All of these morgues look the same from the inside. Why would the Haunted House boss build so many morgues? What is their purpose? Don't tell me he is really planning to use these freezers to hide human bodies?" Wang Dan reached out to touch the cold freezer. "This is identical to the ones I read about in the text books. These freezers should be the real thing—perhaps equipment that has been abandoned and somehow ended up in the hands of the Haunted House's boss."

When he said that, his expression was not that pretty, and his voice was shaking.

"Abandoned medical equipment?" Xiao Lee ruminated over what Wang Dan had said, and his face started to pale. "Doesn't that mean that these freezers really have had dead bodies in them before?"

"Indeed." Yang Chen nodded as he kept his eyes on Xiao Lee. He tried to discern some information from Xiao Lee's reaction, but unfortunately, Xiao Lee's reaction was totally normal. "According to my analysis, the lights will go out in another ten seconds. I suggest we stay here in the room and survive this third wave of darkness before we continue our search."

There were different kinds of monsters hiding in the dark. Hu Ya and Ah Nan knew that Yang Chen was looking out for everyone, so they agreed. The time ticked up. It had been four minutes since the previous lights out, and everything was fine. The group huddled close together, and they turned their heads in unison to look at Yang Chen.

"The lights did not go out—this means that the blackouts are completely random. Perhaps the boss is currently watching us and will make his move once he notices an opening." Yang Chen had more to say, but he was interrupted by another visitor.

"Stop with the pointless analysis." Hu Ya shook her head, and she turned to leave the room. "Follow me. As long as we stay together, there is nothing for us to be afraid of."

This main editor from the supernatural magazine showed her side that took charge. She pulled open the door and headed out directly. Ah Nan jogged to catch up to her.

"That woman sure is interesting." Bai Qiulin looked at Hu Ya's back and coughed. "Let's move. She's right about one thing. Most of the time, we're just scaring ourselves—there's no need for us to be so nervous. Let us not forget that this is just a Haunted House, just a place to scare people. What, you think they have actual ghosts here?"

"Brother Bai has a point." Xiao Lee exited the room with Bai Qiulin.

"We should follow as well." Ol' Zhou and Duan Yue were leaving as well when Yang Chen at the back of the group suddenly whispered to them in a very low voice, "Ol' Zhou, if you want to win, you two must stay away from those two editors."

"Why?" Ol' Zhou turned his head around. He felt like this medical student was acting very strangely.

"I still cannot tell you the real reason now, but just remember this warning." After that, Yang Chen led Lee Xue and Wang Dan to walk in front of Ol' Zhou.

"Stay away from the two editors?" Ol' Zhou scratched his chin in thought. When Yang Chen walked from him, surprise and understanding crossed his eyes. He took in a cold breath. "Could it be that there are some issues with those two editors?"

Yang Chen did not provide any further explanation for Ol' Zhou. The seed had been sown, and now he only needed to wait for it to grow. The lights in the corridor did not go out, and the group of visitors passed by Morgue No. 6 and Morgue No. 7. They did not run into any danger or scares. However, it felt like they were experiencing the calm before the storm.

When they walked past Morgue No. 7, the temperature in the corridor seemed to have dropped. The smell of formalin in the air seemed to have turned heavier as well. The group of visitors had arrived at the crossing point between the underground morgue's outer perimeter and middle section.

There was a half-taken down wall standing in the middle of the corridor, and tons of trash was piled up around the hole in the wall. The pile included wooden chairs, bent guard rails, and a few mannequins with limbs that were twisted at weird angles.

“Is this not the end of the scenario yet?” Wang Dan was wearing a short sleeve top, and the cold air crawled onto his skin through the opening. The entrance that led to the next zone was very small and blocked by so many things—it felt like those undisclosed location.

Hu Ya walked to the hole and used her phone to illuminate the darkness. She just wanted to see what was on the other side of the wall, but when the light shone through, she was given a sudden glimpse of a girl who looked like Tails holding her phone and walking into some corridor.

“Tails? And she’s holding her phone? Who is she on the phone with?” Hu Ya slammed her palm against the wall and yelled down the corridor, but only her screams echoed back at her.

“I just saw Tails! Ah Nan come and help me move these things away!” Hu Ya gripped the broken table and chairs. Probably out of concern for the visitors’ safety, the edges of these objects had been sanded down. They were not sharp. In a way, that was also a sign that they were meant to be moved.

“We should go and help.” Ol’ Zhou was kind. He and Bai Qiulin as well as Xiao Lee moved forward to lend a hand to help the two editors clear the way. The three medical students stood to the side with their arms crossed. Yang Chen looked at Hu Ya and Ah Nan silently, fully on guard.

He did not believe what Hu Ya said one bit, and he had a feeling this was a calculated trap.

Such a coincidence that she saw her missing friend? Isn’t this too much of a coincidence?

The more he studied these three editors, the more suspicious Yang Chen got. The three of them had entered the Haunted House last, and they probably did not even sign the disclaimers. Furthermore, their occupation was editors for supernatural magazine, so their threshold for fear should be very high. That identity meant that they did not have the need to purposely create this image that they were fearful and scared. That was a good disguise to assume.

When I suggested to follow the human head earlier, it was the male editor who strongly argued for us to check out the warehouse first. It was since then that the series of weird events happened. Also, back then, Bai Qiulin warned us of the danger of staying at the junction, but they insisted on investigating the place. That is highly suspicious.

When the chef and his brother were assaulted by the monsters outside at the corridor, all three editors were inside the warehouse. They seemed to know beforehand that the visitors outside would be attacked, and they created the perfect alibi for themselves. The most important thing is, there isn't anything inside that warehouse, so how did Tails, one of the editors, disappear?

There is a hidden passage behind the printer, but under normal circumstances, the first thing one would do when faced with this situation is not to run into the tunnel alone to explore but scream to get help from other people. The woman by the name of Tails purposely ran down the tunnel behind the printer to create the illusion that she has disappeared, and that created the perfect excuse for her friends to take charge of the group!

It is truly a perfect plan. The disappearance of their friends caused the two remaining editors to get agitated, so even if they do anything out of line, it can be understood and forgiven as nerves and worry.

Yang Chen's eyes gradually glowed with light.

So, they have already planned everything from the beginning. No wonder they have been unable to reach Tails via her phone. It is not as they said. She has not lost her phone—Tails never planned to accept the call in the first place.

There were too many suspicious points about the way that the three editors had acted. In Yang Chen's eyes, the only valid explanation was that the three editors were the 'ghosts' assigned by the Haunted House boss to infiltrate the group of visitors!

I should have been able to realize that sooner.

Cold sweat could be seen sliding down Yang Chen's forehead.

They said that their magazine is called Primal Fear, but I have not even heard of this publication before. It is probably just a random made up name. When we first entered the Haunted House, the male editor promised to cooperate with me, but it did not take him that long to turn on me and slowly replace the three of us who are the most experienced here and take on the leadership role silently.

After the fear faded away, Yang Chen wiped the sweat from his forehead. Thankfully, I've been paying them close attention. This time, I will not follow them blindly into death anymore.

Yang Chen moved his gaze away from the three editors, and his hands gripped together.

I have to figure out a way to expose them. This scenario itself is very big—it is just like a maze. To enter the central hub while evading the attacks from the monsters and to find the pictures under thirty minutes is virtually impossible. The Haunted House boss would not have come up with such an impossible design, a scenario that cannot be cleared—that would make the game lose its purpose. If I think about it that way, the key to clearing this underground morgue is probably still related to those five pictures.

Yang Chen thought back to everything that the Haunted House boss had said. The pictures of the five victims are going to help clear the scenario, but how exactly is that possible? Will one not be attacked by the monsters if one is holding the picture? The boss probably will not come up with design that is so simple and mundane. The usage of a protection seal aside, what could be the usage for these five pictures?

Before entering the Haunted House, the boss specifically stressed the term 'victims'. This means that the individuals in the five pictures should be dead people. His brain churned and Yang Chen had his hand holding his chin. Five pictures of the dead...

His eyes suddenly widened, and Yang Chen's body shook violently as a thought flew through his mind!

I've got it! The individuals in the five pictures could very well refer to my team mates! They represent five dead people! Meaning the five ghosts that have mixed into the visitors' group!

His heart was bouncing all over the place. Yang Chen felt like he had discovered the real method to clear this underground morgue.

The true requirement for clearing the underground morgue is not to leave the scenario with the pictures but to find the five ghosts hidden inside the team! The five pictures are the most crucial hint given by the boss!

His heart started to race erratically. Yang Chen was overwhelmed by excitement. He had seen through the Haunted House boss' ploy and grasped the hidden rule.

"Ol' Yang, are you okay?" Wang Fan saw Yang Chen suddenly wave his fists and turn ecstatic. He was worried about his friend's mental state, scared that he had suffered from some kind of breakdown.

"Don't worry. This time, I'll definitely help you clear this scenario!" Yang Chen's lips curved up with a smile. His eyes that locked onto the two editors were as sharp as knives. Five pictures of the five victims. So, the Haunted House boss has already given us such a big clue from the very beginning. There are five 'ghosts' hidden among us.

The six visitors that came after us are newcomers. This means that of those six visitors, five of them are Haunted House workers. The boss sure is evil!

Of the twelve visitors, five of them were ghosts! Who would have thought that?

Yang Chen assessed the six visitors that did not sign the disclaimers all at once in his mind. The possibility of the three editors is the biggest. That Primal Fear is definitely fake. The next suspect is the chef who suddenly ran away and his little brother. The last one is Xiao Lee.

After giving it some serious thought, Yang Chen felt like he had understood everything. Xiao Lee came in alone and doesn't know the rest, so if he is not the ghost, then there is only one remaining truth.

The three editors as well as Fan Chong and Fan Dade are all Haunted House actors. Fan Dade suddenly going berserk combined with his brother's help created a scary atmosphere, causing the real visitors to sink into terror and suspicion. Then three editors cooperated to take over the group's rhythm and lead the visitors deeper into the abyss of despair to experience the scares that are lying in waiting. This is too scary—this place sure is insane!

Five people corresponded to five pictures, meaning five different 'ghosts'! Yang Chen had already confirmed the identity of these five ghosts. He pushed his fingers into his pocket as he tried to formulate a message and silently send it to Lee Xue and Wang Dan.

"What are you three standing over there for? Come over and help. Don't stay here for too long. The junction is the most dangerous place." Bai Qiulin looked at the three medical students and shouted at them.

"We should go help them." Lee Xue felt uncomfortable. She and Wang Dan joined the others and slowly cleared out a path.

By then, Wang Dan, Lee Xue, Xiao Lee, Bai Qiulin, and the two editors were at the entrance of the corridor. Ol' Zhou and his wife were standing on the further corner while Yang Chen stood at the far corner alone. He had been looking for the chance to publicly expose the two editors.

The tables, chairs, and mannequins were moved away. The few visitors were standing in the cleared corridor.

"Ol' Yang, come on!" Wang Dan saw Yang Chen standing alone at the back, and he called out to urge him. He did not know about the great emotional turmoil inside Yang Chen as the man was caught in the middle of an arduous battle of wits.

...

"Why are you two being so nervous?" Yang Chen asked Wang Dan. He did not have the time to send the message. He was about to call Wang Dan and Lee Xue to fall back when the light next to him flickered.

"The lights?" Yang Chen suddenly realized something, and he ran toward Wang Dan and Lee Xue crazily. "Come next to me! Quick! The lights are going out!"

The lights in the corridor started to go off one by one, and this time, it was even faster than before. Lee Xue heard Yang Chen's order and immediately ran to him. However, Wang Dan was further away from them. He was only halfway through when all the lights went off. This was the third time that the corridor had fallen into darkness. To make matters worse, they were now at the intersection between the outer perimeter and the middle section. No one knew what kind of monster was hiding on the other side of the hole in the wall. It was completely unexplored territory.

The Haunted House boss turned off the lights when I was about to bring up the five ghosts. Could it be that he has already guessed that the five ghosts have been exposed? If that's the case, then this time, it could be me who is attacked. Of all the other visitors, the most difficult visitor to break is that detached Bai Qiulin. Other than him, I'm the next target. I've visited this place many times and have learned the boss' thought process. He will definitely target me and pin a focus on my back.

Alarmed, Yang Chen did not plan to be taken down without a fight. He stood up, grabbed Lee Xue, and yelled down the other side of the corridor, “Wang Dan, come to me!”

There were shadows moving in the dark. Liquid dripped from the ceiling as a shadow slithered quickly over them.

“What was that?” Wang Dan, who was in the middle of running, felt a cold breath hitting him in the face. He looked up, and his pupils slowly got used to the darkness. He was about to have a good look of the monster when someone suddenly tapped on his shoulder. His body shivered, and Wang Dan turned over his shoulder to look on reflex. There was no one there. “Who is behind me?”

A drop of a cold liquid fell on his neck, and it caused Wang Dan to quiver. Before he recovered, there was another pat on his shoulder. This time, he could feel clearly someone had placed their hand on his shoulder.

“I got you!” Wang Dan was feisty, and he was not good with analysis and thought. However, his physical reactions were fast, and his physique was good. Before the hand got the chance to retreat, Wang Dan caught it. The person chose a moment like this to scare him, and this made Wang Dan rather angry.

Wang Dan decided to rough it up with the person. He grabbed the hand tightly and pulled it forward. The arm moved, and the whole hand was dragged to the front. The five tapered fingers were intertwined with Wang Dan’s fingers. The man turned back to look. It was a clean arm and a knob that had uneven cuts on it like it had been cut off by a cleaver. This was a severed arm, cut off at the wrist, and Wang Dan was currently holding the hand in his palm.

“A hand?” His mind froze for one second before Wang Dan was overwhelmed by fear. “Where did the hand come from?”

He swung his arm wildly in the dark. Just as he was about to scream, the broken mannequins that littered the area seemed to come to life, and they all turned toward Wang Dan. Wang Dan, who was dominated by fear, screamed at the top of his lungs. He barreled in a direction that did not have the mannequin. He had no idea where he was going, and he started running.

“Wang Dan!” Yang Chen immediately took out the phone from his pocket when he heard his friend’s voice. Just as he flipped over the phone and searched for the flashlight function, liquid dripped from the ceiling. The thick darkness coagulated above him, and a faceless skull slowly leaned downward like it was planning to swallow Yang Chen's head whole.

With his focus fully on Wang Dan, Yang Chen did not notice the dark shadow above him. However, Lee Xue next to him screamed. She retreated backward quickly and tripped and fell. Her body leaned against the wall, but even so, she kept moving back. Seeing Lee Xue's reaction, Yang Chen knew that something was coming for him. "Is the boss' real target really me?"

The light from the phone flickered in the dark, and the monsters that were formed by darkness appeared in huge number.

"Do not panic! The darkness will only last for a short period of time!" Yang Chen jumped to the side to evade the attack. He raised the phone high and stood before Lee Xue to protect her. There were many footsteps in the corridor. In the dark, some of the visitors had started to run in a certain direction.

"Stay where you are! Don't run away! Stop!" Yang Chen knew that something was off when he heard the urgent footsteps. He believed that the boss had noticed that some had realized that ghosts were mixed in the group of visitors, so this time, he switched off the lights to separate the team, to create a more beneficial environment for his workers.

Yang Chen yelled at the top of his lungs, but Wang Dan, who was completely panicked, did not register it. He continued to flail his arm madly. To make matters worse, the broken hand gripped tighter and tighter, refusing to let go. Their fingers twined with one another like the hand was stuck to his palm.

The monsters from the ceiling were approaching, the mannequins on the floor had revived, and the human heads rolled on the ground. Standing in the middle of the corridor, Wang Dan had lost his ability to think.

Footfalls appeared next to him. There was a visitor who was running away. Wang Dan leaned backward. He did not care anymore as he gave chase after the sound of footsteps. All he wanted to do then was break through being surrounded by the mannequins and the monsters on the ceiling.

"Who is running? Get down on the ground! Lean against the wall! Stay where you are!" Hu Ya and Ah Nan also ordered. They realized there were people who were purposely chaos in the team, spreading terror.

The shadows flickered. The lights did not come on. Pursued by the mannequins and monsters, Wang Dan ran into the middle section. He followed the visitor in front of him, and he had no idea how long he had been running. He remembered passing several corners, meaning that there was no way he would be able to go back.

After he calmed down, Wang Dan started to regret his actions. However, there was no other choice. The force on the hand increased. He was a medical student, and the hand gave him the feeling that it was no different from an actual human hand. However, it was cold as death.

Lowering his head to avoid the monsters on the ceiling, Wang Dan suddenly heard Bai Qiulin's voice that was filled with surprise and anger. "Who is it? Show yourself!"

Then, he heard a scream from Xiao Lee. Wang Dan was sure that Xiao Lee had been following Bai Qiulin.

"What happened? What else did they run into?" There was a corner in front of him. Wang Dan got closer, and he saw two people collapsed by the corner. Xiao Lee was collapsed in front and completely unconscious. Bai Qiulin was lying behind him. He was still conscious as he waved at Wang Dan.

Wang Dan was feeling worried because he did not see the monster that assaulted the two visitors. He did not dare get too close, and he really did not have any intention of saving others. However, he was lost and had no idea where he was. If he did not stay close to these two, it would be easier for him to get into danger if he was alone.

After a few seconds of hesitation, Wang Dan bent over to catch his breath. He was planning to squat down next to Bai Qiulin to ask what had happened.

His legs bent, and Wang Dan looked at Bai Qiulin with his lips open. The sentence that was in his mind never got the chance to leave his lips when he saw Bai Qiulin's spine suddenly turn ninety degrees! The face that he could not have been more familiar with fell into Wang Dan's lap. The holes started to bleed, and a scary face looked up at Wang Dan while the lips kept repeating the same plea.

"Give me back my hand!"

Wang Dan was so spooked that he knelt down to the ground. His body leaned to the side, and the sentence was caught in his throat until his face was purple. His eyes rolled back, and Wang Dan finally understood why Xiao Lee would faint.

...

His body was moved, and his blurry eyes eventually forced open a slit. Wang Dan saw several doctors in white coats standing around him. They were even holding his school tag like they were in a great discussion.

"Where am I? Is this the hospital?" Wang Dan turned his head around to look. He realized that he was lying on a clean bed, and Xiao Lee had randomly been deposited on a wooden platform.

"You're finally awake." The four doctors stood around Wang Dan's bed, and from the man's perspective, this was quite scary.

"I... Wasn't I visiting a Haunted House?" Wang Dan could not tell anymore. He was in too much shock; he needed some time to work out where he was.

"We are the doctors at the Haunted House. You fainted, and it was us who rescued you." The doctors look so kind and friendly. They were patient with Wang Dan.

Surrounded by fully wrapped doctors inside Jiujiang's House of Horrors, this was a surreal and creepy experience for Wang Dan.

"Thank you." He looked at the few doctors carefully and did not dare to move his muscle. "Can I leave now?"

"Of course, take good care of your school tag, don't lose it again." The leading doctor placed Wang Dan's school tag lightly next to the man. "It's fine to have a little fun mixed into study, but there has to be a limit to everything. When you're done here, go back to school and focus in class."

It sounded like it had been so long since the leading doctor had said those words to people, and he sighed. However, he also felt glad. "I really did not think that one day, I could see them again and share these words with them. This familiar setting makes me feel so touched."

Wang Dan was weirded out. The doctors were so kind to him, but they did not extend the same kindness to Xiao Lee, who had also fainted.

“I’m sorry, but have we met somewhere before?” Wang Dan looked at the leading doctor’s frame, and he found the man weirdly familiar. The leading doctor smiled with kindness and love glowing in his eyes. “Actually, the few of us...”

The doctor who was older coughed lightly, and he shook his hand. “Let’s not create trouble for Boss Chen.”

Wang Dan had no idea what the few doctors were talking about. He gripped the school tag. “I’m indeed a first-year student from Western Jiujiang Medical University. Could you all be our school’s seniors? But that’s not right. Today is a Wednesday, and every Wednesday afternoon, the university has an important class, so the students wouldn’t have picked this hour to take on a part time job.”

“First year? Wednesday?” The leading doctor was surprised before his brows slowly locked together. “You did remind me. If I’m not mistaken, shouldn’t you be in class now?”

The doctor’s tone became serious. Wang Dan’s legs quivered, and he got even more confused. He had a feeling that he was facing his school director. He answered in a soft and weak voice, “Today, the Haunted House had a new scenario, so I skipped class with a few other students to come visit.”

Wang Dan had no idea what he was afraid of, and this fear was different from the one he had faced so far.

“Skipped class?” The leading doctor nodded, and his face became drawn with severity. The atmosphere in the room turned heavy, and the four doctors were radiating cold auras. “Skipping class in your first year? Aren’t you afraid you’ll be punished by your teachers?”

“I wouldn’t be so unlucky, right? Plus, this is the first time I’ve done something like this,” Wang Dan stuttered. He became more nervous.

“Don’t scare the student,” the very kind voice said again. The older doctor said, “Come on, I’ll bring you out of the scenario. Go back to class when you’re done here. Don’t skip any more lessons.”

The doctor then turned to yell at the other side, “Also you, stop faking death. We’ll leave now.”

Xiao Lee, who lay on the ground, slowly opened his eyes and showed an embarrassed smile. He climbed up from the ground. "I'll be leaving now. So sorry."

Xiao Lee and Wang Dan supported each other as they left the room. Looking at the maze-like corridor, the two had no idea where they should go. They had a feeling that they would be transported back to this place very soon.

"Take the left turn, and at the next junction, walk forward. Enter the second room, and there is a closet in the room. Open it, and the exit is just behind the closet." The senior doctor explained the route to them patiently. After ensuring that they knew the way, he shook his head and went back into the room, closing the door behind him.

"Thank you again!" Xiao Lee dragged Wang Dan excitedly down the corridor. He could finally leave this damn place. He had forgotten all about the mission given by Mr. Mu. He just wanted to leave. "Brother, who are you really? How come it feels like those actors are so close to you? Do you know them?"

"I'm pretty sure I don't." Wang Dan shook his head and felt like something was not right. "This is just weird. Actors at the Haunted House advising people to not skip class? Are actors nowadays so nice and positive?"

"No matter what, I owe you one. When Eastern Jiujiang's futuristic park is open for business, the place will be packed, but I'll help you get a few free passes." Xiao Lee tapped his chest to promise.

"Eastern Jiujiang's new park?" Wang Dan shook his head. "Thanks, but no thanks. Stay close together, and we leave this place first."

"Okay!"

The two ran to the room that had been described by the doctor. There was a large cadaver pool in the middle of the room, and there was a large hole in the middle of the pool. The pool was filled with sticky liquid, and the hole was bubbling constantly like it was hiding something.

"It's this closet." Xiao Lee and Wang Dan worked together to move the closet aside to reveal the tunnel behind it.

...

The few doctors stood inside of the room. The leading doctor turned to look at the senior doctor, and his expression was awkward. "Elder Wei, why did you lead them to the tunnel going to the central hub? Xiao Chen has placed so many traps inside that tunnel—just the looks of it scare even me."

"Skipping class in his first year, that is just too much. This Xiao Zheng... he doesn't even know how to manage the school! One day, I'll have to return there to teach him a lesson!" The doctor who was called Elder Wei drifted to the middle of the room.

The other doctors looked at one another before turning to ask the senior doctor, "Elder Wei, are you sure that nothing will happen if we do something like this?"

"What will happen? As long as I, Wei Jiuqin, have a breath in me, I'll be able to rescue them! I am going to use this student's lips to inform the rest of Western Jiujiang Medical University's students that this is the result of skipping class!"

Wang Dan looked at the tunnel behind the closet and felt flustered. The impression that the few doctors had left on him earlier was very weird. They had initially been kind and friendly, but their tone had changed conspicuously after they found out that he had skipped class.

Did I say something wrong? Skipping class is not something serious right? Without skipping class, one's university life is not complete. Many seniors have said that.

...

Wang Dan moved one step deeper into the tunnel. The temperature inside the tunnel was much higher than the temperature outside. After a long moment of hesitation, he retreated backward.

"What's wrong?" Xiao Lee stuck close to Wang Dan from behind. He could not wait to leave that godforsaken place already.

"It's nothing. I just have this feeling that those doctors from before feel so similar to our disciplinary teacher." Wang Dan's feelings were complicated. "This is just impossible. I've imagined the many different scary things that might happen to us here, but I really did not expect to run into a school teacher while skipping class. Could it be that so many students have come to visit Boss Chen's haunted house that the university was worried about its students, so they sent over some of the lecturers to come catch us?"

"You're not making sense. This has to be your first experience skipping class, right? It's normal to feel nervous. You'll get used to it after several more times." Xiao Lee urged Wang Dan to move. "Both of us fainted at the same time, but you were placed on the clean bed with two mattresses placed under you whereas I was directly dumped on a wooden board. From how they treated us, it is clear that those few doctors know you, so they would not lie to you."

"I also sensed a certain familiarity from them, but I could not place it."

The holes in the pool in the middle of the room kept bubbling, and the lights on the wall flickered. The steel doors in the corridors creaked slightly, like people were moving them back and forth. Under the circumstances, Wang Dan did not dare drag things on for too long. He was afraid that the lights might go off and the monsters would start chasing them again.

“Let’s go. If you’re afraid, I’ll walk ahead, and you only need to help me remember the route that we should take.” Xiao Lee had been at this job for quite some time. He was smart and sharp. He would be one of the futuristic theme park’s most important workers in the future, and he courageously volunteered to take the lead this time.

Wang Dan did not reject Xiao Lee’s kindness. He leaned back for Xiao Lee to walk past him. He saw Xiao Lee crouch and enter the tunnel. “Be careful.”

“I know.” Xiao Lee took out his phone and used the flashlight to guide his way. “Come on, let’s get moving. I don’t want to open my eyes and see the doctors again.”

The two entered the tunnel one after another. The tunnel became narrower as they moved forward. There was something that looked like moss growing on the wall.

“Why haven’t we reached the end yet?” The more they moved forward, the more unsettled Wang Dan felt. The tunnel was large enough to only allow one person to pass through at a time. This meant that it was unavoidable for him to brush up against the ‘moss’ on the wall. His clothes got wet, and his skin became itchy. He followed closely behind Xiao Lee, feeling incredibly nervous.

“This should be the way that will lead us outside.” The complete opposite of Wang Dan, Xiao Lee was very confident. “Did you notice we can barely smell the formalin in the air anymore? Instead, there is a nice floral scent in the tunnel.”

He sniffed the air, and indeed, Wang Dan did smell a pleasant smell, but he was not as optimistic as Xiao Lee. “Is it because of the moss on the wall?”

He reached out to touch the wall, and the hard walls were covered in the moss, soft under his touch.

“Finally, we don’t need to suffer that weird stench anymore. This tunnel should lead us outside. The hidden passage is for the visitors to use. After all, this Haunted House is really not for everyone, and this hidden passage is like a surprise for people like us.” Xiao Lee bent lower. The tunnel became smaller, and the ground softened like it was covered with a thick carpet.

“I still think the smell of formalin is more familiar and comforting.” The fragrance that curled around his nose gave Wang Dan a nauseous feeling. “This is not a natural fragrance, but it doesn’t feel like it’s a chemical fragrance either. It smells very weird.”

Wang Dan tried to search through his mind, and he finally remembered it. “When I was studying the history of autopsy, it introduced something called cadaver fragrance, and the description is very similar to this smell.”

“Cadaver fragrance?” Xiao Lee shivered. This was the first time that he had heard of something like this.

“There are many types. The most famous is to harvest the oil from a beauty’s cadaver and then process it through a special method to create a candle-like substance...”

“Stop! Please stop!” Xiao Lee picked up his speed. He started to maintain a distance from Wang Dan. Normal people still had some reservations about things related to human bodies, and they were unable to talk about certain subjects with such insouciance like a medical student would.

Xiao Lee, from the futuristic theme park, continued to move forward, and Wang Dan could only follow. The two walked for several meters before Xiao Lee suddenly stopped.

“What’s happening?” Wang Dan used his phone to shine the light in front of him. Xiao Lee stood where he was, and after a long time, he forced out, “There’s no way to move forward anymore.”

By then, the two’s bodies were arcs, their faces almost touching the ground. The tunnel was so narrow that it was hard to even turn around. They were surrounded by the red ‘moss’, and their clothes were drenched. The air was filled with that strange fragrance.

“So... should we go back the way we came?”

“Wait a minute.” Xiao Lee was indeed courageous. He lifted his hand to press on the red-colored moss before him. His fingers increased in force, and his palm slowly sunk.

“It’s hollow behind this.” Xiao Lee cursed silently. He did not expect to come into such a trial so close to the exit. “Thankfully, I gave it a try. If we’d just turned back like that, I would’ve regreted it forever.”

He was proud of himself. He was going to turn around to tell Wang Dan the good news. His body leaned against the wall, and Xiao Lee tried his best to turn his neck around. “The moss is used to trick us. It is a disguise. The exit is just in front of us. We’ll be able to...”

When he spoke, Xiao Lee’s eyes swept the space behind him. He saw Wang Dan... as well as the person following behind Wang Dan!

Silently, quietly, and its face falling as it moved. Those things had been following them!

“What are you looking at?” Wang Dan used the phone to shine at Xiao Lee’s face. Before he could get a clear look, when the light from the phone swept the ceiling, a pale arm dropped down from the moss above them. The swinging arm fell right before Wang Dan’s face. His stunned face looked upward, and more arms fell down on him.

In the cramped passage, enveloped by the soft red moss were the passionate and warm ‘dead bodies’ that Boss Chen had completed the night before.

...

At the edge of the central hub, Yang Chen, Lee Xue, Ol’ Zhou, and Duan Yue stood together, looking at the two editors who were standing two feet away from them.

“Three people have disappeared, but why are the two of you completely fine?” Yang Chen’s voice was shaking. He had already seen through the boss’ ploy and was familiar with the two editors’ real identities.

“How is their disappearance related to us?” Ah Nan thought that Yang Chen was being unreasonable. “When the lights went off and the footsteps started, I even told them to not run away, but they refused to listen to us. Now that they’ve disappeared, you turn around to pin the blame on us?”

“You’re still acting?”

From the depths of the corridor earlier, he had heard Wang Dan scream, “I will never skip class again!”

It had sounded so raw and desperate; it did not sound like it was fake. It was because he had heard Wang Dan's scream that Yang Chen had started to get panicked. He did not plan to wait anymore and decided to expose everything.

"We're acting?" Hu Ya frowned. "Do you have some kind of misunderstanding?"

"Drop the act. I've already seen through your ploy. Actually, I have to admit that you are quite professional." Yang Chen took one step forward to shield Lee Xue, Ol' Zhou, and Duan Yue behind him. "You two are the Haunted House's paid actors, right? This is a setup organized by Boss Chen, isn't it?"

Hu Ya and Ah Nan's lips twitched. In the end, it was Ah Nan who lost his patience and turned to look at Yang Chen. "Have you lost your mind?"

"I'm right, aren't I? You must be surprised it only took me nineteen minutes to expose you." Yang Chen stood together with the rest of the group, and his voice turned cold. "The three of you editors, as well as the chef and his little brother that disappeared earlier, all of you are hired actors belonging to this Haunted House. The pictures on the wall should be the five of you! You are the ghosts that have mixed into the group of visitors. You are the dead victims!"

The place was quiet. Not only Hu Ya and Ah Nan, even Ol' Zhou and Duan Yue took in a deep breath. How were they supposed to continue this conversation? This was a scenario that they had not imagined!

"You suspect there are employees mixed into our ranks? Someone has been acting?" The two editors seemed to realize that something was wrong. The two had read many crime and supernatural novels before, so their logical thinking was much stronger than normal. They had not noticed this problem before because they had not considered this possibility. However, with the reminder from Yang Chen, the two of them seemed to realize something.

"The ghosts are among us!"

Ah Nan and Hu Ya stood together. "Listen to me. I think there are indeed ghosts among us. However, these 'ghosts' aren't the three of us but someone else."

"Yes." Hu Ya tried to think back to the start. "The ghost should be that Bai Qiulin. I also thought he was acting weird when he entered the Haunted House. Why would the man keep his hand inside his pocket and refuse to take it out? At the time, I thought it was his force of habit, but now I realize how weird that is!

“When the accident happened earlier, Bai Qiulin disappeared. The footsteps were messy, and that was probably his doing! If we move further back, when the accident happened to the chef and his brother, Bai Qiulin was standing at the door of the warehouse. He expertly chose the position between the corridor and the warehouse. That way, he would be able to buy the monsters time if they needed it!”

“That person is very problematic! He has to be the ghost, and he has more partners!” Ah Nan’s mind was clearer. His way of analysis was different from Yang Chen’s. He did not carry any prejudice when he studied all of the visitors—he was only studying them the most rational way.

“If the ghost is Bai Qiulin, then his partners will not show off any evidence that they are close to him, so Xiao Lee is basically not the ghost. Of the remaining people, removing the ones that have been ‘victimized’, we are all that’s left.” Ah Nan’s eyes danced between Ol’ Zhou and Yang Chen. Both of them had their suspicious points, and he could not tell what was the truth.

Duan Yue grabbed Ol’ Zhou’s hand and asked softly, “What is happening?”

“I’m not really sure. I believe there is an actor employed by the Haunted House among us.” Ol’ Zhou lowered his head to answer Duan Yue. The two were close to Yang Chen, so Yang Chen heard their conversation.

“Believe me, those two are the actors. I have the critical evidence.” Yang Chen revealed the issue about the disclaimer quietly to Ol’ Zhou and Duan Yue. The two were shocked when they heard him.

Ah Nan and Hu Ya had originally thought that Yang Chen was probably not the ghost, but when they saw how convinced he was and the way Ol’ Zhou reacted when Yang Chen told him something, their conviction was shaken. They could not hear what Yang Chen said, but they thought that it was very suspicious.

“There are ghosts mixed into the group. Staying together with them is too dangerous. We should split off to find Tails on our own.” Hu Ya turned to walk down the corridor. “When I first arrived at the junction, I believe I saw Tails walk this way.”

The editors did not stay and left directly.

“They cannot keep up the acting anymore,” Lee Xue added on Yang Chen’s behalf. No matter what happened, she had absolute faith in Yang Chen.

“It’s good that we’re getting separated. We need to take this opportunity to go look for the photos to prevent them from doing anything stupid.” Yang Chen chose the direction opposite from the two editors and led Ol’ Zhou and Duan Yue deeper into the corridor.

...

Screams echoed through the scenario. The first two screams were from Ol’ Zhou and Duan Yue. They sounded pitiful like they happened across something very horrible. The latter two shouts were issued by Yang Chen and Lee Xue. Other than fear in their screams, there was also a thick sense of despair in them. The four screams occurred almost at the same time. Since Hu Ya and Ah Nan had not wandered too far off, so they heard it clearly.

“All four of them have been assaulted?” Ah Nan’s heart shook. His earlier speculation seemed to be mistaken. Based on their earlier analysis, the remaining ghost should either be him or Hu Ya, but how was that possible?

“Now, there’s only two of us left.” Hu Ya’s smile was forceful. “A team of twelve, but only two remain, and it took the boss less than twenty minutes to do that. This boss is too familiar with the twists and turns of the human heart.”

“Perhaps there wasn’t a ghost among us from the very beginning...” Ah Nan shook his head. His mind was a mess. He felt like not only his body but also his mind had fallen into a maze.

“Let’s forget about them. We need to find Tails first. I remember that she was heading this way.” Hu Ya and Ah Nan leaned against the wall as they moved forward. They reached the end and saw a steel door that was closed. “This door isn’t locked.”

Somewhat agitated, Ah Nan shook the door heavily. “It feels like it was blocked from the other side.”

“Could this be Tails’ doing?”

“Probably.”

The steel door shook, and the lights in the corridor flickered like they were about to go out again.

...

Tails was hiding inside the unknown room at the end of the corridor. She hugged the phone and tapped on the number madly.

Why isn't anyone picking up? Please pick up!

The steel door was shaken loudly. The rust fell, creating a loud noise. Tails' heart raced. Her baby face was as pale as paper. Her fingers gripped the phone tightly, and the blood vessels on her neck pulsed. She was truly afraid.

Those things have found me! It must be them!

The door shook even harder. Tears were coming to her eyes. She curled up inside the closet, and her pupils that stared at the door narrowed.

What should I do? What should I do?

BANG!

The wooden table that blocked the door was pushed down, and the steel door fell open. Her heart jumped to her throat, causing Tails to almost faint from asphyxiation. She bit on her lips, and her hands squeezed together.

"Tails?" The familiar voice came from the door. Tails was stunned. The happiness came so suddenly that it felt surreal. The lights flickered at the corridor, so she could only see the person's frame. However, from the frame alone, she was sure that it was Hu Ya.

With her hands on the door, Tails' tears were rushing out. She was too excited. This feeling of flying from hell to heaven was hard to describe. However, just as she was about to push the door open, the phone display lit up. The call that she had been unable to make earlier was finally connected, and it was Hu Ya's name on the display.

But isn't she at the door?

Tails' finger went to the accept button, and Hu Ya's urgent voice came through.

"Tails, we've already left the Haunted House. Stay where you are and don't move! The police are going in to get you. This Haunted House is very problematic! Remember to stay where you are, and don't move!"

Already left? Police? Tails listened to the familiar voice on the phone and the familiar frame of the person at the door, and her mind went into shut down.

On the phone, Hu Ya had said that she had already left the Haunted House, so who was the person standing at the door?

The lights went off, and darkness arrived. Tails curled up in the closet and shook endlessly. The employee would not have the heart to come after her. Her eyes were filled with tears, and her lips were bitten. She hugged her arms together and did not make too much noise with her breathing. Hu Ya's phone call ended, and the phone returned to normal. The house returned to silence.

...

Several seconds later, the footsteps showed that someone had entered the room. With the sound of shoes brushing against the sandy surface, Tails heard every step clearly.

The first freezer that was nearest to the door was forced open, and the smell of disinfectant drifted out.

"Not here." Hu Ya's voice sounded different from normal. She sounded stressed. Then again, who could blame her after all that she had been through?

The second freezer was also pulled open. They were forceful and violent. Some of the doors were already rusted, and they yanked them open with force. The sound moved closer to Tails. She was hiding behind the last freezer. If they walked to the side, they would see her.

"Come on, let's go. This might be another trap. If she heard our voice, there is no reason for her not to answer unless she has already fainted." Ah Nan and Hu Ya had already opened four freezers, and they did not spot Tails, so they chose to give up.

"Where could she have gone?" Hu Ya looked deeper into the room. Between the last freezer and the wall was a gap that was just large enough for a small figure to hide. She walked toward it, and just as she was about to get close, her phone vibrated. A message came in.

According to the message, Tails said that she was trapped inside a secret tunnel that was overgrown with red moss, and the tunnel was inside the room with the cadaver pool.

“Don’t be afraid, we’ll be there now.” Hu Ya did have an impression of such a room in the middle section. She stopped and called Tails’ number. She turned and left the room with Ah Nan. The footsteps disappeared, but Tails still did not dare leave. She was undecided and called Hu Ya again.

However, this time, the call was not connected. The phone operator told her that the number was busy; Hu Ya was on the phone with someone else.

Just now, the person that looked like Sister Hu Ya was calling someone. Now that I’m calling her, she is also on the phone. What is going on?

Tails held her phone and slowly walked out from the room. She followed the two editors who left the room urgently from a distance.

...

Both hands held the heavy steel door, and Chen Ge entered the underground in full dress up. He found a trolley from the nearby storeroom and slowly wandered into the underground morgue.

One cart should be enough. With the doctors from Western Jiujiang Medical University holding the fort, this time, there shouldn’t be that many fainted people. Chen Ge continued forward with a smile. The biggest reward from completing the underground morgue’s trial mission should be the group of doctors. With them around, the safety of the visitors will be guaranteed.

At the end of the corridor, a ball-like object bounced up and down like it was waiting for Chen Ge. Seeing that, Chen Ge was not afraid. Please lead the way.

The ball-like object was the model head that Chen Ge had brought back from the underground morgue. The model had stayed in the underground morgue for decades. Every day, it was in company of those negative energy, so it had slowly been influenced. However, the model was really not that evil. It was only too lonely and wanted to find a friend.

Those were the things that Yan Danian had told Chen Ge. During the mission, Chen Ge had pushed the head into his backpack with the comic, recorder, and white cat. They had quite a good time in there, so Chen Ge decided to adopt this homeless model head.

With the head leading the way, Chen Ge first found Fan Dade and Fan Chong lying in the middle of the road. The brothers felt like they were neither conscious nor unconscious, like they could not decide whether they should wake up or not.

It's already a great achievement that they did not faint directly. No wonder they're visitors that have survived the two-star scenarios.

Chen Ge hauled the brothers onto the trolley. The wheels rolled, and Chen Ge arrived at the middle section. Yang Chen and Lee Xue were placed side by side, leaning against the wall. Probably afraid that the ground was too hardy, someone had been kind enough to push some pillows underneath them. The service was top notch.

“Not bad, this is the way to treat customers. While scaring them, we have to show some care toward them.”

Gaining Chen Ge's approval, three shadows came out from the corridor and ran into the comic.

These two should be Ol' Zhou's group's handiwork. Chen Ge placed Lee Xue onto the trolley and looked at the fainted Yang Chen. He shook his head. Ultimately, you got the experience you wanted. This time, you really did run into an actual worker.

With four passengers, the trolley was full. Chen Ge found another trolley inside the scenario and walked to the secret tunnel at the middle section with the model head leading the way.

Someone really came here? What were they thinking?

Boss Chen entered the tunnel, and the first person he saw was Tails. The girl was collapsed on the ground. Probably afraid that she might injure herself from the fall, one of the mannequins was holding her.

The three editors were together, so there should be more.

The more Chen Ge headed into the tunnel, the weirder he felt. This group of visitors were like crazy, one by one falling into the trap that he had set up.

Are the visitors these days so wild?

After dragging out all five people, Chen Ge looked at the two full trolleys, and he felt quite embarrassed.

This shouldn't be! Before the visitors came in, I told the doctors to rescue any fainted visitors if they came across them.

Chen Ge wheeled the two trolleys out and looking at the visitors, he suddenly took in a cold breath.

This is bad, I forgot to tell the doctors to send them to the exit after saving them. The doctors have probably saved them multiple times already.

It was too late to say all that. Chen Ge quickly pushed the visitors to the room where the doctors stayed. After confirming that everyone was fine, he pushed the two trolleys out of the underground morgue.

...

When the Haunted House's curtains were pushed open, the noise outside dwindled. The visitors acted like their ability of speech had been stripped as they all turned to the entrance. The wheels rolled, and Chen Ge walked into the sunlight with the two trolleys of visitors.

The sun fell on his body, and his smile was as bright as ever. His muscular arms pushed the trolleys, and the visitors inside the cart looked so peaceful.

"Uncle Xu, I'll leave the rest to you. They are not in any danger; I've already asked people to check them. They'll wake up on their own after some time, don't worry."

Handing over the trolleys to Uncle Xu, Chen Ge waved at the visitors. "There are many Haunted Houses on the market that boast about their scares to attract visitors, but my Haunted House is different. The thing that we value the most here is the visitors' safety, so please come visit us. We have the best service. To facilitate a good experience, we even have professional doctors and many items to transport the visitors. Don't worry. We are not like other faithless places; we do not charge extra for these services."

His hands in the pockets, the sun extended Chen Ge's shadow. This was a man who had normal looks but oozed charm. After Chen Ge returned to the Haunted House, the stunned visitors exploded. The sound of discussion threatened to swallow the whole theme park.

"All nine visitors have been pushed out? This is a wipeout!"

...

"This has to be a four-star scenario, right?"

"My legs are already weak even though the game hasn't started, what do I do?"

"Listen to yourself, it's just nine fainted visitors, what is so surprising about that? Boss, I just bought the ticket to the underground morgue, but can I change the ticket? I'm really not afraid. I just think the Third Sick Hall is more suitable for me."

The visitors crowded around the entrance, and the situation was getting out of control. Uncle Xu was swallowed by the wave of people, and he could not move even if he wanted to. He yelled at the top of his lungs, "Where are the doctors? You don't need to bring the stretcher—just roll them away like this!"

"Boss, can we swap our tickets here?"

"This is too much!"

"Can we take a picture with the nine visitors?"

"Yang Chen! My god, I saw people from our school!"

"It's really our school's students! Wait a minute, why do these trolleys look so familiar?"

The crowd rushed forward, and Uncle Xu screamed, "Chen Ge! Chen Ge! Get out here!"

The heavy curtains were already closed. Chen Ge sat next to the table and poured himself a glass of water. This time, they really misunderstood me. Technically, the place shouldn't be that scary. Is it because the Haunted House has been upgraded to Maze of Terror? Does that make it easier for the visitors to get scared?

Unlocking the black phone, Chen Ge found the explanation for Maze of Terror. As the Haunted House continued to expand, the visitors would get lost both physically and mentally. After the House of Horrors upgraded, it became a Maze of Terror. What is after Maze of Terror? A scary theme park? How come it fits my aim of creating a terror-based theme park so perfectly?

The appearance of the underground morgue gave Chen Ge a breather. This one scenario was enough for Chen Ge to explore for a long time.

All nine visitors who have survived two-star scenarios were taken down. In the future, this three-star scenario might become a local legend.

This batch of visitors were powerful, but they had all fainted before they reached the central hub. All the scares that Chen Ge had prepared there were wasted.

Temporarily, I have more than enough scenarios to use. The thing that I need to focus on is to expand the other functions to unlock the Haunted House's full potential to deal with the futuristic theme park.

Chen Ge pretended to not hear the noise coming from outside and studied the black phone. I haven't gotten the chance to see the item that I got from completing the Third Sick Hall's hidden mission. I should make use of this chance to go take a look.

After the ghost stories society was eliminated, Chen Ge got the reward from the black phone—the chairperson's letter of appointment. He entered the Props Room and found an envelope inside the wooden box left in the corner. He opened it to see a letter written with familiar handwriting.

"When I'm walking in the darkness, I'm the scariest ghost story in this city."

It was not signed, but Chen Ge believed that it had been written by Doctor Gao. Chen Ge placed the letter next to the patient's list, and he could clearly sense the mad souls of these patients calming down.

All these patients have unlimited potential. I should try to summon them in the future.

Putting away these things, Chen Ge returned to the entrance because there was a new batch of visitors waiting.

The visitors woke up at around 2 pm. Everyone felt like their head was heavy, and they were tense. The cute girl among them smashed her phone after she woke up. The few others seemed to have some scars left in them about doctors. Whenever they saw people in white coats, they would subconsciously shy away.

Chen Ge cared about his visitors. After he heard that they had woken up, he immediately ran to the infirmary.

The three editors woke up first. They chatted for a long time with Chen Ge and invited Chen Ge to come to their office in Eastern Jiujiang. They believed that the designer behind such a Haunted House had to be a storied person.

The three medical students' situation was not that serious. In fact, when they were still inside the Haunted House, they had already been checked by the group of doctors. Doctor Wei and Mr Liu had only let them go after confirming that they could still go back to class like usual and did not need to take a day off.

“Boss Chen...” Yang Chen was young, and he was naturally arrogant. He was the top of his class, and he had always been praised since he was young. He rarely got beaten like this, and that was why he was so adamant to clear the Haunted House.

“What is it that you want to tell me?” Chen Ge had no idea what the child had experienced in the Haunted House.

Yang Chen opened his lips but did not know what to say. Finally, he gripped his fists and stared at Chen Ge. “This is just a temporarily set back. I will definitely return!”

“I admire your courage, and I will give you a twenty percent discount for your future tickets, but remember you’re still a student, don’t lose sight of that.” Chen Ge also considered that Yang Chen was a student and thus had limited funds, so he added that.

Hearing that, Yang Chen’s fists slowly released. He looked at Chen Ge, and his heart was conflicted. He knew that the man had toyed with him for the whole day, but facing Chen Ge, Yang Chen was unable to hate him.

Walking past the three students, Chen Ge turned to look at Xiao Lee. “You cleared all the one-star and two-star scenarios alone in just one morning, then you quickly followed them to challenge the newly released three-star scenario. Actually, I noticed you when you came in for the first time—you are different from others. Other people came to enjoy the experience—they were either nervous or excited—but you look like you’re forced.”

When Xiao Lee was challenging the one-star scenario, he had already been detected by the phone spirit, so Chen Ge had known about him from the start. Since the guide for the earlier scenarios was already on the internet, Chen Ge did not mind him.

Xiao Lee did not dare to raise his head to meet Chen Ge’s eyes.

“The reason you’re here should be related to the futuristic theme park, right?” The smile on Chen Ge’s face had not changed. He sat down next to Xiao Lee. “Don’t worry, I will not expose you. No matter your intention, as long as you’re in my Haunted House, you’re my guest, and for that, you deserve the best service we have to offer.”

Chen Ge looked out the window. “Haven’t you people been wondering why my Haunted House has so many visitors? The answer is actually very simple. I sincerely want to give my visitors their best experience, and to that end, I do my best every time.”

Xiao Lee nodded like he somewhat understood it. Then he quickly shook his head. The clumsy way that he reacted made Chen Ge smile. “If you were my worker, I would have followed you to do the visitation, not dumped you to face the ordeal alone and refused to show up to bring you back.”

Standing up, Chen Ge still did not mention the word ‘phone’. “Take good care of yourself.”

He turned to walk to Fan Dade and Fan Chong. Xiao Lee looked at Chen Ge’s back, and he held the phone that was hidden under his pillow, feeling uncomfortable

Chen Ge finally stopped next to Fan Dade and Fan Chong. These two visitors' situation was more serious than others. Fan Dade's eyes were unfocused as he stared at the ceiling. It looked like he was contemplating his life and future. His brother, Fan Chong, had returned to normal, but his body would spasm occasionally, and it looked quite scary.

"Feeling better?" Chen Ge sat down next to the bed with a thermos of hot water. Fan Dade looked at Chen Ge, and he really could not believe that this unassuming man was the culprit behind all those things that they had experienced.

...

"Thank you, we're feeling much better." After being scared so many times, Fan Chong seemed to have walked out from the haze of the break-up and found a new lease on life.

"Good." Chen Ge poured two cups of water and left them on the table. He planned to leave right after. The business was still running, so he could not be away for too long.

"Boss Chen, wait a minute." Fan Chong sat up in bed and looked at Chen Ge.

"Yes?"

"Can I ask you a question?" Fan Chong's chubby hands held the edge of the bed. He thought about it for a long time before asking, "You've designed so many ghosts and monsters at your Haunted House, so do you personally believe in the existence of ghosts in this world?"

"Many visitors have asked me that." Chen Ge looked at Fan Chong with some surprise. This large child seemed to have an unknown past. "I don't know the real answer. Perhaps there are ghosts, but in any case, I have not seen any."

“You have not?” Fan Chong looked quite saddened.

“Why would you suddenly ask that?” Compared to whether there were ghosts in this world or not, Chen Ge was more curious about what had happened to Fan Chong. The man looked normal, but he had managed to retain his sanity after so many repeated scares. That was quite impressive.

“Actually, it’s nothing. Recently, I’ve been playing a game that is said to have been created by a murderer, and the game is supposed to contain hints of his murders.” Fan Chong used one sentence to attract the attention of everyone in the room.

“A game designed by a mad murderer?” Chen Ge’s interest was piqued. “But how is that related to the existence of ghosts in this world?”

“Perhaps it was the sound effects, but after some time playing the game, I began to hear the sound of children crying. I like to wear earphones when playing games, and that is a source of curiosity because even after I took the earphones out, I could still hear the sound of crying.” It was the first time Fan Chong said these things, and his expression was strange. “I suspected that I was hearing things, but after examination, the doctor told me that my body was fine. So, those children crying must have been real.”

“She kept crying and only appeared at night.”

“What is the game generally about?” Chen Ge asked another question.

“On the surface, it is a clothes-changing game. You can pretty up your avatar daughter in the game and use her to complete various missions. After completing the mission, you’ll be awarded with more clothes and accessories. Things like school uniform, sun dress, things like that.”

“Daughter? Dress up?” Chen Ge looked at Fan Chong with suspicion. “Why would you play a game like that?”

“That’s not important. The important part is that after I cleared all the missions, the game gave me the very last reward—it was a piece of clothing.” Fan Chong hugged his head, and his fingers poked through his hair. “The clothing was named ‘Mummy’s Pajamas’. After I got that outfit, a window appeared on-screen, and it said that Xiao Bu had found a key that leads to the dungeon in Mummy's Pajamas."

"Xiao Bu was the name that you gave your daughter in the game?" Chen Ge asked.

"No." Fan Chong shook his head. "At the time, I had just broken up with my girlfriend of four years. I named the avatar in game after her, Liu Jiuru."

"You named your virtual daughter after your real girlfriend?" Chen Ge was just beyond speechless. He sat back down and decided to ask for more.

"Don't mind those details. At the time, I was confused. My daughter's name was Liu Jiuru, but why would the game change the name on its own to Xiao Bu? I googled the game online but could not find any information on it." Fan Chong saw the question on Chen Ge's face, so he explained, "I found the game on a small gaming forum. The forum has plenty of indie games and mod files for mainstream games."

"In essence, you completed the game and got a key that led to some dungeon. What happened after that?" Chen Ge took a sip of the warm water and continued to listen.

"The setting of the game is not big; it's just a small town, and all the missions can be completed in said town. After I got the key, I had the girl whose name had already changed, put on Mummy's Pajamas, and exit the room to look for the dungeon entrance." Fan Chong curled up on the bed, and his expression slowly changed. "The game's style is very warm and kid-friendly, filled with sun and flowers. Every character in the town is kind and helpful. Actually, it is because of how warm the game felt that I chose to play it after the break up. I thought that the game might be a good distraction, but something scarier than the break up happened."

"Don't need to explain so much. Just give me the result." Chen Ge was eager to find out what happened.

"I spent one week and used the mouse to click on every inch of the town until I eventually found the entrance in one of Xiao Bu's friend's houses behind a dresser." Fan Chong raised his head to look at Chen Ge. "The window popped up to inform me that I had already found the entrance of the dungeon and asked whether I wanted to use the key or not."

His hands closed and opened; it was clear that Fan Chong was very nervous. “After I clicked yes, the door opened. I controlled Xiao Bu to enter the space behind the dresser. My computer went blank instantly, and about two seconds later, when the screen returned, the style of the game became completely different.”

“Was it a blood red world behind the dresser?” Chen Ge was reminded of the ‘door’.

“No.” Fan Chong shook his head. “The world behind the dresser was dim. There were dead sunflowers littering the ground, and the walls were thick.

“There was a grey road, and there were streetlights on the side of the road, but the distance between them was very far. It was recognizable that I was still inside the town, but night had arrived. The surrounding buildings looked so different compared to how they had looked in daylight.

“I controlled Xiao Bu to walk down the road and eventually came across a bus stop. Waiting at the bus stop was a rather old, worn public bus.”

“There were no other roads. When I controlled Xiao Bu to walk past the bus, I saw a woman standing at the bus stop, a woman in a red raincoat.

“The whole world was gray, so the woman’s red raincoat was very conspicuous. I used the cursor to click on the woman, and a message popped up—Have you seen my child?

...

“That should be the woman’s speech bubble, and no matter how many times I pressed, she kept repeating the same question.

“The game changed too much, and I was feeling scared. I continued playing simply because I was curious. I ignored the woman and wanted to move forward, but Xiao Bu refused to follow my control; her body stopped moving.

“I leaned closer and saw that the woman in the raincoat had grabbed Xiao Bu’s arm, and the scary thing was that the woman’s body was shaking. A bug seemed to have corrupted the game because the windows kept popping out saying—Have you seen my child?

“I clicked on the cursor crazily. Finally, I clicked on the bus, and the girl managed to get away from the woman by running into the bus. The vehicle started and drove down the road.

“I had no idea how long it had been driving when Xiao Bu, who was wearing her Mummy’s Pajamas, started to pace inside the bus. She heard the sound of children crying.”

Fan Chong did not continue for a moment. His emotions were jangled, and his hands held his chest. “It was from then on that I started to hear the voice clearer. That day, I played until 3 am. I was afraid, so I turned off the computer directly. However, after I crawled into bed, I could still hear the crying of the child. The sound seemed to come out from the computer, but when I turned to look, the source changed direction again. It felt as if the child had crawled out of the computer and into my room.”

“When did this begin?” Chen Ge took out his phone to exchange WeChat IDs with Fan Chong.

“Around one or two weeks ago. No wait, I can’t remember clearly.” Fan Chong’s face scrunched up in pain. “You can come over to Eastern Jiujiang to find me next time, and we can talk this out.”

“Okay, where is your home?”

Chen Ge memorized this address and left after chatting for a while longer with Fan Chong.

Recently, all the strange things have been happening in Eastern Jiujiang. Looks like that place is quite messy and not as quiet as it appears on the surface. Chen Ge returned to the Haunted House to work. A few visitors were scared dumb, but no one complained or argued with Chen Ge.

For those real adrenaline seekers, they would never be angry because it was too exciting; they would only complain when it was not exciting enough. However, there were few such visitors. Most of the visitors would regain their senses after trying out the one-star or two-star scenarios. In their eyes, only those who had lost their mind would challenge three-star scenarios.

Chen Ge’s House of Horrors ended its business at 6:50 pm. After sending away the last batch of visitors, the few employees could finally leave their own scenario.

“Thank you for your work today. The weather forecast said that there could be rain tonight, so you’d better leave while it’s still bright.” After cleaning the place, Chen Ge followed Xiao Gu and Xu Wan out the haunted house.

“Boss where are you going?”

“There are some materials left at the workshop. I plan to make some extra limbs; the new scenario still needs some more additions.” Chen Ge locked the door.

“More additions?” Xiao Gu widened his eyes. “Boss, I heard you scared nine visitors until they fainted today. That is enough to get you on the news. Are you sure you want to add more stuff to the new scenario? Why don't you show some pity to the visitors?"

"I can't do that." Chen Ge denied it without thinking. "You don't understand the human heart. The more they could not get it, the more they wanted to fight for it. We must be able to guarantee that we have a scenario that can never be cleared at our Haunted House. With this scenario, the visitors will return to challenge it again and again. If all our scenarios could be cleared easily, then our Haunted House would be no different from all the others on the market."

"Yes, to create a Haunted House that the visitors will never clear, that should be our focus." No matter what Chen Ge said, Xu Wan would support it unconditionally. She walked next to Chen Ge with her head lowered and concurred with Chen Ge's words every so often.

"I seem to understand it now." Xiao Gu nodded with a semi-blank expression.

"Make sure not to leak this information to outsiders—this is the secret of our Haunted House," Chen Ge reminded with a light smile.

"Of course."

The three walked down the road and soon reached the workshop. Xu Wan and Xiao Gu did not leave and wanted to stay to help Chen Ge. Chen Ge had already informed Boss Qian, so the three walked into the workshop directly.

At 8 pm, considering his two employee's health and the fact that they still needed to work tomorrow, he told them to go home first. "I still have too few members of staff. There is too much pressure on Xiao Gu and Xu Wan. After the impact from the futuristic park is over, I should bring all of my employees out for a trip."

Boss Qian had already left, so Chen Ge closed the door. He planned to spend a whole night there. After all, the materials would have gone to waste left at the workshop, so he planned to give them a new 'life'.

After Xu Wan and Xiao Gu left the workshop, since their homes were at different place, after saying goodbye, Xiao Gu walked to the countryside alone.

"It's only 8 pm, so there should be enough time for me to catch up to the last bus." Xiao Gu walked to the nearest bus stop to look at the bus stop. "The place I'm staying at is too far from the city. After I get this month's pay, I should find an apartment closer to New Century Park. But if I move out before finishing the three months, I probably won't get my deposit back..."

Calling a taxi would waste too much money. Xiao Gu looked at the bus route as he waited for the bus to arrive. As he stared at the glass panel, he suddenly realized that the panel reflected the shadow of a woman. The woman was standing at the opposite bus stop, and she was silently looking at him.

"She sure is dressed strangely. The weather forecast did mention rain, but it's not yet raining, so why is she wearing a raincoat already?" Xiao Gu was uncomfortable being stared at by the woman. He took out his phone, wanting to snap a picture of her. However, when he turned around, the woman had already disappeared.

"Her reflection was in the glass, so she was just there. Where did she disappear to?"

Xiao Gu held his phone and looked left and right. The woman disappeared like she had never been there in the first place.

The thunder rumbled in the night, and the rainclouds hung low in the sky. There would probably be heavy rain that night.

Just as Xiao Gu was spacing out, a bus came toward him from afar. The bus was driven slowly, and there were few passengers.

Chapter 486 - Have You Seen My Child?

Chapter 486: Have You Seen My Child?

Route 17? Xiao Gu turned back to look at the bus route map. The bus for Route 17 would not pass his apartment. I need to take Route 104 to the end and walk for another two blocks.

According to the map, the last bus for Route 104 would be at 9 pm. Xiao Gu sighed in relief when he saw that. He leaned against the bus stop and waited patiently for bus on Route 104 to arrive. The bus for Route 17 stopped by the bus stop. The driver was a middle-aged man with little care for his appearance. After the passengers got off, the bus did not leave and waited where it was.

...

What's the meaning of this? Xiao Gu did not plan to take this bus. He lifted his head to look at the driver and saw the driver staring at the space one to two meters in front of him like there was someone standing there.

After about seven seconds, the driver grumbled with impatience, If you want to get on, then get on. If you don't want to get on, then stand back. Don't block the door!

The door closed, and the bus trundled away, disappearing down the road.

Who was he talking to? Xiao Gu looked around; he was the only one waiting at the station. The rainclouds pooled above him, and the stars were eclipsed. It made him feel quite alone. At 8:20 pm, the rain started to fall. People on the road started to rush to their destination, and the originally quite busy street became quite deserted.

It feels quite cold. Xiao Gu, who was rather bored, went online to look at the latest news around Jiujiang.

“Latest update on the cadaver theft cases at Central Hospital. The surveillance caught some possible suspects and has already denied the possibility of an inside job.”

“A famed livestream host disappeared at Mu Yang High School in the middle of his stream last night. According to our sources, there have been multiple disappearances at Mu Yang High School since its abandonment.”

“A Schistosomiasis Control Station’s employee, surnamed Wang, was found dead under mysterious circumstances. Thirty percent of the victim was drained, and there was a wound in the shape of a rose on the victim’s back.”

“Three men drowned when they were out swimming near Eastern Jiujiang’s dam. The weather lately has been warm, but due to the geographical nature of Jiujiang city, which has had plenty of rain and water, the local government would like to remind the public not to play in the water at open water locations to prevent accident.”

“Jiujiang Update: A couple was found dead from self-immolation at Li Wan City’s shopping center. It’s suspected that this was some sort of ritual.”

“There has been another serious car accident involving the last bus ride on Route 104! The minister of traffic promises to improve the route map.”

Putting away the phone, Xiao Gu looked at the empty bus stop and shivered. He had no idea when this had started, but the news had stopped being about celebrity gossip and more about the supernatural cases that happened around the city. How come it feels like the world has gotten more dangerous?

Xiao Gu squatted down as the rain continued to pour. He did not carry an umbrella so he could only hide inside the bus stop.

Other than Brother Chen and Sister Xu Wan, I have no other friends at Jiujiang. It’s already too late to call them for help—after all, we’ve all been working for a whole day already.

Xiao Gu was a kind person, and he was a straightforward thinker. For those who treated him well, he would treat them back in kind. He was not one to harbor hidden intentions. The bus stop was caught in the storm. The rain fell down the roof. Xiao Gu wondered when the rain would stop.

Where is the bus?

The shape of the buildings from afar looked blurry due to the rain.

The cars on the road dwindled. The only company that Xiao Gu had at the bus stop was the street light next to him.

The yellow light dimmed after it filtered through the pouring rain. Chills climbed into Xiao Gu's sleeves. He poked his head out to look down the road. There were no cars or trucks, much less a public bus.

The road was empty, washed clean by the rain. Every few dozen meters, there was a street light, and it was these lights that warmed Xiao Gu's heart in this lonely night. The rain turned heavier, and Xiao Gu became increasingly worried. He paced under the bus shelter, thinking that if a taxi passed by, he would just flag it down. The street lights dimmed. He waited for another ten minutes. When it was almost 9 pm, Xiao Gu saw a bus coming from the end of the road, heading slowly to the stop.

Perhaps it was the rain, but while Xiao Gu could see the bus coming, he could not hear any noise made by the vehicle.

That looks like it's for Route 104.

Xiao Gu searched for change inside his pocket, and as he turned around, he saw someone standing at the bus stop!

Standing not far from him was a woman in a red raincoat. She seemed to be waiting for a bus as well.

Wasn't this lady on the opposite side of the road earlier? When did she get over here?

The raincoat was wet, and the woman had her head lowered. The exposed hair stuck together to cover the view of her face.

She doesn't seem to be wearing any shoes... could she be a mad woman?

Xiao Gu carefully edged away. He stood at one side of the bus stop, but the woman stood right in the middle.

The rain became heavier. The bus slowly entered the station, stopping between Xiao Gu and the woman. Xiao Gu, who had already prepared his change, charged toward the door, but to his surprise, the woman who kept her head lowered suddenly moved. She reached out to grab Xiao Gu without warning, and her wet hair fell on Xiao Gu's arm.

"What are you doing?"

The woman slowly raised her head. Hair covered most of her face, but through the gap between the hair, one could almost see a pair of eyes that did not seem to have black pupils.

“Have you seen my child?”

“No, I have not.” Xiao Gu was given a fright by the woman. He wanted to struggle loose, but the woman’s thin hands held onto him tightly.

“Have you seen my child?” The woman took another step forward. There was a large stain on the red raincoat. Since the stain had a dark red color, Xiao Gu had not noticed it initially because it blended perfectly into the color of the raincoat.

“Big sister, I really have not seen your child!” The door of the bus had already started to close. Xiao Gu did not want to continue his tussle with the woman. He tried his best to struggle loose and jumped onto the bus. He put in the coins and found a seat by the window to sit down. Through the window, Xiao Gu saw the woman still standing in the middle of the bus stop. Her head was lowered, and her hair was dripping wet.

She too is a sorry character. She probably lost her child, and her mind broke from the overwhelming sadness. Xiao Gu’s eyes were shining with pity.

The rain seeped through the gap in the roof, and a few drops fell on the woman. It slid down her raincoat to create a red puddle around her feet.

“The vehicle will start soon. Please take your seat. Welcome to the driverless bus for Route 104. Dear passenger, please move closer to the backdoor. Our next stop is Central Hospital.”

The cold operator voice came from the front of the vehicle. Xiao Gu stretched lazily and leaned against the car seat.

What is this sticky feeling?

Xiao Gu turned to look around. The middle of the backseat was wet like someone had just taken this seat not that long ago.

She Has Been Following me

Did some passenger sit here earlier with their wet clothes from the rain?

Xiao Gu touched the seat; it felt wet but not like water. He could not really describe it.

...

I'd better switch seats.

The bus drove safely. The sights on both sides flew past very fast, and he could not feel the bus tumble. Standing up, Xiao Gu looked around. There were few people on this last bus—including him, there were only six of them.

The first three rows on the left were empty, and an old lady sat on the fourth row. She kept looking out the window like she had something on her mind.

A woman sat on the same row on the right, and she kept her head lowered as she played on her phone. She looked about thirty and dressed fashionably. Xiao Gu believed that she was an employee from nearby company and had been working overtime until she had to take the last bus.

Xiao Gu sat in the middle of the bus alone. Behind him was a woman around forty or fifty who was hugging a young child on her lap. The woman was seriously obese, and her face was filled with freckles, but the child on her lap looked handsome and beautiful, completely unlike her.

Looking further back, there was a student sitting at the last row. He carried a school bag, and his uniform was drenched. He looked like he had just finished tuition.

Students nowadays sure are under a lot of pressure.

Xiao Gu was about to turn his head away when the student suddenly raised his head to meet his eyes before quickly averting his gaze.

His face looks so pale, and his body is shivering—is he sick?

He changed his seat and sat near the back door. Playing a crazed murderer inside a Haunted House was hard work. He needed to run back and forth, and sometimes, to create a surprise, he needed to follow the boss' orders and run the long route to block the visitors' way on the other end of the path. After a whole day of work, Xiao Gu was feeling tired. He leaned against the seat, and his eyelids became heavy.

Just as Xiao Gu was about to fall asleep, something hit him lightly on the back of his head. He turned to look and saw a ball of paper on the ground. "Was this from that student?"

Xiao Gu picked up the paper. He thought it was a prank, but on second thought, thinking back to how the student looked, he did not think that was it. Holding the paper, Xiao Gu turned back to look. The student had his head turned downward. There was no sign that it was him who had tossed the ball of paper.

Xiao Gu opened the paper and saw a sentence that had hastily been written on it.

'Don't fall asleep or you'll miss your station.'

It was a normal reminder, and Xiao Gu knew that the person who wrote it had written it out of kindness. He kept the paper and turned to smile at the boy at the last row, and he said softly, "It's okay. I'm going to get off on the last stop."

He purposely lowered his voice, but because there were no other people on the bus, it was very quiet, and his voice came out much louder than he expected. When the words 'last stop' left his lips, the bus suddenly turned. Gu Feiyu glanced at the driver's seat, and he realized that the driver was actually watching him through the rear-view mirror.

The driver was wearing the uniform from Jiujiang's public transport company. The jacket looked old, and his Adam's apple jumped up and down. His face was filled with sweat—he looked nervous and scared. He had both hands on the steering wheel. Like the student, the driver quickly moved his gaze away.

What is he afraid of?

Xiao Gu was confused. The way the driver looked at him was weird, like he was trying to tell him something.

The rain turned heavier. It was two different worlds inside and outside the bus. Xiao Gu lost his desire to sleep and turned to silently study the other passengers on the bus. The bus flew in the night, and it soon arrived at the next station. The bus entered the station, and when it was safely stopped, the electronic voice said, “Ding! We’ve arrived at Central Hospital. Departing customers, please make sure that you have all of your belongings with you, and please alight from the back door.”

Both front and back doors opened at the same time, and the rain outside dripped into the bus. Soon, a middle-aged man with a red thread around his wrist stepped onto the bus. He was wearing a white coat, so he was probably a doctor at Central Hospital.

The doctor rummaged through his pocket for a long time to look for change, but he could not find it. The driver saw that it was raining, so he waved for the man to get in first, and he could look for the change at his seat.

The front door closed, and the doctor walked onto the bus, holding the rails. When he passed Xiao Gu, he paused and turned to look at him. Sitting in his seat, Xiao Gu raised his head to look at the doctor. He realized that the doctor had a strange look. His brows were thick, and when he looked at people, his eyes would bulge like they were going to fall out.

“Hello...” Xiao Gu felt awkward, being stared by the doctor. He stood up and prepared to leave at the next stop.

Seeing Xiao Gu stand up, the doctor moved backward and smiled apologetically at Xiao Gu. He sat on the seat on the other side of Xiao Gu. The bus was dark, and Xiao Gu believed that he had seen that the doctor’s mouth had no teeth when he smiled earlier. He held the paper in his pocket and did not stay long at his seat. He moved to the backdoor directly.

Maybe I should just call for a taxi.

Holding the rail, Xiao Gu moved to the door, and when he arrived, his body froze, and his face filled with disbelief.

Standing at the bus stop was a woman in a red raincoat. The woman had her head lowered, and her wet hair stuck together to block her face.

The same woman from before? Why is she here? This isn't the same stop, right?

Gu Feiyu was stunned when the cold voice began again. "The vehicle will start soon. Please take your seat. Welcome to the driverless bus for Route 104. Dear passenger, please move closer to the backdoor. Our next stop is Hong Si Restaurant."

The backdoor slowly closed, and Xiao Gu snapped back to reality. Why would the woman in the raincoat appear at the station near Central Hospital? And she was closer to the door compared to before! Is she following me?

With sweat sliding down his face, Xiao Gu's expression was no different from the driver's earlier. He held the railing tightly and did not return to his seat instantly.

"Are... you feeling okay?" A chilling voice suddenly came from behind him—the doctor was staring at Xiao Gu.

"I'm fine." Xiao Gu went back to his seat, and he lowered his voice to ask, "Sir, did you see a woman in a red raincoat standing near the backdoor at the stop earlier?"

"Red raincoat?" The doctor shook his head. "I don't think so."

"Impossible." Xiao Gu turned to ask the student at the last row. "Did you see that woman earlier? She was standing at the bus stop!"

The student ignored Xiao Gu. He did not even turn his head to him. He kept his face on the rain outside the window, but his hands kept moving inside his bag like he was looking for something.

He pulled the bag half open, and the student looked very nervous. His hand held something, but he did not pull it out of the bag.

A fruit knife?

...

Xiao Gu saw something reflective from the opening, but it was unclear whether it was a mirror or a knife. The bus started moving, and Xiao Gu went back to his seat. His eyelid kept twitching—he was feeling anxious. The rain outside continued to pour, and it was so heavy that he was unable to see the buildings that lined the road. Inside the bus, it was so quiet. No one spoke; it was a strange atmosphere.

Every one of the passengers is acting weirdly.

Xiao Gu leaned his body against the car window. The doctor that was across the aisle from him kept glancing his way with an unreadable smile on his face. It felt like he had found an interesting piece of art.

Taking out his phone, Xiao Gu activated the camera and chose the selfie setting. He raised the phone and glanced at the student at the last row using the camera. The boy seemed to suffer from carsickness. He placed the bag on his knees, and his face turned paler by the minute. Sweat kept forming on his forehead, but he never once took his hand out from his bag.

Is he not feeling well?

Xiao Gu was worried about the boy. However, before he stood up, the student realized that Xiao Gu had been watching him from the camera. The boy seemed like he did not want to be on camera. He used his hands to cover his face, silently used his finger to point at the doctor in the white coat next to Xiao Gu, and waved his hand back and forth.

Is he hinting at something? The doctor is dangerous?

After that small gesture, the student lowered his head to hug the bag.

Xiao Gu put down his phone and studied the doctor from the corner of his eyes. Suddenly, he was reminded of a new article that he had read getting on the bus—"Latest update on the cadaver theft cases at Central Hospital. The surveillance caught some possible suspects and has already denied the possibility of an inside job."

Opening the link, the article attached a very blurry picture—it was believed to be the picture taken by the hospital surveillance. A man in white coat was crawling rapidly on the ground before disappearing into the morgue.

"White coat?" Xiao Gu enlarged the photo. The light was weak inside the bus. He focused on the picture. "The face is too blurry, but the frame is very similar."

Suddenly, a phone rang. Xiao Gu, who was extremely focused, jumped in his seat. He put his phone away and raised his head. The ringtone came from the purse of the woman in the professional dress. She took out the phone and glanced at the caller ID—her face dropped.

As she answered the call, an anxious male voice came from the other side. "Huang Ling, where are you? Are you still working? The lights at your office have all gone off already."

"I've already left. Where were you? You said you were going to come to pick up, but I didn't see you even though I waited for half an hour!" Huang Ling did not have it good either. It was raining, and she had worked until so late. She had waited so long for the man, but he did not arrive.

"You've already left? How come I didn't see you?"

"Stop pretending, this is not the first time you've been late. You never commit to the promises that you've made—I've had enough!"

"I know I was bad before, but I swear, this time, I wasn't late. I waited at the door to your company at 6 pm and saw the lights at your building go off one by one, but I didn't even see you." The voice on the phone became hurried. "Where are you now? I hear something is wrong with your voice. Is it because that old hound is making things hard for you again?"

"He did not do something like that. I just feel very tired." Huang Ling slowed down. She looked at the city covered in rain outside the window. “Jia Ming, I’m not afraid of working hard with you, but you have to at least work together with me. I’m almost thirty, and I don’t want to work until 8 pm every day and then take the last bus with three or four people and return to your rented room to make dinner for you.”

“Xiao Ling, I’ve found the way to make money. We’ve both moved from our old home to Jiujiang and have survived so many years. Please give me some more time.”

Huang Ling took at the rain outside the window, and her eyes were dull. “If you say so.”

“Where are you now? I’ll go pick you up...” Before the man finished, Huang Ling ended the call and shoved her phone inside her bag.

It’s not easy for couples these days... Xiao Gu sighed internally. When he saw Huang Ling earlier, since she dressed so fashionably, he assumed that the woman was rich. Upon closer inspection, he realized that her attire was mostly fake, and she looked so pretty because she herself was pretty.

“Ding! We’ve arrived at Hong Si Restaurant. Departing customers, please make sure that you have all of your belongings with you, and please alight from the back door.”

The bus had arrived at its next destination, and both doors opened. This time, no one got on the bus. Xiao Gu glanced outside at the bus station. The mad woman in the red raincoat was really standing at the bus stop, and she seemed to have moved even closer to the bus.

This is really something else.

Xiao Gu was panicking. He sat close to the back door. If the woman got on, she would see him first.

Don’t tell me she’ll follow me home? If she appears at every stop, then won’t she be waiting for me at the last stop?

The doors closed. Suddenly, there was a child’s coughing coming from the middle of the bus. It was the middle-aged woman holding the child. She patted the child’s back lightly, but it was to no avail. If anything, it only made the child cough harder.

“Sounds like he has a fever. Do you even know how to take care of a child? The difference in temperature from day to night is so big, but you only give him a thin shirt to wear?" Huang Ling heard the coughing, and she got annoyed.

"I'm just helping my relative look after his child..." The middle-aged woman's voice was coarse—she sounded like a man. She forced a smile. She did not feed the child water or medicine. Instead, she just kept patting his back. The child coughed harder, and his body was shivering.

"I think you should bring him to the hospital." Xiao Gu stood up and removed his own jacket to pass it to the woman. "Use this to wrap around the child first."

"Okay." The woman hesitated before accepting the jacket. Even with the jacket, the child kept coughing. Xiao Gu held his phone and the change that he had taken from the jacket's pocket and went back to his seat.

The door closed, and just as he was about to reach his seat, there was a sound coming from the backdoor. A thin person slapped her hand against the door.

"The vehicle will start soon. Please take your seat. Welcome to the driverless bus for Route 104. Dear passenger, please move closer to the backdoor. Our next stop is Li Wan Mall."

The bus started, and the hand soon disappeared.

Xiao Gu went back to his seat. He turned to look at the stop, and the red shadow was turning blurry.

Can the other passengers really not see the woman in the raincoat?

“Have you seen my child?” a voice said in Xiao Gu’s ear. Within his view, the woman from afar turned her head like she was looking into his eyes. Shivering, Xiao Gu involuntarily staggered backward.

“Are you okay?” The doctor stood up and very kindly went to hold Xiao Gu. There was a weird smell on the man.

...

“I’m fine, thank you.” Xiao Gu turned back to look. Because he was so close, he realized that the doctor wore nothing under his white coat. Xiao Gu’s expression changed, and he quickly introduced some distance between him and the doctor.

“Good, good.” The doctor maintained the smile on his face. He stood next to Xiao Gu for a while before returning to his seat. Forcing a smile, Xiao Gu hugged his arms, which were covered with goosebumps. “The man is a pervert. Just what kind of person I’ve met tonight?”

Xiao Gu wanted to leave, but once he remembered the woman with the red raincoat waiting for him, he started to have second thoughts. Between the pervert and a ghost, he thought about it and felt like it was safer to stay in the bus. Even though the passengers were weird, at least they were human.

Along the way, Huang Ling’s phone rang several more times. The man on the phone kept asking where she was even though Huang Ling had told him many times already. Whenever her phone rang, it was the man asking for her location. This repeated several times until Huang Ling thought that the man was toying with her, so she switched off her phone directly.

“You’ve failed so many of the promises that you’ve given, now do you finally regret it?” Huang Ling seemed to have many things in her heart. Through the conversation, Xiao Gu had a brief idea of Huang Ling’s situation. Her husband was not working. On the surface, he told others he was a freelancer, but in reality, it was Huang Ling who held up the whole family on her own.

After the phone got switched off, the bus became quiet again except for the occasional cough from the child. The rain flooded the city. The bus raced down Route 104—no one had any idea where its final destination would be.

The bus is supposed to drive around the city, but how come it feels like we're leaving the city? There are no people around, and the surroundings look so deserted.

The lights in the buildings outside were off, and the place felt strange.

Several minutes later, the bus arrived at Li Wan Mall, and the doors opened. Xiao Gu leaned against the glass to look. The woman in the red raincoat was standing right at the edge of the station, looking at the bus silently.

At the next stop, she'll be showing up at the door. Should I wait until she gets on first before I get off?

Xiao Gu was coming up with an escape when an argument came from the other side of the bus stop. They were being very loud. The woman's voice was shrill, and the man was not holding back; it felt like they were going to get physical.

Turning to look, Xiao Gu saw a man and a woman hugging each other tightly but caught in the middle of a big argument. The man wanted to get on the bus, but the woman tried her best to make him stay. She scratched, pawed, and screamed, basically going anything she could to make him stay.

What is up with them? Xiao Gu pulled his head back. Already in such a big argument, why are they still stuck together? They can't tear themselves apart from each other?

The bus stopped for a full minute. With the woman's madness, the man failed to get on the bus. The bus moved away from the bus stop slowly.

"The rain has been falling for an hour already, but the two's clothes were dry. Looks like they have been arguing here for a long time already." Xiao Gu turned to look back at the stop. The arguing couple had already disappeared—only the red shadow was left.

“Where did they go?” He stood up to take a better look. He wanted to open the window, but he was unable to get it to open. The lock seemed to be broken.

This is too weird. Xiao Gu was getting more and more uneasy. Could that couple be ghosts, too? But they acted so normally...

Holding the phone, Xiao Gu looked down, and he was reminded of the articles that he had read earlier.

Li Wan Mall? Something happened here too! Xiao Gu looked through his phone and found the news about the couple committing self-immolation at Li Wan Mall. The picture attached had blurred out their faces, but the couple hugged each other tightly in the fire like they did not want to be separated even after death.

Isn't this too much of a coincidence? The doctor and couple are the same as the news—are they all ghosts? Do ghosts also need to take the bus?

Xiao Gu glanced at the doctor across from him. The man in the white coat kept his eyes glued on Huang Ling like he was having some dirty thoughts in his mind.

Nah, this man is probably just a pervert, not a ghost.

The bus continued to move forward. No one got on the bus, but Xiao Gu noticed something weird. The bus would stop for a full minute at every stop. Xiao Gu intended to leave several times, but his courage would disappear whenever he saw the woman at the station. The situation was different from what he thought. The woman got closer and closer to the bus, but she did not look like she was getting on. She only stood at the backdoor like she was waiting for someone.

Why is she so hung up on this bus?

The more Xiao Gu thought about it, the more afraid he became. In the end, he took out his phone and searched for Chen Ge's number.

Directly calling Brother Chen might not be a good idea. If I'm really haunted, then I'll only drag Brother Chen down with me.

Xiao Gu hesitated. In the end, he decided to message Chen Ge. He wrote down everything that happened that night, and after confirming he did not leave anything out, he sent it to Chen Ge.

While he was writing the message, the bus stopped at its next station

—Eastern Jiujiang's Dam.

The bus stopped, and there were footsteps coming from the platform. Three soaking wet men got on the bus. They had their heads lowered, and their clothes were dripping wet. They were silent and shuffled onto the bus without paying the fare. The driver pretended to not see the three, but from the sweat that trailed down to his chin, it was clear that he was very nervous.

After the three got on, they sat around Xiao Gu. One of them even sat next to him. A smell of decay drifted into his nostril, and Xiao Gu leaned closer to the window. Since they were so close, Xiao Gu could see that the three looked like they had just been hauled out of the water. Their skin was pale and wrinkled.

Xiao Gu did not dare to look any closer. He took out his phone to send the message to Chen Ge. The bus started again. Probably because they had entered the countryside, the bus wiggled. Slowly, they left the dam and officially entered Eastern Jiujiang.

Water dripped from the men's bodies. The eyes of the three men slowly pushed out from their sockets. Their bodies swayed along with the bus. and they slowly leaned toward Xiao Gu.

After the bus left the station, Xiao Gu's phone vibrated. It was Chen Ge's reply. "Can you call me now? It's very important!"

The boss has replied! Xiao Gu's heart felt a lot better reading the short message on his phone. He took out the earbud from his pocket, connected it to his phone, and called Chen Ge. It was picked up after one ring, and Chen Ge's voice came through.

"Don't talk and starting from this moment on, just follow my instructions."

...

"Okay." Xiao Gu leaned against the window and used his arm to block the view of the earbud line. His body swayed along with the bus.

"I've seen the message you sent me. Whether you believe me or not, I have to tell you something." Chen Ge kept his voice calm and steady. "Before I tell you that, I want you to be ready—do not visibly react. If you're ready, then send me a message."

"Okay, boss. Tell me." Xiao Gu sent the message and took in a deep breath. He was still feeling afraid.

"I just investigated the bus that you're on. The bus ran into three accidents within one month, and the latest accident happened last night. When the bus passed Eastern Jiujiang Fresh Water Plant, it ran into an accident. It skidded and almost went into Bai Long Lake. Because of that, the people on top gave an emergency order to temporarily change the Route 104, and the bus is not going to Eastern Jiujiang anymore."

"Not going to Eastern Jiujiang?" Xiao Gu could not help himself and ask, "Then what about this bus that I'm currently on?"

"Route 104 has not long changed its route. The last bus at 9 pm has also been ordered to stop. So, the bus that you're currently on is probably not the real bus but a hearse specifically for dead people." Chen Ge used a flat tone to describe something really scary. Resisting his urge to shiver, sweat poured out of Xiao Gu's forehead. He did not dare turn his neck to look at the other passengers. His hands gripped the phone tightly like it was his only hope.

“What... what should I do now?” Xiao Gu wanted to write a message, but his fingers kept shuddering. Chen Ge had once saved his life, so he trusted Chen Ge unconditionally. However, it was also because of that he knew that Chen Ge had no reason to lie to him.

“Calm down, you have to calm down at a time like this.” There was no additional emotion in Chen Ge’s voice. “Do not speak in case the other passengers hear you. Use written messages to communicate with me. How far are you from the next stop?”

“The next stop will be Eastern Jiujiang Fresh Water Plant. The distance between stops is rather far since we’re at the countryside. I suppose it’ll take another seven to eight minutes before it arrives.” Xiao Gu used his frozen fingers to type this reply.

“That water plant is the place where the bus came into the accident. That stop will be your last chance. You have six minutes to prepare. Tell me how far you are from the backdoor, and how many passengers are in your way?”

“My seat is close to the backdoor, but there is a drenched passenger sitting next to me.” Xiao Gu glanced next to him silently. The man with his head lowered had his body leaning toward Xiao Gu. His whole body was dripping, and there seemed to be a dirty spot around his shirt pocket that was not cleaned.

“Since you’re close to the backdoor, you shouldn’t worry that much. Once the bus stops, you have to try your best to escape from the backdoor.”

“Don’t need to worry? But I still think I’m in a dangerous situation.” Xiao Gu hugged the phone and sent another message to Chen Ge after some thought. “Boss, there’s a woman wearing a red raincoat, and she’s been waiting at every stop! It’s real! I’m not lying! I suspect the woman is not a human.”

Xiao Gu took in a deep breath and found the courage to admit that possibility. At Fang Hwa Apartments, he had seen a ghost once, but that memory was buried deep inside his heart. He kept lying to himself, but what had happened that night revived that memory again.

“Boss, at least my safety is somewhat guaranteed on the bus. Once I leave, I'll need to face her alone, face the ghost in red raincoat alone." Xiao Gu's palms were filled with sweat. He did not have much time left.

"I understand your thoughts—there is only one ghost outside the bus, but there are probably still humans on the bus. So, in terms of bigger picture, it might be safer on the bus."

"Yes, that's my current situation. I'm trapped." Xiao Gu felt like crying. He just wanted to go home, but who would have thought this might happen to him?

"You're not trapped—you just haven't looked at it objectively enough." Chen Ge used the fastest speed to help Xiao Gu analyze the situation. "From your earlier message, it is observable that the female ghost on the platform wasn't after you. She just kept asking if you have seen her child. This proves that at least for now she is not going to harm you; she just wants to find her child."

"That's right."

"Have you wondered where her child could be, and why she kept standing at the bus stops?"

Xiao Gu seriously had not considered that. Who would really put themselves in a ghost's shoes? Furthermore, he was scared out of his mind seeing that ghost—where would he have time to think about these things?

"The woman in the red raincoat has been following this bus on Route 104. This means that her child is probably on the bus." Chen Ge tried to rationalize it the best he could. "The red raincoat cannot get on the bus for some reason, but you are on the bus—that could be the key to solving this issue!"

"The woman's child is on the bus..." Xiao Gu looked at the middle-aged woman. She did not seem to care about the livelihood of the boy in her embrace. He could be suffering from a high fever or coughing fit, but she just kept on patting his back with impatience on her face.

"Boss, I think I know where the raincoat's child is."

"Don't broadcast that knowledge. When the bus reaches the station, grab the child, and leave the bus with him! If you can fulfil the woman's wish, I'm sure she will not harm you."

“But she is a ghost—will she let me go even if I help her? She is a ghost, not a living human!” The more Xiao Gu thought about it, the more scared he became.

“It was humans who killed them, so why do you have such deep prejudice against ghosts?” Chen Ge kept his tone light. “Just follow my instructions—this is the only way you can save yourself. Remember, do not stay on the bus for too long!”

“Understood.” Xiao Gu’s heart raced uncontrollably. He was getting more nervous.

“There is more than one ghost on the bus. Perhaps other than yourself, all the other passengers are ghosts. When you leave the bus, you have to be resolute—do not let them hold you back, other than that...” Chen Ge paused. “After you get off the bus, do not give the child over to the red raincoat immediately. Watch her reaction first before you come to a decision.”

Chapter 491: They Are All Ghosts!

Xiao Gu listened to Chen Ge's words on the phone, and he was confused. Why was his boss so familiar with ghosts? He was not only not afraid of them, and he even taught him how to acquire the ghost's affection, each sentence shining with intelligence and experience.

Xiao Gu was curious but not suspicious. It never crossed his mind that Chen Ge would harm him. To him, Chen Ge was a very unique presence. This boss that looked so normal had saved him from the brink of death twice.

...

The first time, he had been drugged by the mad woman and was about to cut into two. At the time, it had been Chen Ge who saved him from the mad woman. The second time had been at Fang Hwa Apartments again. He had entered the third building and realized that a faceless white shadow had been following him. He had fainted, and after he woke up, the police had said that it was Chen Ge who saved him.

This is already the third time.

Xiao Gu put the phone back into his pocket. He suddenly realized how dangerous his life was, and only by sticking to Chen Ge would his life be safe. He did not end the call. Xiao Gu wore the earbuds and leaned against the bus window. He memorized every instruction that Chen Ge gave. The rain fell harder. It was completely dark outside the window—he could not even see the road. Xiao Gu counted the time silently. He confirmed the child's location and prepared to run at the first's notice.

Five minutes later, the bus slowed down. Xiao Gu's calves tensed, and he spoke very softly. "We're almost to the stop."

"After the door opens, do not hesitate and move immediately. Do not give the middle-aged woman any chance to react," Chen Ge said on the phone.

“Okay.” Through the window, the shape of the bus stop could be seen. The red shadow was still standing there. The bus stop at the countryside was not equipped with a roof. The woman in red raincoat stood in the rain all alone; she looked so obvious in the rain. The bus slowed down, and suddenly, a phone rang.

Huang Ling, who sat at the front, opened her phone. Her husband had called her again. Perhaps she was feeling better as she did not end the call directly but answered it.

“Huang Ling! Get off from the bus now!” A man’s yell came from the phone. Huang Ling ended the call before the shouting continued.

Honestly, she was quite spooked. “Has he lost his mind?”

The call had just ended when the ringtone began again. It was still her husband. Huang Ling lowered the volume to its minimum. She looked around apologetically and realized that all the passengers were staring at her. The many faces carried varied expression. They looked at her with half-smiles, and she was creeped out by it.

“I’m really sorry...” The phone in Huang Ling’s palm kept vibrating.

“Why don’t you answer the phone?” The old lady who sat behind the driver spoke for the first time. The layers of wrinkles were thick on her face, and her eyes were covered by a layer of white film. When Xiao Gu first got on the bus, the old lady had not looked like that, and he had no idea when the change had happened. The old lady looked scary. Huang Ling held the phone and could not understand what the old lady was trying to say, so she apologized profusely.

“I think you should answer his phone. The more you don’t answer it, the more he is going to be worried about you,” the man in the white coat commented darkly. His eyes moved between Huang Ling and Xiao Gu. The red thread around his wrist had disappeared, and in its place was a brownish-red wound.

Huang Ling ignored the doctor. The child behind her started to cough again. The middle-aged lady’s patience was wearing thin. Her already ugly face twisted, and the features tilted to the side. She glared at the child fiendishly like she was planning to kill him. The atmosphere in the bus became tense.

At that time, the robotic voice on the audio said, “Ding! We’ve arrived at Eastern Jiujiang Fresh Water Plant. Departing customers, please make sure that you have all of your belongings with you, and please alight from the back door.”

The bus pulled up at the stop, and the doors slowly opened. When the bus stopped, Xiao Gu stood up. He brushed past the passenger next to him and walked down the aisle. Following Chen Ge’s earlier instructions, he headed directly for the middle-aged woman. Xiao Gu stopped next to her. “I want to take something, do you mind returning me my coat?”

When the child was coughing earlier, Xiao Gu had lent the woman his jacket. The middle-aged woman was in a bad mood. She lifted her head to glare at Xiao Gu. With one hand holding the child, her other hand went to grab the jacket. Xiao Gu’s Adam apple quivered, and he slowly raised his hands.

At the same time, Huang Ling’s phone-started to vibrate again. Her husband seemed to have lost his mind, and he kept calling her like there was really something urgent. The jacket was slowly removed from the child. The middle-aged woman held the child with her right hand and handed the jacket back to Xiao Gu with her left hand.

Everything was going according to plan, and Xiao Gu’s heart rose to his throat. He saw the approaching jacket and kept his eyes glued to the woman’s other arm. His legs moved, and Xiao Gu’s body leaned forward. He also raised his arm. Time seemed to have slowed down. As Xiao Gu’s fingers were about to touch the cloth, Huang Ling answered the call again. “If you have something to say, leave it at home, don’t...”

“Get off! The bus that you’re on is filled with ghosts! They are all ghosts!”

All the passengers heard the voice on the phone clearly. It was too late for Huang Ling to turn off the phone.

“Ghost?” She did not expect her husband would say that. She turned back to look, and many expressionless faces looked at her. The bus shuddered, and the driver was filled with terror. He seemed to be seeing how he died, and he kept his eyes on the road as sweat dripped down his face.

The middle-aged woman who held the child had her facial features tilting even more. Her body grew larger like a balloon.

The passenger who had been sitting next to Xiao Gu earlier started to vomit. He reached his finger into his throat, and balls of weeds fell out of his lips like hairballs.

“How can we be ghosts? We’re all alive, aren’t we?” The old lady who sat at the front turned around to speak. The thick glaucoma covered her pupils that her eyes appeared fully white. All the passengers had changed. Chen Ge heard these things on the other end of the phone, and he told Xiao Gu to leave immediately. “Run!”

Xiao Gu’s arms that went to the jacket increased in speed. He reached past the jacket to grab the child. As his fingers touched the child, he realized that the child’s body was surprisingly cold and lifeless.

“This...” In that split second, the middle-aged woman saw through Xiao Gu’s plan.

“You want to steal my child?” The woman’s chubby hands reached for Xiao Gu, and her face turned incredibly ugly.

The woman's face kept expanding within Xiao Gu's eyes. He had never seen such a twisted face before, and his mind was blank from fear.

"Get off the bus!" At the crucial moment, Chen Ge's voice in the phone reminded Xiao Gu. The brain regained control of the body. With the reaction power trained at the Haunted House, Xiao Gu successfully evaded the middle-aged woman's hand. He missed the dead child, his fingertips just barely had time to grab his own jacket.

...

"Just run as fast as you can!" Holding the jacket, Xiao Gu pulled it out. When he turned back to look, the woman called Huang Ling was still seated where she was. The phone in the woman's palm kept eliciting her husband's scream, but the woman herself seemed to be stunned. She did not even shout or make a noise.

"That should be a living human as well." The bus shook. Inside the crowded bus, some area started to leak. The three monsters with their heads lowered stood up from their seats. Their mouths regurgitated more hair, and their eyes rolled backward. Their arms shook like they were in some sort of spasm as they tried to grab at Xiao Gu.

It was too late to rush to the backdoor. Xiao Gu decided to make a bet and change his escape route. He jumped to the front door, and when he passed Huang Ling, he grabbed the woman's wrist without hesitation. "Come with me!"

The doors started to close, and the terror-filled driver had his eyes glued to the road. His feet stepped on the gas pedal. He seemed to see something horrifying, and his body reacted on instinct. The bus swayed even harder. At the last minute before the door closer, Xiao Gu dragged Huang Ling out from the front door of bus on Route 104.

The two collapsed in a pile of mud, and the heavy rain instantly drenched both of their bodies. Beside them, the bus whose doors were now completely closed suddenly sped up.

On this stretch of road, only one street light was still on, so it was hard to see the road in the darkness. The bus sped forward and soon disappeared into the night. "It did not turn, but I remember there's a river not that far ahead."

Xiao Gu did not have the time to help Huang Ling next to him before Chen Ge's voice came through the phone. "Xiao Gu, are you alright?"

Hearing that, Xiao Gu's heart was filled with warmth, "I injured myself a little bit, but I got off the bus."

After saying that, Xiao Gu was about to stand up when he felt the hair stand up on the back of his neck. He turned back to look and saw the rain was trailing down the head of black hair before it fell on the back of his neck. Slowly raising his head, Xiao Gu looked at the woman in the red raincoat standing behind him, and the edge of his eyes twitched. "Boss, what should I do now?"

"Have you seen my child?" A pair of woman hands gripped Xiao Gu's shoulders. The large Xiao Gu was thus picked up from the ground by the pair of thin hands. The hair fell, and the woman's eyes that were filled with blood looked at Xiao Gu through the gap in the curtain of hair. She seemed to have started losing her rationality since she sensed her child's presence on Xiao Gu.

"Have you seen my child?"

"You must have seen my child!"

Her lips fell open, and the curtain of hair parted. It was then that Xiao Gu saw that the woman's lips were sealed together by threads! As she screamed, her lips cracked, and the threads snapped one by one!

Pain came from his shoulders. Xiao Gu was scared dumb. The scene before him was way beyond the threshold for a normal person. If he had not received the special training from Chen Ge, he would have already fainted.

The woman's body kept changing. The sound of joints cracking issued from underneath the raincoat as her body kept growing. The color of the raincoat deepened like it was slowly being dyed by blood.

"Xiao Gu? Gu Feiyu! Hang in there! Try to communicate with her! She is looking for her child! Haven't you seen her child on the bus? Tell her that! Tell her all that!" Chen Ge screamed.

Hearing the voice on the phone, Xiao Gu's wandering gaze started to focus. With quivering lips, he uttered, "I... I saw your child. He was on that bus. He was being held by a middle-aged woman..."

"Stick to the main point!" Chen Ge was being nervous for the man. "You have to let her know that you tried your best to help her! Stress the fact that you did try to save her child, and you almost lost your life because of it!"

Xiao Gu nodded quickly, but he did not dare look at the woman before him. His eyes kept moving away, and he uttered through chattering teeth, "I did try to save your child... I was so close."

The pain on his shoulders grew. Xiao Gu felt like his shoulders were about to be shattered. He groaned in pain and his arms fell away weakly. The jacket that he had once lent to the child slipped from his fingers.

Just as the jacket was about to fall into the mud, the woman suddenly released her hand to reach for Xiao Gu's jacket. Without the grip from the woman, Xiao Gu collapsed to the ground. With his life intact, Xiao Gu staggered backward, trying to get as far away from the woman as he could.

This impossible! The method taught by the boss really did work!

With shivering body, Xiao Gu only stopped when he was next to Huang Ling.

The woman in the red raincoat held Xiao Gu's jacket like she was holding her precious child. Seeing this, the hair on Xiao Gu's body all froze and stood up.

"Xiao Gu? Are you still alive?"

"Boss, she seems to have forgiven me!" Xiao Gu climbed up from the mud. His legs were shaking. "Should I just run home now?"

"Do you want to be haunted by her forever?" Just a sentence from Chen Ge turned Xiao Gu's face green.

"Then what shall I do now, boss? I'm really afraid." Xiao Gu saw the woman in red raincoat caress the jacket he had worn softly and lovingly, and his heart was chilled.

"Don't be afraid, remain calm." Chen Ge seemed to be thinking. After a while, he told Xiao Gu, “Let’s see... give her your phone and let me talk to her.”

“Give her my phone?” Xiao Gu was surprised.

“Just follow my instructions.”

Under the curious gaze of both Huang Ling and the raincoat woman, Xiao Gu removed the earbuds with shivering hands and walked to the raincoat woman with the phone and raised his hand. “My boss has something to tell you.”

His eyes twitching, Xiao Gu’s arm that held the phone was shaking violently. The woman stopped her movement and tilted her head to look at Xiao Gu. Her cracked lips had not recovered, the threads mixed together with her hair.

“My boss... boss said he wants to talk to you.”

The woman in the raincoat held the jacket and stood where she was. Xiao Gu took a deep breath and another step forward. He gathered his courage and placed the phone next to the woman’s ears. “Boss, I’ve turned on the speaker phone. You can speak now.”

There was a child’s crying coming from the phone, but it soon returned to normal, and finally, Chen Ge’s voice came through.

“I’m the leader of the ghost stories society, Chen Ge. I can help you find your missing child! If I fail to do that within one week, you can come to claim my life any time you want. In return, I only have one request—please let my employee go.”

Chapter 493 - Children

Chapter 493: Children

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

With the phone on speaker mode, Xiao Gu heard Chen Ge's words clearly. When he heard Chen Ge request that the ghost spare him, his hands tightened.

He had always felt that he was an unlucky person. No matter where he went, he had been a trouble to others—it was that way at Fang Hwa Apartments, and that had not changed when he moved to the Haunted House. However, even so, his boss had not once complained about him. In fact, he said something like that at the crucial moment.

...

The rain was falling heavily, but his heart was warm. He felt like he had found a home at Jiujiang.

The woman in the raincoat heard Chen Ge as well. She stood in the rain, and her body slowly returned to normal. The rain slid down her blood red raincoat. After a long time, the woman turned her head to face the phone. She leaned close to the speaker and asked, "Have you seen my child?"

"I'll let you reunite with your child within one week," Chen Ge promised. The woman did not say anything else. She slowly lowered her head and left Eastern Jiujiang Fresh Water Plant with Xiao Gu's jacket. It seemed like she was heading to the next stop. Seeing the woman's disappearance, Xiao Gu slid down to the muddy ground like all his energy left him.

"Boss, she left! I'm saved!" Xiao Gu's voice was shaking since he had just survived an impossible ordeal.

"Stay where you are and find a place to hide from the rain. I'll fetch you in a bit. Also, make sure your phone is charged and set my number to speed dial."

"Okay."

“Talk to you later. Remember, we have to complete the thing that we promised.”

After hanging up, Xiao Gu did what he was told. Once he had done everything, he put the phone away and walked to the other unlucky passenger, Huang Ling.

“It’s fine now.” He reached out toward Huang Ling. The woman who was spooked took a long time before she grabbed Xiao Gu’s hand and climbed up from the ground.

“Earlier... what was that?” Huang Ling did not even know what to say. Her eyes were filled with terror. She had a hard time believing that just two hours ago, she was being scolded at the company, and then she got on a bus filled with dead spirit to come to the countryside.

“I also can’t tell. Let’s wait for my boss—he’ll explain it to you.” Xiao Gu led Huang Ling to the water plant and found an awning to hide from the rain. Huang Ling’s clothes were drenched, and her make-up was ruined. However, she did not care about all that. She grabbed her phone and kept calling one number, but there was no answer.

“Are you calling your husband?” Xiao Gu heard the conversation between Huang Ling and her husband on the bus. The two were in a huge argument, and Huang Ling had even threatened divorce.

Huang Ling nodded. She felt weirdly uneasy and afraid. This sensation was different from before—it was mixed with uncertainty and pain. “Why isn’t he answering? What is he doing? Answer the phone.”

Xiao Gu looked at Huang Ling, who was breaking down, but he did not say anything.

On the bus earlier, Huang Ling’s husband had kept calling her, asking her where she was and then calling out directly that she was on a bus filled with ghost. Her husband was not on the bus, so how did he know Huang Ling was on a hearse? And how did he know that all the passengers were ghosts?

Huang Ling probably knew the answer herself, so she had been trying so hard to reach her husband. Xiao Gu watched Huang Ling silently—this woman, who was much more mature than he was, leaned against the wall and slowly slid down to the ground. Lightning flashed, and the light reflected in the tears and rain that fell down the woman’s face.

...

After hanging up, Chen Ge stood in the workshop alone. He took out an obsolete phone that operated on large sim card. "Tong Tong, the ghost on the other end earlier was a Red Specter, right?"

After Chen Ge knew that Xiao Gu had run into some accident, he immediately summoned the ghost spirit to follow Xiao Gu's movement. The phone spirit acted strangely. He did not answer Chen Ge's question and picked up the old phone. Several seconds later, Chen Ge received a message from the spirit. It only had two words. "Don't go."

"She's very dangerous? A Red Specter?" Chen Ge felt like the phone spirit did not know much about the power of his ghosts, so he tried to stop him. "Even if it's a Red Specter, it's fine. There's only one of her."

The phone spirit shook his head and sent another message. "I've seen her before. She died in Li Wan City, and it's very dangerous there."

Seeing the message, Chen Ge was reminded that the boy's body had also discovered at one of the buildings at Li Wan City, so the boy seemed to know the small town well.

"Are the ghosts that die in Li Wan City different from other ghosts?" Chen Ge was curious about Li Wan City. Before Doctor Gao committed suicide, his dying request was for Chen Ge to deal with the door that had gotten out of control in Li Wan City. "Is it because of the door that the ghosts are different?"

The phone spirit shook his head. He did not seem like he knew how to describe it. Chen Ge looked at the boy and felt uneasy. "Li Wan City is in Eastern Jiujiang, and the memory that I saw at the tunnel also happened in Eastern Jiujiang."

"At the time, I was still a child, and someone wanted to kill me, but said person failed. The game that Fan Chong was describing this morning, its setting seemed to be Eastern Jiujiang as well, and the main character is a child. Wait a minute, I seem to notice a connection."

"The woman in the raincoat's child also disappeared in Eastern Jiujiang, and the phone spirit was kidnapped at Eastern Jiujiang. In fact, in the picture that Doctor Gao showed me, my parents were also talking to a girl in a red dress in Eastern Jiujiang. How come it feels like everything is related to children?"

The phone vibrated. The phone spirit sent Chen Ge another message. "I cannot say for sure, but you can bring me with you. I'll help you lead the way."

"Okay." Chen Ge pocketed the phone and locked the door. He ran back to the Haunted House in the rain. He packed lightly, grabbed his backpack, put on the raincoat, and left. Chen Ge waited for fifteen minutes before he found a taxi. Even wearing the raincoat, waiting in the rain made his clothes wet. This increased the man's desire to find an affiliated vehicle for his Haunted House.

I need to go fetch Xiao Gu first. Eastern Jiujiang's investigation can be conducted slowly.

Sitting in the taxi, Chen Ge communicated with the phone spirit on his own phone. They headed down Route 104. The rain continued to pour. After they entered the countryside, the number of streetlights dwindled. It felt like they were driving into a blanket of darkness.

The peace in Eastern Jiujiang seems to be an illusion. The situation here is probably much worse than it appears.

Chen Ge had never handled a door that had gotten out of control before. He looked out the window expressionlessly. No one could tell what was on his mind.

Chapter 494: I'm the Child That You've Killed

Sitting inside the taxi, Chen Ge spoke twice on the phone with Xiao Gu. After confirming that the woman in the raincoat had not returned, he sighed in relief. "The main mission tonight is to bring Xiao Gu home safely. I'll deal with Eastern Jiujiang later."

Chen Ge had his own hesitation. Both the taxi driver and Xiao Gu were normal people, and Chen Ge did not want to drag them into this mess. The rain fell on the car window, and it blurred the view. The rainclouds hung low in the sky, and it felt like the sky was falling.

...

"The weather forecast has never been accurate; they said it was going to be a light drizzle, but this rain has been falling for how long already?" The driver was a young man. He looked about the same age as Chen Ge. He focused on driving. Due to the weather, he did not dare lose his focus.

"I'm going to fetch a person, and then we'll take your taxi back. Don't worry, we won't waste your fare." Chen Ge pulled his gaze back.

"I'm not worried about that." The driver did not turn around. "Don't you think the rain tonight is very weird? The further you go into Eastern Jiujiang, the heavier it becomes. The road is almost flooded."

"How is that weird? It's just a heavier rain. You're being too sensitive," Chen Ge joked.

"Sometimes, it's better to believe something than not." The driver pointed at the religious bracelet hanging by the rearview mirror. "I once fetched passenger from Eastern Jiujiang before. The people there are very superstitious and have many rules. Like if there's a newborn in the house, the man has to stomp his feet at the door before entering; if there is a nightmare, they have to turn the pillow around after waking up; if you receive a phone after midnight, do not speak first; if you see some strange vehicle at the site of a traffic accident, do not get too close. Initially, I did not believe these things, but over time, you get convinced.”

The streetlights dimmed. The driver looked through the sweeping wipers and felt nervous. “There is a scary urban legend here. It is easy to get lost if you take the road during heavy rain. You look like you’re heading home, but eventually, you’ll end up at an unfamiliar location.”

“There’s a legend like that?” Chen Ge was interested. Many urban legends had traceable origins, and they could be based on reality instead of being fully fictional.

“Even though there hasn’t been any big news in Eastern Jiujiang, of all the disappearances throughout Jiujiang, twenty percent happened in Eastern Jiujiang. It’s like the place can consume people,” the driver said darkly, and Chen Ge memorized everything that he said.

“Keep your eyes on the road. If we run into anything weird, we’ll call the police directly.”

“Call the police?” The driver was not used to the jump in Chen Ge’s thought. “I guess that could work. I’m just reminding you out of kindness. Don’t come wandering in Eastern Jiujiang alone at night. This place is rather isolated...”

Half way through his sentence, the driver suddenly shut up. He narrowed his eyes to look ahead and then suddenly turned the steering wheel! The taxi turned, and Chen Ge slammed into the door. He did not say anything as he reached into his backpack to activate the recorder. The car slowed down. The driver gasped greedily for air, and his forehead was covered in sweat.

“What happened?”

“There was someone standing in the middle of the road earlier.”

“You probably saw wrongly. It’s raining so heavily, and it’s so dark—who would stand there in the middle of the road?” Chen Ge’s hands searched inside his backpack before curling around something.

“That’s true...” The driver wiped his sweat. He looked to the side, and all he saw was darkness.

“Can you describe the person’s appearance? Was she wearing a red raincoat?”

“It was nothing like that. It was just a shadow... perhaps I really saw wrongly.” The driver scratched his head. He removed the bracelet from the mirror, put it on his wrist, and continued driving.

“Don’t drive so fast. There are many rivers in Eastern Jiujiang. Safety first.” Chen Ge was not afraid of ghosts, but he was afraid that the ghosts might come after the driver. If the taxi skidded on the road, then he would die inside the vehicle. The sound of static echoed in the small space. The rain outside the car seemed to purposely avoid the taxi.

The two reached Eastern Jiujiang Fresh Water Plant safely. Chen Ge told the driver to wait at the entrance. He put on his raincoat, opened the door, and got out. Once he was outside, Chen Ge felt weirdly pressured like something was watching him.

The place felt weirdly familiar, like he had been there before perhaps in the past or in his dream. Standing in the rain, the sound of falling rain started to disappear into the background. Chen Ge frowned slightly as he took out his phone to call Xiao Gu.

The dial tone entered his ear, but there was no answer. The rain poured, but Chen Ge could not hear the sound of rain. All he heard was the dial tone of the phone. He felt isolated from the world. Darkness came from all sides, and all that remained in his sight was the old door leading inside the plant. Moved by the wind, the steel door creaked. From the inside drifted out the laughing and crying of children.

Little footprints appeared on the water puddles. Something came out from the plant. They ran and skipped before surrounding Chen Ge. His body froze, and the memory inside his heart slowly surfaced.

When he was young, Chen Ge’s parents had reminded him multiple times not to come to Eastern Jiujiang, but one of the school trips had brought them to Eastern Jiujiang.

When he was playing next to one of the dams, he had heard someone call his name. With his teacher’s accompaniment, they had walked past the small forest and spotted a blood red house at the end of the road. Many children had been playing around the house. They were crying and laughing. It felt weirdly similar to now.

Looks like many things that happen at Eastern Jiujiang are related to that red house. Could the door in Li Wan City be related to it as well?

The footsteps slowly inched forward. Chen Ge narrowed his eyes. Even with his Yin Yang vision, he could not see them clearly.

The kids seem to have perfectly melded into the environment.

The children's crying and laughing came closer. They hugged his legs and slowly crawled up his body. Chen Ge gripped the hammer. Just as he prepared to summon Xu Yin, the chilling sensation disappeared. The voices of the children escaped. At the same time, a familiar voice came from afar.

"Chen Ge..."

Raising his head, Chen Ge saw a human shape standing inside the plant. He looked as tall as he was.

"Who are you?"

"Me?" The shadow raised his hands to slowly reach into his chest, and then he pulled out yet another child from inside him. The child's face was blurry, and he looked quite similar to a young Chen Ge. His neck was titled like someone had snapped it with pure force.

"I'm the child that you've killed..."

"The child that I've killed?" Chen Ge dragged the hammer and thought for a long time. "But how come I have no recollection at all? Why don't you come closer so that I can take a better look of your face?"

Chapter 495 - Scariest Story in Eastern Jiujiang

Chapter 495: Scariest Story in Eastern Jiujiang

Chen Ge's voice was calm as he seriously questioned the person.

"You've forgotten everything? Then I shall give you a hint." The child with the blurry face reached out to strangle his own neck. "At that time, you tricked me into entering some abandoned tunnel with you. You said that you heard someone calling your name. However, once we entered the tunnel, you stood next to me like this and then suddenly reached out to strangle my neck!"

...

The child's head lolled to the side, and the hands slowly twisted the neck. His face turned purple, and veins popped on his forehead. "Do you remember it now? At the time, your fingers slowly reached into my skin as you increased your force..."

The child's voice echoed in Chen Ge's ears, and some isolated images appeared in his mind. This scene really did appear real. To make things stranger, when he saw the child strangle himself, his body shied back like this was a familiar feeling, like the murderer was really him.

"I've killed someone?" The rain wetted his hair. Chen Ge shook his head. He was reminded of something else. When he conducted the fourth Midnight Mission earlier, he had seen his young self enter a tunnel with an adult. The image before his eyes was familiar but different from what the child said—the victim then was Chen Ge himself. It was not him killing someone but someone trying to kill him!

If he had not done that Nightmare Mission earlier and seen that memory, Chen Ge might not really have believed that he was a murderer, but his conviction would have been shaken.

"Perhaps he is the killer, or else he would not have remembered these things," Chen Ge mumbled to himself. He nudged toward the child, trying to get closer.

Seeing Chen Ge maintain his serenity, the child removed his hands, and his head went back to normal. “Looks like you’ve really forgotten everything.”

Rain slid down the boy’s face and it slowly became clear. The expression on his face was weird. Seeing him, Chen Ge felt like he was looking at himself in a mirror. “It was you who killed me—you killed me with your own hands. I will never forget that feeling, and soon, you’ll experience it as well.”

The child slowly retreated, and the shadow stuffed the boy back into his body, silently standing where he was. Chen Ge was about ten meters away from the shadow. Just as he prepared to move closer, a very pale hand slowly touched him on his shoulder.

The static came from the recorder. Xu Yin had suddenly appeared in red shirt next to Chen Ge. He shook his head, stopping Chen Ge from moving forward.

“Is he that dangerous?” Chen Ge had his own suspicion. As he went to move his leg, someone hugged it. He looked down, and a little boy around the age of three pulled on his leg tightly.

“Men Nan?” After the child had been brought away from the Third Sick Hall, he had never had the chance to return, or perhaps Chen Ge had selectively forgotten about that. So, Men Nan had remained inside the comic.

Stopped by two Red Specters? But the shadow doesn’t look like a Red Specter. He’s just a shadow. Chen Ge stopped moving.

After a while, children’s footprints started to appear around the shadow. The children’s laughing and crying slowly disappeared, and the shadow started to solidify. When the last cry disappeared, the shadow looked at Chen Ge. He was as tall and as big as Chen Ge. In fact, it felt like he was Chen Ge’s shadow.

“It was you who killed me.” The body was that of an adult, but the voice that came from the shadow’s lips was juvenile. It was dark, cold, and filled with resentment. After he said that, he looked past Chen Ge at the space behind Chen Ge before turning to disappear into the rain.

He left, just like that? Chen Ge followed the direction that the black shadow had looked earlier. Under the light of the phone, he could see somewhat his shadow changing into the shape of a girl.

Is he worried about Zhang Ya? It doesn't look like it. He seems to be worried about something else. The sound of the rain returned, and everything returned to normal. The rain washed over the land, and the black shadow had already disappeared.

Two Red Specters stopped me, and even Zhang Ya felt threatened—what was that? Chen Ge only had one concept when dealing with ghost. If it was a Red Specter, run; if it was not, run after them. Now, he had met a third type of ghost, a shadow that claimed that Chen Ge had killed him.

This ghost is rather special. Perhaps the disappearances in Eastern Jiujiang are related to him. The scariest ghost story in Eastern Jiujiang mentioned by the driver is probably him.

The shadow had left, so Chen Ge did not waste time. He called Xiao Gu and ran to the plant. “Xiao Gu, I’m here, where are you?”

“You’re here?” Xiao Gu’s voice was filled with surprise. “Is the person standing still at the door you?”

“Yes, where are you now?”

“We’re coming now!”

The phone hung up, and Xiao Gu and a woman, who were completely drenched, ran out from a bush next to the plant. “Boss!”

Xiao Gu was happy, but the woman was unwilling to follow. She looked at Chen Ge, who held the hammer standing in the rain, and she was feeling nervous. In the middle of nowhere, with the rain pouring, she held her arms to her chest, and her body kept shivering.

“Why is there a woman with you?”

“She was one of the passengers on the bus.” Xiao Gu explained Huang Ling’s situation briefly to Chen Ge.

“There were other living humans other than you on the bus.”

“It was not only me and Sister Huang Ling. There was also a student on the back row. He helped me once on the bus before—he didn’t seem like a bad person.” Xiao Gu felt regret. “I was too far from him when I got off, or else I would have dragged him with me.”

“Those who helped you might not be humans, and those who harm you might not be ghosts.” Chen Ge looked at Huang Ling for a long time before waving his hand. “The taxi is just over there, come on.”

Back at the taxi, Chen Ge realized that the taxi window was covered with children’s muddy footsteps, and the poor driver had already fainted in his seat.

“Don’t worry, he is still breathing. He’s just fainted.” Chen Ge moved the driver to the backseat, and then he stood outside to think. Finally, he turned to Xiao Gu and Huang Ling. “Do either of you know how to drive?”

Xiao Gu shook his head. “Boss, don’t you know how to drive? I remember you drove the park’s van last time.”

“I know how to drive.” Chen Ge paused. “But I don’t have a driver’s license. The taxi is fixed with recording equipment and a camera. If the driver reports it to the police, this will be very hard to explain.”

“Er... how about I drive?” Huang Ling walked to the door and added with hesitation, “I can drive you back, but before that, do you mind coming over to my place? I’m worried about my husband.”

Chapter 496: Not His Calls

Chen Ge nodded and did not reject the offer. "Let's get in the car."

"Thank you." Huang Ling climbed into the driver's seat. "My home is not far from here; we'll reach it in ten minutes."

...

The lights came on, and Huang Ling drove down the road through the rain. Inside the car, no one spoke; everyone had something on their mind. The taxi reached Huang Ling's rental at 1 am. The place was deserted and close to Li Wan City.

"In the past, the city tried to expand Eastern Jiujiang, but for some reason, they stopped. This plot of half-finished buildings is one of the aftereffects, and most of the original tenants have moved away due to traffic and living arrangements." Huang Ling drove the taxi into the residential area. In the large area, none of the lights were on, and it felt like they had entered a ghost town. "A few years ago, when Eastern Jiujiang was expanding, the real estate was so expensive, but now, the place is so deserted because only the few of us who were tricked stayed."

After the conversation, Chen Ge found out more about the woman's past. She and her husband pooled their money together a few years ago to buy a house in Eastern Jiujiang. Initially, they had been happy about nabbing a good place. They only needed to wait for the development to come to Eastern Jiujiang, and the real estate value would rise. However, not long after that, the developer failed to live up to their promise due to a lack of funds and debt.

To buy the house, the couple had expended all of their funds, and they even had some debt. They worked together with other tenants to demand an explanation from the developers, but the appeal was still ongoing. The project had been called to a stop, and the house that they bought was a building that was not safe for living. The couple could only survive on rental. Life was not easy, and during this period, the husband got into an accident. Now it was basically Huang Ling who held up the family alone.

“We’re here.” Huang Ling parked the car, grabbed her bag, and ran upstairs. Chen Ge and Xiao Gu followed behind her. In the building, only the lights on the first floor were usable. The walls were dark, probably from the moisture, and there was a musty smell in the corridor.

“Jia Ming!” Huang Ling arrived at the 4th floor. As she opened the door with the key, she yelled into the room. She was afraid, scared that the thing she was worried about had become reality.

Looking at the panicking Huang Ling, both Chen Ge and Xiao Gu did not speak. From their perspective, since Huang Ling’s husband chose to call at that time and knew that all the other passengers were ghosts, this proved that he was most likely dead and that he himself had turned into a ghost.

Huang Ling’s hands were shaking too much to be able to insert the key into the hole, but suddenly, a man’s voice came from inside the room.

“Why have you only just got home? Where have you been all night? I called your company earlier...” The door was opened from within, and a haggard looking man with a broken leg appeared before them.

“Jia Ming?” Huang Ling was very ecstatic when she saw the middle-aged man. She reached out to hug him, but the man silently but expertly escaped the hug. “You’re all wet. What happened to you?”

“I’ll tell you later. It’s more important that you’re fine. You really gave me quite a scare today.” Huang Ling choked. “I’ll go change first. These two are my saviors. I’ll drive them home later.”

Huang Ling entered the room, and the man blocked the door, showing no sign of inviting Chen Ge or Xiao Gu into the room. Chen Ge and Xiao Gu had a weird impression of the man as well. The man was alive, so how did he communicate with Huang Ling on the phone? And how did he know that the passengers on the bus were all ghosts?

“Your wife ran into some bad people, and it was us who saved her.” Chen Ge glanced inside the room. The room was tidy, and the man was a typical home maker—there was nothing weird about him.

“Hey! What are you looking at?” The man was very alert around Chen Ge.

"I'm sorry, can I borrow your phone? My phone is dead, and I want to call my family to tell them I'm safe," Chen Ge said.

"Then, wait here." The man limped back into the room before coming out with a phone for Chen Ge.

"Thank you." Chen Ge looked through the phone records quickly. The man did call the woman many times, but none of the calls had been picked up. It was not him who made the calls?

Chen Ge pretended to send some messages and then deleted the record before handing the phone back to the man.

Huang Ling had changed. The woman in the casual dress radiated a mature beauty. "Honey, you stay at home. I'll drive them back; this is what I promised them."

"No way!" The man denied it without giving it any thought. "It's already 1 am—I'm worried about you going with them. Tell them to get a taxi on their own; we'll pay for the fare."

"How do you expect us to find a taxi in this rain?" Chen Ge turned to look at Huang Ling. "What do you think?"

Huang Ling hesitated before leaving the room. "Honey, it's complicated. I'll come back and explain it to you later."

"You're not going anywhere tonight! You're going out at 1 am? Have you lost your mind?" The man reached out to grab Huang Ling's shoulder but was blocked by Chen Ge. The man was obviously afraid of Chen Ge, and there was a slight quiver in his voice. "What are you doing?"

Holding his backpack, Chen Ge's eyes narrowed as he stared at the man's face. "I'm a man of my word. I've completed her request, so if she does not complete the part that she promised, then I'm sorry, I might have to do something."

The atmosphere was tense. In the end, it was Xiao Gu and Huang Ling's combined persuasion that made the man scoff and give his consent.

"I'm sorry. My husband is a bit of a worrier. He's always been like that." Huang Ling passed the umbrella and towel to Xiao Gu. "I haven't had the chance to thank you for everything on the bus."

“It’s okay, I understand.” Xiao Gu accepted the towel with a smile and rubbed his face.

“Stop wasting time. We can talk downstairs.” Chen Ge walked downstairs expressionlessly and did not add anything else.

Chen Ge crawled into the taxi. He opened the backpack and took out something. After Huang Ling saw that her husband was fine, her heart had relaxed. Only after losing something would one learn to cherish it. She promised not to fight with her husband again.

The taxi drove into the rain, and Chen Ge, who had been silent, finally opened his lips.

“Huang Ling, did you discover that your husband changed into a different person from a certain point onward?”

The rain fell on the window. When Huang Ling heard Chen Ge, she went silent to think before answering, “I don’t think so. Why would you say that?”

Chen Ge paused before answering slowly.

“I suspect that man from before is not your husband.”

Chapter 497 - Stranger Husband

Chapter 497: Stranger Husband

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Are you kidding? I should know whether he’s my husband or not!” Huang Ling thought Chen Ge was joking.

“I looked through his phone earlier, and he called you seven times.” Chen Ge lowered his head and kept his hand in his bag.

...

“Doesn’t that show that he’s worried about me?” Huang Ling thought that Chen Ge was weird, in more than one respect.

“However, none of the calls were connected. It was a different person who talked to you on the bus.”

“A different person?” Huang Ling turned around to look at Chen Ge from shock. “Impossible!”

“Focus on driving.” Chen Ge pointed at the road and said, “I have no intention of lying to you; I’m just telling you out of kindness. It’s up to you whether to believe me or not.”

After that, Chen Ge went quiet, and the taxi fell silent. Huang Ling’s lips were pressed as she drove. However, her hands that gripped the steering wheel tightened. Several minutes later, Huang Ling stepped on the brake without warning. The taxi stopped in the middle of the rain, and the atmosphere was weird.

Huang Ling looked at the steering wheel for a long time before slowly turning around to look at Chen Ge. “Jia Ming was indeed different from before. Ever since the car accident, he has become a lot quieter, rarely communicates with me, and suffers from insomnia. According to the doctor, he probably suffers from depression.”

“Meaning the change in your husband was instigated by that car accident?” Chen Ge did not look at Huang Ling and kept his head lowered.

“Do you understand what I said? Jia Ming suffers from depression due to that car accident—he fell sick.” Huang Ling held the steering wheel and forced a smile. “Considering how difficult things are for our family, he volunteered to give up the treatment and stopped the medicine after a while. This is because the medicine costs quite a lot, and I am the only one supporting the family. I know that he felt guilty about it, and I can understand these changes happening to him.”

“Think about it closer. Other than feeling down, are there any other weird things that he has done? I mean things that are not related to his illness.” Chen Ge gave a few random examples. “Like you realized he was staring at you in the middle of the night when you woke up, or there was another voice that came out from his lips, or he killed some small animal without you knowing and hid the bodies in the room.”

Huang Ling listened to what Chen Ge said, and she turned to look at Xiao Gu at the back. She was starting to become fearful of Chen Ge. “No, the things that you mentioned did not happen at all.”

“You can look at your own phone records and think about it closely. This thing could be related to your life.” Chen Ge was not that interested in the man at Huang Ling’s home. He was more interested in the person that called Huang Ling on the bus.

“My phone records?” Huang Ling took out her phone to take a look. There were seven calls, but it did not show the call that she had with her husband on the bus.

“You may think that I am lying, but your phone won’t.” Chen Ge looked at rain outside the window. “I ask you to not hide anything from me. The person at your home might already suspect something. The next time you stay in the room with him, he might do something weird.”

Huang Ling held her phone and said after a long time, “After the car accident, Jia Ming became very averse to children and things like toys and dolls.”

“What do you mean?” Chen Ge’s eyes lit up.

“A long time ago, he gave me some stuffed animals. Even though I’m already past the age to enjoy those things, since those were my memory with him, I didn’t throw them away. I put them inside a cupboard and would occasionally take them out to reminisce about old times.

“One day, I realized that one of the dolls had gone missing. Initially, I did not even notice, but a few days later, another doll went missing. I asked Jia Ming, and he said that he did not know anything.

“One month after that, I went home early because I had fever. When I reached home, the door wasn’t locked. I thought that there was a thief, so I shuffled in quietly. I saw that the stove in the kitchen was on, and there was a pot sitting on it like someone was cooking soup.

“A thief wouldn’t have come to someone’s home to cook, so I called Jia Ming’s name several times. No one answered. I went into the kitchen to see what kind of soup he was cooking. However, when I opened the lid, I was shocked.

“There was a tattered doll inside the pot, and the plastic face was bobbing up and down. I quickly turned the fire off, and the door was then pushed open. I saw Jia Ming, who was holding a cleaver, walk in, and he was also holding a large black bag, coming in from outside.

“To this day, I cannot forget that scene. I remember asking why he would he cut up the doll and cook it. He mumbled to me that there was a spirit living inside the door and only that way would chase it away.

“There were many things like this that are related to children and dolls.

“A few months ago, our neighbor had a newborn in the house. It is common for babies to cry in the night, but the child would cry the entire night until morning like there was something scary in the house.

“Whenever the child cried, Jia Ming’s mental state would deteriorate. He kept getting into arguments about it with the neighbor. In the end, it was the neighbor who relented and moved to Western Jiujiang.”

After Huang Ling finished, she put her phone away. “Before this, we did not have a child because we could not afford one, but now, it is because he doesn’t want one.”

“After the accident, your husband became afraid of children and dolls. This doesn’t sound like depression to me.” Chen Ge called Huang Ling to continue trying. “Do you mind telling me what happened on the day of Jia Ming’s accident?”

“Jia Ming’s working place, like mine, is close to where we stayed.

Normally, Jia Ming comes to fetch me on his e-bike, but that day, the client kept me at the company until very late. It was raining heavily that night, just like tonight in fact. I waited for a long time, but Jia Ming did not show up. In the end, it was the police who called, telling me that Jia Ming had gotten in an accident.

“According to the video, he ran into the bus on Route 104 when he was crossing the street. From the video, it looked like he could not see the bus at all. He kept his gaze fixed in a certain direction as he kept riding.” Huang Ling shivered, thinking about that video. “I was so scared when I got the call. I rushed to the hospital. Jia Ming’s leg was cracked, and for some reason, he did not wake up until the next day.”

“You said Jia Ming was hit by bus 104?” Chen Ge interrupted Huang Ling. He had found the information he needed. “In other words, the thing that is possessing your husband’s body now probably came from the bus on Route 104.”

Huang Ling and Xiao Gu did not react for a long time, but in the end, they felt chills run up their spines.

Chapter 498 - Objective of Ghost Stories Society

Chapter 498: Objective of Ghost Stories Society

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

Huang Ling and Xiao Gu had just escaped from the bus on Route 104, so they were familiar with the type of passengers it carried. When Jia Ming got into the accident, the camera had shown that he was walking toward the bus. A lot of anomalous behavior showed that there was something strange about his accident. It was indeed this accident that triggered the change in Jia Ming to do something as strange as cooking chopped up dolls.

“You’re trying to say that my husband is possessed by the ghost on the bus?” Huang Ling was silent for a long time before forcing herself to accept reality.

...

“Possessed? You’re being too optimistic.” Chen Ge looked at the woman’s phone. “You received calls from your husband when you were on the bus. The person who called you was most likely your real husband. He knew that you were on the bus and knew that the passengers were all ghosts, so this means that he was also on the bus with you, or rather his spirit was trapped on the bus, trading places with the thing that calls himself your husband now.”

Huang Ling had a hard time processing what Chen Ge said. If she had not just gotten off the bus and seen the ghosts for herself, she would have thought that Chen Ge was crazy. Her lips fell open. Huang Ling had many things to say, but in the end, she only uttered, “What should I do?”

She gripped the steering wheel helplessly. Thinking about the man who slept next to her at night and might not be her husband, her breath caught in her throat.

“Do you want to find your real husband?” Chen Ge took his hand out from the backpack. From Huang Ling’s tone and reaction, he had confirmed that she was a victim.

“Of course.” Huang Ling turned her head around.

“To find your real husband, we have to start with the fake husband. He should know a lot about that last bus. Your real husband is on the bus—only by knowing everything about the bus can we find it and save him.” Chen Ge’s lips curved into a smile. While it seemed like he was simply dealing with a bus, he had not forgotten that there was a locked two-star scenario on the black phone, the name of which Midnight Hearse.

In terms of difficulty, the Midnight Hearse was similar to Mu Yang High School, but since it was mobile, it was harder to find.

“You want me to trick Jia Ming?” Huang Ling understood Chen Ge’s meaning instantly. She shook her head lightly. She refused to believe these things even though she had her suspicion.

“That’s not my intention, and I hope you won’t act too recklessly. I just need you to silently observe Jia Ming and tell me all about his weird actions.” Chen Ge left his contact details with Huang Ling. “You can consider me your lifeline. Perhaps in the future, only I will be able to help you.”

Huang Ling repeated what Chen Ge had said in her mind before she understood what he meant. In her heart, the man, as weird as he appeared, radiated a sense of trustworthiness.

“Remember to keep in touch. Also, do not tell anyone what happened tonight, including your husband and parents.” Chen Ge wanted to turn the car around and interrogate Huang Ling’s husband, but the effect would not be good, and it might cause Huang Ling to turn on him.

“I know.” Huang Ling put her phone away and focused on driving. Chen Ge’s lips smiled. He did not share his real thoughts.

This is the first time that I’ve come across a mobile scenario. There’s no way I’m letting this escape. But thinking back, the bus, the passengers, the child, and the woman in red raincoat, these few things should be connected somehow.

The taxi continued to move in the rain. Chen Ge leaned on the chair and closed his eyes to rest. Huang Ling sent Chen Ge and Xiao Gu back to New Century Park at 2 am. When he got out, Chen Ge inspected the driver’s body again. After making sure he was fine, he paid twice the fare.

“Be careful on the road, and set my number as your speed dial to make it more convenient.” After reminding her of a few more things, Chen Ge left with Xiao Gu.

After Huang Ling drove away, Xiao Gu opened the umbrella and ran to walk beside Chen Ge. “Boss, do you really want to help Huang Ling? This sounds quite scary.”

“Helping her is just a convenience. My real goal is to find the raincoat woman’s child. Didn’t you say her child was on the bus?” Chen Ge was just concluding the event, but it caused Xiao Gu to blame himself.

“This is all my fault.”

“Don’t dwell on it. You’re my employee, so I have to take care of you.” Chen Ge walked ahead and allowed the rain to splash on him.

Following behind Chen Ge, Xiao Gu looked at the man’s back and hesitated for a while before asking, “Boss, when you were on the phone with the woman, you introduced yourself as the chairperson of ghost stories society. What kind of society is this? How come it feels like you’re not that afraid of these things?”

“Are you really that curious?” Chen Ge had saved Xiao Gu’s life more than once. Plus, Xiao Gu was a straightforward person and did not have ulterior motives, so Chen Ge was still relaxed around him.

“A bit. Actually, the things that happened for the past few months have scared me.” Xiao Gu pouted. “One month ago, I was drugged by a madwoman and almost got dismembered. Two weeks ago, I’d just got out from the hospital and was sent back to the emergency room due to fainting. Combining tonight’s episode, this is the third time that these things have happened. I feel like if this continues, and I don’t take any counter measures, it’ll only be a matter of time until something serious occurs.”

Xiao Gu looked so down, and his usual liveliness was absent. “Perhaps I’m cursed.”

“If you move near New Century Park in the future, I’m sure you’ll be fine.” Chen Ge did not know what to say, but he knew Xiao Gu—other people would have gone mad already.

“Boss, I have a feeling something else will happen, so I wish to know more about these things. Do you think I can join that society of yours?” Xiao Gu said something that surprised Chen Ge. He stood beside Chen Ge shyly.

“You want to join the ghost stories society?” Chen Ge stopped moving to size Xiao Gu up. Then he shook his head. “The society might not sound like it, but it’s actually a support group for mental patients, to reignite their desire for life.”

“Is that so?” Xiao Gu felt like what Chen Ge described did not match the idea that he had in his mind at all.

“Yes, don’t read too much into it.” Chen Ge shoved the handle of the hammer that poked out back into the bag and zipped it up. “The ghost stories society has three objectives—to respect and care about people, to show understanding and acceptance toward others, and to have appreciation and thankfulness for the gift of life.”

“I suppose if you put it that way...” Xiao Gu was rather disappointed.

“If you stand straight, you will not be afraid of your shadow being slanted. As long as you do not do anything wrong and live your life openly and freely, then even if you run into a ghost, they will be the one afraid of you.” Chen Ge shared the lesson with Xiao Gu, and the young man listened closely.

...

“I understand now. Thank you, boss, for the lesson.”

“You still have many things to learn in the future. I will help you see more things that you will never believe.” Chen Ge did not have a useful person next to him, and many things were quite inconvenient for him. Xiao Gu’s appearance made Chen Ge realize that this might be his perfect chance. He planned to cultivate an actual Haunted House employee in the young man.

“Do not tell anyone what happened on the bus, and this includes Xu Wan.” Chen Ge opened the door to the Haunted House and waved for Xiao Gu to follow him. “Tonight, you can stay inside the staff breakroom. Remember, do not leave the room and wander off on your own. Especially remember to stay away from the scary scenarios.”

“Boss, where will you sleep? I’m sure the two of us can share the same bed if we just move around.” Xiao Gu was quite embarrassed to take advantage of Chen Ge’s kindness.

“I have my ways. Later, I’ll accompany you to the bathroom to change. After that, remember to stay inside the staff breakroom until the sun comes up.”

“I can go to the toilet on my own; I’m not a child anymore.” Xiao Gu still had not realized that he was currently standing inside the scariest location in Western Jiujiang. According to the assessment on the black phone, Chen Ge’s House of Horrors could be considered a three-star scenario already.

“There are some props that I’ve placed inside the bathroom, and I’m afraid you might mess them up.” Chen Ge found a random excuse and quickly moved away from this topic. He entered the staffroom and took out two sets of his own clothes. He handed one set to Xiao Gu. “Put these on. Give me your wet clothes.”

After he was done with everything, Chen Ge closed the door to the staff breakroom. “Have a good sleep. I’ll come find you tomorrow morning.”

“Okay.” The door closed. Xiao Gu sat beside the bed, and his heart was feeling quite embarrassed. He slept on the bed, and the boss slept on the floor. This was the first time that he had run into a situation like this. Brother Chen has a sharp tongue but a soft heart. Even though he doesn’t mention it enough, I can see from his actions that he is a good man.

He pulled the thin cover off, and Xiao Gu was about to lie on the bed when he suddenly heard a cat meow. He quickly stood up. Underneath the cover was a big white cat with a pair of multi-colored eyes. It glanced lazily at Xiao Gu. The gaze seemed to say, Who are you, and where did you come from?

“Nice to meet you.” Xiao Gu held the cover and stood next to the bed. He did not know what to do. The white cat did not bully Xiao Gu. It bit on a cute doll and jumped to the study table next to the table agilely. The cat scratched the light switch, and the staff breakroom fell into darkness. Holding the cover, Xiao Gu stood where he was dumbly.

My god, he even knows how to turn off the lights on his own...

Chen Ge stood outside the door for a while. He left after he saw the lights inside the room go off. He also changed into the new set of clothes and carried the half-drenched backpack into the props room.

The situation in Eastern Jiujiang is quite complicated. This probably related to the door in Li Wan City that has gone out of control. Doctor Gao said that the door was once under the ghost stories society’s control. If I wish to gain more information on this door, I can try to get some from the members of the society.

Rummaging through the drawers, Chen Ge finally found the chairperson’s letter of appointment and the patients’ list for Third Sick Hall. He took these things and entered the underground scenario.

He activated the recorder and pushed open the door to the last classroom at Mu Yang High School. The mannequins in the school uniforms sat at their tables obediently. They looked so serious like they were preparing for an imminent and important exam.

“Don’t worry, I just want to introduce some new friends to you.” Chen Ge stood on the podium and tried for the first time to communicate with the spirits inside the patient’s list. He released the souls of the mad people all at once. In life, they had been the most twisted maniacs. In death, their souls had refused to leave, and they had all turned into baleful spirits. The classroom was filled with dark winds, and the table, chairs, door, and windows rattled noisily. Screams and wails echoed in the room, and vengeful eyes charged at Chen Ge directly.

“Xu Yin.” Dripping with blood, Xu Yin materialized next to Chen Ge. All the sounds and screams in the classroom were silenced instantly. When the few spirits finally quieted down, Chen Ge walked past them one by one. The group of spirits was indeed different from normal spirits. Even with a Red Specter staring them down, their eyes were radiating a dangerous glow as they glared darkly at Chen Ge.

“We’re unable to communicate?” Chen Ge took out the chairperson’s letter of appointment again. He showed Doctor Gao’s handwriting to the spirits, and when they saw the handwriting, dark red blood vessels appeared in the spirits’ eyes. In just a few seconds, all the spirits bowed down before Chen Ge.

Still unable to communicate? Or do they refuse to communicate with me because they have some issues with me?

As the new chairperson of the ghost stories society, Chen Ge had some connections with these old members. He summoned all of the employees at the Haunted House to surround the patients and then left the classroom.

...

The rain started to lighten. Huang Ling drove the taxi, and the car was nearing her home, but the speed was slowing down. Her heart was knotted in a conflict. Whenever she remembered what Chen Ge had said, she would be afraid. Should I return home tonight or not?

Before this, she did not know anything, so she had not been afraid. Now, Huang Ling did not know whom she should trust. Chen Ge’s points were valid and logical, but ultimately, he was just an outsider.

Jia Ming was her husband, and they had shared a life for so many years already.

After giving it some more thought, Huang Ling still could not come to a decision. Perhaps I should go back home, but if I don't go back, where would I go? Stay inside the taxi throughout the night? But how will I explain myself should the taxi driver wake up?

The taxi reached the entrance of the residential area, but Huang Ling still had not come to a decision. Suddenly, she saw a man holding an umbrella, waiting anxiously at the stairwell. "Jia Ming? Is he waiting for me?"

His shirt was wet, and Jia Ming looked quite look shabby.

"Why are you only coming back now?" Jia Ming's voice sounded quite angry. Huang Ling parked the car, and she only pushed the door open when Jia Ming held the umbrella at the door. "Come back home with me now!"

"Let me leave my phone number with the driver first. If he wakes up, he can contact me." Huang Ling found a note inside the taxi and wrote a memo for the driver.

"What happened to you today? Why did the driver faint? Should we drive him to the hospital?" Jia Ming saw the driver that was still fainted on the backseat and was worried.

"My friend said he's fine. He was just shocked, so he'll be fine after some time."

"Your friend? You'd better stop hanging out with those strange people. From their appearance, the two that came today do not look like good people." Jia Ming held the umbrella and supported Huang Ling as they headed upstairs. The room door was open. The warm light from inside the room cleared the fear and anxiety inside Huang Ling's heart.

"I've reheated the food around seven to eight times already, but you are so late." Jia Ming pointed at the dishes on the table. "I even purposely stewed a pot of soup for you."

"Thank you, but I don't have much of an appetite." Seeing the table filled with food, Huang Ling was still quite touched. However, once it crossed her mind that this man standing beside her might not be her husband, all the warm feelings turned into an indescribable terror.

“Okay then, I’ll clear the table. You’d better go and sleep; you still need to work tomorrow morning.” Jia Ming was rather angry, and he had to rein it in to not explode in his wife’s appearance. Huang Ling entered the bedroom, but she did not remove her jacket and pants. She pulled the cover over her body and lay down in bed.

In the other room, Jia Ming was clearing away the table. The sound of the plates falling into the sink kept echoing through the room. After who knew how long, the lights in the living room finally went off. Someone entered the bedroom and lay down next to Huang Ling. There was a small gap between the two.

Inside the cramped room that was shrouded in darkness, even though Huang Ling was tired, she was unable to fall asleep. The more she allowed her mind to wander, the more afraid she became. Her palms kept sweating.

About ten minutes later, when Huang Ling heard the light snoring from her husband and confirmed that the man had fallen asleep, she finally sighed in relief. After a whole day of work and the long drive, she was already at her limit. Her eyes slowly closed, and Huang Ling had no idea she was falling asleep. The fatigue from the eventful night was slowly catching up to her.

About one or two hours later, Huang Ling found herself inside a very scary dream. Her own husband stood at the door with a glinting cleaver in his hands, mumbling about the type of ingredients that he would use that night to cook soup with.

Cold sweat slid down her face, and her head jostled. After some struggle, her eyes flew open. The bedroom was completely dark and incredibly quiet. She confirmed that there was no one standing at the door.

“That was too scary.” Huang Ling rubbed her head. She grabbed the phone that she had left on the bedside table. She found Chen Ge’s contact number. She wanted to check whether she had set his number as speed dial or not. To prevent herself from accidentally waking up her husband who was sleeping, Huang Ling curled her body under the covers.

The phone screen’s light fell on her face. Huang Ling opened the phone record, and her eyes followed on the list of numbers that had called her that night.

“These came from my husband.” Her eyes slowly moved downward.

Huang Ling focused completely on the display. However, suddenly, a finger appeared in her sight to press on her display, like it was trying very hard to call a particular number. Looking at that finger that appeared out of nowhere, Huang Ling shivered and jumped up in bed!

The phone fell in the middle of the bed, and the light from the display hit her husband's face. His face looked so familiar, but the expression was so strange. "Why aren't you sleeping? Is it because you're hungry?"

"I'm fine." Huang Ling hugged the cover and got up to turn on the light. However, weirdly enough, she gave it several tries, but the lights refused to turn on.

Her husband sat up in bed like a robot, and his voice became increasingly weird. The man mumbled to himself like he was unable to process what Huang Ling had said earlier. "If you're hungry, let's go and eat. I even stewed a pot of soup for you."

With the combination of the strange expression as well as the weird tone, Huang Ling's husband looked and sounded like he was sleepwalking. He stood up in bed and stood on his tiptoes. There seemed to be something tied around his neck even though there was nothing there, and he glanced down right at Huang Ling.

His eye lids were peeled back, and his eyeballs bulged outward. Inside the bedroom that was suffocated by darkness, the husband whom Huang Ling had shared the bed with for more than a few years stared at her darkly and creepily. "The soup that I specially cooked for you is in the kitchen. You'd better savor it while it is still piping hot."

...

The place that they rented was not big. The bedroom was very small. Huang Ling leaned against the wall with her back and her fingers curled tightly around the phone. There was a very bad feeling in her heart. If she made a call, this man that she called her husband might just reach forward to kill her.

"I... I'm not that hungry." Huang Ling moved to the door of the bedroom. She grabbed the door handle, but before she could pull the door open, her husband jumped down from the bed. Jia Ming's body was very stiff. None of his joints seemed like they could bend normally. It gave the impression that he was a puppet pulled along by strings.

The scarily white hands grabbed Huang Ling's arms, and a rush of iciness overwhelmed her. This was the first time that Huang Ling had discovered that she could feel no warmth at all from her husband's palms. She was so nervous that she lost the ability to talk. Her body shook slightly, and her pupils darted about nervously. She was on the verge of collapsing.

To make matters worse, her husband's face leaned close to her. His eyelids were fully peeled back, and most of his eyes were dominated by the white of his eyes. The pupils had practically disappeared. "I've already cooked it, so why don't you just have a few sips of it? Are you that afraid of my cooking? I assure you, it's very good."

"Okay, I'll drink the soup..." Caught in that situation, Huang Ling did not dare say no; she was afraid that she might die inside this little, dark bedroom if she made the wrong decision. The husband opened the bedroom door for her. The familiar yet strange man stood on his tiptoes and used a very strange pose and gait to drag Huang Ling out of the bedroom and into the kitchen. The door and windows of their rental home were all closed. It felt like they were inside a different dimension, detached from the rest of the world. It made Huang Ling feel isolated and alone. Normally, she would not have felt that way because she had the company of her husband, but that night, it was exactly because of her husband's presence that she felt so strangely unsettled.

Huang Ling did not dare to resist, and she allowed herself to be dragged by her husband into the kitchen. Once she walked in, she saw a pot that was used for boiling soup sitting on top of the stove. "I made sure to stew it for a very long time, so the ingredients are soft and tender. Quick, come and have a taste of it."

Jia Ming stood on his tiptoes and very awkwardly raised his hands to remove the pot from the stove. This was because his elbows were unable to bend. He then placed it on the dining table. After Jia Ming opened the lid, the temperature in the room seemed to have lowered even more. He found two sets of bowls and chopsticks and placed them next to the pot. Then he stared right at Huang Ling, adding darkly, "Quick, come and have a taste. I'm sure the soup is very nice."

"Er... okay." Huang Ling nodded slightly. She glanced inside the steel pool. There was a torn-up doll floating inside. Various tattered parts floated on the clear soup, and the most conspicuous part was definitely the plastic doll face. The doll's face was partially melted, but Huang Ling managed to recognize with a glance that this doll was the first doll that Jia Ming had given to her.

It was very cheap. At the time, the two had just moved to Jiujiang, and they were still dating, not yet married. They had been young and in love, full of hope for their future together. Seeing the doll floating inside the pot, Huang Ling felt like a part of her heart and her memory was yanked apart and brutally chopped into pieces.

"How could you use this doll to make soup? How could you do something like this?" Huang Ling could not resist it and complained.

Yet, Jia Ming did not answer Huang Ling's question. He found a ladle to scoop up the soup and fill up a whole bowl for Huang Ling. "Come, have a sip. It tastes so good."

"This is the memory between the two of us!" Huang Ling stood next to the man, and she felt like the energy within her body was slowly seeping out of her.

"Memory?" Jia Ming looked at the doll inside the pot and used a very confused tone to give a scary answer. "Isn't this our child? What does it have to do with memory?"

He swallowed a mouthful of saliva, and a very ugly laughter issued from his throat. "There are so many children. Even after tossing them away, they still return, so the best solution is to consume them all!"

Huang Ling held a spoon in her hand. She looked at the broken pieces and the doll's face inside the bowl, and she felt like vomiting. Her fingers touched the screen of her phone. She wanted to call Chen Ge's number, but then she had a different thought. What good would that do? Chen Ge could not rush over immediately, and when he arrived, she would most likely be dead already.

"Why aren't you eating it? Is it not good? Do you not like the taste? But listen! Don't you hear the sound of children crying? That is such a wonderful sound. It is music to my ears." Jia Ming picked up the ladle that was still inside the pot. He drank directly from the ladle. The soup was nothing more than boiled water, but from the way he reacted, one would think that he was drinking some kind of incredible broth. He looked so satisfied and happy. "I hate children the most, especially those horrible kids that ran out from the red house. They have stolen stuff from behind the door—how I wish to eat them and put them in my stomach."

After having his fill, Jia Ming's pupils, which had rolled upward, slowly returned to normal. He turned to look at Huang Ling. "Why aren't you drinking? Or do you want me to feed you?"

Gripping the spoon, Huang Ling tried her best but was unable to put the spoon to her lips. The conflict that was apparent on her face fell into Jia Ming's eyes.

"You don't know how to eat it? Come, let me help you." Jia Ming picked up the fruit knife that was left on the dining table. "Let me help you cut it open. Don't worry, very soon, you will be able to finish this whole pot of soup. In the future, I will make more delicious soups for you, using even fresher ingredients. You will never be able to resist them once you have a taste.”

Jia Ming walked toward Huang Ling on his tiptoes, and his words and tone sounded incredibly scary. Huang Ling could not help it anymore. Things had gotten way out of control. She threw the soup spoon in her hand away and quickly pressed speed dial number 1. Coincidentally, when she was about to press the one button, the display on her phone changed. Someone was calling her at a time like that. Before her finger landed on the number 1, her finger pressed the accept button to answer the call.

“You are the passenger who took my taxi ride tonight, right? You have ruined my car, and you think you can sweep the issue under the rug by tossing me 200? If you do not give me a valid explanation and enough compensation tonight, then I will...”

“Help me! Help me! Please call the police! I’m staying on the fourth floor! My husband has gone insane, and he’s trying to kill me!” Hearing the voice coming from the other end, Huang Ling immediately lost control. She held the phone in her hands and screamed at the top of her lungs as she ran to the living room door. Like a drowning person coming across the last straw, the potential within Huang Ling exploded. She ran so very fast.

There were two layers to the living room door. She pulled the inside door open easily, but the outside door was locked. She needed to find the key if she wanted to open it. “Help me! Please someone, come and help me!”

Huang Ling’s voice echoed down the corridor. The chilling wind rushed into her sleeves as she shook at the door lock violently. Perhaps she thought that by shaking the lock hard enough, it might unlock on its own.

“I am warning you, don’t play games with me. Don’t try to scare me into submission. I will still require an answer from you.” The young driver’s voice was shaking on the phone. He had been unconscious for almost the entire night. He had just woken up and seen the note that someone had left next to his phone. It was the reason he had made this call. He wanted to ask for a clarification about what had happened that night and, if possible, get some more compensation.

Huang Ling was still screaming at the top of her lungs. She rammed against the door, and the door shook violently. It could be heard echoing throughout the entire building.

“Come and just take a sip. Just one sip.” The husband appeared behind Huang Ling silently and without warning.

“Help me!” Huang Ling tore through her throat as she continued to scream. She slammed into the door using her back, and her phone shone its light on Jia Ming. The scene that she saw made her mental state collapse even further!

Jia Ming’s head was lolled weakly on his shoulders. His pupils had already disappeared, and his eyes were bulging. He appeared like he was standing on his tiptoes, but in reality, that was not the case. It was the shadow behind him that was holding him by his neck, and he had been moved across like that. “Come, take a sip.”

“Help! Don’t come any closer! I’m warning you!” Huang Ling’s voice travelled very far down the corridor. Several seconds later, the door of the family across from Huang Ling was suddenly pulled open from the inside. An old lady poked her head out to look around. By then, Jia Ming had already managed to shove the soup inside the bowl down Huang Ling’s throat. He watched as Huang Ling’s body softened and lost its power. The woman’s eyes slowly turned dull and lifeless.

The old lady from the opposite room seemed to be familiar with this happening. She opened the door and walked to Huang Ling’s door. With a trace of pity in her voice, she asked, “Xiao Jia, is Huang Ling acting up due to her illness again?”

Jia Ming held Huang Ling in his arms, and his lowered head slowly rose. His face looked perfectly normal, but his expression was rather awkward. “Sigh, she always suffers from nightmares at night, but she refuses to take her medicine.”

“This must be so hard on you as well, taking care of a patient alone.” The old lady shook her head. “I think you should take her to an official state hospital to have the doctors check up on her. This is the third time she has reacted this way this month. If you let this go on, it will only get worse.”

“Of course, you have a point.” Jia Ming took the phone away from Huang Ling and deactivated it. He dragged Huang Ling back into the room and closed the door.

The corridor returned to normal. The old lady looked at the opposite door and sighed with pity. “Lost the house and the child, no wonder she went crazy. Poor Xiao Jia.”

Outside the building, the taxi driver heard the call being ended, and he still had not recovered from the shock.

...

“What is the meaning of this? Have I been dragged into a murder? What about the mention of mental illness?” The driver’s mind was blank. He had just woken up and found his car parked at an unfamiliar place. He did not even know where he was.

“I should call the police.”

With shaking hands, the driver called the cops and told them how he had been kidnapped.

...

Chen Ge rested outside the last classroom for a while before reentering the room. The dark winds had disappeared, and the bodies of the few mental patients were close to being transparent. However, they were still as ferocious as ever and refused to communicate.

“They sure are mad.” Chen Ge summoned them back into the patient’s list. He left Mu Yang High School and entered the Third Sick Hall. He found a random bed and went to sleep without removing his clothes. The next morning, Chen Ge was woken up by the alarm on his phone at 8 am.

“That was quite a good sleep.” Chen Ge rubbed his eyes as he opened the sickroom’s door. “It’s quite a waste to have so many empty beds. Perhaps I can open a hotel that only operates at night.”

Exiting the underground scenario, Chen Ge cleaned himself up and ran to the staff breakroom.

“It’s time for work.” Chen Ge was worried that Xiao Gu might have been bullied by the white cat and Xiaoxiao, but he realized that Xiao Gu was sleeping nicely. “The guy sure is brave, but this type of person will have an easier time accepting new things.”

After waking Xiao Gu up, the two worked together to clean up the Haunted House and prepared to start a new day of work. Opening the gates, the sun fell on Chen Ge. Ever since I came back from the underground morgue, my body temperature has still been dropping, but the rate seems to have lessened.

“Boss, you have been getting later at opening the gates.” There was a girl with impressive upper body that walked from the resting hall. She held a box of breakfast in her hands. “This is for you.”

“It’s barely 8:20 am; it’s you that’s too early.” Chen Ge accepted the breakfast when Xiao Gu exited the Haunted House.

“Good morning, Sister Xu Wan!” Xiao Gu was quite dim-witted at social events. He waltzed out from the Haunted House and looked at Chen Ge’s breakfast with some envy. Xu Wan greeted Xiao Gu, and she was about to walk away when her pupils suddenly danced. She stopped where she was as she glanced at Xiao Gu.

“The gates just opened. This means you did not go home last night.” Before Xiao Gu responded, her expression became weirder. “Why are you wearing boss’ clothes?”

“It was raining last night, and when I was going home...” Xiao Gu stopped himself when he was halfway through explaining because he suddenly remembered that Chen Ge had told him not to tell anyone what had happened the previous night. He turned to look at Chen Ge. Xu Wan also looked at Chen Ge with some complaint like she was asking for an explanation.

Sensing the curious atmosphere, Chen Ge was stunned. “Why are the both of you looking at me?”

The entire Western Jiujiang’s House of Horrors only had three living people. Chen Ge did not want any misunderstandings between them, so he quickly explained, “Xiao Gu was unable to find a taxi home last night, and it was raining heavily, so I had him stay at the staff breakroom for the night. I busied myself inside the scenarios. Right, I almost forgot. Xiao Gu, I’m giving you a half day off. You go back to pack your things and move to a place near the park. I'll help you cover the down payment."

"Thank you, boss." Xiao Gu did not really understand what was happening, but he was glad. He went to the dressing room happily.

Hearing Chen Ge's explanation, Xu Wan's mood turned better. "Boss, I shall go to the dressing room as well. Remember to come help me with the make-up later."

"Okay." Seeing the happiness on his workers' faces, Chen Ge felt comforted. The park opened at 9 am, and the visitors swamped the place. However, the curious thing was that no one dared to challenge the underground morgue again.

He kept himself busy until twelve noon. When the employees went for their lunch break, two shadows, one small and one big, came out from the resting hall. When Chen Ge saw them, he put down his lunch and rushed back into the Haunted House.

"Boss Chen! I have something important to tell you!" The large shadow used an agility that did not match his size to catch up to Chen Ge.

Knowing that he was unable to avoid them, Chen Ge turned back with a friendly smile as he grabbed the man's arm. "Fan Chong? Why are you here? Come and take a seat, we're considered friends now. What scenario would you like to challenge today?"

The ones who blocked Chen Ge were Fan Chong and his brother—the chef at New East International Hotel, Fan Dade.

Fan Chong's hands were cold, and he had two large dark circles on his face like he had not slept for a long time. "Boss Chen, I really need your help this time."

He sounded so serious and that caused Chen Ge to turn serious as well. "What happened?"

"Do you still remember the game that I told you about last time?"

In the park's medical room, Fan Chong had described the weird game for Chen Ge before. He suspected that the game was based on a real murder.

"I remember, the main character's name is Xiao Bu." Chen Ge had a lasting impression of the game, and the reason was simple. Fan Chong had said that the style of the game changed after the main character opened the door to the basement. The first thing that the main character saw was a bus stop. There was a red shadow and an old bus at the bus stop.

This matched what had happened to Xiao Gu perfectly!

The red shadow represented the woman in the red raincoat, and the old bus was the last bus on Route 104. In other words, the game creator had perhaps experienced that.

“Good that you still remember it.” Fan Chong rubbed his hands. After a while, he added, “I’ve cleared the game, but...”

“Don’t worry, just tell me everything.” Chen Ge was more nervous than Fan Chong. By now, he was certain that the game was hiding a big secret.

“I’ve cleared the game four times, sacrificing my sleep for the past two days, and I got four different endings.” The flesh on Fan Chong’s face scrunched up together. “But the four endings were all bad endings. Xiao Bu died four times in different ways, but I suspect there are more endings, meaning more ways for Xiao Bu to die. This is a game without hope, or I can’t find the hope.”

“Don’t rush, take it slow.” Chen Ge had Uncle Xu take over, and he pulled Fan Chong to the resting hall. “Tell me the whole process, or if possible, you can bring me over to your place to see the game tonight.”

Fan Chong was very unstable; it was obvious that this had affected him deeply. “Boss Chen, the game is really too much. Whenever Xiao Bu dies, I feel like she’s looking at me like I’m the one who killed her.”

Taking a breath, Fan Chong took out his phone. “Whenever I clear the game, I record the game process so that I can select a different route to go for a different ending next time.”

...

Swiping on the screen, Fan Chong opened the note on his phone—it was filled with words. “Unlocking all the achievements in the game, the system awarded me with Mommy’s Pajamas, and the key to the basement was found inside the pajamas. It was after the discovery of the key that the name of the main character was changed to Xiao Bu.

“The entrance to the dungeon was hidden behind the closet at a friend’s home. After using the key, the style of the game changed completely. I’ve told you what happened next. I controlled Xiao Bu to go through the dungeon, and she saw a bus stop. To evade the red monster, she was forced to get on the bus.”

So far, it matched what Fan Chong had said earlier.

“The bus started its engine and moved on the road. Xiao Bu, in her mother’s pajamas, wandered up and down the bus. Some time later, the sound of a child crying come from the game. Then, two options came on screen: Find the source of the crying or ask the driver.

“The first time, I chose to ask the driver. However, when I reached the driver’s seat, I realized that the bus had no driver. In fact, the whole bus was empty. The crying became louder and it felt like it appeared next to my ears and not from the game.

“The bus soon reached its first stop—Li Wan City. A line appeared on screen then: I have to leave this place.

"I controlled Xiao Bu to leave the bus. She turned back to look, and the scary part happened. The windows were filled with human faces, and they stared at me through the computer screen. Before I could react, a red shadow appeared. It was the scary woman in a red raincoat. To evade her pursuit, I ran into the nearby Li Wan City.

"The city was the map where the main character did her mission. The building and layout were all the same, but the style had completely changed. From a city filled with warmth and sunlight, it turned into a city of fear, dullness, and terror.

"The woman chased after me. I controlled Xiao Bu to run down the street. Words kept popping up—Help me! Help me!—but there was no one in the city. In the end, I was forced to hide inside an old building with no other escape.

"The woman got closer and closer. The screen focused on her face until it was fully dominated by it. The sticky hair parted to the sides, and the woman revealed her real face. Her eyes were filled with blood, and her mouth was sewn shut. It looked so scary.

"A very scary smile issued from the computer, and then a sentence appeared on screen—Xiao Bu has become her new child.

"Xiao Bu's head was covered by the red raincoat woman's hair, and I lost control of her."

Fan Chong took a deep breath after that. The image was too scary, and just thinking about it made him scared.

"Was this one of the bad endings?" Chen Ge got a bottle of water from the worker and handed it to Fan Chong.

"Compared to the other endings, this might be the best one." Fan Chong did not reach for the water. His face was pale as he continued his story.

"After Xiao Bu was taken away, the screen went dark. The sound of children laughing and crying came from the computer, and then a row of gray words appeared—Why did you kill me?

"The handwriting was like the child's dark and helpless eyes. It made me feel so guilty. After a long time, the words disappeared, and the screen returned to normal. Xiao Bu woke up in her own room, wearing her mother's pajamas."

At this point, Chen Ge raised his hand to interrupt Fan Chong.
“Sleeping in her own room? Meaning after the character’s death, the game reloaded at the bedroom?”

“Yes, she was lying in bed, like what had happened earlier was just a nightmare. The sun outside the window was still shining. People hurried to work, and they greeted each other.” Fan Chong did not think too much of it. “The game restarted. I controlled Xiao Bu to enter the dungeon and got on the bus, but this time, I made a different decision.”

“You chose to search for the child’s crying on the bus?” Eastern Jiujiang was different from Western Jiujiang. All the ghost stories seemed to be connected, and the trigger of one would create a domino effect. Therefore, Chen Ge memorized everything Fan Chong said—he felt like the game was hiding a very important clue.

“Yes, I controlled Xiao Bu to walk to the last row on the bus. She found an old school bag. Then a sentence popped up—Xiao Bu found a wet phone inside the bag. Xiao Bu activated the phone, and then a few more windows popped up. It looked like Xiao Bu was reading the content of the phone.”

“There was a phone inside the bag? At the last row? What did it say?” Chen Ge remembered Xiao Gu say that there had been a high-schooler at the last row on the bus, and the student had kept hugging his bag. His hand had been inside the bag like he was holding something.

“I’ve jotted it down. These few words were the reason I came to find you today because I think this has gone beyond just a simple game. There has to be something more.” Fan Chong passed his phone to Chen Ge. Three paragraphs were written on the note.

“1st September, my mother and I moved into a new apartment. Our neighbor is a young man who lives alone. He rears a large dog. It looks so tame—its name is Xiao Bu.

“7th September, when I came back, I saw the neighbor walking down the stairs hugging a big black plastic bag. He looked so sad and said the pet that he had looked after for so many years had left him. The dog seemed to have ingested some poison and died at home.

“At the end of October, the young man moved away. The landlord found a fridge filled with dog meat in his home. The neighbor must have been devastated when Xiao Bu died.”

The three sentences might look normal, but upon closer inspection, they read so weirdly. The neighbor carried a large bag down the stairs, saying his pet was dead, but then the landlord found a fridge filled with dog meat. Then what was really inside the man's plastic bag on the night of 7th September?

Fan Chong slid the display downward. "I checked the news around Jiujiang in September, and there was indeed a similar murder around the time. And the crime scene was in Li Wan City as mentioned in the game."

The information left on the mobile phone matched a case that had happened in real life, and this made Fan Chong fearful. "I've investigated all the news. According to the article, the dead body was wrapped inside a black plastic bag, the time of death was 7th September, and the dumping site was close to Li Wan City."

"You came to find me because of this?" Chen Ge also realized the gravity of the situation. "Why didn't you go to the police directly?"

...

"I don't dare. The cases that this game is involved in is more than one." What Fan Chong said surprised Chen Ge.

"More than one case?" Chen Ge signaled for Fan Chong to continue.

"After I controlled Xiao Bu to grab the phone, there were no more pop ups. The bus soon arrived at Li Wan City. After she got off, the woman in the red raincoat chased after her, but this time, the situation changed." Fan Chong frowned. "This might be a small bug. After Xiao Bu handed the student's bag to the woman, the mad woman stopped chasing her, hugged the bag like it was her child, and left."

What Fan Chong did not understand, Chen Ge did. The owner of the bag had probably once saved the woman's child on the bus, so when she saved the bag, she chose to let Xiao Bu go. The previous night, the same thing had happened to Xiao Go. The woman in the red raincoat was probably a Red Specter, but she was different from other Red Specters. Underneath her cruel exterior hid a heart pining for her child, and that was a strong emotion that could not be replaced.

"After the woman left, I controlled Xiao Bu to head back into Li Wan City. Without someone chasing after me, I felt so relieved, but after entering the city, I realized how naïve I was. I underestimated the madness of the game creator and underestimated the evil in people's hearts." Fan Chong's eyes reddened. What happened next made him very uncomfortable.

“After dropping Xiao Bu off, the bus continued to move forward. The bus was still echoing with the sound of children laughing and crying. I have no idea where the bus was heading. From Xiao Bu’s perspective, the bus was eventually swallowed by a ball of gray mist and disappeared. I believe the bus is like a hearse for lost souls, sending them to some place.”

Fan Chong kept his voice low. Even though it was noon, the time when the sun was the harshest, he looked so cold. When he spoke, his body shivered. “After the bus left, I controlled Xiao Bu to continue walking. The fog covered the gray streets, and the buildings on both sides were pale. Walking down the road, it felt like I was travelling in a different world.

“There was no one else on the road. All the shops were closed, and each house had some white paper pasted on the door. Some weird signs were painted on them. I felt like it was some kind of nightmare. I saw something symbolic on the buildings, and everywhere I turned, there were creepy pictures.” Fan Chong slowly slipped down into fear. Other people had a hard time sharing his fear.

“Don’t worry. Just tell me what you’ve seen.” Chen Ge tried to console him.

“I controlled Xiao Bu to walk to the center of the street. Then a question popped on screen. It asked me to choose: East Street or West Street?”

“What did you choose?” To resolve the phone spirit’s wish, Chen Ge had personally been to Li Wan City. He knew the difference between East Street and West Street.

“I chose the West Street, which looked livelier.” Fan Chong chuckled bitterly. This seemed to be the moment when the nightmare started. “After making the choice, I controlled Xiao Bu to head down West Street. All the shops were closed, and I wandered about until I reached a small area.

“The place looked old as the walls were peeling. The windows on the buildings were all closed, but one could see eyes peeking out from behind the windows. This seemed to be Xiao Bu’s imagination, or perhaps there was a special meaning to it. The eyes followed Xiao Bu as she walked through the neighborhood.

“When I was controlling Xiao Bu, suddenly a chat box appeared at the bottom of the screen. ‘Xiao Bu feels like someone is watching her. The eyes are like that of a beast, a hungry beast that wants to swallow her whole.'

"Clicking the window made the chat disappear. A middle-aged man wandered out from the neighborhood. He looked unkempt and rather drunk. After the man got close to Xiao Bu, the window appeared again. 'The man is coming over. He is holding a beer bottle, and there is a blood stain on his pants.'

"I controlled Xiao Bu to avoid the drunk, but the drunk chased after her. With no other choice, I controlled Xiao Bu to run. Even after running around the neighborhood, the drunk was still following behind her. In the end, I remembered perhaps the most dangerous place is the safest place, so I made the decision to run into the neighborhood.

"The drunk wandered around the entrance. Suddenly, a different girl appeared from inside the building. She seemed to be very afraid of drunken man as well. She jogged past the man, but the man's mind seemed to be consumed by alcohol, and he hounded the girl relentlessly.

"Several minutes later, the drunk dragged the girl back into the building and slithered down one of the corridors.

"Then, another option appeared on screen, whether or not to follow the drunken man into the corridor.

"I wanted to save the girl, so I chose to follow. However, what happened next was really hard to accept." Fan Chong could barely continue. "I controlled Xiao Bu to follow the man into the corridor to Room 104, and another sentence showed up—'You saw with your own eyes that Xiao Bu was made into a clay sculpture. Your body is frozen in fear.'"

"Xiao Bu?"

"Yes, all the victims in the game seem to share the name, Xiao Bu."

"Understood, then what happened next?"

"The damn game keeps trying to challenge the player's humanity. I could only see as the drunken man closed in on Xiao Bu, and then the screen said—'Xiao Bu felt the cement solidify her body, and she was changed into the artist's newest creation.'"

Fan Chong paused, and he raised his head. His eyes were red. "After the previous experience, after Xiao Bu's death was announced, I went online to search the news. As I expected, on 11th October last year, in Room 104 of a certain building on Li Wan City's West Street, a strange art piece was discovered! The killer was apprehended. However, the police did not catch the artist but the owner of Room 104, the landlord."

"They got the wrong person?"

"At least that's what the game said. I tried to go anonymous to reflect on this online, but there was no response." Fan Chong had a sad face. He still had things that he had not gone through.

"Two murders already... too many things are involved in this." The more he listened, the more Chen Ge felt this game was different.

Chapter 504 - Key Detail!

“The first ending, Xiao Bu was taken away by the woman in the red raincoat and became her daughter; the second ending, Xiao Bu was turned into a sculpture, becoming the artist’s creation. These two were undoubtedly bad endings.” There was a helplessness in Fan Chong’s voice. “The save reloaded, and Xiao Bu woke up again in her room. I controlled her to begin the game for the third time.”

Fan Chong was a gamer lover, and this game had a weird attraction to him. He was both afraid and curious about it. “Unlike before, I chose to turn to the East Street, which was comparatively older. The buildings on the side were gray, the walls were spotted, and the roads were complicated.

...

“The game was incredibly free. It was an open world where deadly traps were laid everywhere. As the player, you have no idea what kind of scary things you might run into or how you will die.

“After playing the game for some time, I realized a problem. In this game, humans are scarier than ghosts. Running into ghost might not mean absolute death, but running into a human definitely led to death.” Fan Chong shared his thoughts.

“The game maker’s thoughts are rather narrow. Perhaps this is related to his personal experience.” Chen Ge told Fan Chong to continue. “What happened to Xiao Bu on her third try?”

“I controlled Xiao Bu to wander the street. When she passed past an apartment building, a very thin man ran out from the stairs. He seemed to be in a hurry to leave the town. If this was any other game, this would have been a very normal NPC, but in this game, as long as the character was alive, there had to be something wrong with them.

“The person ran past Xiao Bu, and a window appeared. ‘Why would they need so many children? Damn, the police are coming. I knew I should not have accepted this case.’

“After the man left, two choices appeared on screen again—enter the stairs or continue moving past the building.

“Due to curiosity, I chose to enter the stairs. The apartment’s corridor was filled with rubbish, and the place looked old. I controlled Xiao Bu to get to the rooftop and realized that the door to the rooftop was open.

“There was a small garden on the rooftop, but all the vegetables and flowers were all dead. There were several large water tanks next to the garden. They were perhaps used by the tenants to pickle stuff, and each water tanks had a large boulder resting on top of them.

“Initially, I did not think too much of it. The rooftop was windy, so perhaps the boulders were used to stop the lids from flying away. However, when I passed the one of the tanks, there was another window on screen. ‘Xiao Bu heard the sound of a phone coming from inside the water tank.’

“I knew I had probably triggered some kind of event. I controlled Xiao Bu to find the tools to move the boulder away.” Fan Chong’s expression became sad. “You have no idea what is inside the water tank.”

“Is it a boy?” Chen Ge’s expression also changed. This third story was exactly the phone spirit’s story! The poor boy that was stored inside the water tank at the rooftop, that was the phone spirit.

Fan Chong looked at Chen Ge with surprise and then nodded. “There was a boy whose body got twisted when he was shoved into the tank. The boy was hugging a phone.

“The face was green and purple, and his skin was greyish white. When Xiao Bu found him, he was already dead. I controlled Xiao Bu to remove the phone from the boy’s body. The call was from the boy’s mother. At the time, I accepted the call, and perhaps this action triggered some event. Footsteps came from the corridor, and the man who had run out the building earlier poked his head out from the door. The expression on his face was scary. He strangled Xiao Bu and shoved Xiao Bu into a water tank.

“Xiao Bu was shoved into the water tank—that was the third bad ending.” Fan Chong did not want to continue anymore. He felt like this game was a torture and used the worst method to interrogate humanity.

After hearing Xiao Bu's third ending, Chen Ge thought for a long time. He put the water in his hand away and told the man seriously, "Fan Chong, I think you should report this to the police. I'll go with you."

The boy whom Fan Chong had found in the water tank was the phone spirit. All the details matched perfectly. Chen Ge also noticed another thing. When the phone spirit's murderer ran into Xiao Bu, he said one thing. Why would they need so many children?

This sentence revealed a very important detail. There was a darker secret behind the child kidnapping! The real culprit was probably the person who had turned the whole of Eastern Jiujiang into a ghost town!

The creep who killed the phone spirit should still be inside the jail. Looks like I need to travel to the police station today.

Chen Ge needed Captain Yan's help if he wanted to meet the murderer.

A game is hiding so many cases; Eastern Jiujiang is much scarier than Western Jiujiang.

After comparing the two places, Chen Ge realized that all the scary scenarios at Western Jiujiang were limited to a particular location. This might have something to do with his parents. It was different for Eastern Jiujiang; all the scenarios were interconnected, and they kept expanding in the dark. It seemed that there was even a hidden force that was pushing it along. The final result was, in the day, Eastern Jiujiang looked normal, but at night, the line between man and ghost started to blur.

I just want to stably expand my Haunted House, but if I allow them to expand freely, it'll eventually affect me. Chen Ge gave himself a reason to strike first. There are good and bad people, and it is the same with ghost. After the Haunted House upgraded to Maze of Terror, it can now house more Red Specters and baleful Specters. After dealing with all the bad ghosts, I can provide a place to stay for the good ghosts.

Chen Ge and Fan Chong fell into thought, but they were thinking different things. Several minutes later, Fan Chong opened his lips to say, "Boss Chen, I need some more time before reporting this to the police."

"Why do you need more time? The game is hiding murders; this is very serious." Chen Ge was confused.

“Let me think about it.” Fan Chong seemed to be hiding some more secrets, and it was probably due to this secret that he had gone to Chen Ge first and not the police. The sun fell on his body, but Fan Chong could not feel warm.

“Okay then, take your time, but give me an answer within three days. If it’s later, I fear something bad might happen.” Chen Ge was really worried that Fan Chong was being targeted by something. After all, this game had recorded many cruel and realistic events.

“Okay.” Fan Chong bit his finger. During his earlier visit, Chen Ge had noticed this habit about Fan Chong. He would bite his finger whenever he was nervous.

Chapter 505 - Meeting

Chen Ge did not force Fan Chong to go to the police. He had to have his reason. The only thing that he could do was explain the situation, and it depended on Fan Chong to go to the police.

“Can you tell me about the fourth ending?” Chen Ge was interested in the game.

...

Standing under the sun, Fan Chong was quiet. His mind was a mess. “The fourth ending is more complicated. After experiencing three deaths, I had basically mastered the game’s rules and setting. I explored the town for half an hour before I was killed. This fourth ending needs some time to explain. How about you come to my place tonight, and I’ll let you see it for yourself?”

“That works.” Chen Ge nodded. “Then you should rest here first. If you need anything, just call me anytime.”

Then Chen Ge headed to the Haunted House. After completing the Nightmare Mission at Eastern Jiujiang’s tunnel, the black phone had rewarded him with a new talent—Ghost Ear. So, even over such a distance, he could hear the conversation between Fan Dade and Fan Chong.

“Xiao Chong, do you really plan to hide the thing that happened at our place from him?” Fan Dade was worried. “The ghost in the game seems to have escaped. Even if we go to the police with something like this, they will not believe us.”

“We’ll wait and see what happens after Boss Chen comes tonight. I don’t dare play the game anymore. Perhaps we can find a new owner for it.” Fan Chong bit his fingers, and his brows were locked together. The brothers did not know Chen Ge had overheard their conversation. They were seated at the corner, quietly talking among themselves.

Lunch break was over, and Chen Ge threw himself back into work. At 6 pm, the Haunted House closed. Chen Ge had Xiao Gu go and find a new place nearby to move to while he stayed with Xu Wan to clean the Haunted House. When they were done, it was almost 7 pm.

After removing her make-up, Xu Wan picked up her bag, and as she walked past Chen Ge, she casually asked, “Boss, there’s a new restaurant that opened up near our park, would you like to go with me?”

“I can’t make it tonight; I need to go to the police station.” Chen Ge saw no change in the girl’s expression, so he did not think much of it. “I’ll treat you next time.”

“Okay, that’s a promise.”

“Of course.”

After sending Xu Wan away, Chen Ge returned to the staff breakroom. He placed the comic and the recorder inside his bag. “Bringing the hammer to the police station doesn’t sound so good. After all, I’m just going to ask some questions.”

Holding the bag in one hand, Chen Ge locked the door and ran out of the park. When he was waiting for his car, Chen Ge took out his phone to call Captain Yan. The call was answered after three rings, which showed Chen Ge’s importance to Captain Yan. “Captain Yan, this is Chen Ge. Did you catch the killers for the previous cases?”

“The cases with the eye-gouging have been cleared, and the culprit for the body inside the statue has surrendered, but the main suspect, Doctor Gao, is still missing. However, it’s just a matter of time before he is caught. The whole city is under our watch, so he will fall into our trap eventually.” Captain Yan was so busy, and it was not until two days ago that he had gotten the chance to rest.

“In other words, most of the earlier cases have been cleared?” Chen Ge saw a taxi coming, so he quickly waved.

“Why? Sounds like you plan to give us more things to do...” Captain Yan became alert. This fellow, Chen Ge, was too cursed; cases followed him everywhere.

“It’s just a small thing. Captain Yan, do you mind if I come to the station to meet now?” Chen Ge entered the taxi.

Hearing Chen Ge, Captain Yan paused for three seconds before reacting. Even though he had predicted as much, he still found it unacceptable. “Wait a minute. Don’t you think you have been paying the station too many visits recently?”

“Captain Yan, you don’t know the issue. Earlier, I discovered a murder at Eastern Jiujiang, and the suspect has been surrendered to Eastern Jiujiang’s law enforcement, but then I realized that the case is not that simple—it might be related to other cases.” Chen Ge thought about it and added, “It’s related to disappearances and child abductions.”

When the words child abductions were mentioned, Captain Yan changed his mind instantly. “I’m at home now. I’ll see you at the station in fifteen minutes.”

“Okay.” Chen Ge hung up and told the driver, “To the police station please.”

After he said that, the driver started the engine slowly, but he kept glancing at Chen Ge through the rear-view mirror.

“Boss, is there anything on my face?”

“No, no...” The driver quickly turned his eyes away like it was a scary thing to talk to Chen Ge.

“Then why have you been looking at me?” Chen Ge did not think the driver would harm him—he was just curious about his attitude. The driver did not reply and focused on driving.

After paying, Chen Ge just got out of the car, and the driver quickly escaped.

“It feels like he doesn’t want to ferry me. Did I do something in the car that caused some misunderstanding? Is it because I’m coming to the police station?” Chen Ge thought about it, and it made sense. From a normal citizen’s eyes, who would go to the police station for no reason?

“Xiao Chen, an emergency came up for Captain Yan, so he might be late. Why don’t you brief me on what’s happening first?” Lee Zheng from Team one was asked to intercept Chen Ge. He was familiar with Chen Ge already although he had no idea why an inspector would get so close to a normal citizen.

Lee Zheng led Chen Ge into his office. He opened the computer and prepared a recorder and pen. “Tell me all the important things you know. If the reason is not enough, we won’t be able to help you meet the criminal.”

“Understood.” Chen Ge did not tell Lee Zheng about the game. Instead, he just described how the murderer kidnapped and murdered Tong Tong. When the police investigated a case, they found the murderer through clues, but Chen Ge’s investigation was the opposite. He had asked the phone spirit directly for the murderer. After knowing the murderer, he had collected evidence with that target in mind.

Lee Zheng, of course, did not know that Chen Ge already knew the killer from the beginning. He thought Chen Ge’s analysis was too creative, but the seemingly unrelated events were connected in some mysterious ways and managed to create an ironclad evidence chain in the end.

When Chen Ge was almost done, Captain Yan arrived. He came with good news. “I’ve already contacted the people at the prison. They’ve scheduled for us to meet the killer tomorrow 8 am.”

“Thank you, Captain Yan, but is it possible to move the meeting forward? I just have a few simple questions for him; I just need ten minutes.”

There were too many variables at Eastern Jiujiang. Chen Ge did not want to wait any longer; he planned to go there tonight.

Chapter 506 - Reap What You Sow

Chapter 506: Reap What You Sow

“That’s not impossible. We have procedures to follow.” Captain Yan picked up the record that Lee Zheng had made. “On the way here, I logged into the case file on the server, and the case you mentioned did have many loopholes.”

“There are many things hinging on this case, and I fear it is related to a large child kidnapping ring. That is why I’m so worried.” Chen Ge rushed through his words, but he did not reveal everything that he knew.

...

“It is because this case is so big that we have to be careful.” Captain Yan looked at the record, and his fingers tapped the table absent-mindedly. “The situation in the case is similar to what you described, but there is something that confuses me. When the killer was dropped at the door of the station, he was fully unconscious, and the doctor said that he suffered from great mental trauma...”

Chen Ge realized what Captain Yan was getting at, and he stressed firmly, “Perhaps that came from all the times he has kidnapped children, and the guilt has been eating at him.”

“Sounds like he was already half-mad when you caught him,” Captain Yan added this observation to the record.

“No matter who asks, that is my answer because that is the truth.” Chen Ge’s reaction was fact, and he knew what Captain Yan meant.

Nodding, Captain Yan put away Chen Ge’s written record and passed it to Lee Zheng. “Bring this along. I’ll go make a few more calls.”

Taking out his phone, Captain Yan left the office to make some calls.

“The old ginger is the spiciest.” Chen Ge looked at Captain Yan, and he realized something. When he was dealing with other officers like Lee Sanbao or Lee Zheng, when they came into a problem that they were not certain with, they would say that they had to wait for orders from above, but Captain Yan had never said something like that.

Three minutes later, Captain Yan pushed the door open. "Lee Zheng, go and get the car. We'll go with Chen Ge."

"Okay." Things went smoother than Chen Ge expected. At 8:30pm, they reached Eastern Jiujiang's prison. After showing the necessary documents, they were led by an officer to a prison cell.

"Ma Fu is temporarily in isolated quarantine. He's half dumb and half mad, probably knowing he is going to get the chair." The officer also knew why Ma Fu had been sent there, so he had no pity for freaks like that. "Be careful of your safety during interrogation. People on death row have nothing to lose."

The few shared some words outside the cell. Ma Fu probably heard them because there were footsteps from the room and then loud banging sound on the door. "Help me! Let me out! They have returned! Ghosts! There are ghosts in this room!"

It was a middle-aged man's voice, and the parts of his sentence did not add up.

"You'll get used to it. When the man was first sent here, he did not even dare to use the covers and wear the clothes. Every night, he would lean against the wall and fall asleep buck naked." The officer frowned at the memory.

"Didn't dare to use the covers, afraid of wearing clothes?" This was the first time that Lee Zheng had heard something like that, and he turned to Chen Ge subconsciously. Chen Ge shook his head silently even though he knew what had really happened to Ma Fu. That night, after Chen Ge found Ma Fu, the phone spirit had used his power on Ma Fu to amplify the deepest fear in Ma Fu's heart.

At midnight, Ma Fu, who was asleep in bed, had felt something moved under the cover. In his half-asleep state, he had looked under the cover seen an ashy child staring at him. He had woken up immediately and pulled the cover back. His bed had been surrounded by children, all of them his previous victims.

The many faces and many hands had reached toward him and crawled under his skin. Soon, his whole body had been covered in children faces. The screams had echoed through the night. Those whom he had once hurt would eventually return.

“Stop making so much noise! Stand back!” the officer yelled into the room. “You might want to stand aside first. We’ll apprehend him for you.”

Three officers stood next to the door to prevent a possible accident.

“Please let me out! I beg you! Let me out! There are ghosts! There are ghosts in this room!” The middle-aged man kept using his head and his hands to knock against the wall. His mind was completely broken.

“What’s the point of knowing fear now? Why didn’t you think of this when you did the crime?” The officer held his fists, considering there were outsiders present. “Why don’t you wait outside? I’ll have people send him to the interrogation room in a bit.”

“You have an interrogation room here?” This was the first time that Chen Ge had spoken since he entered the prison.

“This is?” The officer did not have any memory of Chen Ge. The order that he had received was to aid the city police the best they could.

“My name is Chen Ge.” Ignoring the officer, Chen Ge walked to the door and looked inside through the steel window on the door. His pupils narrowed, and in a voice that was barely audible to the people around him, he said, “So, your name is Ma Fu.”

The middle-aged man suddenly stopped moving when he heard Chen Ge’s voice. He slowly raised his head, and when his eyes caught Chen Ge, he screamed like he was shocked and staggered back several steps.

“Ghost! Ghost!” His eyes filled with terror. His lips quivered, and he repeated the same word.

This shocked everyone present. Just one glance managed to scare the man so badly. Just who was this young man?

“Please open the door, I wish to have a chat with him.” Chen Ge stood at the door. The officer hesitated; he was afraid that something bad might happen. He worried that Ma Fu might die from fear inside the prison before the sentence arrived. The door open, and the three officers rushed into the room to apprehend Ma Fu.

“Ask your question. You only have twenty minutes.” One of the officers stood between Chen Ge and Ma Fu. “Make some distance. Here is good enough.”

“Okay.” Chen Ge knew more information from Fan Chong—Ma Fu probably had seen the mastermind at Eastern Jiujiang before. “Have you abducted a boy called Tong Tong a few years ago?”

“I can’t remember.” Ma Fu shook all over. He did not look like he was lying.

“Then, can you remember killing a boy and shoving him inside a water tank? You then used a large boulder to block the lid, right?” Chen Ge spoke slowly. His words were like a sharp saw, cutting through Ma Fu’s thread of sanity.

“I remember...” Ma Fu’s expression was conflicted.

“Tell me, who bought this boy from you? Tell me everything you know about this person!”

Chapter 507 - Buyer

Chapter 507: Buyer

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

The cell became really repressed, and the few officers felt uncomfortable. Honestly, they had quite a good first impression of Chen Ge, but why would the personality of this polite and sunny young man suddenly change?

“Answer me, do you still remember the buyer’s face?” Chen Ge rarely used this type of tone. His face was expressionless as his eyes zeroed in on Ma Fu. Ma Fu was curled up in the corner with his body shaking. He seemed to have remembered something scarier. His fingers dug into his skin, and he banged his head against the wall like he was trying to kill himself.

...

“We’ve asked him the same thing before, but whenever we brought up the buyer, he would become like this.” The officer placed his palm behind Ma Fu’s head and pressed down to stop the man from hurting himself.

Seeing the condition of Ma Fu, Chen Ge thought of a possibility—the buyer had done the same thing he did to Ma Fu. However, Chen Ge was trying to take revenge on the phone spirit’s behalf, whereas the buyer simply did this to stop Ma Fu from ever selling him out.

Walking into the cell, Chen Ge squatted down next to Ma Fu. Looking at this half-mad human trafficker, he whispered into his ears, “Did you remember something scary? I can see that your life is a whole misery, and death would be a release for you, right?”

Chen Ge’s voice lowered until only Ma Fu could hear him clearly. “If you don’t come clean, those children that you killed will come back to get you. I can already hear their voices, and they’re coming from inside your body. They are watching you every second of every day. Their faces look at you from under your skin. The sin that you have committed, they will make sure that you pay for them.”

Ma Fu desperately wanted to get away from Chen Ge, but since his shoulders were being pressed down by the officer, he could not move.

“Still refuse to say anything? In that case, I can only find ways to delay your punishment and stay a lot longer in this tiny room with them. Enjoy your life, we shall meet again.”

Just as Chen Ge was about to stand up, Ma Fu raised his head. The blood vessels on his face were popping, and his eyes were bloodshot. “I remember it now.”

“You remember it now?” The few officers were caught by disbelief.

“Lee Zheng, go get the recorder.” Captain Yan was the first to recover. He entered the room with Lee Zheng, and they surrounded Ma Fu. “Start talking.”

Ma Fu was collapsed on the ground, and he spoke with his head lowered. “I once talked on the phone with the buyer. The man was very cautious, and he was likely using some kind of voice changer because he sounded like a boy around eight on the phone.”

“A boy?” Ma Fu’s first words shocked everyone present.

“Yes, I don’t know how he managed to get my number, but I was sure it was a customer.” Ma Fu stuttered through his confusion, and his face was blanched. “He sounded like a boy, but the words he said were definitely not something a child would say. I have no idea whether someone was feeding him those words or he had practiced them before.”

“You’ve not met in real life?” Chen Ge was more concerned about that.

“He’s very cautious and changed several locations before telling me to bring the children to Li Wan City. When I arrived, he made a strange request. He agreed to raise the money, but he wanted me to stay in Li Wan City for three nights.” Ma Fu did not sound like he was just telling a story.

“What happened next? Why did you kill that innocent child?” With Captain Yan there, no one dared interrupt the questioning.

“It was not easy bringing the kids to Li Wan City, and it was too big a loss to just leave. I thought about it for a long time before accepting the request.” Ma Fu’s expression was weird like it was a mixture of fear and many negative emotions. “During the first night, I had a dream where all the walls in the room were filled with children's handprints. Something was running before they coagulated into a shadow and stood beside me.”

“Stop messing around.” The officers thought that Ma Fu had gone insane.

“Let me talk.” Captain Yan waved his hand. “The size of the shadow, height, and what it did inside the room, can you still remember?”

“The shadow...” The fear in Ma Fu's eyes heightened. “The shadow was as tall as I was, almost the same as well. I felt like it was just me. The dream felt very real, but when I tried to look at the face closer, it vanished.

“When I woke up the next morning, everything returned to normal. I thought it was just a dream, but the next night, the same dream happened. The shadow appeared again, but the scary thing was it came out directly from behind me like it had morphed into my own shadow.

“I saw it clearly, and I tried to call for help, but my body won't move. I could only watch as the shadow walked down from the bed to open the closet door. The kids that I had brought were locked in the closet. The shadow looked at the kids silently until I woke up.

“The morning of the third night, the buyer called again and told me to transport the kids to Eastern Jiujiang Ming Yang Residence Unit 3, Room 104. The residence was just next to Li Wan City, and it was not yet built. According to rumors, many weird things had happened since the project started, and for the sake of good luck, the residence was called Ming Yang ¹. You know what happened later. The police suddenly stormed the city, and the kid started crying nonstop like he was cursed...”

Ma Fu was lying on the ground and looked at the people out of the corner of his eyes. His story ended there.

“Lee Zheng, contact the people at the station immediately and tell them to check the address that he gave.” Captain Yan left the cell. He was afraid that he might hurt Ma Fu if he stayed. “In ten minutes, I need the details of all the tenants.”

“You done?” The officer turned to Chen Ge. Only he remained unmoved. After hearing what Ma Fu had to say, Chen Ge was reminded of the shadow monster that he had met outside of the fresh water plant. It was a reflection of Chen Ge like it had the ability to become a person's shadow.

“Zhang Ya is hiding inside my shadow, could the monster have fought her that night?” Chen Ge did not have a clear answer. He did not plan to summon Zhang Ya for a small question like that either. What if she refused to return after that?

After leaving the cell, they did not walk for that long before Captain Yan received the call from the station. The information had been gathered.

“Ming Yang Residence is still under construction after seven years?” Captain Yan stopped moving as he read the message on his phone. He waved at Chen Ge. “Found the tenant of Room 104, his name is Jia Ming. We will investigate this further.”

“You already got the name? The efficiency...” Chen Ge paused in shock.

Wait, Jia Ming? Isn't that Huang Ling's 'ghost' husband's name? But that isn't right! The thing with the phone spirit happened seven years ago, and at the time, Jia Ming hadn't been possessed yet...

“You know this man?” Captain Yan saw something on the change to Chen Ge’s expression.

“Last night, it rained heavily. One of my employees was stranded at the bus stop with Jia Ming’s wife. He called me for help, so I called a taxi to go fetch them and helped take Jia Ming’s wife home. That was how I met the man.” Jia Ming’s situation was rather unique, and he was related to the last bus on Route 104, so Chen Ge did not go into detail. Instead, he quickly changed the topic. “Can I see the information on Jia Ming?”

...

Captain Yan passed his phone to Chen Ge. It not only had Jia Ming’s phone but also his work history and the comments that his employers had for him. “Jia Ming once came to the station due to an altercation with a client, so we have his information in our system.”

Chen Ge accepted Captain Yan’s phone. Jia Ming was just over thirty this year. He had arrived in Jiujiang around ten years ago, and he had done many jobs in the past, but none of them had lasted long. However, the reason for his dismissals were not because he was not good nor because he had problematic personality. In contrast, Jia Ming, who had just arrived in Jiujiang, was honest and hard-working. His only weakness was that he was too stubborn.

The young Jia Ming was similar to Xiao Gu in a way, a straight shooter who did not know how to adapt. Because of that, he would accidentally offend people. When he was sent to the police station, technically speaking, the fault did not lie with him. At the time, both he and his wife worked at an insurance company. One of the clients got into car accident, and the family demanded a settlement. However, based on the report of the accident, the client got into accident because he was driving under influence. Because of that, the company could reject the settlement.

Jia Ming followed the company’s rules closely, but the client’s family did not understand that. They would call daily to scold and insult him. In the end, they called people to create a fight at the insurance company. The client's family came from power. The manager closed the door and hid in his office. He tossed Jia Ming out to be the scapegoat. After he was beaten up and humiliated, out of self-defense, Jia Ming grabbed the scissors on the table and accidentally slashed the client.

That was when things had gone from bad to worse. The wound was very light, but the client called the police immediately. The police came to mediate, but it failed. The client would not rest until Jia Ming was arrested. The injury on the client was not serious, but the family refused to let it go. The company refused to compensate them, so this dragged on. The worst victim of all this was none other than Jia Ming.

To save him from the police station, Jia Ming's wife, Huang Ling, practically travelled to the station daily. After he left the station, Jia Ming quit his job out of anger. After that, Jia Ming's working life dropped into a weird cycle. He kept looking for work and kept quitting. He hated human interaction and became increasingly resistant to human conversation.

The misery did not stop there. Jia Ming got into a car accident and broke one of his legs. Since then, he had remained cooped up at home and refused to go out for work anymore. The information provided by police gave Chen Ge a fuller understanding of Jia Ming. Before he dealt with the ghosts, even though Jia Ming's life was not perfect, at least he had good morals and would not do something like child kidnapping.

"Did something go wrong? Why would the buyer select Jia Ming's home as the address?" Chen Ge returned the phone to Captain Yan. He was not defending Jia Ming; he was merely viewing this from an objective view. "Could this be a coincidence? At the time, Ming Yang Residence was still under construction, and few people stayed at the place. Could it be that the buyer just needed a random place to complete the transaction?"

"It's hard to say. Tomorrow, we will send someone to follow up on this case." Captain Yan put away his phone and led Chen Ge and Lee Zheng outside. When they were at the door, they saw an officer holding a bag of sweets as he headed to Ma Fu's cell.

"You guys even feed the criminal sweets?" As it was Chen Ge's first time at a prison, he thought that this was the place's rules.

“Why would we be so free?” the officer answered casually. “After Ma Fu recovers from his mania, he will ask for sweet. If we refuse, he will try to peel his skin off. After experiencing that a few times, everyone on duty now keeps several bags of sweets in the office just in case.”

“Sweets can help with his symptoms?” Chen Ge thought about it and realized it probably had something to do with Ma Fu’s past. Perhaps the children in his body were asking for sweets. After taking another step, the phone in Chen Ge’s pocket suddenly rang. “Huang Ling? Why would she call me at a time like this?”

“Your friend?” Captain Yan thought the name was familiar like he had seen it somewhere before.

Chen Ge shook his head. “She’s Jia Ming’s wife. The woman I dropped at her place with my employee last night.”

“Why would she call you?” Lee Zheng asked.

“Perhaps just to thank me?” Chen Ge accepted the call before Captain Yan and Lee Zheng. “Hello? How can I help you?”

“Are you Chen Ge? Last night, did you call a taxi to head to Eastern Jiujiang?” An unfamiliar male voice came from the phone.

“I did call a taxi to Eastern Jiujiang last night. What’s wrong?” Chen Ge thought the man’s voice was very unfamiliar. He had not heard it before.

“We’ve finally got you. I’m calling from Eastern Jiujiang’s police station. Please come over to us immediately!” The man on the phone was tough and loud. Even Captain Yan and Lee Zheng could hear him.

“You have to give me a reason for summoning me, right?” Chen Ge felt this was strange. He had been honest lately. Why would Eastern Jiujiang’s police station summon him?

“You need us to remind you what you have done? Get over here now to assist the investigation!” Chen Ge planned to visit Ming Yang Residence that night, and he did not want to waste time. “I’m afraid that’s not possible. I’m now at the prison, and this is not somewhere that I can leave just like that.”

“The prison?” The officer did not expect such an answer from Chen Ge. “Okay, then you tell the people to call the prison director, Director Wang. No matter what, you have to come tonight.”

“The prison director is not Director Wang but Director Bai.” Captain Yan already recognized the person on the phone. He took Chen Ge’s phone and said, “Tian Lei, this is Ol’ Yan from the branch station. Chen Ge is now with me, what crime has he committed?”

“Captain Yan?” The man on the phone-startled, and his tone softened plenty. “Last night, when it was almost dawn, there was a taxi driver that called us saying he was abducted. He was supposed to be in Western Jiujiang, but when he woke up, he was in Eastern Jiujiang. The camera and driving record were all ruined, and we suspect that the culprit is someone antisocial but with high intelligence. After a brief investigation, we suspect the culprit is Chen Ge.”

“Where are you getting all this information? Don’t randomly accuse people without a clear investigation. This should be a misunderstanding. I’ll bring him there with me in a bit.” After hanging up, Captain Yan returned the phone to Chen Ge.

“Captain Yan, what happened?” Lee Zheng asked softly. He was quite good with Chen Ge.

“It was a call from Eastern Jiujiang police station.” Captain Yan’s expression was weird as he turned to look at Chen Ge. “A few days ago, Ol’ Lee complained to me that work at Western Jiujiang was too harsh, and he wanted to transfer to Eastern Jiujiang.”

Chapter 509: That Is the Man!

Lee Zheng drove Chen Ge and Captain Yan to Eastern Jiujiang police station. On the way, Chen Ge did not say a word. Eastern Jiujiang police station had used Huang Ling's phone to call him, meaning they had already interrogated Huang Ling, and Huang Ling had probably sold him out. He just worried that Huang Ling had also told them about the last bus.

The previous night, Huang Ling had driven the taxi back to Eastern Jiujiang, and the taxi driver had stayed inside the car. What happened to them later, Chen Ge did not know. Now that the driver had called the police, Chen Ge had to be prepared to not let things go down a route that would be unbeneficial to him. The three arrived at their destination in less than twenty minutes.

...

"Ol' Tian, you sure are a hard worker. Even now, you're still at work." Once Captain Yan stepped into the room, he saw a group of officers chatting among themselves. He turned to address the officer who looked the most muscular.

"I'm sorry to have you make this journey." Tian Lei told the officers next to him something and then walked to his office. "We'll talk inside."

"Okay." Captain Yan and Lee Zheng followed while Chen Ge stood for a while in the lobby. The atmosphere there was different to Western Jiujiang Police Station where Uncle San Bao was posted. The place was neatly arranged, and there were two rows of chairs placed in the corner. Leaning unsteadily against the corner was a drunkard while there was an old man with a blank expression on the other side.

Of the two officers that had spoken to Tian Lei earlier, one of them was patiently conversing with the old man, asking him for his address, but the man only mumbled incoherent nonsense.

The other officer rolled up his sleeves and grabbed the mop to clean up the drunkard's vomit. With a frown, he grumbled, "People in Western Jiujiang have heavy crimes every few days, and here, we are cleaning up vomit and taking care of drunkards and old people. We're the police, not a nursery."

"Pipe down. If the director hears you, you're going to get it. You're complaining that there's no serious case? You have no idea how much people from Western Jiujiang envy us." The other officer rubbed the old man's frozen hands to help soothe him to increase the blood flow. It looked like this was not the first time that he had come across something like this. "Xiao Qing, after you're done, go help me pour a glass of warm water for the old gentleman and grab me the blanket as well."

"Don't call me Xiao Qing!" The young police man placed the mop back and continued to grouse. "This is different from what I imagine a police officer's life would be like."

He walked to the water machine and saw Chen Ge. "Why are you still standing there?"

"I'm just looking around." Chen Ge walked past the young officer and added casually, "Actually I don't think you need to envy Western Jiujiang's police station. I have a feeling that things are going to get quite busy around here."

"I sure hope so, or else my limbs are going to get so rusted." The young officer looked at Chen Ge, and he felt he looked so familiar. As he opened the office door, several eyes fell on Chen Ge. Instantly, a familiar voice said, "That's him! That's the person who called my service last night! He wanted to go to Eastern Jiujiang's fresh water plant around midnight. I knew something was wrong with him!"

"If you knew something was wrong with me, why didn't you say it sooner?" Chen Ge was rather speechless. He was one of the victims as well.

"Police officer, you see? You see how arrogant and proud this man is!" The driver was not that old. He had been so scared back then, but he had calmed down now.

"Stop arguing." Tian Lei was tired. He did not expect Captain Yan would show up; this disrupted his plan. "Captain Yan, you've seen the written record, and we've checked the video surveillance at New Century Park's entrance. Last night, Chen Ge did hail a cab to get to Eastern Jiujiang."

“What about the video after that? Now the biggest problem is at the fresh water plant. The driver said that Chen Ge used some special method to knock him out, but what kind of method, he could not remember. If the driver cannot tell us what really happen, the entire accusation barely holds water.” Captain Yan looked at the record and easily picked out the problems.

“The surveillance at the fresh water plant was all destroyed beforehand. I feel like this is a premeditated crime.” Tian Lei took out another document. “This morning, we had the people from the tech department look over the driving record and camera inside the taxi. The damage was expertly done. The machine itself wasn’t damaged, so this could be a high-tech criminal.”

Captain Yan turned to look at Chen Ge and put the document down. “Does he look like someone who knows how to do that to you?”

“One can never tell. We cannot judge a book by its cover.” Tian Lei insisted on his conclusion. Captain Yan knew that he would not be able to convince Tian Lei, so he turned to the driver. “On the record, you said that you fainted at the fresh water plant but woke up at an old residence in Eastern Jiujiang?”

“Yes.” The driver was a good observer. He saw that Captain Yan was the leader, so his tone was reverential. “When I woke up, there was a paper note next to me. It had a phone number and these few words—My name is Huang Ling. I live on the 4th floor.”

“This means you did not lose your money or your phone? The person was even so kind as to leave you a note and did not run from the responsibility?”

“Hey, you can’t just brush it off like that!” The driver sweated. “I’m just a normal taxi driver. I was waiting in the car, and suddenly, I fainted. When I woke up, I was at a strange place. Who would be able to accept that so easily? And the person on the call, just talking about it made me mad. I never thought to call the police. At the time, I was so afraid, so I made the call. Guess what happened?”

Everyone turned to look at the driver. “What did the person on the phone say? Threatened you? Refused to give you compensation?”

“This is already beyond that. My god. I just made the call and barely said anything, and it sounded like there was a murder. A woman was screaming for help at the top of her lungs. Then before I can say a second word, the call was ended. Tell me, wouldn’t you be afraid if this happened to you?" The driver was agitated, and he got up from his seat.

"You said you called the lady? She was asking for help?" Chen Ge's eyes turned serious and he also stood up. "Did you go upstairs to see if something had happened to the woman?"

"I don't have the courage to do that. This is the thing that made me angry the most. I thought that there was a real murder, and when the police arrived around dawn, they went to the house to check. The wife suffers from a mental illness, and she was acting up last night."

"I can prove that. We communicated with the woman's husband." Tian Lei told the driver to sit down and took out a bag from his drawer. There was a phone inside. "This is the mad woman's phone. All the phone records have been deleted, but we discovered something weird."

He looked at Chen Ge. "Why would the patient have your number as her first speed dial? What is your relationship with her?"

Chapter 510 - Ming Yang Residence [2 in 1]

Chapter 510: Ming Yang Residence [2 in 1]

Chen Ge was silent as he fell under Tian Lei's scrutiny. Then, he said something that shocked everyone there. "Last night, when my employee and I dropped Huang Ling at her home, she revealed to us that her husband was a mental patient with serious control issues."

"The crazy person is not her but her husband?" Tian Lei put down his phone. "What evidence do you have to make that claim?"

...

"Huang Ling has been working to support the whole family. Her husband cooped himself up at home and rejected human communication. From how they both carried themselves, it is clear that Jia Ming is the one that has a bigger possibility of being a mental patient." Chen Ge turned to Captain Yan. "Before this, I asked Captain Yan to investigate Jia Ming; you can ask Captain Yan for the details."

"You have not seen them in person and barely investigated, so how could you make such a rushed conclusion? I've met both Jia Ming and Huang Ling already. Even Huang Ling herself thought she was sick, but you said it was her husband that is sick. Don't tell me you know the patient better than she knows herself?"

Worried that there might be an accident, Tian Lei had rushed to Huang Ling's home early in the morning after getting the report from the taxi driver. He did not see the so-called murder, and there was no domestic violence. There was not one trace of injury or wound on Huang Ling's body.

"I still insist on my point of view. I feel like you have been tricked by Huang Ling's husband. He was once a kind and gentle person, but people change. After being let down by life again and again, there is now a demon living inside his body." Things had developed out of his expectations. Before Huang Ling could investigate, she had been taken over by the ghost. This triggered a sense of alarm within Chen Ge. "The opponent this time is very cunning; I shan't let my guard down."

Chen Ge and Tian Lei argued nonstop, and the taxi driver was confused. Who was the real mental patient? Who was lying? He never once considered that, but there was one thing that was certain—he was never going to drive to Eastern Jiujiang in the middle of the night again.

“Please, both of you. Quiet down.” Captain Yan wanted Chen Ge and Tian Lei to stop arguing. “Do you have the written records from Huang Ling and her husband?”

“We only have the one given by her husband. Huang Ling suffered from a mental breakdown last night. We were afraid of triggering her, so we just asked a few simple questions.” Tian Lei was stationed in Eastern Jiujiang, so he was more attached to the citizens there compared to those who came from Western Jiujiang. However, at times, attachment and kindness could cloud one’s objective analysis.

“The direction of your investigation was wrong from the beginning. It was Huang Ling who was with Chen Ge last night, and it was also Huang Ling who drove the taxi and left the note for the taxi driver. This woman is the most crucial part of the entire case.” Captain Yan dropped the record that the officers from Eastern Jiujiang had collected on the table. “Come, we’ll go to Huang Ling’s place now. I also wish to meet them in person.”

“You also wish to go? There’s no need. Just leave this case to us.” Tian Lei did not realize the severity of the issue that was hiding behind this case. He believed that their own officers could handle this case perfectly fine.

“Since I’ve run into this case, then I’ll just take a look. I can’t just walk away—that is not what a police officer should do.” Captain Yan opened the office door and walked out immediately. Lee Zheng and Chen Ge followed closely behind him. Soon, only Tian Lei and the taxi driver were left inside the room.

“Sir, what is happening now? Can I leave already?” The driver had already gave up hope that he would get any more compensation.

“Why don’t you come with us? You’re the victim; you should be there.” Tian Lei put on his cap and also walked out of his office. “Xiao Qing, Xiao Wen, stay back to look over the place. We might be working late tonight. If there’s an emergency, just call me.”

“Captain Tian, where are you going?” Xiao Qing had just cleaned up the floor, but the drunkard vomited once more.

“To solve a case.” Tian Lei waved his hand and led the driver out of the police station.

The two police cars arrived at Huang Ling’s place around 9 pm.

“Captain Yan, isn’t it a bit rude for us to show up like this without informing them?” Tian Lei jogged over after he got out from his car.

“Haven’t you informed them this morning already?”

“But the rules...”

The group reached the fourth floor and knocked on the door for a long time before they heard footsteps coming from inside the room.

“Who is it?” The man was very cautious and did not open the door immediately.

“We’re the police. Please open the door now to assist in our investigation.”

“Inspector Tian?” The door was pushed open, and a haggard looking middle-aged man pushed his head out. “Why did you come back? Didn’t you ask everything in the morning?”

“We’ll talk inside.” The few people all entered the room. Chen Ge followed at the back and kept his presence low. The place was not big, and it looked very spartan. The couch was old, likely a second-hand purchase. There was a stain on the coffee table, and a bag of fruit candy was sitting on top of it.

“Sit anywhere you want.” The middle-aged man looked much older than he actually was. He walked into the kitchen and came out with several glasses of water.

“Where is your wife? Is she doing better? Actually, we have a few questions to ask her.” On the surface, Captain Yan asked about Huang Ling, but in reality, he kept his gaze on the middle-aged man’s face to focus on the changes to his expression.

“She is feeling much better. I’ll go get her.” The middle-aged man walked to the bedroom door and knocked on it lightly. “Huang Ling, the police officers want to ask you something.”

Several minutes later, a woman who looked like she had lost all will to live dragged herself out from the bedroom.

“You’re Huang Ling?” Captain Yan studied the woman before him for a very long time. How she looked in person was so different from the picture. “Where did you run into Chen Ge last night? Why would you set his phone number as your no. 1 speed dial?”

“I cannot remember anymore. I cannot remember anything that happened last night.” The woman sat on the sofa, and she did not even look at Chen Ge to acknowledge his presence.

“You don’t have any memory at all?”

“No! No! No!” Huang Ling suddenly raised her voice, and she used both of her hands to knock heavily on her head. Jia Ming, who was closest to her, did not rush over to help immediately, but it was Chen Ge and Tian Lei, who were further away, that stepped up to the plate. They grabbed Huang Ling’s arms at the same time. “Please calm down!”

“I did not see anything! I did not see anything last night!” Huang Ling was weirdly agitated.

“This was how she reacted when we arrived this morning. She would act up whenever we brought up anything related to last night.” Tian Lei leaned back to inform Captain Yan after Huang Ling calmed down slightly. “She was already a sick person. She probably was traumatized last night, and it exacerbated her condition.”

“There has to be a trigger that caused this change in her.” Captain Yan turned to look at Jia Ming, who stood to the side. “What did you do last night?”

“I was staying at home the whole night. When Huang Ling returned, she was already acting strangely like she was being threatened by someone. The condition was similar to what happened earlier. Whenever I tried to ask her what happened, she would hit her own head heavily.”

After Jia Ming said that, he silently looked around the room and added, “What happened to them last night, you should ask the taxi driver and the creep called Chen Ge. They were together last night.”

Jia Ming was very familiar with his wife’s condition. After Huang Ling stopped struggling, he picked up a candy from the table and placed it in Huang Ling’s mouth. Weirdly enough, once the candy entered the woman’s mouth, Huang Ling calmed down almost immediately.

“She likes candy?” Captain Yan and Chen Ge noticed this detail, and they were both instantly reminded of Ma Fu, whom they just met at the prison. When Ma Fu was acting up, only by feeding him candy would he be able to calm down.

“But the candy is not medicine, right? Why would it have this calming property?” Captain Yan was confused, but Chen Ge next to him had a brief idea already. Ma Fu was able to calm down after eating the sweets because several children’s souls had entered his body. The children seemed to be interested in the candy. Following that vein of thought, Huang Ling’s body might be playing host to one or several ‘children’.

“It’s just a very normal candy. If you don’t believe me, you can take a few to conduct tests on it.” Jia Ming then picked up the bag of candy and gave it to Captain Yan. Captain Yan did not accept it but reached out to pick out one candy. “One is enough. Thank you.”

Huang Ling finally settled down. Captain Yan did not have any questions for her anymore. He had Lee Zheng help her back to the bedroom to rest. He and Tian Lei asked Jia Ming a few more questions. They only prepared to leave around 11 pm.

“Thank you for your cooperation. We will definitely uncover the truth.” Captain Yan walked at the front. After the other officers left the room, Chen Ge only moved away his gaze that had been staring at the bedroom door. Now, only Jia Ming and Chen Ge remained in the room, and the room temperature was drastically dropping.

“My friend, how can I help you? Do you have any question you want to ask?”

“It’s nothing. It’s not simple for you to take care of a mentally-unstable woman by yourself.” Chen Fe tapped Jia Ming’s shoulders lightly. He did not say anything else and headed out the door. After they were downstairs, Lee Zheng took out his phone and silently walked near to Captain Yan. “When I sent Huang Ling back into the bedroom, I snapped a few pictures of the interior. There doesn’t seem to be any problems. This Jia Ming doesn’t have a motive to commit this crime.”

“Jia Ming is definitely related somehow to Huang Ling’s mental illness,” Captain Yan said firmly. “When Huang Ling was acting up earlier, Jia Ming was closest to her, but he just stood there, not doing anything. There were many similar details.”

“However, based on Tian Lei and his team’s investigation, all of the neighbors only had good thing to say about Jia Ming. They thought that he was a very good guy. Haven’t we looked through this man’s working history? No matter how you look at it, he is a good person. Why would someone like this torture his wife until she went crazy?” Lee Zheng had studied criminal psychology before. The change in human character has a process and symptoms. Jia Ming’s performance was different from the thing that was described in the books.

“Will a good person be good forever?” Captain Yan looked at the candy in his hand before opening the wrapping.

“But a good person will have a moral compass in their heart, and they will not do things that are too over the line.”

“That’s where you’re wrong. When a good person loses their moral compass, they will become even worse, falling into the endless abyss.” Captain Yan placed the candy inside his mouth and added an observation seemingly out of nowhere. “This is because he knows the candy is no longer sweet.”

Opening the door of the police car, Captain Yan gave Lee Zheng one final order. “Your team has done a very good job solving the case of the eye-gouging murderer. Team two can temporarily take over the rest of the case. I want you and your team to silently investigate the case of Jia Ming and Huang Ling.”

“Captain Yan, isn’t this case under the Eastern Jiujiang’s police station’s jurisdiction? Isn’t it a bit over the line if we go ahead and butt in?” He did not think that the case was small, but Lee Zheng said so because he was worried that the people from Eastern Jiujiang Police Station might have some comments.

“That is why I told you to carry out your investigation in the dark.” Captain Yan’s fingers tapped the edge of the car window, and his countenance slowly turned serious. “Keep your eyes open. I have a feeling this is related to a very big case.”

“It shouldn’t be. Eastern Jiujiang has always been peaceful.” Lee Zheng also turned serious. He knew that Captain Yan was not one to joke around. “It has been peaceful, yes, but now...”

Before Captain Yan could finish, the door opened, and Chen Ge, who had just gotten down the stairs, very expertly crawled into the police car. “Sorry I’m late.”

"It's fine. Lee Zheng, we'll go back to New Century Park to drop Chen Ge off first." Lee Zheng and Captain Yan both stopped talking about the earlier topic.

"Thank you, do you mind driving faster?" Chen Ge said. He still had something else to do that night. After the police left, he had touched Jia Ming's body. He wanted to use the ghost on his person to test out the enemy. However, after he laid his hand on Jia Ming, Chen Ge had realized that other than Zhang Ya in his shadow, he did not carry any other employees with him. He had left his backpack at the haunted house.

Chen Ge was unable to command Zhang Ya, and he was afraid that his action might alert Jia Ming, so he prepared to return to New Century Park to grab all of his equipment and turn back later, using the most direct method to get to the bottom of the truth.

The police car had not started when an old lady walked out from the stairs. The old lady walked slowly to the car and tapped lightly on the car window.

"How can I help you?" Captain Yan opened the car door and stepped out.

"Sir, my son bought me an apartment at Ming Yang Residence. It has been several years already since then, but I still am unable to move into that house. Can you ask around to find out when the place will be completed?" The old lady sounded so saddened that one was unable to say no.

"Ming Yang Residence? Okay, I will help you ask around. Please return to your room. It's getting late, and the winds are strong." Captain Yan walked the old lady back to her room and returned to the car. "Go and get Tian Lei. He should be more familiar with this place."

Lee Zheng called behind him, and Tian Lei got out from his police car and raced to Captain Yan. "Captain Yan, are you looking for me?"

"How much do you know about Ming Yang Residence?"

Tian Lei shook his head. "The Ming Yang Residence project has been inactive for many years already. The tenants come and create trouble every year, and we have to send out our people to talk to them and tell them that we pity them. We know that most of them have used all of the saving to buy this place, but this is something that can't be helped."

“Something that can’t be helped?” Captain Yan raised his head.

“There have been three investors. The first one died from illness, the second one got into a car accident when the place was half-built, and the third one decided to commit suicide by jumping off the half-finished building in the middle of the night. Rumors started flying around that the place is cursed, so no one dares to take over anymore.”

“All three investors met a bad end; this shouldn’t be a coincidence.” Captain Yan thought about it and told Lee Zheng, “When we get back, go and pull all the records on Ming Yang Residence.”

“Okay.” Lee Zheng gave an okay sign.

“Captain Yan, I suggest you stay away from this. That Ming Yang Residence is a hot mess; anyone who gets too close to it will be unlucky.” Tian Lei seemed to have experienced that himself.

“Also, you. I need a file from you as well.” Captain Yan raised the car window and ignored Tian Lei, who stood next to the car with an unhappy face.

The car engine started. After they left the area, Captain Yan suddenly turned to look at Chen Ge and tossed out a random question. “Chen Ge, did you know Jia Ming before this?”

“No,” Chen Ge answered on reflex.

Captain Yan nodded, and his expression softened. “You’d better watch over yourself. I have a feeling that Jia Ming has a strange hostility against you. During the questioning, he kept coming up with ways to push the blame on you.”

“Blame me?” Chen Ge felt like it should be because Jia Ming felt threatened by him, and that was why he used these dirty tactics on him.

“Just be careful. We’ll handle the bigger picture, and more than that, the trust I have in you is not something that can be shaken with a few words.” Captain Yan’s words were a huge comfort to Chen Ge. “Please don’t intervene in the things in Eastern Jiujiang. Leave it to us.”

...

Probably he was still worried, Captain Yan added, “I’ve already arranged special people to take over. Just wait for the good news.”

Chen Ge nodded, but he was already planning the action tonight. Huang Ling was innocent. Letting her stay with the devil worried Chen Ge. The man might do something even worse to her. The police car drove out the residential area. They drove for about a hundred meters when Tian Lei’s voice came through the walkie-talkie.

“Captain Yan, I just communicated with the officers at the station, and we found something weird.”

“Speak.”

“Nine years ago, Jia Ming was working at Qin Tai Insurance. The client that he had the altercation with was one of the three investors for Ming Yang Residence—Jiang Long.” Tian Lei sounded weird on the phone. It was different from before. “Several years ago, Jiang Long’s car got into an accident with the last bus on Route 104. Jiang Long died on the spot, and I’ve informed you earlier, the second investor that died in an accident was him.”

“But how is that related to Jia Ming?”

“Let me continue. The coincidence is that, several years later, Jia Ming got into an accident as well, and the accident was again with the last bus on Route 104. We saw the video from back then and realized that it was Jia Ming who voluntarily walked forward to be hit by the bus. And the location that he was hit was exactly the same as where Jiang Long was hit!” Tian Lei’s voice slowly grew like he had made some great discovery.

“In other words, this Jia Ming is the actual mental patient?” Lee Zheng did not quite get what Tian Lei was saying.

“That I can’t tell. What I know is that Xiao Jing just looked through the registration for the tenant, and the address for the second investor, Jiang Ling, has been changed to Ming Yang Residence Room 104. The actual owner of this place was Jia Ming.”

“Someone changed Jiang Long’s registration?”

“Who would be so bored to change a dead person’s registration? Plus, the man is dead—why would someone care about his address?” Neither Tian Lei nor Lee Zheng understood it. Of everyone there, only Chen Ge who looked out the window had a flash of understanding cross his eyes.

The address on Jiang Long’s registration changed to match Jia Ming’s; this could represent that the ghost that escaped from bus 104, the ghost that took over Jia Ming’s body, was none other than Jiang Long. He became the new owner for Room 104.

Jiang Long got into an accident with the bus on Route 104; that should just be a coincidence. After the accident, Jiang Long’s soul was trapped on the bus, and he wanted to use Jia Ming as his replacement. That would be how a normal person think, but having completed many missions on the black phone, Chen Ge had a more rounded thinking compared to most; he would not give up any small details.

All three investors of Ming Yang Residence met bad endings. If these were all accidents, then it would be too much of a coincidence. This means that all that killings are probably premeditated. Chen Ge was more and more curious. Why would Jiang Ling target Jia Ming? Is there something special about Jia Ming, or was he just unlucky to have bought Room 104?

Jiang Long and Jia Ming were like Heaven and Earth in terms of background and wealth, so Chen Ge could not understand why Jiang Long would choose Jia Ming.

“Room 104? Someone has entered the registration server? Stop the car!” Captain Yan had been silent, and he rarely made his thoughts known, but once he did, there was no need for discussion. “Tian Lei, help me drive Chen Ge back to New Century Park. Lee Zheng and I will go to Room 104 to check the place out.”

“Captain Yan, it’s too dangerous to go to that place now. I feel like we should make a decision after daybreak.” Chen Ge’s fingers fidgeted. Without the hammer, he just felt like something was missing.

Captain Yan shook his head. “Never underestimate your opponent. If Jia Ming is really problematic, then when we showed up earlier, we will have already tipped our hands. He might do something tonight to destroy the evidence.”

“But we’re not familiar with Eastern Jiujiang, and there were so many weird things happening at Ming Yang Residence. Isn’t it a bit reckless to go there with just the few of us?” Chen Ge asked.

“You know the meaning of the word, reckless?” Captain Yan turned to look at Chen Ge before turning away. “This should be you goading me into action, right?”

Chen Ge really did not expect Captain Yan to view him in such a manner; he was feeling quite helpless.

“Enough, you go and take Ol’ Tian’s car, leave the rest of us.” Captain Yan had Lee Zheng open the door, but Chen Ge refused to leave. They were all adults, and they were quite helpless seeing Chen Ge act like this.

“The damn young man doesn’t look so muscular, but why is he so powerful?” Tian Lei tried to yank Chen Ge out of the car, but he was unable to move the man.

“Captain Yan, please let me go with you. I really am afraid that you might run into danger.”

“No matter the case, we always put the citizens’ safety first. In other words, your safety is more important than the case, understood?”

“Quick, get out from the car. This is the first time I have seen someone refusing to leave the police car.”

After two more minutes of back and forth, and under Chen Ge’s insistence, Captain Yan finally relented. The two police cars turned to head to a more isolated part of Eastern Jiujiang. Ten minutes later, they arrived at Ming Yang Residence. This place was close to Li Wan

City.

“This sure is in the middle of nowhere.” Once he got out from the car, Chen Ge sighed. The area was covered with grass the old buildings stood in the dark. The front two buildings were almost ready, and the two buildings at the back were mostly just starting the construction.

“This is such a waste.” Tian Lei pulled out the police-use flashlight. “I’ve been here before, so I’ll lead the way.”

They had just moved in with Chen Ge felt something wrong. “Isn’t Ming Yang Residence completely abandoned? Why would there be light?”

With his Yin Yang Vision, even over such a distance, Chen Ge could see the lights coming from the building at the forefront.

“This place has no water and electricity. Who would live here?” Tian Lei was equally confused.

“Stop guessing, we’ll know once we get there.” Captain Yan and Tian Lei walked into the residential area. Chen Ge looked at the weak light and fell into deep thought.

“The construction was stopped halfway, and the electrical circuit has not been completed, so there isn’t electricity. Then, what is giving out light in the building?” The four buildings stood in the dark. The lights that came from the building were like eyes that were looking at the approaching people.

Lee Zheng saw that Chen Ge did not follow, so he turned back to yell, “Chen Ge, don’t stay too far from us, and keep your guard up!”

“Understood.” Chen Ge knew that Lee Zheng was only worried about him, so he rushed to his side. “I just thought it was weird. The buildings have no electricity, so why are lights coming out from the room?”

“There could be many reasons. It could be reflection of the moonlight, or perhaps there are squatters. No matter the reason, we have to be careful when exploring abandoned buildings like this.” Lee Zheng seemed to have a bad memory. “Abandoned factories or warehouses in the countryside for the favorite places for people with illegal backgrounds to hide. There are also crazy madmen who prefer these kinds of places to conduct their weird rituals. I once oversaw a case where the killer has been stealing dead bodies from the hospital, attempting to summon a legendary monster from a myth. In the end, we apprehended the person inside an underground sewer.”

“Summoning a ghost inside an underground sewer? Has he considered how the ghost feels?”

Chen Ge’s answer stumped Lee Zheng. He did not know how to continue. “You sure have an interesting mind. Never mind, I’m not going to chat with you anymore. Just understand that it’s dangerous here.”

Ming Yang Residence was huge. The four unfinished buildings stood before their eyes, and they looked like four tombstones. The night breeze swayed the grass and leaves. Looking up from the ground, there was an ominous feeling, like the four buildings could collapse at any moment and bury them alive.

“Shall we head toward the light first?” Lee Zheng suggested. “The closest light is on the second floor of the first building. Since we’re going to pass it anyway, why don’t we go check it out?”

“Yes, Room 104 is on the tenth floor. As we go up, we can check all the rooms once. Perhaps we might find some clues.” Tian Lei was very familiar with Ming Yang Residence; he had once handled the cases of the investors.

“Room 104 is on the tenth floor, huh? How did they arrange the room number?”

“The front two numbers are the floor number, and the third number is the room number, so Room 104 is the fourth room on the tenth floor,” Tian Lei explained to Chen Ge.

“But there are four buildings here. Does that mean that there are four ‘Room 104’s?”

“The numbering of the four rooms on the tenth floor of the first building is one to four and the second building is five to eight, so the condition you mentioned doesn’t happen.”

“The room numbers of the different buildings are linked together?” Chen Ge was just curious, but what Tian Lei said gave him some idea. “Why would the designer do that?”

“Apparently, it was a request of the investor. They even planned to build bridges between the buildings to connect the four buildings. They planned to make Ming Yang Residence the landmark in Jiujiang, but that obviously did not come to be.”

“Shush, we’re preparing to enter the building now.” Captain Yan held the flashlight and was the first to enter the dark building.

“To join four buildings together?” Chen Ge remembered this. There had to be a reason behind the death of all the investors.

After they entered the stairs, the temperature noticeably dropped. There was a chill in the air like every breath that they took was filled with cold air. There were many rivers that cut through Eastern Jiujiang, so this place had comparatively more moisture than other places in Jiujiang. Lichen grew on the walls, and the plaster was wrinkled. As one's finger cut across it, one could peel back a large piece.

"The light came from this room." The group turned the corner of the second floor and stopped before one of the rooms.

"Lee Zheng, go in first. Tian Lei will cover you."

"Yes."

The three officers did not carry their weapon, so they were very careful. Lee Zheng entered the room with the flashlight raised. There were weird pictures on the wall, and trash littered the ground. These things proved that someone had been staying there.

There was a small sound coming from inside the bedroom. A glass bottle tipped over.

"Come out now! I'm the team leader of investigation team one—Lee Zheng! Come out of the room now and cooperate with the investigation!" Lee Zheng shone the light into the room, and soon, a homeless person walked out from it. He looked around sixty, and his beard and hair grew together. He was wearing a tattered sweater and coat. Even with two layers, he was still shivering. He was wearing a frayed cap and gloves with his fingers showing.

"Name and age, why are you here?" Perhaps Lee Zheng's uniform was useful because the homeless person did not resist and act honestly.

"My surname is Zheng. Full name... cannot remember anymore. I'm the seventh of the family." Probably because he did not speak often, the man spoke very slowly. "I just want to find a place to hide from the rain. Since the building is abandoned, I stayed here. If you want me to move, I will leave now."

"Lee Zheng, put the light down." Captain Yan walked into the room and looked at the man for a long time. "The weather is so hot, but you're so wrapped up—aren't you hot?"

"No, I'm very cold." From the man's answer, his mind was still working. He did not appear to have any mental problems. However, he was wearing so many layers like he was already in the winter.

"Cold?" Captain Yan looked into the bedroom that the man had vacated. "Stand there by the wall. We won't hurt you. For the sake of your safety, I suggest you don't live here alone. Jiujiang has many shelters; you can seek help there."

Captain Yan took one step forward, and the man became nervous.

"You're afraid?" Captain Yan moved his eyes away from the man's face and suddenly picked up speed to run into the bedroom.

"Don't!" The man wanted to stop him, but it was too late. Lee Zheng and Tian Lei stopped him. "Don't go in! You'll all die!"

"Be quiet!"

The man screamed, and his face filled with terror. He was unable to stop Captain Yan and Chen Ge. The bedroom was small, and it was thick with a bad stench. Broken dolls were piled up in the middle of the room.

"It wasn't me who killed them. I just accidentally found them; I have not killed anyone." The man started to struggle like he had gone insane. "I didn't kill anyone! It's not me!"

"These are all dolls, so of course, we know you didn't kill them. Quiet down." Tian Lei pressed the man against the wall, and when he turned around to look at the broken toys, he also took in a cold breath.

“Are you blind? Those are not dolls; those are dead bodies! Let me go!” No matter how hard the homeless man tried to struggle, he was unable to escape from Lee Zheng and Tian Lei’s grasp. He finally quieted down after a few minutes.

“No wonder he’s homeless—the man is mad.” The man stopped resisting, so Tian Lei relaxed. However, Lee Zheng acted different from Tian Lei. He took out a handcuff to apprehend the man.

“Hey, Ol’ Lee, it’s just a mad homeless person. Is that really necessary?”

Lee Zheng kicked the trash next to them aside to reveal several hidden, sharpened metal sticks. “Don’t let your guard down. These people could do anything when they’re pushed to their edge.”

Seeing those hidden weapons, Tian Lei stopped talking. He remembered that the man had been trying to move that way when he was struggling earlier.

“I’m not crazy! I’m trying to save you!” the man screamed stubbornly.

“Stop wasting our time. You picked these broken parts from the landfill, right?” Lee Zheng looked at the dolls. After the toys were abandoned, they had lost their charm. They turned weird and ugly. The broken faces were filled with loneliness and sadness.

“No, they’re not toys. They were already here when I came! They have nothing to do with me!”

“You’re still trying to argue?” Tian Lei kicked the metal rods aside to make sure the man would not be able to reach them. “There are so many rooms here—why did you stay in one that is filled with broken toys? You are a sick man.”

The man looked like he was really wronged, and he did not sound like he was lying. "Many have died here, so Ming Yang Residence is cursed. All the tenants that moved here became cursed; everyone in Eastern Jiujiang knows that. If not for the storm and the lack of any other shelter nearby, I would not have come here."

"Stop trying to change the topic! Answer my question! Was it you who collect these dolls?" Tian Lei's voice turned up.

"No, when I entered the room for the first time, the room was already filled with dead bodies."

"Then why did you stay here?" Tian Lei already stopped correcting the man.

"You can't leave after you've seen the dead bodies! They will follow you, and it's pointless to run!" The man screamed like mad. "Now you're stepping on their bodies, but one day, they will step on your cold, dead bodies!"

"Ol' Lee, what do you think?" Tian Lei was perturbed by what the man had said. If they were someplace else, he would not have felt that way, but standing there, he just felt unsafe.

"You believe a mad person? Keep a close eye on him. I'll go ask Captain Yan." Lee Zheng entered the bedroom where Captain Yan and Chen Ge were investigating. "Captain Yan, the man is mad. He said that these dolls are dead bodies and touching them will get you cursed."

"Well, it's too late for that." Captain Yan pointed at Chen Ge helplessly. This boss of a Haunted House was more zealous than a cop. Without flashlight, he squatted down to inspect each doll closely. With a light cough, Captain Yan asked, "Xiao Chen, did you find anything?"

"Most of these dolls are made by plastic, and the date of production ranges across many years. They should have been collected from all over the place by the homeless man. But I'm curious, why would he break them?" Chen Ge picked up the head of the doll. "Look, the cut is obviously made by knife, or else it would not have been so clean."

"Perhaps it's to vent?"

"It's not that simple. I studied toy design in university, and I know a thing or two about the materials. These parts have problems from the material to the coloring." Chen Ge placed the head next to Captain

Yan. "Look closer, what is wrong here?"

Captain Yan looked at it and eventually said, "The color is faded?"

"Yes, these parts appear like they have been cooked. The color fell off, and the edges were messed up from the heat." Chen Ge looked at the room of dolls and said to himself, "Who would cook these dolls for no reason?"

Captain Yan did not get it either. After taking the pictures, he walked out of the room. "Let's go to Room 104. That room is the key to solving the issue."

The homeless man saw Captain Yan walk out, and he screamed again, "You saw the dead bodies. They will find you tonight!"

"You keep saying they're dead bodies. Then does this mean that this is a human dead in your eyes?" Chen Ge took out the doll head, and when the man saw it, he slammed against the wall. His arms were in a defensive posture before his chest, and his expression was frozen in fear like he was really looking at a decapitated head.

"Take it away! Take it away!"

The man did not look like he was acting. This was out of Chen Ge's expectations.

"Can he really see something?" Chen Ge initially did not think much of the homeless man, but when he saw this reaction, he thought about it again. He moved the head away and followed the man's line of thinking. "If these are all dead bodies, do you know who killed them?"

"I didn't kill anyone! I don't know anything! He only asked me to stay behind to watch over these bodies; I don't know anything else!"

"He?" Both Chen Ge and the three officers were shocked before surrounding him. "Who is he? Why would he ask you to look after the bodies?"

"I can't say, or I'll die! I will die! He will kill me and all of you!" The homeless man collapsed to the ground and started wailing.

"The murderer sure is something else to threaten a homeless man that is already so senior in age." Tian Lei looked at Lee Zheng and Captain Yan. "Shall we bring him in?"

“Have an officer from your station to bring him back for interrogation.” Captain Yan looked at the homeless man. “I’ve seen such a reaction many times from murder witnesses; he might not be lying to us.”

“Mur... murder?” Tian Lei did not imagine a report from a taxi driver could lead to a murder. He quickly called Xiao Qing, who was on duty.

“Lee Zheng, remember to take all the picture evidence. Give me the flashlight. We’ll go to Room 104 first.” Captain Yan and Chen Ge walked out of the room and walked up the stairs. From the stairs, Chen Ge saw an electric bike move past the two parked police cars as it entered Ming Yang Residence.

“Captain Yan, I saw someone enter the area. The person was riding an electric bike. Doesn’t seem like he’s here to avoid the rain.”

“Be careful. After we confirm Room 104 is fine, we’ll leave immediately.” Captain Yan walked ahead. No one stayed, and soon, they arrived at the tenth floor.

“Stay close to the wall and away from the rails. Be careful of your step.” Captain Yan found Room 104 and entered it. The biggest difference about this room was that there was plenty of old furniture inside, and the wall had many children’s drawings.

“It feels like a family of three once lived here.” Chen Ge followed behind Captain Yan. With his Yin Yang Vision, he did not need the flashlight and started wandering about the room. “What is this?”

...

Beside the wooden table, which was missing a leg, there were many dried apples, and there was one under the table that had a bite mark on it. “The tenant here must have loved apples.”

Chen Ge used a piece of paper to pick one up. The apple had gone rotten, and seeing this, he was suddenly reminded of the apple that he had seen inside the underground morgue. Apples seem to have a special meaning to dead people. If I have time, I should consult the few doctors.

“Look at this!” Tian Lei, who had been silent, suddenly opened his lips. He shone the flashlight on the left wall of the living room. The cracked wall had a weird painting on it. Two adults and a girl were talking, and not far away from them was a boy drawing.

“These two adults should be the parents, and that makes the girl their daughter. The boy was the one who painted on the wall.” Lee Zheng tried to analyze the painting. “So, it’s actually a family of four.”

“When we interviewed Jia Ming, didn’t he say that they didn’t want kids because of Huang Ling’s physical condition?” Tian Lei raised his brow. “Did this man find a mistress, or was he lying to us?”

“He definitely lied to us, but he probably wasn’t lying when it comes to the issue of children.” Captain Yan walked out from the kitchen. “The house isn’t completed. It wasn’t Jia Ming and Huang Ling who lived here, and the kids probably had nothing to do with them.”

“Are they homeless children?” Lee Zheng stood next to the window and looked out. “But why would they choose this room? The building does not have elevator—wouldn’t it be easier to stand on the ground floor?”

“The answer is probably hidden in this room.” Chen Ge tilted his head back to look at the ceiling, and he did not look away. The three officers saw that and also looked up. On the ceiling of Room 104, someone had used a sharp stone to carve out four human faces. They were placed at all four cardinal directions. They surrounded a girl in the middle, and the four faces bit on her limbs. “What is this painting trying to represent? It doesn’t look like a children’s painting.”

The faces of the two adults had the names Jiang Long and Zhang Chuyu. The two children’s faces had the names Jiang Bai and Jiang Xiaohu. “Jiang Long? Isn’t that the name of the investor who jumped from the building? Why would his name be here?”

“This looks like the name of his family.” Tian Lei thought about it and said, “This was probably the owner venting their frustration on Jiang Long. After all, he is the developer.”

“As angry as people can be, they would not vent on a dead person. Furthermore, in this picture, it is Jiang Long who bites someone else.” Captain Yan looked at the painting. “The handwriting looks young, like it’s written by a child. But a child wouldn’t have reached the ceiling, and there are no stools in the room.”

The three officers were thinking of various possibilities while Chen Ge entered the bedroom alone. He had to control his expression. Only he knew that Jia Ming had been taken over by Jiang Long, and the discovery of Jiang Long family’s name in this room only heightened that suspicion. Jiang Long had taken over Jia Ming’s body for this Room 104.

But what is so different from this room? Chen Ge looked for a long time but found nothing. He stood up and looked out the window. Standing there, he could see the buildings in the distance.

Li Wan City?

In the dark, Li Wan City had no lights, like a dead city.

I really don’t understand what Jiang Long is after. If Captain Yan did not insist of coming here, I would have detained Jiang Long already. Chen Ge looked at the other buildings, and he realized a problem. Four buildings were placed at the four cardinal directions, and they all had nineteen floors. The tenth floor was the middle and had four rooms, and Room 104 was on the westernmost side.

The layout of the four buildings matched the location of the four faces perfectly. Jiang Long's face was at the western side, and it matched the location of this Room 104 nicely. Chen Ge walked out to look at the painting. Why would they bite the girl? If each face is related to a building...

Chen Ge did not understand it, but he walked to the most west side of Room 104. After moving the trash away, Chen Ge realized that the color of the ground was different. He found some items to clear the area, and under the clueless gazes of the police, he cracked the top layer of cement.

It really is hollow. Chen Ge reached his hand into it and felt like he had touched something. It was not soft but not hard either. He pulled the thing out. When he raised his hand, everyone was stunned.

The shadow morphed into the shape of a woman, but Chen Ge did not realize that. He looked at the thin arm, which was wrapped in food wrap, that he had pulled out. With difficulty, he turned around to look at the officers. Honestly, he did not expect that it would be hiding an arm.

“Don’t move! Put it down slowly!” Captain Yan took over the scene. He walked closer to Chen Ge with the flashlight raised. He took the arm, and with just a glance, he was certain about something. “Tian Lei, have your people come here in twenty minutes! Lee Zheng, contact team one and have them come over to Eastern Jiujiang Ming Yang Residence now to take over the body dismemberment case!”

“Yes, sir!”

After giving the order, Captain Yan’s face softened. He asked for a cigarette from Lee Zheng and passed it to Chen Ge. “Are you okay? Why don’t you go for a smoke break?”

“I’m fine.” Chen Ge did not accept the cigarette, and his face was ugly. “Captain Yan, do you still remember the question that I asked Inspector Tian when we first arrived here?”

“What question?”

“Why the number for this room is 104 when it’s on the tenth floor. If that's the arrangement, how are the rooms for the other buildings numbered?"

"Yes, I remember. What about it?" Captain Yan was befuddled.

"Four buildings, and all have nineteen floors. Each floor has four rooms, and normally, they should be numbered with four digits. Like the first room on the eleventh floor at the first building should be 1111, but according to Inspector Tian's explanation, these four buildings are one entity, and the developers even planned to connect them with bridges. This means that the numbering is completely messed up." Chen Ge tried his best to explain.

"What are you trying to say?"

"Look up." Chen Ge pointed at the painting above them. "We found the body's left arm at this building that was on the west side. It matches the painting perfectly. If the four buildings are a whole entity, then doesn't this mean that Ming Yang Residence represents the girl that was bitten by human faces in the picture? And her other parts are hidden in the corresponding rooms of the other buildings?"

Hearing Chen Ge's analysis, the officers were shocked. Chen Ge did not normally act like he was much of a quick thinker, but whenever he was at a crime scene, he would come up with discoveries like he was born to fight crime.

"Go, we'll need to go to the other buildings to see." Captain Yan took the arm. They rushed down the stairs to get to the second building. Like Chen Ge expected, they found another arm in the room on the tenth floor of the second building.

...

"Take the picture first; don't ruin the scene. When the killer buried the body, they might have left some evidence behind." After Lee Zheng took the pictures, they rushed to the third building. The building was only half completed, and the stairwell did not even have a railing—one wrong step, and it would be a long way down.

"Be careful!" The group climbed up the stairs, and it took them quite some time before they arrived at the tenth floor. When they did, they were greeted by a surprise. They searched all the rooms but could not find the body. However, they did find signs of the wall being pried open in one of the rooms.

"Someone came before us?" Chen Ge touched the edge of the wall and was reminded of the e-bike that came earlier. "Captain Yan, do you remember I told you someone arrived on an e-bike? That person could be the killer! It was him who took the female body's legs away!"

"Go to the fourth building now!" The group ran to the fourth building, but they were still too late. The killer's target was clear and knew what was important. After he took the legs, he had left immediately and given up the arms.

"Risking the chance of being exposed, he came back to take the legs. Looks like there is conclusive evidence on the legs," Tian Lei analyzed, but Captain Yan stood in the middle of room with a dark face.

“Stealing the body parts while the police is around, this killer sure is brave.”

Chen Ge picked up the pieces from the ground and tried to piece them back. “The person came with professional tools. There’re hammer and gouges. But the question I have is, how did the killer know we’re coming tonight? Does he have a spy at Ming Yang Residence, or was the killer one of the people whom we’ve met tonight?”

Chen Ge had ninety percent confidence that it was Jia Ming who came to steal the body parts. Only Jia Ming knew that the police were going. There was another detail; Jia Ming’s home had an e-bike. He had gotten into the accident when riding one.

Captain Yan understood Chen Ge’s hint, but he had his own consideration. “The eye-gouging case and the dismemberment case, both these cases have a similarity—they’re both very ritualistic. Could the culprits be related somehow?”

“There shouldn’t be a relation. The MOs are so different.” Chen Ge was surprised by Captain Yan’s instinct. Li Wan City’s door going out of control had something to do with ghost stories society, and the change to Ming Yang Residence was technically due to Li Wan City, so if they were really splitting hairs, this case might really be related to the society.

Twenty-five minutes later, the people from Eastern Jiujiang Police station arrived. Four police cars stopped within the area. Since this was the first murder within the past year, many officers arrived, and almost all the officers on duty were called over.

“Inspector Tian, we’ve arrived!”

“Get into groups and listen to Captain Yan’s orders.” Tian Lei walked to Captain Yan. “Captain Yan, my people have arrived. There are three teams in total.”

“Team one, go and look up the nearby surveillance; focus on someone riding an e-bike. Team 2, stay to seal up the crime scene and start collecting evidence. Team 3, I need you to go keep a surveillance on these people.” Captain Yan gave a list, and it included Jia Ming and Huang Ling.

Chen Ge was standing right next to them. He planned to add more blame onto Jia Ming, but after seeing Captain Yan’s arrangement, he held his tongue. “Captain Yan, what do you need from me?”

“We’ll inform you when we have the result tomorrow. After all, this is the police’s job. You have done more than enough tonight.” Captain Yan turned to tell Tian Lei, “Get someone to drive Chen Ge home. There are no taxi at this place, and he has worked hard tonight.”

“Xiao Qing! Come over here. I have a mission for you.”

“Yes, sir!” This was Xiao Qing’s first heavy crime case, so he was rather nervous.

“You see that man? Drive him home.” Then Tian Lei left with Captain Yan, leaving behind the young officer.

“We meet again.” Chen Ge greeted the young man with a smile. “Told you things will start to get busy.”

Xiao Qing thought Chen Ge’s smile was rather scary. “Stop joking. Where is your home? The inspector told me to drive you home.”

Chen Ge looked at the time. His life officially began after midnight, so he might not be able to sleep after he got home. “Wait a minute, let me make a call.”

According to Chen Ge’s original plan, he had intended to meet Fan Chong after dealing with Ma Fu. Who would have thought so many things would happen? Taking out his phone, Chen Ge messaged Fan Chong.

To his surprise, Fan Chong was still awake, and his reply came several seconds later. He said that the game would be creepier after midnight, so if Chen Ge was not afraid, he could go now. After getting Fan Chong’s agreement, Chen Ge had Xiao Qing drive him to Fan Chong’s place.

“The first residential area at Li Wan City’s West Street? There is such a place? You don’t know the name of the residential area?” Xiao Qing looked online for a long time before he found the exact location and drove Chen Ge there. The place was close to the countryside, so it was quite isolated. The only good thing was the fresh air. The car drove into Li Wan City, and at the end of the road was a series of old buildings.

“You live here?” Xiao Qing looked at the empty Li Wan City, and he felt weirdly unsettled.

“This is my friend’s place. Since I’m in Eastern Jiujiang, I decided to pay him a visit.”

“Visiting at midnight? You sure your friend won’t get mad?”

“It’s fine. Thank you for the ride. Be careful on the way back.”

Chen Ge waited until Xiao Qing left, and he thought, Now that I think about it. It is quite interesting that Fan Chong’s home is in Li Wan City.

He made the call, and with Fan Chong’s directions, he entered the first building.

“Boss Chen, you really have come. Quick, come up.” In a tank top, Fan Dade came down to welcome Chen Ge. “My brother has been playing for a whole day already. I feel like he’s coming down with addiction. You have to help me.”

“Okay, I will.”

The two came to the top floor. The family on the right had a mirror the size of one’s palm on the door while the door on the left was half-open. Fan Dade led Chen Ge to the left door. He yelled into the bedroom, “Fan Chong, Boss Chen is here!”

Hearing that, there was a commotion from the bedroom; it sounded like something had fallen. Then the door flew open, and a Fan Chong with dark circles poked his head out. He looked so tired. Chen Ge closed the living room door. He raised his head to look at the mirror on the opposite door. He took a picture on his phone and entered the room. “Fan Chong, how is the game coming along? Any new discoveries?”

“The plot jammed. This game is really not for humans. I feel like I’m coming down with depression playing it.” Fan Chong dragged Chen Ge into the bedroom, grabbed the can of cola that was left on the table, and took a healthy gulp.

“Jammed?” Chen Ge thought about it. “How about you let me try? I can be considered someone who designs real life horror games. Tackling it from the perspective of a designer, perhaps there might be a breakthrough.”

Inside the cluttered bedroom, there was hardly a place to stand. The floor was covered with clothes and books, and the coffee table was piled high with empty cans and food boxes. The only place that was relatively clean was the computer table.

“Fan Chong, you’ve been playing for too long. Try to do some exercise by cleaning the room.”

Chen Ge walked to the computer table carefully and looked at the screen. The dark screen had a sentence written in blood—You killed Xiao Bu.

“Don’t wear the headphones when you’re playing; the music will just disturb you.” Fan Chong was very experienced. He clicked on the screen, and the words slowly disappeared. With a flicker, the screen returned to normal. “The controls are very easy; you just need to click with the cursor. Do you want something to drink? How about a can of coke?”

“Sure, thank you.” Chen Ge’s attention was fully focused on the game. The game’s style was clearly aimed at very young girls; the main color palette was pastel, and it looked very cute and warm. “It’s quite amazing that you were able to clear a game like this.”

“I was just bored.” Fan Chong looked rather embarrassed. “Bro! Help me get two cans of cold coke!”

A while later, Fan Dade came in with a tray. “I made two dishes of simple food. You can eat it if you’re hungry.”

After putting down the tray, Fan Dade did not look like he was leaving. He also turned to look at the computer screen. “Boss Chen, you have to be careful when you play. The game has many jump scares—don't be fooled by the cute images.”

“Don't worry.” Chen Ge did not touch the things on the tray. He had a habit of not eating other people's food after he left the Haunted House. Moving the mouse, Chen Ge soon got used to the control. He controlled Xiao Bu to get out of bed and leave the room.

With Fan Chong's explanation, Chen Ge very quickly grasped the map of the game. The town in the game was almost identical to Li Wan City in real life. After ten minutes, Chen Ge found Xiao Bu's friend's home. He was about to open the door to the dungeon when a chat box appeared—“The friend's house is so big. Should I go take a tour of the second floor?”

This should be Xiao Bu's inner monologue. After Chen Ge saw that, he turned to ask Fan Chong, “Have you been to the second floor?”

“The only thing noteworthy is the friend's certificate from winning a contest. I've clicked the entire surface using a blanket search.” Fan Chong sounded very certain.

Chen Ge thought about it and still controlled Xiao Bu to go to the second floor. The wall with the brightest paint had a certificate hanging on it. Clicking it with the cursor, the chat box popped up again—“The certificate is awarded to student Jiang Xiaohu for his good performance and good behavior.”

Jiang Xiaohu? Isn't that name of Jiang Long's child? I saw this name inside Room 104 earlier! Chen Ge stared at the screen for a long time before he recovered. “Only a certificate in such a large room, what is the purpose of this?”

He could not understand it. He controlled Xiao Bu to go back down to the first floor, opened the hidden door, and entered it. The cute style immediately turned creepy and dark. The floor was filled with the petals of wilted sunflowers. Between the crevices of the tiles on the ground, there seemed to be pairs of eyes looking at him. It felt like a sweet dream turning into a nightmare.

“Boss Chen, you have to be careful starting from now. Danger can come from anywhere, and you'll die if you're not careful.” Fan Chong started to worry. Gripping the can, his eyes were glued to the screen. After exiting the dungeon, there was the bus stop and the woman in the red raincoat. Fan Chong had already cleared this part, so Chen Ge only needed to follow his guide.

“You said that you got stuck—what part is it?” Chen Ge passed the few challenges successfully. Escaped the woman in red raincoat, hid himself from Ma Fu, lost the drunken artist—under his control, Xiao Bu seemed to come alive and moved agilely.

“After dark, it’s better to not wander the street, or you’ll die from mysterious circumstances. It’s better to hide inside the buildings.” Fan Chong pointed at the top of the screen. “You see the color of the sky? It’s gray now. When it’s completely black, then it’s dark. The game pays close attention to such details.”

“Then what should I do now?” Chen Ge controlled Xiao Bu and stood at a junction. She seemed lost.

“Based on my precious experience, there are ten minutes until night. You have to find a safe place for Xiao Bu before dark. I got stuck here.” Fan Chong put down the can and scratched his head. “You can’t enter normal houses. I tried many places. After dark, you can only enter the hotel and Xiao Bu’s own apartment building in this city.”

“Then, couldn’t you just let her go home?”

“There’s a dead body at her home. There’s a female ghost living next door. Inside the grass at the bottom of the house, there’s a murderer dismembering his victim. I’ve tried many times, and there’s only one ending if I go home, death.” Fan Chong’s eyes were red. “After dark, the game’s difficulty increases tenfold; there’s no way of escape!”

“That’s rather harsh. Then we’ll go to the hotel.” Chen Ge kept calm. He was counting the time.

“It’s even worse at the hotel. The owner is a crazed murderer in disguise. The chef is also a mental patient. Other than Xiao Bu, all the tenants there are insane.” Fan Chong vented everything. “This afternoon, I tried to choose the hotel. In the end, I was chased by the boss for twenty minutes. The game designer is heartless. Once Xiao Bu is touched, she’ll die, and the player only has one life. After you die, you need to start again.”

“Therefore, this is a game that is working against itself?”

“The only way that I can think of to clear this game is to play a night of hide and seek with the boss and leave the hotel at dawn. Other than that, there is no other way,” Fan Chong suggested.

“Let me try.” Chen Ge looked at the watch. “There is seven minutes until night fall. Let me go to Xiao Bu's home to take a look."

He controlled Xiao Bu to come to a rather high-end residential apartment. After the style changed, the warm area became dark and cold. All the friendly neighbors had disappeared.

"You'll die if you go home." Fan Chong did not have the heart to look. Whenever Xiao Bu died, he had an indescribable sadness in his heart like the game had affected the man in real life.

There was rustling coming from the brush, Chen Ge controlled Xiao Bu to move away from it. She entered the building directly. The elevator opened, and a person in a black rain coat came out. The man kept his head lower. A chat box appeared—"You didn't see his face, but you remembered his body size."

Taking the elevator to her home, Chen Ge controlled Xiao Bu to open the door. The box reappeared—"You saw your stepfather lying in a pool of blood in the middle of the room."

Entering the room, three options popped up.

1. Call the police immediately and ask the neighbor for help.
2. Find a needle and thread to close the wounds and turn your stepfather into a doll.
3. Ignore him and go to sleep.

Chen Ge thought about it and chose the third option.

"Bro, be careful." After he made his choice, Fan Chong quickly stood up. "Are you sure you want to pick three?"

"You already said that the neighbor is a female ghost, so one is out. Option two doesn't match a normal person's way of thinking, and in comparison, three sounds more normal," Chen Ge answered seriously.

“Then you think that option three matches a normal person’s way of thinking?” Fan Chong held his forehead with both of his hands, and that pushed his hair up.

“It’s okay. Spending a night with a dead body, that’s still quite unacceptable for most people.” Chen Ge signaled for Fan Chong to sit down. “The real gentleman doesn’t speak when he watches others play chess. Stop talking, I’m going to be serious.”

...

The game did manage to arouse Chen Ge’s attention.

“Don’t play it willy-nilly! I suspect there’s a ghost living inside the game, and if you let it out, what are we going to do after you leave?” Fan Chong had a crying face. When he saw Chen Ge’s serious expression, he was worried.

“It’ll be fine.” Chen Ge ignored Fan Chong and controlled Xiao Bu to walk around the room. Her step-father’s body was in the living room, and it was still bleeding. After choosing three, Xiao Bu in the game seemed to not see the body anymore and started to walk around the room.

“Her home is quite big? I wonder what her parents’ occupations are, and why would her mother’s pajamas contain the key to the dungeon?” Chen Ge was more and more curious about the plot. He controlled Xiao Bu to walk into the toilet and the chat box appeared —‘You look at the mirror, and your reflection is missing from the mirror. You escape immediately.’

“The mirror doesn’t show Xiao Bu’s reflection... Is Xiao Bu a ghost, or is there a ghost living inside the mirror?” Chen Ge did not dwell on that for long. He went to the bedroom. The chat box reappeared as he opened the door—‘You hear the sound of someone tapping on the wall; it seems to come from the next door. What do you plan to do?’

1. The person sounds like she's asking for help. Call the police immediately.
2. Jump through the window to take a look.
3. Ignore her and go to sleep.

"Boss Chen, it is the female ghost who's making the sound. Her head keeps bouncing on the wall. If you pick one, the female ghost's voice will appear on the phone; if you pick two, half-way there, the female ghost will open the window to capture you; so you can only pick three, but three is a dead end as well. At midnight, the sound will disappear, and you'll open your eyes to see the ghost's head pass through the wall." Fan Chong explained the plot to Chen Ge. "I've tried all the choices, and there's no way you'll survive."

Chen Ge thought about it and chose three. "The ghost's head will come over at midnight, so there's still chance to struggle."

After choosing three, Chen Ge found thread and a needle on the bedside table, the tools to make the step-father into a doll. "The details are very spot-on. Even now, I'm curious about the second choice."

Chen Ge was feeling regret when another chat box showed up—"The bell rang. Someone is standing outside the door."

"Who would come at a time like this?" Chen Ge controlled Xiao Bu to walk back to the living room door, and the box popped up once more—"The person announces himself as the police. He received a report from the neighbor saying that there was a murder in the area. Someone witnessed a murder and he requested for your cooperation. What will you do?"

1. Open the door and help the police capture the killer to take revenge for step-father.
2. Tell him you've already saved your step-father by turning him into a doll.
3. Ignore him and go back to sleep.

Seeing the options, Chen Ge thought about it before concluding, "The person outside the door probably isn't the police. He's probably the man in the raincoat from before, the real killer of her step-father."

"Impressive, no wonder you're a Haunted House designer." Fan Chong had played it through a few times before he realized that. He noticed that there was a big difference between him and Boss Chen. The difference was not in terms of intelligence but the agility of the mind. Boss Chen could always easily put himself in the shoes of the crazed killer.

“The man in the raincoat ran into Xiao Bu at the elevator, and now he wants to take care of the loose end, so he’s come back to kill Xiao Bu. This matches how the game is set up.” Chen Ge moved the cursor to the second choice. “If the step-father is saved, this might anger the killer, and after hearing that he’s been exposed, he will go insane and force the door open. Xiao Bu is just a child, and there is no way she will survive. For the sake of safety, we’ll go with three.”

After hearing Chen Ge’s analysis, Fan Chong had to nod. “Option three is best for now, but when midnight comes, the female ghost will come over from the other side, and there will be nowhere for you to run. You can only escape from home, and once you open the door, you’ll realize that the murderer has not left.”

“Meaning, after I chose option three, the murderer who pretended to be the police didn’t leave and waited for me to come out at the door?” Chen Ge looked at the screen. “The design of this game sure is harsh.”

“Yes, all the options lead to death; there is no survival.” Fan Chong pulled on his hair in frustration.

“That’s not entirely true.” Chen Ge thought about it and controlled Xiao Bu to open the balcony window. He clicked on the backpack and dropped the thread and cloth that he had just obtained out the window.

“What are you doing?” Fan Chong was confused.

“Attracting the attention of the other murderer. Didn’t you say there’s a crazed murderer dismembering his victim in the grass?” Chen Ge abandoned the items calmly. He was unable to shout in this game, and there was nothing else around him, or else he would have dropped something heavier.

“Attract the attention of the other killer?” Fan Chong and Fan Dade were lost. This way of thinking was way beyond theirs.

“Most serial killers are lone wolves because they have a flaw in their personality. They will feel unsettled around other people; the only person whom they can trust is themselves. If two murderers cross paths under such circumstances, the biggest outcome is that they'll get into a fight between themselves." Chen Ge dropped many items when a man in a factory outfit got out from the grass. He raised his head to look at Xiao Bu.

After sharing a look, Chen Ge immediately controlled Xiao Bu to retreat. "Now it is the most crucial time."

"Are you sure that he will come up?" When Fan Chong played the game, he did not do this, so he had no idea what would happen.

"You don't understand murderers. In that shared look, he was probably confirming the floor and the room that Xiao Bu was in. He will definitely come up to silence the witness." Chen Ge realized something when he said that, and he added, "I am just familiar with a murderer's MO, don't get any misunderstanding."

It was fine if he did not explain himself because once he did, both Fan Chong and Fan Dade shivered. Fan Chong was better, but Fan Dade was completely wrought with worry. He felt this the most as the spectator.

It was the same game. His own brother had played it, and he had almost gotten depression from the pain and despair; however, when Chen Ge played it, it was a different style completely—he was calm and confident. In fact, it felt like he found joy when he was playing the game.

Chapter 518 - Scary Control

Chapter 518: Scary Control

“When I entered the building, I memorized all the routes. There are only two ways to move up and down the floors—the elevator or the stairs.” Chen Ge looked at the screen and was very calm. “In a bit, we’ll see what happens, and we’ll pick the route that is further from the killers. Of course, the best result is they both kill each other.”

Then, Chen Ge controlled Xiao Bu into the kitchen.

...

“What are you looking for?” Fan Chong’s heart was at his throat. The game had entered a phase that he had not experienced before. This made him excited and worried.

“I’m looking for weapons like a cleaver or fruit knife. After the tussle between of the two murderers, the survivor will probably be injured as well. If we have a weapon with us, there’s a greater chance of survival.”

Fan Chong did not know how to reply to Chen Ge’s explanation; this man felt like he was playing a survival game rather than a horror game. Looking around the kitchen, Chen Ge did not find any sharp objects; there was only thread and cloth in the room. “Looks like the game prevents resistance from the player; the player can only hide and try their best to survive.”

The graphics of the game were so-so, but the attention to detail was impressive, allowing the player to enter the role of Xiao Bu seamlessly like they were the poor, defensive girl in the game. When Chen Ge controlled Xiao Bu to return to the balcony, the man in the factory outfit had already disappeared.

Several minutes later, there was a chat box—“The sound of fighting comes from the door. The knife cut through skin, and it sounds like it punctured through a bag filled with water. Someone is running, and someone is chasing.”

“The two murderers are fighting among themselves!” Fan Chong was more excited than Chen Ge when he saw the chat box. “The two killers are too busy fighting among themselves; this is our chance!”

The killer that blocked the door had left. Chen Ge controlled Xiao Bu to open the living room door—the corridor was dyed red by blood.

“The blood trailed toward the stairs, so they went toward it. We’ll leave with the elevator!” Fan Chong’s heart jumped to his throat. This was not the time to dawdle—the killer could return at any moment.

“There’s no need to hurry. The sky is already dark outside. Even if we leave this place, where can we go? Didn’t you say that you’ll die mysteriously from walking through the street at night?” Chen Ge’s brain was turning. “Furthermore, if we take the elevator, the murderer will definitely come after us if he realizes that; it’s too dangerous.”

“Then what do you suggest we do?” From Fan Chong’s perspective, the ending was definitely death. The most that they were doing was delaying the time of death.

“The killers running to the stairs is within my expectations because taking the elevator requires waiting; he had to take the stairs if he wants to escape.” Chen Ge controlled Xiao Bu to walk out from the room. Under the shocked gaze from Fan Chong and Fan Dade, they saw Xiao Bu stop at the door of her neighbor.

“What are you planning to do?” The brothers fixed their eyes on the screen.

“I plan to deal with the other killer as well.” Chen Ge clicked on the backpack and dropped the remaining thread and cloth by the door of the ghost neighbor. This shocked Fan Chong and Fan Dade. After a long time, Fan Chong asked, “Do you plan to create the impression that Xiao Bu has gone hidden inside the neighbor’s home, tricking the killer to go into the ghost neighbor’s place?”

“That’s the ideal situation.” After dropping the stuff, Chen Ge controlled Xiao Bu to head to the stairs. The two killers ran down the stairs, and Chen Ge controlled Xiao Bu to stand at the corner of the landing. In other words, if the killers turned back, they would have a hard time seeing her.

“You sure are courageous.” Fan Chong sighed sincerely.

“There’s no other choice. You’ll be discovered if you stay at home, and the killer will chase after you if you take the stairs, so I have to take matters into my own hand.” Chen Ge looked at the screen. Ten seconds later, the man in the factory outfit ran up the stairs.

“Looks like the man in the raincoat lost.” Chen Ge controlled Xiao Bu to lean against the wall. From this angle, he had a good view of the killer. What happened next surprised Chen Ge. The man was cleverer than Chen Ge expected, unlike a designed NPC. In fact, he felt like an real, cold-blooded maniac.

He did not enter Xiao Bu’s home immediately. He rushed to the elevator and kept his head on Xiao Bu’s home’s door. After some minutes, he returned from the elevator. No one had used the elevator, so he was certain that Xiao Bu was on that floor.

Holding a sharp knife, the man entered Xiao Bu’s home. He opened the door and saw the dead body. Interestingly enough, the chat box appeared at a time like this; it seemed to be the killer’s mumbling—‘F*ck! I have to deal with four bodies tonight even though I only wanted to kill one!’

The man entered the room. He could not find Xiao Bu, and the chat box reappeared—‘Where did the little girl wander off to? She saw me dismember the body, so she should still be in this building.’

The murderer searched the place but was unable to find Xiao Bu. He walked out from the room and discovered the broken cloth on the ground—‘The girl has left the room? There is blood on this cloth. Did she try to bandage the dead person’s wound? The trail of cloth stops here...’

The killer stopped for a long time before the neighbor’s door, then he knocked on it—‘This is the police. I received a report from the tenants that there has been a murder. Please open the door to assist with the investigation.’

The door did fall open. The murderer had a wicked smirk and entered the room, holding the sharp knife.

“It’s time for us to make our move.” Chen Ge controlled Xiao Bu to exit the stairwell. He clicked on the neighbor’s door, and Xiao Bu closed the door.

The chat box bounced up—‘You can hear screams for mercy from inside the room, but you are unaffected.’

Ten minutes later, a new tapping sound came from the door. On the screen, Xiao Bu stood at her neighbor's door. The girl in her mother's pajamas looked so innocent and cute, a complete contrast to the world around her. However, from Fan Chong and Fan Dade's perspective, this little girl was the scariest presence.

"You even closed the door?" Fan Chong drank the coke, needing to calm down. Fan Dade thought that Chen Ge was someone not normal, and he did not dare to breathe anymore watching him play the game.

"Don't worry, I'm just helping society clear away the rubbish." Chen Ge did not waste any time since night was falling. He controlled Xiao Bu to enter the stairwell and find the dead body of the man in the raincoat. He kept clicking on the body.

"What are you doing now?" Fan Chong had given up guessing Chen Ge's thought.

"To find the key or something useful. There's a ghost living next to Xiao Bu's home, so going back is impossible. If we can find the key on this man's body, then we'll go spend a night at the killer's home."

Chapter 519 - Danger in the Dark

Chapter 519: Danger in the Dark

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“Staying at the killer’s place?” Both Fan Chong and Fan Dade turned to look at Chen Ge in unison.

“The most dangerous place is also the safest place.” Chen Ge clicked on the dead man’s body madly. When the cursor fell on the man’s shirt pocket, a chat box popped up—‘You ransacked the dead man’s clothing and found a room card in the man’s blood-soaked pocket.’

...

“You really found something!” Fan Chong leaned forward to the screen, and his face was colored by curiosity.

Putting the card in the backpack, Chen Ge kept clicking until the sound of a human head banging against the door became louder in the background. With regret, he walked down the stairs. “There’s no weapon. An opportunity like this is not going to come again in the future.”

Chen Ge clicked on the backpack to look at the room card. The pure black card was dyed with blood, and there was a number four written on the back. “Fan Chong, how many hostels and hotels are there in this town?”

“There’s only one. The small hotel that I told you earlier where the owner is a killer and the chef is mental. All of the other tenants have been killed.”

“Is the hotel far from the residential area?”

“Not far, it’s just a street away, but are you sure you want to go there?” Fan Chong did not quite understand Chen Ge’s thoughts. “Haven’t we just killed all the murderers at the residential area? All we need to do now is stay put and wait until dawn breaks.”

He saw that Chen Ge was still hesitating. He reached out to touch Chen Ge’s shoulder. “Don’t tell me... you’re planning to use this little girl to deal with an entire hotel of crazed people?”

“How are we supposed to do that without even a fruit knife?” Chen Ge controlled Xiao Bu to walk down the stairs. The weird thing was that the banging sound in the background did not soften due to the distance but instead became louder.

“Then why are you leaving?”

“Focus on the background music. The tapping sound is made by the ghost; it has become more rapid. This means that after we lured the murderer into the neighbor’s home, the ghost inside it has gone rampage.” Chen Ge controlled Xiao Bu to come to the ground floor. He looked at the dark street. “Why would you die when walking down the street at night? When you were playing, was there any warning before you die?”

“There was no warning. You just die like that, like that is an invisible killer roaming the streets.”

“Invisible killer?” Chen Ge shook his head. “The many scenarios of this game are inspired by things that happened in real life, so it shouldn’t be too fantastical.”

“Bro, the whole town is filled with ghosts and killers, isn’t that fantastical enough?”

“That is still acceptable. At the very least, it doesn’t go against the game designer’s setting.” Chen Ge controlled Xiao Bu to walk back and forth between the landing of the first floor and second floor. Fan Chong really did not understand what Chen Ge was up to. After holding it in for quite some time, he finally asked, “Boss Chen, what are you doing this time?”

“Things are not looking great.” Chen Ge looked at the screen and commented, “A game’s control normally decides how it will scare the player. Did you notice as the time of survival increases, the speed of Xiao Bu’s movement increases?”

“Isn’t that a good thing?” Fan Chong looked at Xiao Bu running back and forth and realized that she did move a little bit faster.

“The creator won’t be so kind for no reason. This is a game where you can’t run away from despair. The increase in Xiao Bu’s speed means that we will run into something faster and scarier later.” Chen Ge held his chin with one hand. “If I’m not mistaken, we’ll be running away from more than murderers after midnight.”

What Chen Ge said chilled Fan Chong’s heart. “Killers, ghosts, traps, and death mechanisms that will trigger randomly, the creator doesn’t want any player to clear the game.”

“Don’t just see this as a mere game, try to figure out why the creator created this game. Only by understanding what the creator is trying to express and by following his train of thought will we be able to find the answer.” Chen Ge had been trying to do that. Fan Chong was playing the game, but he was trying to see things from the creator’s perspective.

Every game would express an emotion, be it rage, resentment, or sadness. However, to his surprise, even though the game was deeply despairing, there was no emotion; Xiao Bu was like an emotionless robot. She would not feel fear or pain, nor did she worry about her family. She was very detached.

This main character, Xiao Bu, is very interesting. After seeing her step-father’s body, she even thought of changing him into a doll; this isn’t a normal child, but what exactly happened to her that made her this way? Is what I’m experiencing a reflection of what Xiao Bu experienced before?

Chen Ge was deep in his thought when Fan Chong drew him back to reality. “Then what should we do now?”

“Our most important mission is to survive this night. The stairwell is temporarily safe, so we should stay here for now. After the ghost from the neighbor’s home comes out, we’ll go to the hotel.” Chen Ge’s mind was sharp. “The only thing that worries me now is triggering the death mechanism when we cross the street.”

“Do you really think that way? How come I feel like you’re waiting for the ghost to come out and use your own body to lure it to the hotel?” Fan Chong asked softly.

“Well, you gotta do what you gotta do.” Chen Ge controlled Xiao Bu to walk back and forth; he had mastered Xiao Bu’s speed and walking method. “This is an open world game, so we can’t stay here the whole night. After luring the ghost away, this area will be safe, and we can come back if necessary.”

Through the background music, the sound of banging increased. Chen Ge moved the cursor to a comfortable space. “She should be coming soon.”

As he finished, on the screen, a woman holding her own head appeared on the second floor's corner, and her shirt was red with blood.

A Red Specter? Chen Ge controlled Xiao Bu to run out the stairs. He did not forget to adjust the angle to observe the female ghost holding her own head. Counting the woman in the red raincoat, this is the second Red Specter in this town.

In the game, the ghost moved fast. Chen Ge became serious and controlled Xiao Bu to run crazily. Chen Ge managed to escape the residential area in a few seconds. There was no light on the street. Chen Ge narrowed his eyes, and he managed to see the roads with the use of his Yin Yang Vision.

He controlled Xiao Bu to run toward the hotel. When she passed a window, the window suddenly opened, and an arm reached out, attempting to grab Xiao Bu. Thankfully, Chen Ge had Yin Yang Vision. When he saw the arm, he changed direction immediately and escaped narrowly.

"The danger is lurking in the dark!" Sweat slid down Chen Ge's face. Fan Dade and Fan Chong saw the dark screen and could not understand why this man was crazily moving the mouse and typing madly on the keyboard.

“What is he doing?”

“I have no idea.” Neither Fan Dade nor Fan Chong dared interrupt Chen Ge; they felt like Chen Ge had entered a certain state. In reality, Chen Ge did not have time for the brothers as well, he was fully focused on controlling Xiao Bu to escape the dangers hiding within the darkness.

...

The game creator was definitely insane. There were many threats hiding in the dark—the arms that suddenly reached out from the windows, the murderers that hid around the corner, the female ghost that chased after her, and the sound of laughing and barking coming from the some place. If it was just those things, Chen Ge would not have been so worried; the real thing that concerned him was something else.

After running for about half a minute down the dark street, Chen Ge saw something behind Xiao Bu standing up.

It looked like her shadow.

Has something entered her shadow? Or can the night in the small town awaken one's shadow?

Chen Ge was in a highly intense state. He did not dare split his focus, but his mind kept flashing back to what had happened that night at the fresh water plant. All the ghosts in Eastern Jiujiang seemed to be related to that shadow.

When Xiao Bu's shadow in the game stood up, it leaned on Xiao Bu's shoulder to whisper something, and Xiao Bu's speed started to slow down.

“Fan Chong, how far are we from the hotel?” Chen Ge asked in a hurry without turning his head.

“It’s just in front, the only building that you can enter at the end of the street!”

“It dares to be open at midnight; this hotel is also something else.” Chen Ge could already make out the shape of the old building in the dark. He controlled Xiao Bu and dashed left and right, the sound of mouse and keyboard reverberating across Fan Chong’s room. On the fifty-seventh second after she left the residential area, Xiao Bu arrived at the hotel. The female in red holding her head stopped outside the hotel and did not follow Xiao Bu.

“The female ghost doesn’t dare to come in?” When Chen Ge saw the ghost stop, he also paused Xiao Bu immediately. He controlled Xiao Bu to wander up and down the hotel entrance, trying his best to lure the female ghost in.

“Boss Chen, what are you doing? Taunting her?” Fan Chong really could not understand Chen Ge’s actions.

“If I don’t pull her into the hotel, how do you think we are supposed to deal with the owner? Xiao Bu is just a harmless child—how is she supposed to fight with these crazed murderers?” Xiao Bu danced at the door. The female ghost wanted to charge forward. The expression of the head that she was holding was conflicted.

Even as a Red Specter, she is so careful. The quality of the ghosts in Eastern Jiujiang sure is impressive.

Chen Ge tried for a long time, and eventually, the Red Specter lost her patience and prepared to head into the hotel. However, before she got in, a rotund man from the room next door suddenly charged out and slammed the front door shut.

At the same time, a chat box came up—“There was a tapping sound on the hotel’s wooden door. It was unclear when the customer outside would have the chance to come in.”

Clicking the chat box, the second sentence appeared, and this time, it came with the profile of the fat man. It seemed to be him talking—“Every night, some weird customers come visiting. They are very dangerous. I only have one bullet left in this hunting rifle left behind by dad, so we have to be careful.”

“Is this the mad owner that you mentioned? He looks quite friendly.” Chen Ge pointed at the screen. After entering the hotel, Xiao Bu’s shadow had already returned to normal. Based on Chen Ge’s analysis, this was a trigger added by the game designer. After dark, they were not supposed to wander the street for more than one minute or they would be killed by their own shadow.

“Don’t be fooled by his façade; this mad man has killed all the guests in his hotel. After you check in, there’s no checking out.” Fan Chong’s voice was trembling—this hotel owner had given him quite a deep mental scar.

“Tell me when the owner will go mad—at least I can be prepared.”

“I didn’t receive a room card. When I arrived at the hotel, the owner kindly gave me a free room.” Fan Chong started to explain his experience. “I stayed quietly in my room, thinking that I’d just stay there until dawn. However, several minutes later, the room door creaked open. I saw the owner standing outside the door with a cleaver. The insane thing was that he did not move, and he had a smile on his face. If you ignore him, he will open the door wider and wider until he charges into the room and stabs you!”

“That scary?” Chen Ge clicked on the screen. The owner had asked him whether he had a room card or not. Chen Ge clicked on the backpack and showed the card for Room 4, which he had taken from the man in the raincoat. The owner glanced at the card and told Chen Ge that there would be supper at midnight, and he hoped that all the guests would come.

“Supper at midnight? Are the ingredients the guests?” Chen Ge turned back to look at Fan Chong. “Have you experienced this scenario before?”

“I didn’t possess the room card, so our plot is completely different. I have seen all the other tenants, but when I saw them, they were already dead.” Fan Chong shrugged helplessly. He wanted to help Chen Ge, but he could not.

“What do you know about the other guests?” Chen Ge was quite surprised; this was an important find. “Tell me everything you know. Perhaps I can cooperate with the other tenants to find a way out.”

“The owner’s father has Room 1. There is a picture of him and the owner in his room. The man seems to possess the spare keys for all the room. There’s a woman in Room 2; she has a revealing outfit on, and if I’m not mistaken, she’s a woman of the night. Room 3 has a student who carries a school bag, and there’s a phone inside the bag. Room 4 is empty. Room 5 has a guest wearing a police uniform, but it’s unclear whether he's a real cop or a fake one."

"There's even a police officer?" Chen Ge nodded. Fan Chong had given him plenty of clues.

"If there are other guests, the chance of surviving tonight has gotten much bigger." He controlled Xiao Bu to go the room, but once he closed the door, there was a gun shot. Then the chat box popped up —'You heard the sound of gunfire. There seems to have been a murder at the hotel. What will you do?'

1. Find the owner to ask what happened.

2. Find the police to ask for his help.

3. Ignore them and go to bed.

The cursor wandered back and forth between the three choices, and Chen Ge prepared to choose the third choice after some hesitation.

"Why would you go to sleep at a time like this?" Fan Chong quickly stopped Chen Ge. "Don't be reckless. This third choice is rather weird, and I fear it might affect the future plot."

"There's no need to think. The gunshot came from the hunting rifle, so it should be the owner who fired it. The first choice is a dead end."

"Then, we can go find the police!"

"What police?" Chen Ge picked the third choice. "The owner only has one bullet in his rifle, and in these circumstances, he will definitely kill the police. In fact, he might be at the police officer's room now."

"The owner is inside the police officer's room?"

"You need to see this from the perspective of the killer. The police officer might have a gun, and after obtaining that, he can continue to massacre the rest of the hotel guests. So other than the third choice, the other two are not acceptable." Chen Ge controlled Xiao Bu to open the door of Room 4 and run to Room 1, which was furthest from the police officer's room.

The time between the choices being revealed and a decision being made was only several seconds. Chen Ge showed inhuman calmness. When Fan Chong finally caught up to his reasoning, Chen Ge had already controlled Xiao Bu to reach Room 1.

He used the cursor to click on the door, and the chat box read—'Your room card is unable to open this door. You leaned against the door and heard sighing coming from within.'

...

According to Fan Chong's description, the owner's father would die soon in Room 1. The old man probably knew the type of person that his son was and knew that his time was coming. Room 1 was locked, so Chen Ge did not stay for long. He rushed to Room 2, where a woman believed to be a lady of the night stayed.

He clicked on the room door, and this time, the door swung open without resistance. "Does this woman not lock her door when she sleeps?"

Entering Room 2, Chen Ge saw a woman in her undergarment kneeling next to a large box. It looked like she was picking her clothes.

"Boss Chen, be careful. When I entered Room 2 earlier, there was no box in the room," Fan Chong warned. Chen Ge stopped moving. All of the tenants of this hotel could be killers.

Chen Ge tried to use the cursor to click on the woman, and a new selection appeared on screen—"This woman who looked sexy and beautiful is selecting her clothes. Do you want to tell her about the murder that happened earlier?"

- 1. Tell her that the hotel is very dangerous and she needs to be careful.*
- 2. Grab the table light and swing it at the back of her head.*

3. Ignore her and go back to sleep.

Looking at the three choices, Chen Ge started to think. “Those who are kind will pick Choice 1, but going too close to her might be dangerous—the woman has not gained my trust. Those who are evil will probably pick 2, but after a rational analysis, with Xiao Bu’s strength and the weight of the table lamp, no matter the angle, there is no way that the woman will be knocked dead or unconscious. The choice is rather fake—it would be better if there was a knife.”

Chen Ge’s analysis scared Fan Chong, and he silently moved the fruit knife that was on the table further away. After a brief hesitation, Chen Ge picked the third choice. When he made that choice, the woman squatting at the corner turned around to glance his way.

There was no skin on her face, and she had a knife in her hand. A silky white arm was poking out from the large box.

“Is she changing clothes or changing face?” Chen Ge hurriedly controlled Xiao Bu to leave the woman’s room and helped her close the door. “The hotel owner is a murderer, and the guests are either insane or maniacs; am I the only one that is normal at this small town?”

“Boss Chen, how about we leave the hotel? I think this place is more dangerous than the residential area.”

“There’s still a female ghost outside the door—how are we supposed to leave?” Chen Ge controlled Xiao Bu to Room 3. “The high-schooler can’t be a murderer as well, right?”

He was afraid that the woman from Room 2 would come out, so he clicked on the door of Room 3 quickly. The chat box appeared again—‘Someone was talking on the phone inside the room. He spoke very softly, but you could hear terms like big brother, mother, hiding body, and hidden room.’

“This guest in Room 3 is very weird as well, who is he talking to?” Chen Ge looked at the screen and contemplated.

“Could it be his father? The phone mentioned big brother and mother but not the father.” Fan Chong made a prediction. “Boss Chen, this guest might be the only person who can help Xiao Bu.”

“Why would you think that?” Chen Ge was surprised.

“Didn’t you say to think from the perspective of the game creator? I’ve played this game for a few weeks already and have died several times, but that has given me a brief understanding of this world.”

With Chen Ge’s guidance, Fan Chong started to give his analysis. “All the adults are either ghosts or crazy maniacs, while all the children are victims. This could be how the creator views the world—adults are fake and scary, and the only place to find innocence and kindness is from children. The high-schooler is technically not an adult; he’s between a child and an adult, so I think you should try to approach him.”

Fan Chong knew that this game was not a simple game; it had a very deep layer to it, but with his current understanding, he could only understand so much.

“You’re underestimating the game. Xiao Bu’s worldview is filled with despair. To understand this game’s world, we have to understand Xiao Bu, this main character.” Chen Ge turned back to look at Fan Chong. “The name of every child in this game is Xiao Bu, and every child that died, killed, and ran into misfortune is called Xiao Bu. Would you call a child like this to be kind and innocent?”

Chen Ge turned back to the screen. “Actually, after playing for so long, the longer I control Xiao Bu in this strange world, the more unsettled I feel. You’ve done the research—all the tragedies that happen in this game is based on real life cases. Then have you considered a problem. If this Xiao Bu really does exist in real life, how did she manage to survive after experiencing so many scary and despairing tragedies?”

Chen Ge spoke quickly, and neither Fan Chong nor Fan Dade grasped what he was trying to say. “Boss Chen, what are you trying to say?”

“The things that I controlled Xiao Bu to do, Xiao Bu might have really done them in real life.” Chen Ge had a brief idea what the core of the game was. He still wanted to explain some more, but there was change on the screen.

Room 3 opened, and a student in a school uniform stood at the door. Then the chat box appeared—‘It’s dangerous outside. The guest of Room 3 was worried about your safety and invited you to join him in his room. You stood at the door and saw a family photo in the guest’s hands. It was a picture of a father and mother standing happily together, and next to them was a pair of boys who looked suspiciously similar.'

Chen Ge clicked the chat box again, and there was new content—"You overheard the boy talk about hiding the body on the phone. You were afraid, and you refused to enter the room. Guest 3 swore to God that even though he had committed murder, he was forced. He was the only trustworthy person in that town.'

"See, I was right. This high-schooler will be our biggest aid." Fan Chong was happy that he had helped.

"Those who call themselves trustworthy are almost always not." Chen Ge shook his head. He clicked the chat box again, and the last sentence appeared—"You're curious about Guest 3, so you decide to listen to his story before coming to a decision.'

Chapter 522 - Equal Share

Chapter 522: Equal Share

Translator: Lonelytree Editor: Millman97

“I have an older brother who looks very similar to me, but our personalities are very different. I’m reserved and obedient, but my older brother likes to create trouble no matter where he goes.

“One time, my brother and father got into a serious argument, and it got physical. In the panic, my brother accidentally slashed my father. At the time, I was there as well but did not expect this to happen. I tried to stop him, but he turned on me and tried to kill me. In that process, I accidentally stabbed him.

...

“When mother returned, both big brother and father were dead. A perfect family was shattered. Mother knows me well and understands that I would never lie and kill, so she helped me lie during the police’s interrogation and pushed all the blame onto my brother.

“Everyone at this city is mentally deranged, but I’m the only exception because I never intended to kill anyone; it was just an accident.”

Guest 3 told his story. When he was done, the chat box asked—‘What will you do next?’

1. Enter the room and tell him about the danger lurking at the hotel.
2. Do not enter the room and ask him to scout the other rooms for you.
3. Ignore him and go to sleep.

Entering the room meant leaving his life in the student’s hands while asking the student to scout for him meant asking the student to go to die on his behalf. Choices one and two represented good and evil.

“Shall we take a risk? I don’t think this student sounds like a bad person.” Without knowing it, Fan Chang had already finished drinking the coke as his eyes wandered between Chen Ge and the computer screen.

"We're not taking any risk; this student is definitely lying to us," Chen Ge said confidently and chose the third choice.

"But it was due to self-defense that he killed someone. Plus, look at his mannerisms and reaction—he's completely different from those murderers that we've met. He looks shy and reserved; a child like this probably wouldn't kill someone." This time, it was Fan Dade who spoke. He shared his brother's view.

"The lack of confidence means a defect in his personality; most murderers spent their childhood in shame and fear. They are incredibly lacking in confidence, but at the same time, they desperately wish for respect, and that is why their personality gets twisted later in life." Chen Ge got tired of explaining. "This student is very dangerous, but he is not strong enough, so he goes after targets weaker than him."

"You mean, he's lying?" Fan Chong opened another can of coke. It was already midnight, but he was not feeling sleepy.

"I can be sure that this student is lying. Think about it, if his mother really pushed all the blame onto the big brother, why would he appear in this town full of murderers at midnight?" Chen Ge's voice was low. "Now, I have two speculations. One, he killed his big brother and father and then pinned everything on his brother. He made use of his mother's trust to escape the persecution. Two, this student is the big brother. He killed his father and his little brother, and to escape the law, he assumed the character of his little brother."

When Chen Ge was done, both Fan Chong and Fan Dade were silent, unable to find an argument to counter. They were covered in cold sweat.

"The possibility of it being the second speculation is higher." Chen Ge looked at the screen, chose the third option, and controlled Xiao Bu to leave in a hurry. "Him appearing in this town means that he probably has killed his mother as well, and the reason for that is simple. Even if they're twins, no matter how hard he tried, his mother would have been able to tell the difference."

After getting to know the hotel's layout, Chen Ge controlled Xiao Bu to head to the entrance. He was prepared to let the Red Specter into the hotel. "There are no innocent people in this hotel, but they should be able to buy me some time."
